A dispatch, dated Nebraska City, 5th inst, says: Trains just arrived from Fort Kearney report that the officers at the fort had received intelligence that Gen. Johnston had entered Salt Lake city with his troops. This, however, is probably a mistake.

Utah Affairs.—The late reports of the peaceful ending of the Utah difficulties, are fully confirmed by the publication of official dispatches from the Peace Commissioners and Gen. Johnston to the War Department. The letter of the Commissioner is as follows:

Great Salt Lake City, }
Utah Territory, June 12, 1858. }

Dear Sir:—We have the honor to report that we reached this city on the 7th inst. We lost no time in placing ourselves in communication with the chief men of the Mormon people. After the fullest and freest conference with them, we are pleased to state that we have settled the unfortunate difficulties existing between the government of the United States and the people of Utah. We are informed by the people and chief men of the Territory, that they will cheerfully yield obedience to the constitution and laws of the United States. They cheerfully consent that the civil officers of the Territory shall enter upon the discharge of their respective duties. They will make no resistance to the army of the United States in its march to the Valley of Salt Lake or elsewhere. We have their assurance that no resistance will be made to the officers, civil or military, of the United States, in the exercise of their various functions in the Territory of Utah.

The people have abandoned all the settlements north of this, and all the families have left the city, only about fifteen hundred persons remaining here to take charge of the property, and to burn it if the difficulties had not been settled. The people from this city and north of it have gone to Provo, fifty miles south of this, and to points beyond. We will visit Provo and the settlements south in a day or two, and see and confer with the people, and inform them that the difficulties have been settled, and thus induce them to return to their homes.

We have written Gen. Johnston by the messenger that will bear this, informing him of what has been done, and that he could march his army to the valley whenever he desired to do so. We intend to remain and visit the people and converse with them until Gen. Johnston's army arrives. We think it important that we remain until the army is located in the valley. We have but a moment to write, as the express will start in a few moments. We will in a few days forward a detailed report.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

L. W. Powell, } Commissioners
Ben. McCulloch, } to Utah.

Hon. John B. Floyd, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

Way of Life.—If the way to heaven be narrow, it is not long; and if the gate be straight, it opens into endless life.—Beveridge.

NOTICES.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at Pine Creek, Indiana, to commence on the 13th day of August, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over the Lord's day. The above named meeting will be holden on the farm of Wm. P. Martin, 3 miles north of Goshen, 6 miles south of Bristol, 8 miles south-east of Elkhart.

Brethren coming on the Air Line R. R., will stop at Goshen. Those coming from the east on the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan R. R., will stop at Bristol. Those coming from the west, on R. R., will stop at Elkhart. Brethren leaving the cars at either of the above named stations, on Thursday, will find free conveyance to the meeting.

We hope to see a general gathering of ministers and lay brethren.

By order of the Church,

D. R. Mansfield.
Elijah Beck.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting at Savoy, Mass., commencing Aug. 30th, to continue over the following Sabbath.

Brethren H. Pratt, J. Hemenway and M. Batchelor are expected. Particulars hereafter.

E. M'Cullock,
For the Brethren.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co., Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

Moses Chandler, Evangelist.

Conference.

The first quarterly meeting of the Galena District will commence Thursday, July 8th, 1858, at Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill. There will be a conference held in connection, and it is hoped that there will be a general attendance, and delegates sent by all the churches in that region. It is expected Bro. W. Pratt will be with me.

Moses Chandler.

Cordova, June 1st, 1858.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,

Elbridge Chisam.
John A. Kennedy.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. Damman.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.

N. F. Nason.

If it please God, H. L. Hastings will hold a meeting at Blooming Valley, Pa., commencing the evening of the second Friday in July and continuing over Sunday, and he will also remain some ten or fifteen days and visit Edenboro, Girard and other places, as Eld. J. T. Ongley may arrange.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

☞ All communications for Dr. L. Kimball, should be directed hereafter to Nashua, N. H.

☞ Wanted, 10,000 orders for "The Great Controversy between God and Man," by H. L. Hastings. Price, post paid, 60 cts., neatly bound in cloth gilt. Send in your orders with the cash. Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y. For sale at this office. Also by Smith, English & Co., No. 40 North 6th St., Philadelphia. G. W. Young, 109 Nassau St., New York. N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois. Moses Chandler, Irvington, N. J. R. R. Ladd, [illegible]

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord will, I will preach in East Boston July 25th, and Worcester August 1st.

Geo. Waugh.

I will preach in Lee, N. H., where Bro. Whiting or Bro. Palmer may appoint, Sunday, July 25th.

S. W. Bishop.

The Lord willing, I will speak to the church in Augusta, Me., on the evening of the 27th of July.

Hermon, Me., the first Sunday in August.

Orrington the 2d Sunday.

Will try to be at the conference the Saturday before each Sunday mentioned.

Israel Damman.

If the Lord will, I purpose to preach at Clay, N. Y., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, July 21st and 22d.
Albany, N. Y., Sunday, July 25th.
Chester Factories, Mass., evening, July 26th.
Springfield, Mass., evening, July 28th.
Jawbuck, Ct., Friday evening and over Sunday, July 30th and Aug. 1st.

Meet me at Thompsonville Depot, July 29th, P. M. If I am desired to visit other places while East, please write me at Worcester, Mass.

H. F. Carpenter.

Providence permitting, I will preach at River Point, R. I., Friday evening, July 23d; also Saturday evening, and over the Lord's day.

Miles Grant.

The Lord willing, I will preach in
Hartford, Ct., Friday eve., July 9th.
Cheshire St., Ct., Sunday July 11th.
Southampton, L. I., (Indian settlement,) July 13th, 14th and 15th.
Will the brethren meet me at Sag Harbor?
Peace Dale, Friday eve., July 16th.
Appanaug, July 17th and 18th, or where Bro. Champlin may appoint.
Providence, R. I., Tuesday eve., July 20th.
New Bedford, July 21st and 22d.
Fair Haven, Mass., July 23d.
Boston, (where Bro. Grant and Adams may appoint,) July 24th to 26th.
Worcester, (where Bro. Ayres may appoint,) July 27th.
Danielsonville, July 28th.

If these appointments conflict with others, please notify me.

Hiram Munger.

Business.

To Correspondents.

Bro. Pratt, there are none to be had.

E R Southwick, All right.

Z A Temple, All right.

Jas. Calder—The money was received, and credited in the Crisis of July 7th, and your address altered to West Barnet.

A S Ravel—You have paid to No. 156.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

J S Dudley 146, J Lewis 162, B Chedel 162, C A Lockwood 162,—50 cts. each.

Mrs. M A Fogg 173, Mrs. M M Ross 142, S R Ward 156, J Holder 160, H Johnson 183, M D Richardson 156, W G Ocobock 176, Miss S A Haskel 170, Z Whitney 177, S Ingalls 169, L Pond 176, N Clark, Jr., 175, D Bates 104, O P Redington 177, J M Andrews 180, R Beedle 145, G M Wood 170, R M Rines 176,—$1.00 each.

Mary Tucker 182, S Johnson 161, R Files 166, J P Saunders 156, W Simes 159, H E Iwing 156,—$2.00 each.

For the Poor—Z Whitney, $1.00.

For Books and Tracts—S R Ward 10cts. I Cutting, $1.00.

Subscribers to the Camp Ground fund are requested to forward their subscription to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., at as early a date as possible. Arrangements are now being made to make the contemplated improvements, and it is desirable to have the means at hand to meet all bills as they are made. All our brethren and sisters are invited to contribute to the fund, whether they are subscribers or not.

Eloquent Prayer.—Pray often, because thou sinnest always; repent quickly, lest thou die suddenly. He that repents it because he wants power to act it, repents not of a sin till he forsakes not; he that wants power to actuate his sin, hath not forsaken his sin, but his sin him.—Quarles.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 8 pts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible]

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 8 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 38 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.–The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate; 3—Forty Questions on [illegible]; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us [illegible]. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of [illegible] ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and [illegible] feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are [illegible] which can be separated for [illegible] contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by [illegible] 20,000 Baptists, the [illegible] Clarke; Hope and Duty of the [illegible] Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing [illegible] power and great glory? What could our Lord have left on record for us to attend to (dying words) that would have proved more effectual in solemnizing our minds, purifying and sanctifying us for the great and last trial than these words,—"As often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come?"

† The Olive Leaves [illegible]

O, ye saints of the Most High, do not neglect these things. To obey is better than sacrifice; and the weak, by a strict attention to these things, may be made strong. Then let us, as ministers and elders, do our duty, in setting forth these things in the light that shines from God's revelation, to save the flock and ourselves too in the kingdom of Jesus Christ upon earth. Amen.

D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Buchanan, Mich., July 13th.

For the Crisis.

Martin Luther

ON THE NEW EARTH, THE LORD'S ADVENT AND THE RESURRECTION.

From Luther's Table Talk, translated by Hazlitt, London edition, I copy the following:—

"On Easter Sunday, 1544, Luther made an excellent sermon on the resurrection of the dead out of the Epistle appointed for that day, handling this sentence, 'Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die.' When Abraham intended to sacrifice his son he believed that God out of the ashes would raise him again, and make him a father of children. The faith of Adam and Eve preserved them because they believed in the promised seed. For to him that believeth everything is possible. The conception and birth of every human creature proceeding out of a drop of blood is no less a miracle and wonderful work of God than that Adam was made out of a clod of earth, and Eve out of a fleshy rib. The world is full of such works of wonder, but we are blind and cannot see them. The whole world is not able to create one member, no, not so much as a small leaf. The manner of the resurrection consists in three words, 'Arise, come, stand up, appear, rejoice ye that dwell in the dust of the earth!' I shall arise again and shall speak with you: this finger wherewith I point must come to me again: everything must come again, for it is written that God will create a new heaven and a new earth wherein righteousness shall dwell. It will be no arid waste, but a beautiful new earth where all the just shall dwell together.—There will be no carniverous beasts or venimous creatures, for all such, like ourselves, will be released from the curse of sin and will be to us as friendly as they were to Adam in Paradise.* There will be little dogs with golden hair shining like precious stones. The foliage of the trees and the verdure of the grass will have the brilliancy of the emerald, and we ourselves delivered from our mundane subjection to gross appetites and necessities, shall have the same forms as here, but infinitely more perfect. Our eyes will be radiant as the purest silver, and we shall be exempt from all sickness and tribulation. We shall behold the glorious Creator face to face; and then, what ineffable satisfaction will it be to find our relatives and friends among the just! If we were all one here we should have peace among ourselves, but God orders it otherwise to the end we may yearn and sigh after the paternal home and become weary of this troublesome life." pp. 822–23.

"Ah, loving God, defer not thy coming. I await impatiently the day when spring shall return, when day and night shall be of equal length, and when Aurora shall be clear and bright. One day will come a thick, black cloud, out of which will issue three flashes of lightning, and a clap of thunder will be heard, and in a moment heaven and earth will be covered with confusion. The Lord be praised who has taught us to sigh and yearn after that day. In Popedom they are all afraid thereof, as is testified by their hymn, Dies irae dies illa. I hope that day is not far off: Christ says, 'At that time ye shall scarcely find faith in the earth.' If we make an account we shall find that we have the gospel now only in a corner. Asia and Africa have it not, the gospel is not preached in Europe, in Greece, Italy, Hungary, Spain, France, England, or in Poland. And this little corner, where it is, Saxony, will not hinder the coming of the last day of judgment. The predictions of the Apocalypse are accomplished already as far as the white horse. The world cannot stand long, perhaps a hundred years at the outside. When the Turk begins to decline then the last days will be at hand, for the testimony of the scripture must be verified. The loving Lord will come as the scripture says." pp. 325.

"I hope the last day will not be long delayed. The darkness grows thicker around us, and godly servants of the Most High become rarer and more rare. Infidelity and licentiousness are rampant thro'-out the world, and we live like pigs, like wild beasts devoid of all reason. But a voice will soon be heard 'Behold the Bridegroom cometh!' God will not be able to bear the wicked world much longer, but will come with the dreadful day and chastise the scorners of his word." p. 8.

Thus did this great man love the appearance of his Lord.

Selected by D. T. T.

Waterbury, Vt., June, 1858.

* [illegible]

Summary of News.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

The Royal Mail steamship Canada, from Liverpool 3d inst.

The general news is of no special importance, but the commercial advices will be found interesting.

Parliament is to be prorogued before the end of July.

The Spanish Ministry has resigned, and a new cabinet been formed, headed by O'Donnell as the Minister of Foreign Affairs and War.

FRANCE.

At the annual meeting of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Mr. Rarey was introduced to the audience amid great applause.

The Moniteur publishes the following decree:

"Napoleon, by the grace of God and the national will, Emperor of the French, to all whom these presents may concern, greeting:

Wishing to give to Algeria and to our colonies a fresh proof of our solicitude for their interests, and to favor as much as possible the extension of their prosperity, we do hereby decree as follows:

Art. 1. There is hereby created a Ministry for Algeria and the Colonies.

Art. 2. That Ministry shall be formed for the direction of the affairs of Algeria and of those of the colonies which shall be separated from the Ministry of War and from the Ministry of Marine.

Art. 3. Our well-beloved cousin, Prince Napoleon, is charged with this Ministry.

Art. 4. Our Ministers of State, War and Marine are charged, each as far as he may be therein concerned, with the execution of the present decree, which shall come into force from the 1st of July next.

Given at the Palace of St. Cloud, this 24th June. NAPOLEON."

The French colonies are divided into 10 establishments: 1, Martinique; 2, Guadeloupe and its dependencies; 3, the Ile Reunion (Bourbon); 4, Mayotta and dependencies; 5, French Guiana; 6, St. Pierre and Miquelon, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; 7, Senegal; 8, the Isle of Goree and its dependencies; 9, the French establishments in India, the chief place of which is Pondicherry; 10, the French establishments in Oceania. The expenses of the colonies (not including Algeria) are set down in the budget of 1859 at 21,751,724f., and 200,000f. for the bureaux in Paris. The force employed in the service of the colonies is 4860 infantry, 1077 artillery, and 36 vessels manned by 1000 sailors.

The annual military "spectacle" in the Champ de Mars, on the Emperor's fete day, August 15th, will this year be a representation entitled "The taking of Canton by the French."

The telegraphic communication between France and Algeria is now made by four wires. Hitherto only one of four wires submerged in 1857 has been used.

A retired officer of the army of the Crimea is to be named French Consul in Liberia.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says: The affairs of Montenegro and the ticklish state of diplomatic relations between France and Turkey and Austria are considered very serious; that France had sent an ultimatum to Turkey, and if a satisfactory answer should not be returned at once, more ships would be sent to the Adriatic.

Sanguinary conflicts were of almost daily occurrence between the French and Roman soldiery of Rome.

RUSSIA.

It is said that 125,000 soldiers will assemble in the camp of Powouski, near Warsaw, at the end of August, for inspection by the Czar.

Cholera has made its appearance at St. Petersburg.

A fire had almost entirely destroyed the shipping at Helsingfors.

There is a serious dispute between Austria and Prussia in regard to the garrison at Kastadt. The cause is said to be that instead of a moderate contingent by Austria, to replace Prussian soldiers, she sent a larger force, thereby, say the Berlin papers, attempting to diminish the influence of Prussia. The newspaper controversy which this has excited rages fiercely on both sides.

TURKEY.

It is not likely that the Turks will make an attack on Montenegro, but highly probable that they will completely invest it on three sides. Should they do so, and should the Austrians think fit to imitate their example on the Cattaro side, the Montenegrins will be starved into submission.

Omar Pasha is to be recalled from Bagdad, to take the command of all the Turkish forces in Bosnia, [illegible] Herzegowina, and Albania. He will have very extended powers, and be supported by further reinforcements.

INDIA.

The Calcutta correspondent of the London Times, writing May 18, says:

"The insurrection has assumed a new phase, which, if less dangerous to the empire, [illegible] which the mind can rest as the one from which results, and consequently intelligence, are to be expected. Instead of one great campaign, there are six little campaigns all going on at once, each attended with small successes and petty reverses, and each tending in some infinitesimal degree to the main object—the pacification of the country."

ITALY.

The contract for the loan of 40,000 francs to Turin was taken by the Rothschilds of Paris and the Commercial Bank of Turin.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Times City Article says: Just at the close of business, Friday, a report circulated that the laying of the Atlantic cable was nearly completed, and shares advanced from £500 to a nominal quotation of £600 to £800. An important private meeting of the shareholders of the Illinois Central Railroad was held on Friday. A committee of ten was appointed, one of whom will probably be dispatched in a week to New York, to co-operate with the American Directors. Among other changes, it is recommended that a resident English Director shall be appointed.

CAPE GOOD HOPE.

The dates are of May 21. A fierce struggle was going on among some of the frontier tribes

Dr. Livingstone had met with an enthusiastic welcome.

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.—We have unfavorable news from the Atlantic Telegraph between Europe and America. They commenced laying it, but at the end of about forty miles it parted. The ships were returning to each other, intending to make another trial.

Domestic News.

FROM THE ARMY IN THE WEST.

ST. LOUIS, July 16.—Letters from Fort Kearney of June 30, say that Gen. Harney's headquarters had been encamped there six days, in expectation of the arrival of the new instructions from the War Department.

A teamster had been tried and acquitted on the charge of inciting his companion to rob Capt. Hancock of $50,000, under his charge for meeting incidental expenses.

Cols. May and Morrison had passed Fort Kearney. The latter gave Gen. Harney his first salute as Brigadier General. A postscript to the letter says, that "an express has arrived, but brings no advices from Washington. We shall resume the march to morrow."

The Independence mail, with dates of the 15th ult., from Santa Fe, has arrived. The news is unimportant.

A difficulty had occurred, growing out of the persistence of the Indians in driving cattle and horses upon the hay ground known as Ewell Camp, near Fort Defiance. Major Brooks had been obliged to send a company of soldiers to drive the herds off and protect the grounds from encroachments. Several cattle and ponies were killed by the soldiers, and a skirmish occurred between the troops and Indians, but none of either party were killed or wounded.

We have dispatches from Leavenworth to the 13th inst, per United States express to Booneville, saying that an express arrived there to-day from Gen. Harney, who was, on the 6th inst., encamped seventy-five miles beyond Fort Kearney. Col. Monroe's column was beyond the South Fork of the Platte, and Col. May was a short distance in the rear. The head quarters were well, and all the column were in splendid condition.

A dispatch, dated Nebraska City, 5th inst, says: Trains just arrived from Fort Kearney report that the officers at the fort had received intelligence that Gen. Johnston had entered Salt Lake city with his troops. This, however, is probably a mistake.

UTAH AFFAIRS.—The late reports of the peaceful ending of the Utah difficulties, are fully confirmed by the publication of official dispatches from the Peace Commissioners and Gen. Johnston to the War Department. The letter of the Commissioner is as follows:

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
Utah Territory, June 12, 1858.

DEAR SIR:—We have the honor to report that we reached this city on the 7th inst. We lost no time in placing ourselves in communication with the chief men of the Mormon people. After the fullest and freest conference with them, we are pleased to state that we have settled the unfortunate difficulties existing between the government of the United States and the people of Utah. We are informed by the people and chief men of the Territory, that they will cheerfully yield obedience to the constitution and laws of the United States. They cheerfully consent that the civil officers of the Territory shall enter upon the discharge of their respective duties. They will make no resistance to the army of the United States in its march to the Valley of Salt Lake or elsewhere. We have their assurance that no resistance will be made to the officers, civil or military, of the United States, in the exercise of their various functions in the Territory of Utah.

The people have abandoned all the settlements north of this, and all the families have left the city, only about fifteen hundred persons remaining here to take charge of the property, and to burn it if the difficulties had not been settled. The people from this city and north of it have gone to Provo, fifty miles south of this, and to points beyond. We will visit Provo and the settlements south in a day or two, and see and confer with the people, and inform them that the difficulties have been settled, and thus induce them to return to their homes.

We have written Gen. Johnston by the messenger that will bear this, informing him of what has been done, and that he could march his army to the valley whenever he desired to do so. We intend to remain and visit the people and converse with them until Gen. Johnston's army arrives. We think it important that we remain until the army is located in the valley. We have but a moment to write, as the express will start in a few moments. We will in a few days forward a detailed report.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

L. W. POWELL, } Commissioners
BEN. McCULLOCH, } to Utah.

Hon. JOHN B. FLOYD, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

[illegible]

NOTICES.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at Pine Creek, Indiana, to commence on the 13th day of August, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over the Lord's day. The above named meeting will be holden on the farm of Wm. P. Martin, 3 miles north of Goshen, 6 miles south of Bristol, 8 miles south-east of Elkhart.

Brethren coming on the Air Line R. R., will stop at Goshen. Those coming from the east on the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan R. R., will stop at Bristol. Those coming from the west, on R. R., will stop at Elkhart. Brethren leaving the cars at either of the above named stations, on Thursday, will find free conveyance to the meeting.

We hope to see a general gathering of ministers and lay brethren.

By order of the Church,

D. R. MANSFIELD.
ELIJAH BECK.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting at Savoy, Mass., commencing Aug. 30th, to continue over the following Sabbath.

Brethren H. Pratt, J. Hemenway and M. Batchelor are expected. Particulars hereafter.

E. M'CULLOCK,
For the Brethren.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co., Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

MOSES CHANDLER, Evangelist.

Conference.

The first quarterly meeting of the Galena District will commence Thursday, July 8th, 1858, at Elizabeth, Joe Davis Co., Ill. There will be a conference held in connection, and it is hoped that there will be a general attendance, and delegates sent by all the churches in that region. It is expected Bro. W. Pratt will be with me.

MOSES CHANDLER.

Cordova, June 1st, 1858.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,

ELBRIDGE CHISAM.
JOHN A. KENNEDY.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

NOTICE.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.

N. F. NASON.

If it please God, H. L. Hastings will hold a meeting at Blooming Valley, Pa., commencing the evening of the second Friday in July and continuing over Sunday, and he will also remain some ten or fifteen days and visit Edenboro, Girard and other places, as Eld. J. T. Ongley may arrange.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. DEYO,
Conference Clerk.

☞ All communications for Dr. L. Kimball, should be directed hereafter to Nashua, N. H.

☞ WANTED, 10,000 orders for "The Great Controversy between God and Man," by H. L. Hastings. Price, post paid, 60 cts., neatly bound in cloth gilt. Send in your orders with the cash. Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y. For sale at this office. Also by Smith, English & Co., No. 40 North 6th St., Philadelphia. G. [illegible]

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord will, I will preach in East Boston July 25th, and Worcester August 1st.

GEO. WAUGH.

I will preach in Lee, N. H., where Bro. Whiting or Bro. Palmer may appoint, Sunday, July 25th. S. W. BISHOP.

The Lord willing, I will speak to the church in Augusta, Me., on the evening of the 27th of July.

Hermon, Me., the first Sunday in August.

Orrington the 2d Sunday.

Will try to be at the conference the Saturday before each Sunday mentioned.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

If the Lord will, I purpose to preach at

Clay, N. Y., Wednesday and Thursday evenings, July 21st and 22d.
Albany, N. Y., Sunday, July 25th.
Chester Factories, Mass., evening, July 26th.
Springfield, Mass., evening, July 28th.
Jawbuck, Ct., Friday evening and over Sunday, July 30th and Aug. 1st.

Meet me at Thompsonville Depot, July 29th, P. M. If I am desired to visit other places while East, please write me at Worcester, Mass. H. F. CARPENTER.

Providence permitting, I will preach at River Point, R. I., Friday evening, July 23d; also Saturday evening, and over the Lord's day. MILES GRANT.

The Lord willing, I will preach in

Hartford, Ct., Friday eve., July 9th.
Cheshire St., Ct., Sunday July 11th.
Southampton, L. I., (Indian settlement,) July 13th, 14th and 15th.
Will the brethren meet me at Sag Harbor?
Peace Dale, Friday eve., July 16th.
Appanaug, July 17th and 18th, or where Bro. Champlin may appoint.
Providence, R. I., Tuesday eve., July 20th.
New Bedford, July 21st and 22d.
Fair Haven, Mass., July 23d.
Boston, (where Bro. Grant and Adams may appoint,) July 24th to 26th.
Worcester, (where Bro. Ayres may appoint,) July 27th
Danielsonville, July 28th.

If these appointments conflict with others, please notify me. HIRAM MUNGER.

Business.

To Correspondents.

Bro. Pratt, there are none to be had.

E R Southwick, All right.

Z A Temple, All right.

Jas. Calder—The money was received, and credited in the Crisis of July 7th, and your address altered to West Barnet.

A S Ravel—You have paid to No. 156.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

J S Dudley 146, J Lewis 162, B Chedel 162, C A Lockwood 162,—50 cts. each.

Mrs. M A Fogg 173, Mrs. M M Ross 142, S R Ward 156, J Holder 160, H Johnson 183, M D Richardson 156, W G Ocobock 176, Miss S A Haskel 170, Z Whitney 177, S Ingalls 169, L Pond 176, N Clark, Jr., 175, D Bates 104, O P Redington 177, J M Andrews 130, R Beedle 145, G M Wood 170, R M Rines 176,—$1.00 each.

Mary Tucker 182, S Johnson 161, R Files 166, J P Saunders 156, W Simes 159, H E Iwing 156,—$2.00 each.

For the Poor—Z Whitney, $1.00.

For Books and Tracts—S R Ward 10cts. I Cutting, $1.00.

Subscribers to the Camp Ground fund are requested to forward their subscription to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., at as early a date as possible. Arrangements are now being made to make the contemplated improvements, and it is desirable to have the means at hand to meet all bills as they are made. All our brethren and sisters are invited to contribute to the fund, whether they are subscribers or not.

ELOQUENT PRAYER.—Pray often, because thou sinnest always; repent quickly, lest thou die suddenly. He that repents it because he wants power to act it, repents not of a sin till he forsakes not; he that wants power to actuate his sin, hath not forsaken his sin, but his sin him.—Quarles.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 8 cts.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 5 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrange- ments so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger. including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $6.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 38 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Com- ing and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Deal- ings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.–The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—† Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on [illegible]; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us hear from them. Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of [illegible] eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those who FEEL POOR also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, [illegible]

For sale also at this office,—and by [illegible] Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, [illegible]

* The Landmarks are [illegible] [illegible] Clarke; [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE EARLY TAKEN.

*"They shall come again from the land of the enemy."—*JEREMIAH.

Whither were the sinless taken—
Where went they of stainless bands?
Do they sleep, or do they waken,
Since they joined the silent bands?
Floating on the gloomy river,
Went they of the violet eyes,
Where, above God's throne, forever
Shine the emerald rainbow dyes?

Is it that their feet have wandered
'Mid the stars in boundless space;
Or passed through the [illegible]land, onward
To some unseen, happy place?
There was Julie's seraph beauty,
Charlie, with his golden hair;
Georgie, saved from life's hard duty,
Innocent and angel fair.

With hushed hearts and eyelids drooping,
White in death we laid them down,
Waiting for the solemn trumpet
And the victor's palm and crown.
'Neath the verdant garb of summer,
Or the winter's shroud of white,
They are sleeping cold and quiet,
Till the morning bringeth light.

Pain and grief have lost their power,
And the tempter tries them not,
Where they slumber through the seasons,
Having found the peaceful lot.
Thither were the sinless taken,
There went they of stainless bands;
They do sleep, but shall awaken
And return from death's dark land.

M. LOUISA SOUTHWICK.

Marysville, O.

For the Crisis.

ONE REWARD.

"And they likewise received every man a penny."—Matt. 20: 10.

Murmur not, children, O be not distress'd,
I've but one reward you must share with the rest;
I've but one kingdom, no more can I give,
And that not by merit but grace you receive.

The crown of rejoicing is bright for the least,
I give you myself; there is but one Christ;
One robe prepar'd you, and that is the best,
And your younger brother must share with the rest.

'Tis true in my vineyard you have labored long,
The day is far spent, and low sinks the sun;
But eternal life is the price of my blood,
And all shall receive it that work for my Lord.

Then murmur not, children, your poor Gentile neighbor,
Though at the last hour is invited to labor;
The kid should be slain, and music and dancing
Should speak our glad welcome and show our rejoicing.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

HEAVENLY TREASURE.

Why should we lay up treasures here below,
Where moth and rust corrupt? Why fix our heart
On that from which so quickly we must part?
Why on an ocean where such tempests blow,
Embark so rich a freight? Why midst the snow
Of so unkind a winter, plant a flower
So fragrant, yet so frail? Why build hope's tower
Where lightning's flash and whelming torrents flow?
But, if our highest energies are bent
In God and heaven a portion to insure,
Midst every change our wealth will be secure;
When the destroying angels forth are sent,
When melts away the starry firmament,
Our bliss unharmed shall, e'en like God, endure.

—Newman Hall.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Fools' Proverbs.

When your horse is starved to death get him hay.

When your house is burned up be careful about fires.

When your credit is spoiled pay your debts.

When your wife is worked to death hire some help.

When your money is all gone learn prudence.

When you are dead from excess and luxury be temperate and eat sawdust puddings.

When you have wasted your estate practice economy.

When you have served the devil as long as you live, then repent.

When your preacher has starved, then [illegible] want to feed him.

When you have grieved God's spirit [illegible] think of heeding its [illegible]

When [illegible] killed yourself to get [illegible]

[illegible] spent serving sin [illegible]

[illegible]

Choice Selections.

The Vast Army.

BY REV. EDW. MUNRO, PERPETUAL CURATE OF HARROW-WEALD, ENG.

CHAPTER VI.—THE SUMMONS.

When I slept again, I tried to catch the thread of the scene, but could not. A change had passed over every thing; all was altered: how strangely! I felt confused: evidently much had happened; but how quickly and suddenly! A blaze of light, so dazzling and intense, wrapped every thing, I was glad to look away. Every hill and crag were so bathed in the rising light, as to leave not even a shadow where a man could hide himself. Each point and rock were lost in the blaze of fire. I doubted not the King and his army had arrived. I looked anxiously around for those whom I had so long been interested in. It was plain that all were taken by surprise, and, though all had been expecting it, none were as they meant to be. What I could see most clearly, were numbers of the Messengers of the King, who passed rapidly to and fro along the hosts, seemingly bent on some work of their Master's. The enemies of the King were flying in all directions, though some still seemed determined to face the danger.

My attention was first drawn to the form of Erza, who was standing within the defile of the rocks with the banner in his hand; he seemed wounded all over, his face looked pale, and his strength exhausted: a band of men had been attacking him, to wrest the banner from him, but he had fought for it so valiantly that hitherto it had been in vain.

'My banner! my post;' cried Erza ever and anon, as he turned his now languishing eye up to the flag which floated above him. 'My banner! my post! at least I will try and keep it this time;' and he struck another and another blow for the precious charge Albyn had given him.

'My post! the banner! the King!' said he; 'I am at my post at least now, am I not?' cried he, anxiously turning to the Messenger who stood beside him.

'Thou must follow me at once,' said the Messenger; 'the King has called for thee.'

Then in a moment all the events of the past rushed over Erza's mind and memory, like colors of a summer's sky across the surface of water, and he looked deeply sorrowful, and a cloud of sadness passed over his eyes. Swiftly and silently over the glowing rocks did Erza and the bright one go. Erza held his banner, and the Messenger led the way.

'Called for me! called for me!' said the boy to himself, anxiously. 'The King come! come at last! Oh, Albyn, Albyn, would that you were here!'

I saw the poor boy could scarce keep pace with the Messenger, so quivering were his knees, and his heart beat so high.

'Whither away?' said one who passed them.

'To take young Erza to meet the King,' said the other, and the boy again trembled.

At that moment a loud, wild, and bitter cry arose not far from them. Erza started; he thought he knew the sound; he looked anxiously down a deep ravine at his feet and a high overhanging rock. He saw the form of Ulric—his helmet had fallen from his head, and lay in shivered fragments on the ground; his shield was also lying in atoms by his side, shattered by a huge piece of rock which had fallen upon it. The boy was trying to bind his armor of defence close around him, to protect himself, but a burning wind, which rolled down the barren pass, tore it from him as fast as he put it on. Meanwhile he strove, and strove in vain, to find a hiding-place under the shadow of the rocks, but could find none. The intense light prevented a shadow, and Ulric could not hide himself. Down the pass, towards the agonized boy, came two Messengers, swift and silent. Ulric saw and guessed their message, and uttered the piercing shriek which Erza heard. Ulric placed his hands against his ears, and held them closely.

'I will not hear, I will not hear the message; I know it already.'

But, despite his efforts, an awful Voice passed on, and Ulric could not help hearing it.

'Ulric, the King has called for thee.'

Erza again shuddered at the awful call, and Ulric tore his hair, and, stamping his feet with rage, said he would not go. But I saw those Messengers laid their hands on him, and Ulric became helpless as a little child, and in silent despair followed them. His hands were clasped, his hair hung wild over his shoulders, his riven vest and broken armor hung in fragments about him.

'Erza! Oh, Erza!' cried he, as his eye looking up glanced on the youth, and his face pale as marble, moved swiftly along on the edge of rocks above.

There was a strange contrast in the expression of the two. Erza's pale, anxious, awful brow betokened reverence and intense anxiety. Ulric's worn face and hollow cheek showed an expression of calm despair. Erza's hands were folded crosswise on his breast. Erza's cross was there, and seemed to flicker like a flame of pale, uncertain light, now high, now low, but still clearly living, while on Ulric's brow a tongue of burning fire seemed to lick and scorch, and ever and anon he pressed his fingers on his forehead as if in agony.

As they two passed on swiftly and silently beheld the Messengers, and the banner Albyn gave him floated in its purple folds above the head of Erza.

[illegible]

them behind to follow. (His manner was bold and fearless.

'Come on,' said he; 'follow me, we go to join the King, who has reached the faithful army. We go not the same way as the others we have passed or met. But it matters not the way, so we meet the King. All is right with me; I have nothing to fear.'

So spoke Rolfe as he addressed the men by his side. I was surprised to see how his face had gained an expression of confidence and boldness since I last saw him in my dream.

'Be not so confident,' said the voice of a Messenger who came up to him. 'Rolfe, the King calls for you.'

I saw a slight change pass over Rolfe's face; he turned a moment pale, but immediately recovering his confidence and firmness, he followed the messenger.

'It will matter little,' said he, addressing his guide, 'which way we approach the King, so we are there when He calls.'

The Messenger's words were few and solemn.

'There is but one way,' said he, looking onwards.

'And that the way which seemed the best for one's work,' said Rolfe. To be sure I broke away Albyn's army and the outward body of the Vast Army; but my heart was in the same cause, so I count it matters little; and all these good people who followed me are bound up in the same cause with myself.'

'Whether it be for good or for bad,' said the other, 'you have brought them into it, and you must answer for them;' and he continued his onward step.

'Oh! true, true;' continued Rolfe, putting on a manner of ease. 'I have no fears about that. But how will it fare, think you, with young Erza, who left the King's cause?'

'I know not, the King will decide; it all depends whether he was at his post—the post the King gave him.'

'His post—the post!' muttered Rolfe, 'you make much of that. I have not made so much of it; still of course I have made a great deal of it, quite enough, I have no fears.'

'Those who say they have no fears are fearless in words only,' said a Voice.

Rolfe seemed disturbed.

'Well, but,' continued he, addressing the Messenger, 'well, but tell me;' but the Messenger placed his finger on his lips, as if for silence, and Rolfe looked frightened and was still.

I noticed many figures followed Rolfe closely, who seemed to cling to his footsteps.

'Why do you follow so closely, friends?' said he.

'We are bound up with you,' was the answer.

'You led us here so far, and we will be by you now, that you may answer for us; for you know, more than we do, why we took the step we did.'

'What step? what step?' cried Rolfe impatiently, yet half-jocosely.

'Why, the leaving the Vast Army,' said they. 'We had our doubts, you know, at the time, and they are increased now; you took it upon yourself to lead us away, and you must answer for us now, if we took a false step.'

'Oh, don't fear; don't fear, my good fellows,' said Rolfe, 'all is safe;' but a falter in his voice betokened a slight doubt in his mind whether it were so.

The men shook their heads and followed the Messengers of the King. I looked to Rolfe's brow, I saw the mark of the cross; but it was like a furrow, or a channel, dry, without light, and lifeless. As they went on, they crossed the path of more than one who was being led to the presence of the King. I noticed there were very many more than I had seen before, and all were deeply concerned more or less in their meeting with the King. My eye fell on a figure who was hastily coming up from the rocks, following his Messenger, and approaching the place where Rolfe was standing.

There was a settled look of scorn on the face of this man, which seemed to struggle with a feeling of fear which plainly held him.

'Oh, Lufra! cried Rolfe, 'and are you too summoned to meet the King? we are a goodly company. But how are you ready? for you never believed He would come at all; and what is likely to be the case of such?' said he, addressing the Messenger.

The Messenger made no answer, but moved on more swiftly in his onward course. Lufra looked sullen and scornful.

'Nay, don't be angry,' said the other; 'I only wondered how the King would receive you, when you seemed scarce to believe there was a King at all.'

'It remains to be proved yet, perhaps,' said he; but though he tried to wear an expression of boldness and carelessness, his lips quivered, and his voice faltered.

The Messenger turned and looked at him, and an expression of deep sorrow was in his face at Lufra's last words; his eye seemed to look him through and through; Lufra felt it, and hung his head, and pulled his soldier's cap more closely over his eyes.

'At least,' said Rolfe, 'you were not at your post when the King came, and they say that is all that matters.'

'Better to be away altogether from one's post, than mind it carelessly as some do,' he answered. 'I am none of those who have made so much of the thing that is to be done; my care is for the sort of doing it. It's [illegible] to be an [illegible] [illegible] friend,' he [illegible] a tone [illegible] himself. 'I love [illegible] and I doubt not but the King [illegible] I shall not stand in so bad a [illegible] drawn off their post;' and his voice gained more confidence.

[illegible]

'We must hasten,' said the Messenger; 'time is short, and the King waits not.'

Lufra hastened on; I looked at his brow; I saw at first nothing, no mark, no sign upon his brow; at last I thought I could discover a pale light which burnt there, but it was more the red mark of a fire nearly burnt out.

I noticed that Erza did not stay to look at any who passed him; he moved on, bearing his banner with a look of deep anxiety on his brow.

'Oh, stay! stay, wait for me one little hour,' cried a loud and bitter voice; 'hear me! but one little hour! I am undone! I am undone! Cannot you stay one hour, while I gather my broken fragments?'

'Not a moment!' was the calm, stern answer of him who, with his arm stretched out towards the east, was urging the suppliant to follow.

I turned towards the spot: on a rock which overhung a pass, leant the slender form of a youth; at his feet lay a banner, broken and in shivers, which he was vainly trying to gather up. As he stood, I noticed large tear-drops coursed their way down his face, and his whole frame seemed to shudder with emotion.

'Oh, it was my post, my post, my poor neglected post! I was bid keep this banner to wave above the pass, and I but left it for a few minutes, and the foe has cut it in pieces; and now I am called to meet the King; and must I go? utterly, utterly unready. Is there no hope? may I not stay to strive to put it together?'

'Away! away!' cried the Messenger sternly; 'there is no time—the King waits thee.'

'For what?' asked the boy bitterly.

'To give an account of how you have kept your post committed to you,' said he, 'and guarded that committed to your charge. Thou knowest, Ulla,' said he, again urging him.

Ulla wrung his hands in bitterness of soul.

'And what account shall I give? I left it not half an hour, to join with yonder merry ones in play, and see what it has come to!'

'The time is short,' said the other; 'we must go.'

'My post! my neglected post!' cried the boy bitterly, as he passed Ezra with his banner shivered and rent, and dragging it after him.

Ezra shuddered, and hung his head; 'My neglected post!' thought he.

The boy addressed him as he passed quickly by him, as if speaking would relieve his suffering mind. 'I never thought it would come to this,' said he, looking bitterly at Erza; 'I never, never thought it; you are happy, very happy. Oh! can you do nothing to help me?' He appealed so sadly and earnestly to Erza, that the boy scarcely knew what to answer.

'What is the cause of your grief?' said he.

'I have deserted my appointed place, and my banner is broken.'

'That is not all,' said a Voice.

The boy hesitated, and hung his head.

A Voice passed by, which said, 'When Ulla's banner fell by his own neglect, a large portion of the soldiers of the King lost their signal and mark, and were lost in the defiles of the rocks, and were taken captive by the enemy; and they will all bear witness against Ulla at the King's bar.'

Ulla shuddered.

'My neglect stops not at the banner's being broken,' said he bitterly; 'and where it will end I know not. Oh! Erza, Erza, cannot you help me?'

'How can I?' said the other kindly; 'I would do all I could, but I know not what to do.'

'Oh, I know that, I know that,' said Ulla; 'you can do nothing; I am undone! undone!'

At that moment a band of captives were seen being hurried along towards the camp; their hands were loaded with chains, and their necks bowed down.

'Whither away?' said one.

'Whither?' said they; 'to the King, to answer for our neglect of duty, by which, damage has come to the King's cause; but we care not much, for we shall lay all the blame on him who caused it. It was no fault of ours; we never saw the banner float as the leader said it would, and how could we help it? Let the blame fall where it lies.'

Ulla groaned deeply and smote his breast. 'Undone! undone!' said he. 'Is there not one more hour? Kind sir, one hour, and I will firmly hold my place, and go through every suffering to keep it. Oh, I would bear years of suffering at my place, if I may only go back and try once more, only once more! Is all hope over?'

The Messenger made no answer, but calmly pointing over his head to the point they were moving to, went swiftly on.

'Then all is lost,' said the poor boy, folding his hands on his aching brow: I heard him speak no more.

'The King is kind and full of love,' said one who came by on the same object, led by a Messenger, 'and I am depending on his kindness, so why not you?' he continued, addressing him we just spoke of; 'I am confident all is right with me; I have never left the work I had to do, that is, only when I plainly saw I could be more useful elsewhere, and then I used my own judgment and changed my place.'

'And what was the change?' asked another who walked by him.

'I [illegible] to give a signal from a [illegible] the enemy should be seen advancing along a certain road; and after I [illegible] A long [illegible] [illegible] bearing [illegible]

down, and every one praised me for it, and said I had done well, and should be an eminent servant of the King, and should have a high reward.'

The other was silent.

'You do not doubt it?' said the first, with a slight anxiety in his manner.

'I do,' was the answer; 'I do doubt if it will hold good when you meet the King.'

'Why?' said the other; 'surely I must know best my own line.'

'Nay! but I have ever heard that the King is especially jealous about any one changing or choosing for himself; and besides, how know you but what the enemy may have passed over the road at the moment, and so more harm done to the King's cause than all the good you did in the fight below?'

His companion grew thoughtful and sad.

'I meant no harm,' said he; 'I did it for the best.'

A silent, solemn Voice passed by, which seemed to say, 'Over the very road the enemy passed, the moment you ceased to watch, the danger done to the King was great; one hour's more watching would have saved all.'

The boy turned ashy pale and spoke no more.

I will mention but two more of the figures I saw following the King's Messengers. There came a man older than some I had seen, and by his side a youth, who seemed like his son. The father frequently turned to his boy, and appeared in some degree of discomfort.

'Whatever trouble there is,' said the boy, in a sullen manner, 'you must take the blame.'

'Alas! alas!' said the other; 'who would have thought it would have come to this, to lay all the guilt on me? You seem glad to do it, and then for it to come from you! Oh! me, alas! alas!' cried the father, clasping his hands, and looking with agony towards the glow.

'What is the matter?' said one who was passing near.

'The matter!' said the other; 'why, the King gave me a place in the Vast Army, and told me he would trust me, and would depend on me; and I had arms given me, and begun to do my work with determination. But you, boy, whom I loved with my soul, who was in another part of the army, refused to do his work unless I were near him; and without orders I left my work to join him.'

'Well! but you went back to it again?'

'No, no; I meant to do so in an after day, and he kept me, and I put off going continually; and at last the army joined the King, and I was not there, and now I am called to meet Him, and what shall I do?'

'But, surely, what you did was most natural, for a father to wish to be near his son.'

'Yes, but the King expects nothing but obedience to Him. He will have none served but Him, and no cause thought of but his. A son must not be thought of first; and besides, sir, see how my son treats me; he lays all on me; he turns against me; and so it is always where we place our affections on the wrong object, or even the right one overmuch; the very thing we love turns against us and proves our ruin; and now all is lost!'

And the poor father covered his face with his hands, and went on; I thought I noticed the son mock at him and his grief.

I will mention but one more of the parties I saw, for there were many;—I noticed one, they called him Olfric; his step was firm, and his eye cast down; his brow calm and serene, and his expression peaceful; his soldier's dress was wound around him; on his breast some wounds had been made; he carried his shield and his sword, and the cross glowed brightly on his forehead. I saw one following him close, and crouching down behind him, as I thought he seemed trying to be hid in the shadow the young soldier cast from the glow before him on the ground behind him. The hindmost figure seemed older by some years than the foremost, though his anxious, frightened manner and agitated efforts betokened an alarm that the other did not show.

'Who is yon crouching man?' said I, addressing my guide.

'He is one who, having a far fame for his knowledge of arms, instructed many of the soldier's of the King in the mode of warfare, and has indeed formed some of our best soldiers; and young Olfric is one of his best of all; a valiant and faithful soldier has the youth been to the King. But yon man, though he formed so many good men, turned out ill himself, and neglected his own work. Men spoke fair of him for the work he had done for others, and now he is trying to hide in the shadow of him he formed and taught, hoping that will save him.'

'And will it have any effect?' [illegible] I.

'None whatever,' was [illegible] answer; 'none. It is not the fitting [illegible] for their post that will do when [illegible] meet the King, if they have not been found ready at their own.'

'But,' said I, 'if all the army praise him, even its leader?'

'True,' said the other; 'but that will not do; there is another Voice more trustworthy than that; nothing is so deceitful and deceived as the opinion of one soldier of another.'

I was thoughtful; I could not help watching the many vain efforts the poor man seemed to make to be sheltered by Olfric's shadow, but it would not cover [illegible]

At length [illegible]

[illegible]

ing the King. I followed with my guide, and naturally kept my closest attention on Erza, whom I had so long an interest in. I followed him as near as I could, but when we reached the end of the line of works we had been moving along, I found we could proceed no further; for the air was thronged with the Messengers of the King, who prevented nearer approach; all I could do was to stand and gaze down, where, through the openings in the works, I could see the intense light which they said was near the King himself, and through which there were entering and returning those who were led into his presence.

(To be concluded.)

For the Children.

Philip Henry, a wise and holy minister, used to teach his children the following words:

"I take God to be my chiefest good and highest end. I take Christ to be my Prince and Savior. I take the Holy Ghost to be my Sanctifier, Teacher, Guide and Comforter. I take the word of God to be my rule in all my actions, and the people of God to be my people in all conditions. I do likewise dedicate unto the Lord my whole self, all I am, all I have, and all I can do. And this I do deliberately, sincerely, freely, and forever."

Every Sabbath evening each of them slowly repeated these solemn words after their recitation in the catechism, he putting his amen to it, and sometimes adding, "So say and so do, and you are made forever." And never was there a family more lovely and distinguished for its piety.

"We must remember that our portion of temporal things is but food and raiment. God has not promised us coaches and horses, rich houses and jewels, silks and carpets; neither has he promised to minister to our needs in such circumstances as we shall appoint, but such as he himself shall choose. It may be that he has laid up the corn that shall feed thee in the storehouse of thy brother; or will clothe thee with his wool. He enabled Peter to pay his taxes by the ministry of a fish; Elijah was fed by a raven; and his only Son rode in triumph upon an ass that grazed in another man's pastures."

"My mother does not expect me to be out Sunday, riding," said a young clerk to a fellow-boarder.

"Never mind if she don't, you can go."

"Yes, I can go; but if I go, I shall fall below her expectations, and I shall try never to do that," was the noble reply.

SAFE SHIP TO SAIL IN.—"Scripture on the foremast; Scripture on the mainmast; Scripture on the mizzenmast; Scripture on all the ship's yards; Scripture for her chart."

PRAYER.—One hour of solitude passed in sincere or earnest prayer, or the conflict with and conquest over a single passion or bosom sin, will teach us more of thought, will more effectually awaken the faculty, and form the habit of reflection, than a year's study in the schools without them.

—Coleridge.

BENEVOLENCE.—I would so live, as if I knew I received my being for the benefit of others.—Seneca.

A WORD TO THE SLUGGISH.

FROM GOETHE.

Lose this day loitering—'twill be the same story
To-morrow, and next more dilatory;
The indecision brings its own delays,
And days are lost lamenting over days.
Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute!
What you can do, or dream you can, begin it;
Boldness has genius, power and magic in it.
Only engage, and then the mind grows heated;
Begin it, and the work shall be completed!

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our [illegible] that all with [illegible] ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should [illegible] to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all [illegible] intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing, [illegible] the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The [illegible] Crisis [illegible] quarterly or [illegible] will be 13 [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE EARLY TAKEN.

"They shall come again from the land of the enemy."—JEREMIAH.

Whither were the sinless taken—
  Where went they of stainless bands?
Do they sleep, or do they waken,
  Since they joined the silent bands?
Floating on the gloomy river,
  Went they of the violet eyes,
Where, above God's throne, forever
  Shine the emerald rainbow dyes?

Is it that their feet have wandered
  'Mid the stars in boundless space;
Or passed through the [illegible]land, onward
  To some unseen, happy place?
There was Julie's seraph beauty,
  Charlie, with his golden hair;
Georgie, saved from life's hard duty,
  Innocent and angel fair.

With hushed hearts and eyelids drooping,
  White in death we laid them down,
Waiting for the solemn trumpet
  And the victor's palm and crown.
'Neath the verdant garb of summer,
  Or the winter's shroud of white,
They are sleeping cold and quiet,
  Till the morning bringeth light.

Pain and grief have lost their power,
  And the tempter tries them not,
Where they slumber through the seasons,
  Having found the peaceful lot.
Thither were the sinless taken,
  There went they of stainless hands;
They do sleep, but shall awaken
  And return from death's dark land.

M. LOUISA SOUTHWICK.

Marysville, O.

For the Crisis.

ONE REWARD.

"And they likewise received every man a penny."—Matt. 20: 10.

Murmur not, children, O be not distress'd,
I've but one reward you must share with the rest;
I've but one kingdom, no more can I give,
And that not by merit but grace you receive.

The crown of rejoicing is bright for the least,
I give you myself; there is but one Christ;
One robe prepar'd you, and that is the best,
And your younger brother must share with the rest.

'Tis true in my vineyard you have labored long,
The day is far spent, and low sinks the sun;
But eternal life is the price of my blood,
And all shall receive it that work for my Lord.

Then murmur not, children, your poor Gentile neighbor,
Though at the last hour is invited to labor;
The kid should be slain, and music and dancing
Should speak our glad welcome and show our rejoicing.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

HEAVENLY TREASURE.

Why should we lay up treasures here below,
  Where moth and rust corrupt? Why fix our heart
  On that from which so quickly we must part?
Why on an ocean where such tempests blow,
Embark so rich a freight? Why midst the snow
  Of so unkind a winter, plant a flower
  So fragrant, yet so frail? Why build hope's tower
Where lightning's flash and whelming torrents flow?
  But, if our highest energies are bent
In God and heaven a portion to insure,
Midst every change our wealth will be secure;
  When the destroying angels forth are sent,
  When melts away the starry firmament,
Our bliss unharmed shall, e'en like God, endure.

—Newman Hall.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Fools' Proverbs.

When your horse is starved to death get him hay.

When your house is burned up be careful about fires.

When your credit is spoiled pay your debts.

When your wife is worked to death hire some help.

When your money is all gone learn prudence.

When you are dead from excess and luxury be temperate and eat sawdust puddings.

When you have wasted your estate practice economy.

When you have served the devil as long as you live, then repent.

When your preacher has starved, then say you meant to feed him.

When you have grieved God's spirit away, then begin to think of heeding its influence.

When you have killed yourself to get money, [illegible] it.

When [illegible] all spent serving sin [illegible]

When [illegible] have died from want, [illegible] the funeral.

[illegible] have gained the whole world [illegible]

Choice Selections.

The Vast Army.

BY REV. EDW. MUNRO, PERPETUAL CURATE OF HARROW-WEALD, ENG.

CHAPTER VI.—THE SUMMONS.

When I slept again, I tried to catch the thread of the scene, but could not. A change had passed over every thing; all was altered: how strangely! I felt confused: evidently much had happened; but how quickly and suddenly! A blaze of light, so dazzling and intense, wrapped every thing, I was glad to look away. Every hill and crag were so bathed in the rising light, as to leave not even a shadow where a man could hide himself. Each point and rock were lost in the blaze of fire. I doubted not the King and his army had arrived. I looked anxiously around for those whom I had so long been interested in. It was plain that all were taken by surprise, and, though all had been expecting it, none were as they meant to be. What I could see most clearly, were numbers of the Messengers of the King, who passed rapidly to and fro along the hosts, seemingly bent on some work of their Master's. The enemies of the King were flying in all directions, though some still seemed determined to face the danger.

My attention was first drawn to the form of Erza, who was standing within the defile of the rocks with the banner in his hand; he seemed wounded all over, his face looked pale, and his strength exhausted: a band of men had been attacking him, to wrest the banner from him, but he had fought for it so valiantly that hitherto it had been in vain.

'My banner! my post;' cried Erza ever and anon, as he turned his now languishing eye up to the flag which floated above him. 'My banner! my post! at least I will try and keep it this time;' and he struck another and another blow for the precious charge Albyn had given him.

'My post! the banner! the King!' said he; 'I am at my post at least now, am I not?' cried he, anxiously turning to the Messenger who stood beside him.

'Thou must follow me at once,' said the Messenger; 'the King has called for thee.'

Then in a moment all the events of the past rushed over Erza's mind and memory, like colors of a summer's sky across the surface of water, and he looked deeply sorrowful, and a cloud of sadness passed over his eyes. Swiftly and silently over the glowing rocks did Erza and the bright one go. Erza held his banner, and the Messenger led the way.

'Called for me! called for me!' said the boy to himself, anxiously. 'The King come! come at last! Oh, Albyn, Albyn, would that you were here!'

I saw the poor boy could scarce keep pace with the Messenger, so quivering were his knees, and his heart beat so high.

'Whither away?' said one who passed them.

'To take young Erza to meet the King,' said the other, and the boy again trembled.

At that moment a loud, wild, and bitter cry arose not far from them. Erza started; he thought he knew the sound; he looked anxiously down a deep ravine at his feet and a high overhanging rock. He saw the form of Ulric—his helmet had fallen from his head, and lay in shivered fragments on the ground; his shield was also lying in atoms by his side, shattered by a huge piece of rock which had fallen upon it. The boy was trying to bind his armor of defence close around him, to protect himself, but a burning wind, which rolled down the barren pass, tore it from him as fast as he put it on. Meanwhile he strove, and strove in vain, to find a hiding-place under the shadow of the rocks, but could find none. The intense light prevented a shadow, and Ulric could not hide himself. Down the pass, towards the agonized boy, came two Messengers, swift and silent. Ulric saw and guessed their message, and uttered the piercing shriek which Erza heard. Ulric placed his hands against his ears, and held them closely.

'I will not hear, I will not hear the message; I know it already.'

But, despite his efforts, an awful Voice passed on, and Ulric could not help hearing it.

'Ulric, the King has called for thee.'

Erza again shuddered at the awful call, and Ulric tore his hair, and, stamping his feet with rage, said he would not go. But I saw those Messengers laid their hands on him, and Ulric became helpless as a little child, and in silent despair followed them. His hands were clasped, his hair hung wild over his shoulders, his riven vest and broken armor hung in fragments about him.

'Erza! Oh, Erza!' cried he, as his eye looking up glanced on the youth, and his face pale as marble, moved swiftly along on the edge of rocks above.

There was a strange contrast in the expression of the two. Erza's pale, anxious, awful brow betokened reverence and intense anxiety. Ulric's worn face and hollow cheek showed an expression of calm despair. Erza's hands were folded crosswise on his breast. Erza's cross was there, and seemed to flicker like a flame of pale, uncertain light, now high, now low, but still clearly living, while on Ulric's brow a tongue of burning fire seemed to lick and scorch, and ever and anon he pressed his fingers on his forehead as if in agony.

As they two passed on swiftly and silently behind the Messengers, and the banner Albyn gave him floated in its purple folds above the head of Erza.

A party now crossed their path, of a [illegible] and appearance. A [illegible] them behind to follow. (His manner was bold and fearless.

'Come on,' said he; 'follow me, we go to join the King, who has reached the faithful army. We go not the same way as the others we have passed or met. But it matters not the way, so we meet the King. All is right with me; I have nothing to fear.'

So spoke Rolfe as he addressed the men by his side. I was surprised to see how his face had gained an expression of confidence and boldness since I last saw him in my dream.

'Be not so confident,' said the voice of a Messenger who came up to him. 'Rolfe, the King calls for you.'

I saw a slight change pass over Rolfe's face; he turned a moment pale, but immediately recovering his confidence and firmness, he followed the messenger.

'It will matter little,' said he, addressing his guide, 'which way we approach the King, so we are there when He calls.'

The Messenger's words were few and solemn.

'There is but one way,' said he, looking onwards.

'And that the way which seemed the best for one's work,' said Rolfe. 'To be sure I broke away Albyn's army and the outward body of the Vast Army; but my heart was in the same cause, so I count it matters little; and all these good people who followed me are bound up in the same cause with myself.'

'Whether it be for good or for bad,' said the other, 'you have brought them into it, and you must answer for them;' and he continued his onward step.

'Oh! true, true;' continued Rolfe, putting on a manner of ease. 'I have no fears about that. But how will it fare, think you, with young Erza, who left the King's cause?'

'I know not, the King will decide; it all depends whether he was at his post—the post the King gave him.'

'His post—the post!' muttered Rolfe, 'you make much of that. I have not made so much of it; still of course I have made a great deal of it, quite enough. I have no fears.'

'Those who say they have no fears are fearless in words only,' said a Voice.

Rolfe seemed disturbed.

'Well, but,' continued he, addressing the Messenger, 'well, but tell me;' but the Messenger placed his finger on his lips, as if for silence, and Rolfe looked frightened and was still.

I noticed many figures followed Rolfe closely, who seemed to cling to his footsteps.

'Why do you follow so closely, friends?' said he.

'We are bound up with you,' was the answer.

'You led us here so far, and we will be by you now, that you may answer for us; for you know, more than we do, why we took the step we did.'

'What step? what step?' cried Rolfe impatiently, yet half-jocosely.

'Why, the leaving the Vast Army,' said they. 'We had our doubts, you know, at the time, and they are increased now; you took it upon yourself to lead us away, and you must answer for us now, if we took a false step.'

'Oh, don't fear; don't fear, my good fellows,' said Rolfe, 'all is safe;' but a falter in his voice betokened a slight doubt in his mind whether it were so.

The men shook their heads, and followed the Messengers of the King. I looked to Rolfe's brow, I saw the mark of the cross; but it was like a furrow, or a channel, dry, without light, and lifeless. As they went on, they crossed the path of more than one who was being led to the presence of the King. I noticed there were very many more than I had seen before, and all were deeply concerned more or less in their meeting with the King. My eye fell on a figure who was hastily coming up from the rocks, following his Messenger, and approaching the place where Rolfe was standing.

There was a settled look of scorn on the face of this man, which seemed to struggle with a feeling of fear which plainly held him.

'Oh, Lufra! cried Rolfe, 'and are you too summoned to meet the King? we are a goodly company. But how are you ready? for you never believed He would come at all; and what is likely to be the case of such?' said he, addressing the Messenger.

The Messenger made no answer, but moved on more swiftly in his onward course. Lufra looked sullen and scornful.

'Nay, don't be angry,' said the other; 'I only wondered how the King would receive you, when you seemed scarce to believe there was a King at all.'

'It remains to be proved yet, perhaps,' said he; but though he tried to wear an expression of boldness and carelessness, his lips quivered, and his voice faltered.

The Messenger turned and looked at him, and an expression of deep sorrow was in his face at Lufra's last words; his eye seemed to look him through and through; Lufra felt it, and hung his head, and pulled his soldier's cap more closely over his eyes.

'At least,' said Rolfe, 'you were not at your post when the King came, and they say that is all that matters.'

'Better to be away altogether from one's post, than mind it carelessly as some do,' he answered. 'I am none of those who have made so much of the thing that is to be done; my care is for the way of doing it. It's better at least to be an open foe, than a bad serving friend,' he continued in a tone excusing himself. 'I love openness, and I doubt not but the King does too. I shall not stand in so bad a plight [illegible] drawn off their post;' and his voice gained more confidence.

'We must hasten,' said the Messenger; 'time is short, and the King waits not.'

Lufra hastened on; I looked at his brow; I saw at first nothing, no mark, no sign upon his brow; at last I thought I could discover a pale light which burnt there, but it was more the red mark of a fire nearly burnt out.

I noticed that Erza did not stay to look at any who passed him; he moved on, bearing his banner with a look of deep anxiety on his brow.

'Oh, stay! stay, wait for me one little hour,' cried a loud and bitter voice; 'hear me! but one little hour! I am undone! I am undone! Cannot you stay one hour, while I gather my broken fragments?'

'Not a moment!' was the calm, stern answer of him who, with his arm stretched out towards the east, was urging the suppliant to follow.

I turned towards the spot: on a rock which overhung a pass, leant the slender form of a youth; at his feet lay a banner, broken and in shivers, which he was vainly trying to gather up. As he stood, I noticed large tear-drops coursed their way down his face, and his whole frame seemed to shudder with emotion.

'Oh, it was my post, my post, my poor neglected post! I was bid keep this banner to wave above the pass, and I but left it for a few minutes, and the foe has cut it in pieces; and now I am called to meet the King; and must I go? utterly, utterly unready. Is there no hope? may I not stay to strive to put it together?'

'Away! away!' cried the Messenger sternly; 'there is no time—the King waits thee.'

'For what?' asked the boy bitterly.

'To give an account of how you have kept your post committed to you,' said he, 'and guarded that committed to your charge. Thou knowest, Ulla,' said he, again urging him.

Ulla wrung his hands in bitterness of soul.

'And what account shall I give? I left it not half an hour, to join with yonder merry ones in play, and see what it has come to!'

'The time is short,' said the other; 'we must go.'

'My post! my neglected post!' cried the boy bitterly, as he passed Ezra with his banner shivered and rent, and dragging it after him.

Ezra shuddered, and hung his head; 'My neglected post!' thought he.

The boy addressed him as he passed quickly by him, as if speaking would relieve his suffering mind. 'I never thought it would come to this,' said he, looking bitterly at Erza; 'I never, never thought it; you are happy, very happy. Oh! can you do nothing to help me?' He appealed so sadly and earnestly to Erza, that the boy scarcely knew what to answer.

'What is the cause of your grief?' said he.

'I have deserted my appointed place, and my banner is broken.'

'That is not all,' said a Voice.

The boy hesitated, and hung his head.

A Voice passed by, which said, 'When Ulla's banner fell by his own neglect, a large portion of the soldiers of the King lost their signal and mark, and were lost in the defiles of the rocks, and were taken captive by the enemy; and they will all bear witness against Ulla at the King's bar.'

Ulla shuddered.

'My neglect stops not at the banner's being broken,' said he bitterly; 'and where it will end I know not. Oh! Erza, Erza, cannot you help me?'

'How can I?' said the other kindly; 'I would do all I could, but I know not what to do.'

'Oh, I know that, I know that,' said Ulla; 'you can do nothing; I am undone! undone!'

At that moment a band of captives were seen being hurried along towards the camp; their hands were loaded with chains, and their necks bowed down.

'Whither away?' said one.

'Whither?' said they; 'to the King, to answer for our neglect of duty, by which, damage has come to the King's cause; but we care not much, for we shall lay all the blame on him who caused it. It was no fault of ours; we never saw the banner float as the leader said it would, and how could we help it? Let the blame fall where it lies.'

Ulla groaned deeply and smote his breast. 'Undone! undone!' said he. 'Is there not one more hour? Kind sir, one hour, and I will firmly hold my place, and go through every suffering to keep it. Oh, I would bear years of suffering at my place, if I may only go back and try once more, only once more! Is all hope over?'

The Messenger made no answer, but calmly pointing over his head to the point they were moving to, went swiftly on.

'Then all is lost,' said the poor boy, folding his hands on his aching brow: I heard him speak no more.

'The King is kind and full of love,' said one who came by on the same object, led by a Messenger, 'and I am depending on his kindness, so why not you?' he continued, addressing him we just spoke of; 'I am confident all is right with me; I have never left the work I had to do, that is, only when I plainly saw I could be more useful elsewhere, and then I used my own judgment and changed my place.'

'And what was the change?' asked another who walked by him.

'[illegible] I was told to give a signal from a hill when the enemy should be seen advancing along a certain road; and after I watched a long time, I saw none were coming, and hearing fierce work going on [illegible]

down, and every one praised me for it, and said I had done well, and should be an eminent servant of the King, and should have a high reward.'

The other was silent.

'You do not doubt it?' said the first, with a slight anxiety in his manner.

'I do,' was the answer; 'I do doubt if it will hold good when you meet the King.'

'Why?' said the other; 'surely I must know best my own line.'

'Nay! but I have ever heard that the King is especially jealous about any one changing or choosing for himself; and besides, how know you but what the enemy may have passed over the road at the moment, and so more harm done to the King's cause than all the good you did in the fight below?'

His companion grew thoughtful and sad.

'I meant no harm,' said he; 'I did it for the best.'

A silent, solemn Voice passed by, which seemed to say, 'Over the very road the enemy passed, the moment you ceased to watch, the danger done to the King was great; one hour's more watching would have saved all.'

The boy turned ashy pale and spoke no more.

I will mention but two more of the figures I saw following the King's Messengers. There came a man older than some I had seen, and by his side a youth, who seemed like his son. The father frequently turned to his boy, and appeared in some degree of discomfort.

'Whatever trouble there is,' said the boy, in a sullen manner, 'you must take the blame.'

'Alas! alas!' said the other; 'who would have thought it would have come to this, to lay all the guilt on me? You seem glad to do it, and then for it to come from you! Oh! me, alas! alas!' cried the father, clasping his hands, and looking with agony towards the glow.

'What is the matter?' said one who was passing near.

'The matter!' said the other; 'why, the King gave me a place in the Vast Army, and told me he would trust me, and would depend on me; and I had arms given me, and begun to do my work with determination. But you, boy, whom I loved with my soul, who was in another part of the army, refused to do his work unless I were near him; and without orders I left my work to join him.'

'Well! but you went back to it again?'

'No, no; I meant to do so in an after day, and he kept me, and I put off going continually; and at last the army joined the King, and I was not there, and now I am called to meet Him, and what shall I do?'

'But, surely, what you did was most natural, for a father to wish to be near his son.'

'Yes, but the King expects nothing but obedience to Him. He will have none served but Him, and no cause thought of but his. A son must not be thought of first; and besides, sir, see how my son treats me; he lays all on me; he turns against me; and so it is always where we place our affections on the wrong object, or even the right one overmuch; the very thing we love turns against us and proves our ruin; and now all is lost!'

And the poor father covered his face with his hands, and went on; I thought I noticed the son mock at him and his grief.

I will mention but one more of the parties I saw, for there were many;—I noticed one, they called him Olfric; his step was firm, and his eye cast down; his brow calm and serene, and his expression peaceful; his soldier's dress was wound around him; on his breast some wounds had been made; he carried his shield and his sword, and the cross glowed brightly on his forehead. I saw one following him close, and crouching down behind him, as I thought he seemed trying to be hid in the shadow the young soldier cast from the glow before him on the ground behind him. The hindmost figure seemed older by some years than the foremost, though his anxious, frightened manner and agitated efforts betokened an alarm that the other did not show.

'Who is yon crouching man?' said I, addressing my guide.

'He is one who, having a far fame for his knowledge of arms, instructed many of the soldier's of the King in the mode of warfare, and has indeed formed some of our best soldiers: and young Olfric is one of his best of all; a valiant and faithful soldier has the youth been to the King. But yon man, though he formed so many good men, turned out ill himself, and neglected his own work. Men spoke fair of him for the work he had done for others, and now he is trying to hide in the shadow of him he formed and taught, hoping that will save him.'

'And will it have any effect?' [illegible] I.

'None whatever,' was the answer, 'none. It is not the fitting [illegible] for their post that will do when [illegible] meet the King, if they have not been found ready at their own.'

'But,' said I, 'if all the army praise him, even its leader?'

'True,' said the other: 'but that will not do; there is another Voice more trustworthy than that; nothing is so deceitful and deceived as the opinion of one soldier of another.'

I was thoughtful; I could not help watching the many vain efforts the poor man seemed to make to be sheltered by Olfric's shadow, but it would not cover [illegible]

At length [illegible]

ing the King. I followed with my guide, and naturally kept my closest attention on Erza, whom I had so long an interest in. I followed him as near as I could, but when we reached the end of the line of works we had been moving along, I found we could proceed no further; for the air was thronged with the Messengers of the King, who prevented nearer approach; all I could do was to stand and gaze down, where, through the openings in the works, I could see the intense light which they said was near the King himself, and through which there were entering and returning those who were led into his presence.

(To be concluded.)

For the Children.

Philip Henry, a wise and holy minister, used to teach his children the following words:

"I take God to be my chiefest good and highest end. I take Christ to be my Prince and Savior. I take the Holy Ghost to be my Sanctifier, Teacher, Guide and Comforter. I take the word of God to be my rule in all my actions, and the people of God to be my people in all conditions. I do likewise dedicate unto the Lord my whole self, all I am, all I have, and all I can do. And this I do deliberately, sincerely, freely, and forever."

Every Sabbath evening each of them slowly repeated these solemn words after their recitation in the catechism, he putting his amen to it, and sometimes adding, "So say and so do, and you are made forever." And never was there a family more lovely and distinguished for its piety.

"We must remember that our portion of temporal things is but food and raiment. God has not promised us coaches and horses, rich houses and jewels, silks and carpets; neither has he promised to minister to our needs in such circumstances as we shall appoint, but such as he himself shall choose. It may be that he has laid up the corn that shall feed thee in the storehouse of thy brother; or will clothe thee with his wool. He enabled Peter to pay his taxes by the ministry of a fish; Elijah was fed by a raven; and his only Son rode in triumph upon an ass that grazed in another man's pastures."

"My mother does not expect me to be out Sunday, riding," said a young clerk to a fellow-boarder.

"Never mind if she don't, you can go."

"Yes, I can go; but if I go, I shall fall below her expectations, and I shall try never to do that," was the noble reply.

SAFE SHIP TO SAIL IN.—"Scripture on the foremast; Scripture on the mainmast; Scripture on the mizzenmast; Scripture on all the ship's yards; Scripture for her chart."

PRAYER.—One hour of solitude passed in sincere or earnest prayer, or the conflict with and conquest over a single passion or bosom sin, will teach us more of thought, will more effectually awaken the faculty, and form the habit of reflection, than a year's study in the schools without them.

—Coleridge.

BENEVOLENCE.—I would so live, as if I knew I received my being for the benefit of others.—Seneca.

A WORD TO THE SLUGGISH.

FROM GOETHE.

Lose this day loitering—'twill be the same story
To-morrow, and next more dilatory;
The indecision brings its own delays,
And days are lost lamenting over days.
Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute!
What you can do, or dream you can, begin it;
Boldness has genius, power and magic in it.
Only engage, and then the mind grows heated;
Begin it, and the work shall be completed!

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all communications not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NO. 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1858. WHOLE NO. 152. VOL. VII. NO. 22.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES FOR A FRIEND'S ALBUM.

BY H. L. H.

What shall I ask or wish, my friend, for thee?
Days of unclouded joy and halcyon bliss?
Nay, for such wish could be but mockery
In such a dark and stormy world as this.

What shall I ask? Each heart's desire bestowed,
And no sad blighting of hope's opening bloom?
Nay, for thy knowledge of life's weary road,
Would tell thee earth affordeth no such boon.

What shall I ask? for perfect friendship here?
For days of gladness and for nights of peace?
Ah! well thou knowest, child of many a tear,
Such joy abideth not in worlds like this.

What shall I ask or wish for thee, my friend?
Heaven's blessings rich—mercies that never cease,
Blessings that shall to endless years extend,
The heavenly bounty of eternal peace?

I ask for thee, while here thy path may be
O'ercast with clouds, beset with many a snare,
A faith that ne'er shall falter, fail or die—
A hope that brightens with each passing year.

I ask for thee a strong and steadfast heart,
A hand untiring and a soul sublime;
A holy trust that nought from Christ can part
Through all the sorrows and the woes of time.

I ask for thee, when all thy toils are o'er,
A place among the holy, ransomed throng,
To meet the saved ones on the heavenly shore,
And join with me the victor's lofty song.

I ask for thee at last, 'mid scenes of bliss,
In Paradise a rest, a holy home,
A crown of life, and Christ thy Master's voice,
Saying at last, in tones of love, "well done."

This be thy joy, and in the cloudless land,
Where friends ne'er sever and where foes ne'er come,
There may we grasp again the immortal hand,
And dwell with Jesus never more to roam.

P. D., March, 1858.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

To Whom shall We Look?

The time in which we live is evidently one of peculiar interest, and of great peril. Never, perhaps, since the Savior uttered the words, "Take heed lest any man deceive you," has the exhortation been needed more than at present. That portion of the church who are looking for the coming of Jesus, occupy a position unlike that of any other class of persons on earth, and notwithstanding all that has been said and written on the subject, that position is but imperfectly understood and appreciated by the multitude. I much doubt whether they will ever be other than an isolated people, however desirable an opposite condition might be. Coming out from almost every sect in Christendom, in many instances thrust out, they are bound together by ties not easily severed, and from the very nature of their position, not easily susceptible to influences of any kind from without. Wherein, then, lies the danger?

I would not injure the feelings of any of God's children, yet I feel strongly impressed to give expression to the thoughts that have forced themselves upon my mind for a few days past. Is it not often true in our personal experience, that our most dangerous foes are found lurking within our own hearts, and may it not also be true with us as a people, the people above referred to, that our greatest danger is within our own borders?

Every heart loves sympathy, and however much we may talk of standing independently of others, yet who can say that they are not to a greater or less degree influenced by those in whom they feel the most confidence, as well-grounded and thoroughly instructed christians. Like a map of the journeying of the Israelites in the wilderness, our past experience is before us, and in attempting to avoid past errors, are we not liable to strike upon unseen rocks, equally as dangerous—fearing the power of the mighty billows on the one hand, and forgetting that the shore presents dangers quite as much to be dreaded?

Extremes are dangerous, especially in matters of religion. It is true, lamentably so, as all well know, that even among those who are called Adventists, many are contending for a mere theory—a form, without life or power, to the exclusion of the great practical truths of the gospel, a work of grace in the heart, and that vital Godliness which brings us into a living union with Christ our head, and with the members of his body. Such seem often to be governed by a narrow, sectarian spirit, amounting in many instances to intolerance and bigotry. The church has suffered much and in many ways from this source, and while such a course is to be avoided, and many are endeavoring to do so, is it not to be feared that some may run to the opposite extreme? I would speak plainly, yet in love. Is there not danger while seeking and laboring for union, of, not openly denying the faith, but of covering up or withholding some portions of the word, or at least softening or blunting, if I may so speak, some of the barbed arrows of God's truth, and thus virtually making a sort of compromise with those who do not like to receive all the plain word of God? I pray God it may not be so, but it is well to take heed.

Brn. in the ministry, suffer the word of exhortation. O, "rightly divide the word of Life," that you may be found giving "meat in due season," and be able to say with an apostle, "I have not shunned to declare all the counsel of God." May all that hear "take heed that no man deceive them." "Be wise as serpents, and harmless as doves."

I am aware that many, while they rejoice that men are turning to the Lord and seeking his mercy, are somewhat in doubt as to our position being a right one after all, and are ready to exclaim, "If the Lord is indeed pouring out his spirit upon the people, and apparently blessing those who have not received 'the truth in the love of it,' and in many cases rejected it, to what purpose is it, that this sacrifice has been made, and we have been forced as it were, (if we would be honest in the sight of God,) to forsake all perhaps that we hold dear, to suffer privation, loss of reputation, &c., and to stand to-day before the world where its reproach and hatred must necessarily be felt?"

To such I would say, be steadfast, falter not, though faith be severely tested. With Bro. M. Batchelor I can say, "I would not deny our past experience for the world, nor do I believe the Lord has brought us out here to perish." But has not the Lord been with us and led us? Have we really been deceived in the voice? If any are in doubt, it were well to be assured at once—to look over the ground, and retrace every step if need be, rather than be found fighting against God.

To whom shall we look but unto him who hath promised to be "the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel?" Already the cry of "peace and safety" salutes our ears, and we know that "sudden destruction cometh." That we shall more clearly see the bearing, and feel the force and necessity of the great truths we have received, before the Master comes, I most fully believe; and that we shall find it will cost something more "to continue in the word," "to abide in Christ," to "overcome the world" and "endure to the end," I also believe.

May we all be able to say with Paul, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ; and be found in him not having on my own righteousness which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith. That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

Your sister in Christ,

L. J. BEACH.

New Britain, Ct.

Next to my friends, I love my enemies, for from them I first hear my faults.

The world makes us talkers, but solitude makes us thinkers.

There are reproaches which give praise, and praise which gives us reproaches.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. S. S. Brewer.

To the tried, tempted, poor, rich, hated, despised, sick, sorrowful, afflicted, cast down, persecuted yet rejoicing saints, scattered abroad in the midst of this groaning creation, I wish to say:—Never did the missionary fire burn and glow with a more fervid heat than it has for months, weeks, and days past; yea, I feel this moment—

"My heart grows warm with holy fire,
And kindles with a pure desire," as I wake up the reminiscences of the past, and call to mind the many happy associations, and

The many I have seen,
In places I have been,
While on my pilgrim way;
And the blessed meetings,
With such pleasant greetings.
Then happy all together,
In all sorts of weather,
With a Jerusalem shower,
Which oft came down in power,
That made our hearts rejoice,
As we sung with cheerful voice,
Loud praises to our King,
Who very soon will bring
Our poor despised band
Into fair Canaan's land;
Where happy we shall be
To all eternity.

But, dear children, while such emotions

Cause joy and gladness,
Tis mingled yet with grief and sadness;

not only in retrospecting the indiscriminate ravages of death, for of those who sleep in Jesus, I praise them more than the living,—but the burden of my grief is this: Instead of a firm, united flock, deeply and intensely imbued with the modest, mild, gentle, easy-to-be-entreated, heaven-born principles of the religion of the holy Jesus, with little exception, we see, either theoretical gladiators, almost indifferent formalists, or hobby-horse equestrians. This is no fancy sketch. Instead of fathers and mothers, we see merely children in the faith that works by love and purifies the heart. Yea, babes in the principles of that hope whereof the true possessor develops purifying virtues and graces. Every day, hour, and moment, dear tried and tempted ones, it does seem to me, that with our experience, the exalted position we occupy as it regards light on the prophecies, we should be the most devoted, holy, Godly, praying class of people in the world.

O, what a thought! In a few days we must stand before the Judge. If worldly thoughts would lead thee away, think of that. If pride would lead thee away, think of it. Would coldness, indifference, pleasure, imaginary wrongs, suggest the idea that you might fold your arms in lazy lock, for God's sake, your own and perishing sinners around you, awake, lest God swear in his wrath you shall not enter into his rest! Look around you! Shake thyself! Pray God to anoint thine eyes with eye-salve. See! everything in the moral, political and religious world speak in solemn, awful, grand, and, to the true hearted disciple, encouraging tones. The land is nearing; we begin to scent the land breeze; the sea-weed is floating around. Keep heaving the lead. Dangers thicken. Night is setting in. Keep the signal gleaming at the mast head. Let the altar be smoking with holy incense.

O! my dear brethren and sisters, whose faces I shall see no more until the great trumpet shall be blown, do let us strive to live so that Jesus will not be ashamed of us at his coming. Soon our old Jerusalem-built life-ship will be safely moored in the clear, crystal ocean of IMMORTALITY AND ETERNAL LIFE. O Glory, Glory, Glory to God and the Lamb! My soul is happy. O, who that reads this shall be left out?

Well, the pains, the aches, the growing infirmities, dear children, make me sigh and long for the time when God shall banish from all creation the last taint of Adam's transgression. O hallelujah! what a day of eternal jubilee we shall soon keep, when David's prayer shall be answered, and the wickedness of the wicked has come to an end. O, praise the Lord! Instead of being tormented by satan to all eternity, God, whose nature is LOVE, will put them back in the dust where they came from. Hear the man after God's own heart sing. See 104th Psalm: "Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more. Bless thou the Lord, O my soul. Praise ye the Lord." The character of my heavenly Father shines forth now in a manner that makes a harmony of his precious word.

If health and circumstances permit, I shall try to meet once more with you, dear friends, on the old battle ground at Wilbraham; if not, I pray God to bless you, and cause his face to shine upon you.

If any one has a sword sharpened for theoretical contest, had you not better dig a hole in the earth and bury it? Would it not be better to leave hobby horses at home? And the best place that I can suggest to keep such creatures is, the most secluded place you can find, where there is neither provender, water or ventilation. And try by the grace of God to forget them. Do not be troubled about your pet. Get alone often in secret prayer. Join in the social meetings. Keep humble. Keep thine eye single to the glory of God, and you will soon find yourself glowing with the heavenly heart-burn. Amen.

To another class, let me say, do not remain unblest, cold and formal, then go to campmeeting expecting to be blest; but begin the work now, and take the enjoyment of religion with you; then the meeting, with the blessing of God, will commence, continue, and end in the Spirit; sinners will be converted; you will be blest; God's cause will be honored, his name glorified, and you will return to your homes rejoicing in the Rock of your Salvation.

Your brother in the bonds of the Gospel of love, peace and purity,

S. S. BREWER.

Fairhaven, Mass., July 15, 1858.

For the Crisis.

Future Punishment.

BRO. GRANT:—In reading authors to find their proof for the doctrine of endless misery, I discover among other strange things, this singular one, viz.: that every text relied on to prove the doctrine, has been given up as proof by different able writers, some by one and some by another, till all are gone, and still they consider their doctrine well proved. I call it a strange thing, for it is strange, that the most awfully solemn doctrine ever preached, should be clung to in the nineteenth century, when the Bible, relied on to sustain it, is so uncertain that the best critics cannot be agreed on what texts it is founded.

One thing is certain about the subject of future punishment—all the texts supposed to prove endless woe, have not been collected and balanced as against those which teach destruction. They have been collected to oppose Universalism, but the object of thus collecting them would have utterly failed, had they not stolen the texts that prove destruction, jumbled them together, and called the compound an uncompounded mass, without authority from the Master to do so. The great and good Andrew Fuller, for instance, in quoting 57 texts to sustain endless woe, thus stole 45 of them. He owns that only 12 indicate protracted woe! See letters to a Universalist. This clandestine practice is yet going on by most ministers and christians, notwithstanding many of them have been notified by writing and messengers, that it was against law. It is in reality, as Pollock says, "Stealing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in;" that is, it is taking those texts which prove the penalty of God's law to be death, which is a reasonable penalty, and using them to establish a horrible penalty, invented and delighted in by satan; as it sustains his kingdom, by representing our heavenly Father and his enemy, as "an austere man,"—worse by far than the hardest hearted, most cruel and revengeful savage that ever roamed Columbia's forests: for, as I often say, not one of them would torture his worst enemy twenty four hours, as many say the Almighty will his enemies eternally! No, that savage, flinty heart would soften, and he would release his helpless victim, or end his woes by death.

I wish not to be understood as charging brethren with knowingly and designedly "handling the word of God deceitfully." No, "I am persuaded better things though I thus speak." I have done the like myself for forty years, but now see I erred and sinned in not examining the Bible more for myself, and so avoiding the curse of trusting in man and making flesh my arm." The fact is, christians are acting like a man, finding himself by inheritance in possession of a farm, and believing his title good, without research, honestly claims and uses the profits of it. So divines of our day, finding themselves by tradition in possession of the doctrine of immortality, and believing their title good, without sufficient research, they claim the fruits, which legitimately are eternal misery. They esteem it a trespass, even heresy, to question their title, or deny their right to the fruits.

But a writ of ejectment has been served; and in trying the issue, we would notify defendants (for we claim to be plaintiffs) that possession will not be allowed, any longer, as evidence of title. Nor will "philosophy," "vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called," be admitted as sane witnesses; "their mouths must be stopped."

To save trouble of calling witnesses, we confess possession and own it is of long standing; ever since the heathen, in days of yore, in sheol,—deep down in the bowels of terra firma, built Tartarus and Elysium for a home of ghosts and naked souls and told the credulous Jews (not inspired prophets) of this convenient place; also ever since Catholics took possession of the same region, calling it Purgatory, and found out a door to it; and having the key have made it quite a profitable prison.

By the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, article Destruction, we find that a little resistance to this title of immortality and its fruits, has been made for a century or more; but hitherto there has been a lack of means and counsellors to search and produce the true records in the case. But now, we wish defendants to understand, that means and suitable counsel exist to put the issue through court, to the end of all the appeals which can be made. The archives of heaven will be reached—the original records be shown to the jurors; and, as we know, from the research already made, that a "thus saith the Lord" for said title, is not in the title book, the possession, and sad fruit, will have to be given up, in due time. We can but hope they will be given up peaceably—more so than the rumsellers give up, when the "Maine Law" demands a surrender of their old but illegal rights.

J. BLAIN.

Strong in the Lord.

Let us never dream, my brethren, of a mere outward salvation; a mere escape from the punishment of sin. Let us never dream that Christ died for this. He died to save us from sin itself. We destroy the reality of sin, and make it a mere name and fancy, unless we hold and feel that Christ came to save us from itself, to purify us from its guilt, to root it out of our natures, and make us partakers of the divine nature. What a task is before us, if we are to aim at every good word and work, at all purity, and gentleness and charity, and truth of language, at active works of mercy, almsgiving, visiting the poor and needy, keeping ourselves unspotted from the world, ruling our tongues, subduing our anger, our pride, combatting our selfishness, resisting all sin, and practicing all virtue! Who is sufficient, we may well exclaim, for these things? My brethren, God is sufficient: Christ's grace is sufficient for us. God and Christ are all to us that they were to the Thessalonians, or to all or any of the early churches which the Apostles themselves planted. Jesus Christ is our Lord; Jesus Christ himself will comfort and establish us with the same love, and with the same power that he comforted and established them. God is our father too, as he was their father. We are his children by adoption and grace; he has loved us just as he loved [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Thoughts on Prophecy.

No. II.

"Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience.—Jas. 5: 10.

For another proof that those who travel the prophetic road will meet with difficulties, that to human understanding would seem insurmountable, let us for a few moments contemplate the tearful Jeremiah. With a nature as sensitive as the Mimosa, God saw the spirit and power of inspiration would be the more magnified by choosing so delicate a vessel through which to thunder his anathemas upon an unbelieving world, but more especially upon his professed church, who had become proud, unbelieving and disobedient.

Behold his shrinking timidity, when God called upon him to occupy the responsible situation of a prophet. "Ah! Lord God, I cannot speak; for I am a child." Surely, Thou, the God of all wisdom, will not choose one so incapacitated as I! But what saith God? Say not, I am a child. Do not look upon your natural imbecility and like Moses plead a want of eloquence as an excuse for carrying my message. Remember who it is that sends you—that HIS power is sufficient to thresh a mountain with a worm. Isa. 91: 14, 15. What though you are so organized as to lack natural courage? What if you feel as slender as a "bruised reed?" I the Lord Jehovah can make use of just such a vessel; that the excellency may not appear of men, but of God. Then to encourage his diffident nature God gives him assurance of supernal strength. Says he, "For, behold, I have made thee this day a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brazen walls, against the whole land, against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land." He however cautions him against the fear of man, which always brings a snare and causes God's children to underrate the strength and power of their Leader. Prov. 29: 25. Here is the caution—"Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord." And here allow me to say, should the children of God ever discourage themselves and one another, by reckoning up the potency of their enemies and the paucity of their own number, they might draw a practical lesson from the famous Antigonus, who, as the historian informs us, overheard his soldiers reckoning how many their enemies were, and so discouraging one another. Chagrined, he suddenly stepped in among them with this question—"And how many do you reckon me for?" Discouraged soul, how many do you reckon the Lord for? Is he not an overmatch for all his enemies?

But to return to Jeremiah. Perhaps some might inquire, what more could he ask? If the power of God has metamorphosed him into what this comparison insures, he must be impervious against any instrument that can be formed to bear against him. Surely, after receiving such assurance of strength from God himself, he will at least be clear in his own mind while traveling the prophetic road. He remains humble and confides in God—is faithful, and ventures to use God's sword without a sheath! But on the other hand we do not find him rash—not a reproof for his temerity—he is plumbed by the plumb-line of truth—is an upright walker. Certainly, remarks the superficial believer, one so faithful in declaring God's message must possess not only great but constant joy, and never experience doubt or uneasiness on account of his position on the prophetic road. Hark ye! That very man—Jeremiah—whom God employed to warn "the whole land," in suffering the deepest consternation and [illegible] has the frailty of [illegible] at length [illegible] from [illegible] Nay [illegible]

Jer. 19: 14. Has he yet exceeded Almighty orders? transcended his authorized delegation? Not a word of this. But now he is in fear, doubt and disappointment—DECEIVED!! Please read his language verbatim: "O Lord, thou hast deceived me, and I was deceived; thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed: I am in derision daily, every one mocketh me." By this strong language of Jeremiah I understand him, like David, Job and others, to acknowledge whatever came upon him from God. Having made an entire consecration of themselves to the Lord, they really felt they were in his hands, and whatever befell them they immediately conceded to be from him; although in many instances it was only permitted to bring about certain results. But we find no reproof for the acknowledgement that God was in it. Thus Job in his affliction exclaims, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away." How did the Lord take away? Ans. He, for his own glory, permitted Satan with his agents, the Sabeans and Chaldeans, to afflict, destroy and take the remnant to themselves.

So David, when Shimei cursed and stoned him, addressing him at the same time by the most opprobrious names, acknowledged the hand of God in the matter. 2 Sam. 16: 10.

But Jeremiah, how did the deception or disappointment affect you? Well, I could not think of abandoning the prophetic road. No, I kept his word in my heart. But God's professed people, as well as his providences, all seemed turned against me. I was traduced and defamed on every side; even those few that had been my familiars watched for my halting, and comforted themselves with the hope of overcoming me at last; and I made up my mind to withhold the awful message. "Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name." I have now made such a mistake that the word of the Lord is a daily derision and reproach unto me; beside, I am the by-word and song of my own people. Jer. 20: 8; Sam. 3: 14. Every thing seems to have gone by the board, and this failure has produced a wound that is incurable, and I can no longer carry this unwelcome message. My enemies seem triumphant and comfort themselves with the idea that I am mortally wounded, and that the propitious moment has arrived when they shall be relieved of that pestilent fellow with his frightful message. Therefore I concluded to restrain my voice and suppress the unwelcome message.

Well, Jeremiah, a people subsequent to your time have found themselves in a similar position; and when they decided to ease themselves by suppressing the Almighty errand, they found any thing but rest. Suffer me to inquire whether you were relieved by the concealment? Nay; my position seemed past endurance, and in the bitterness of my soul I cried out, "He hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out: he hath made my chain heavy: also when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer: he hath enclosed my ways with hewn stone, he hath made my paths crooked. . . He hath filled me with bitterness, he hath made me drunken with wormwood. And thou hast removed my soul far off from peace: I forgat prosperity. And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the Lord." The world has no charms for me whatever; like Paul, "I am crucified to the world and the world unto me;" and while his word was in my heart, it was like fire shut up in my bones, and my forbearing to speak out actually wearied me, and my only relief was to speak in that very Name. But at this juncture HE who spake to me at the first addressed me in the language of affectionate encouragement, renewing his promise of strength and assured me with all the verity of a God that they should not exterminate me, but said, "They shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee: for I am with thee to save thee, and to deliver thee, saith the Lord. And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible." Thus I have determined to follow on in the prophetic road—understanding Jehovah's declaration I cannot join with backsliding Israel who refuse the prophetic word.

They often are agitated with fear lest my words prove true, and sometimes their [illegible] them to make inquiry respecting the threatenings of Jehovah; [illegible] mained one whose sectarian profession had not dried up every particle of humanity, (an Ethiopean it is true,) he drew me up from that pit of death! Thus have I been sustained through many conflicts of the deepest dye, and am positively decided not to suffer so many things in vain, but ever travel in the prophetic road which will end in rest and glory everlasting—when the goat-skin and sheep-skin company to which I belong shall be clothed in garments more resplendent than the sun.

And now in conclusion I would like to ask my brethren and sisters, Do you feel weak and inefficient to proclaim God's prophetic message to a cold, unbelieving world? Are you naturally sensitive and shrink from public observation? Remember your Lawgiver is able to make your face harder than a flint—hard as an adamant! Do you sometimes think your company is so small they will be consumed ere the Master cometh? Remember the "little flock" have the promise of the kingdom! When the Lord called you to enter the prophetic road and to wait for his Son from heaven, did you not experience a divine love and power you never realized before, though you had long professed to know him? If so, what can induce you to leave this position? Will you not endure the pelting storms rather than venture into a doubtful road?

Have you felt the keen sensation of disappointment while the world rejoiced in your calamity? And has your character been traduced by those who ought to have been encouraging friends? and at the same time your own mind suffering with doubt and perplexity, fearing all was lost, and yet when you sought wisdom could obtain no information of any other sure road to the kingdom? Has this been your experience? Then "take, my brethren, the prophets that have spoken in the name of the Lord for an example of suffering affliction and patience." B. MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct., July, 1858.

For the Crisis.

[The following will teach others a good lesson, if they will make the right improvement of it.]

"Mother, why can't I go too?" "Campmeeting, dear child, it costs money." "Well, I will go to work after the meeting, and pay what it costs." "Well, that don't get the money to go with. If you had saved that $3.00 you laid out in jewelry, and that $2.00 you spent for other fooleries, you could have gone. I should have been glad to had you; but I see no way now how you can go." "O dear! I will sell my jewelry." "My daughter, you can't get one half what it cost." "Why not? I have worn it only three times, and it has not hurt it a bit. I will go and see."

The child was disappointed. The man she bought of offered only half price in other goods; would not take it and pay cash.

"Now, my child, you see what a cheat there is in all this fancy stuff. It is only calculated to attract the attention. It does no good, and costs many a poor girl more for jewelry and other things that are of no use, than it does to clothe them comfortably. I hope you will learn a lesson, and not spend your money for things that will do you no good and cause you so much trouble after it is too late to retract your foolish steps. I told you you would see the time you would want the money more for something else."

"Well, mother, I can't help it now; but if you will try to contrive some way for me to go, I won't spend any more money without asking your advice. Come, you ask father." "Well, I will see what your father thinks."

When I left, there was a prospect of the jewelry being exchanged for part of the fare. I have no doubt but many will have to stay at home from Campmeting that have spent enough for fooleries the hard year that is past to pay their expenses, which, if it had been saved, would have enabled the person to go where they might have received the truth and grace of God, and a seat in his kingdom among the blessed. Think of these things. Little foxes spoil great vines.

HIRAM MUNGER.

REASON AND SENSE.—The lower your senses are kept, the better you may govern them. Appetites are commonly like two buckets, when one is at the top, the other [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, JULY 28, 1858.

"The Emphatic Diaglott."

We have just received the first number of "The Emphatic Diaglott"—a new and valuable translation of the New Testament—"containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, according to the recension of Dr. J. J. Griesbach, with an interlinear translation, in which every Greek word is literally and grammatically construed as it stands in the book: a new emphatic version, based on the literal translation, the labors of the most eminent biblical critics and translators, and the various readings of the Vatican manuscript, (No. 1209 in the Vatican Library); together with philological and exegetical foot notes, and a choice selection of references; to which is affixed an alphabetical index, containing all the geographical and proper names occurring in the New Testament, with difficult Greek words and phrases critically examined. The whole forming a complete guide to the correct reading and study of the books of the New Testament." It is published by Wilson and Cockroft, Geneva, Kane Co., Ill. 12 Nos. $2.00. Single numbers, 20 cents each.

This is a work of which we spoke some time since, and recommended to our readers. We have seen no other translation with which we are so well pleased as with this. It should be in the hands of every Bible student; especially those who are not familiar with the original, so as to read the Greek with perfect readiness; and even to the latter it will be a valuable accession to their library. The translators seem to have hit upon the simplest and best plan of placing the original Greek Testament within the reach of the common people. With a few hours' study of the Greek alphabet and rules of pronunciation accompanying this work, the common English scholar can make himself quite familiar with the original; and, with the aid of a Greek lexicon and grammar, feel quite at home in criticisms. As soon as this work is possessed, we are satisfied that every one who has it will feel that he cannot be without it. Like his concordance and dictionary, it will be indispensable. Whoever subscribes for this work will get the worth of his money.

In order that the reader may have a clearer idea of it, we will say a word concerning its arrangement. Each page is divided into two columns. The left hand contains first, a line of the Greek from J. J. Griesbach's Recension, which is considered the best, and under this line of Greek is "a literal word-for-word translation, wherein the corresponding English word is placed directly under its counter part."

The right hand column contains the new translation based on the Greek text "in the left hand column, and the labors of many able Bible critics and translators."

There are several interesting features in the work which we pass over for want of time to notice them. Get the work and know for yourselves.

The first number contains the first ten chapters of Matthew, and a part of the eleventh. It is estimated "the work will make some 27 numbers, 32 pages each."

It is desired that those who have subscribed for the work, and have received the first number, should now forward two dollars, addressed to Wilson & Cockroft, Geneva, Kane Co., Ill. Any who are interested in the undertaking, can receive Prospectuses and specimens free of charge, by addressing the publishers as above.

We will act as agents for any of our readers if it be their wish; but the best way is to send directly to the publishers.

SOME of our readers, who are not familiar with newspaper regulations, sometimes ask what part is written by the editor? To all such we would say, that what they find on the second page, without any signature, under the heading, "THE WORLD'S CRISIS," may be known as editorial.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.—We feel it duty, from the great amount of good evidence from various sources, to say, that D. C. Wheeler's character is not good, and hence should not be encouraged to preach or hold meetings among us. If a man's moral and religious character is known to be bad at home, he should not be suffered to impose upon our brethren abroad.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO DO GOOD.—If any of our brethren have a copy of the Age of Gospel Light, and will send it to this office, it will be sent where it is [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Report of the Fourth Annual Maine Conference.

(Concluded.)

DEA. JOHN UMBERHIND, Richmond, said, "There are a few here, as in other places, who are striving to hold on, and trying to maintain gospel order as we understand it; and this has been a blessing to us. It has strengthened, cheered and encouraged us. We have been trying to raise our desires to God for a reformation. Prayer has been put up many times for it. We feel like earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and believe the kingdom will soon be given unto them. We have been in rather a low state for some time, but have felt of late as though God would work among us, and felt willing to do any thing to see it, and hope we shall soon."

DR. N. SMITH, Hallowell, said, "Our company has been small for some time; we have now no meetings. My health has failed me. Before that I preached some in Litchfield, Gardiner, Ripps, Augusta, and elsewhere; have seen but little reformation except in Augusta. I think if I had my health I should do more than I have. I love the work, and feel the loss of my health. There have been a good many converted and brought into the faith among us in Hallowell, from the beginning, but the most of them have moved away, and some of them have gone everywhere preaching the gospel."

ELDER A. ROLLINS, Brunswick, said, "I am glad to be in your meeting. I remember the happy interviews of the past. I labor with the F. W. Baptist church in Freeport. We have had a good revival—20 converted. The work began by the labors of a sister, who worked constantly for a reformation. Her daughter was soon converted. We have baptized twelve. Elder Waterman, the F. W. Baptist minister in Brunswick, preaches some as you do, and I more. Since I preached here I have lost my daughter, but she died in the Lord, and I believe I shall soon see her again in the better land."

ELDER I. C. WELLCOME said, "I have traveled in various parts of the State—I preach here in Richmond one fourth of the time. Bro. Umberhind has reported this church. I preached in Hallowell a part of the time, and we kept up meetings until I moved Sept. last to Brunswick—preached there some. Preached one day in Lisbon—found an open door, and several believers among the F. W. Baptists. Preached two Sabbaths in Harrison, a new place—the interest increased to hear. Held five meetings in Stoneham, a new place. They listened attentively, and were anxious to hear more. Spent one Sabbath in Sydney—preached to a Methodist church—had an interesting time—one Sabbath in Jefferson—found a good congregation anxious to hear—a good prospect there. At Belgrade with Bro. Sevey—had a glorious revival—one of the most powerful works I have seen for some years; one meeting in South New Sharon, and one in Wilton, where we once had a good company of brethren, but they were divided and scattered some years ago by distracting questions—several good brethren there still. Spent one Sabbath in Somerville, where Bro. Chisam resides. They held meetings, and have organized a church—have monthly conferences, and a Bro. J. R. Hall is preaching to them some. He has just commenced preaching, and bids fair to be of service in building up the cause. They have a Sabbath School of over 30 members. Elder Kennedy preaches there some. I have preached in several other places, and tried to do what I could—new doors are constantly opening, and calls for preaching the word—but I cannot do as I have done. I have labored until I am nearly bankrupt, and I must draw in a little, and try to earn something to keep from bankruptcy, for when that takes place, I shall stop preaching."

E. D. D. HATCHENSON, Lewiston, said, "We make some progress, and have much opposition, secret opposition—are treated kindly to the face. Have some excellent meetings—God blesses us. We have no organization, but have thought of taking steps to organize. There are some good brethren in Lewiston."

BRO. C. C. HOOKER, Gardiner, said, "There is no Advent Society left in Gardiner—there are only three of us. We have had no regular meeting since Brn. York and Partridge preached to us in '54. We once had a good company there, but they are scattered."

This closed the reports. There are several other societies not reported.

Friday, 2 o'clock, P. M. Preaching by [illegible] very profitable discourse, followed by several stirring exhortations.

Evening, 7 1-2 o'clock. Eld. J. Partridge preached from Luke 15: 14-16. The return of the prodigal.

Saturday, 8 o'clock, A. M. Met for prayer. The blessing of God was manifest. It was a refreshing season. At 9 o'clock the meeting for business was called to order. The report of the committee being called for, the following was presented:

REPORT.

"Bro. Chairman,—Your committee, who were desired to present a plan for the more permanent organization of our societies in Maine, feel that it is a subject requiring much wisdom from God, to advise with a class of brethren holding such opposite views of what the New Testament teaches and allows, in regard to the order and associated privileges of christians, in pursuing the work assigned them by the great Head of the church. We have seen and considered the many objections often urged against our own views of this matter, and had some experience in trying to press our way onward amidst conflicting elements without any regularly adopted order. Yet we beg leave to say—forasmuch as we are a people called out by necessity, by embracing the precious truths which make us conspicuous before the world—we are compelled to act a part in the cause of Christ as a distinct body of believers, (yet in charity with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ) and therefore feel bound by the gospel to observe its order, its ordinances and its discipline.

To do this, we believe each society of believers able to maintain public worship, should choose its appropriate officers and constitute an independent body in all its family arrangements, yet bound by the gospel to advise, confer, counsel, and take united action with all other like bodies in promoting the common faith.

Furthermore, believing that annual, or periodical gatherings of the believers in given localities for conference, like the present, to counsel, advise and transact any business of universal importance, are of great service in the cause of Christ, we recommend,

1st, That the brethren now assembled by the call for this Conference, representing the Advent body in their several localities in Maine, agree to have a meeting of this character annually, at which to represent the various churches in this State, by some of their members, and by such other brethren as may be pleased to associate and unite in Conference with us. Also to take action upon any important business that may come within the limits of gospel discipline and duty.

2d, We also recommend that our ministers and churches class off into several districts which they represent, and hold quarterly conferences in each, representing their progress, condition and wants, and act upon the same.

3d, That all brethren attending either of the above named conferences wishing to unite with us in our work, shall pass no other test of fellowship than christian character and deportment."

The Report was accepted. Elder S. K. Partridge moved its adoption, when an interesting and profitable discussion followed by Brn. Smith, Partridge, Morrell, Herley, Haggett, Dudley, Wellcome, Wight, York, Howard and others. It finally passed unanimously by a rising vote, with the exception of two. It was moved and adopted, that the ministers advise with the churches and correspond with each other, to class the districts, and have the results published in the papers within one month.

It was moved that this Conference recommend to the brethren in all places where there are several who can labor together in the cause of Christ, to organize on such a plan as they believe the gospel teaches. Unanimously adopted. A motion was then made that this Conference should authorize their Secretary, to give to each of the ordained ministers united with us in labor, a certificate of recognition by them of their ordination, as ministers of the gospel qualified to attend to all the duties and ordinances of the gospel. Several reasons were argued why it was called for. It was unanimously adopted.

Moved that the Chairman and Secretary consult the churches, and then appoint the time and place for the next annual Conference. Adopted.

Moved to adjourn to the time and place of the next annual Conference. Adopted.

Voted that the doings of this Conference be published in the Advent Herald, and World's Crisis.

P. M., 2 o'clock. Met for prayer and conference. Spent several hours thus in a meeting of most interesting character.—The Lord blessed us abundantly.

Evening, 7 1-2 o'clock. Preaching by Elder D. M. Hanscomb from 2d Tim. 2: 19.

Sunday, A. M., 8 1-2 o'clock. Met for prayer. Enjoyed a precious season. Love, union and devotion constantly increased, and a deep interest was manifested among the unconverted, and the wanderers. At 10 1-2 o'clock Elder L. L. Howard preached from Rev. 2: 17, an able sermon, with life in it.

P. M. 1 o'clock. Eld. S. K. Partridge preached from Ps. 34: 19, after which the Lord's Supper was administered to 73 rejoicing believers, who expect soon to enjoy it with Christ in his kingdom. At 5 o'clock Eld. D. Hutchenson preached a valuable sermon from John 3: 5, after which the brethren backed up the word with exhortation. The power of conviction deepened, and it was fully manifest [illegible]

ers broke down and confessed their sins, heartily returning to God. Six rose for prayers, two of whom have since been happily converted to God. A deep and I trust a lasting impression is left on a portion of the community and on all our brethren and friends from abroad who attended the meeting. Bro. R. R. York preached in the Baptist meeting house two evenings to very interesting audiences, who are anxious to hear more. A good impression is thus left upon their minds.

So closed the most interesting and heavenly Conference (and of the largest number of believers) we ever had in Maine.

Richmond, Me., June 21st, 1858.

N. SMITH, Chairman.

I. C. WELLCOME, Secretary.

Summary of News.

Foreign News.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival of the North Star, we have news from Southampton to the 7th inst.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.—The London correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser says:

"The second failure of the attempt to lay the Atlantic cable, the news of which arrived at noon yesterday, has been the absorbing event since the departure of the last packet. The disappointment is the greater on account of a confidence which, during the past week, had been growing up that the operation would this time succeed, and which had caused the shares to assume some firmness."

The Cork Reporter of the 5th inst. says that after the Telegraph expedition had been three days at sea, they encountered a gale which raged nine days without intermission. Two of the Agamemnon's sailors were severely injured, and one of the marines lost his reason from fright. The Niagara rode out the storm gallantly, losing only her jibboom and one wing of the figure head, the American eagle. In regard to the second breakage, it is said to have occurred at the bottom, as the electricians, from the fine calculations which their sensitive instruments allow them to make, were able to declare such to have been the fact, even before the vessels came together again. In explanation of the Niagara's return to Queenstown, the Reporter says:

"Before starting an arrangement was made that, should any accident occur in giving out the cable before the ships should have gone one hundred miles, they should return to their starting place in mid ocean; but that, in case that distance should have been exceeded before any casualty should happen, they should make for Queenstown. In accordance with this understanding, the Niagara, having made 100 miles before the mishap, returned to this port. Upon her homeward way she must have passed the Agamemnon, but owing to the heavy fogs which prevailed for the greater portion of that time she missed seeing or gaining any tidings of her."

In connection with the above, we quote the following from the N. Y. Evening Post:

"Mr. Morse, whom we have been in the habit of regarding as one of the highest authorities in telegraphic science, we are informed, has never expected that the expedition now upon the Atlantic would be successful, though he is quite sanguine that a cable can be laid and worked between the termini which the company has selected. He does not disguise his conviction that the cable on board the company's steamers is much too heavy, and that one of half its weight, or less, might be laid and worked effectively. His views upon this subject, and the consequences to which they have led, are said to have been the controlling reasons for his being left out of the Board of Direction, at the election which immediately preceded the reduction in the price of the stock."

The Post also adds:

"There are other provisions which have been suggested to us against the accidents to which the plans for laying submarine cables have thus far proved to be liable, which we will submit without argument for what they are worth:

A cable coiled cannot be uncoiled without kinks, therefore the cable must be reeled to be laid.

The necessity for two vessels to lay the cable quadruples (and more) the risk of accidents; therefore the cable must be laid from one ship.

The voyage to England is easier, shorter and safer than the voyage from England; therefore the vessel with the cable should start from this side.

There is one vessel, and one only, of tunnage and room sufficient to carry the whole cable, to wit, the Leviathan; therefore the cable, if ever laid at all, must be laid on a succession of reels in the Leviathan, and the Leviathan must sail from our own shores.

If these views should be deemed to possess any value, it would be easy for the Leviathan to bring the cable with her to this country and lay it on her first trip home."

LATER.—The Agamemnon and Valarous, of the telegraphic fleet, arrived at Queenstown on the 12th inst. The final break in the Atlantic Cable occurred about six fathoms below the stern of the Agamemnon, after 146 miles had been payed out from that vessel. The Agamemnon then returned to the rendezvous in mid-ocean, and cruised there for five days in anticipation of meeting the Niagara. On arriving at Queenstown, it was resolved to coal and start for a final attempt on Saturday, the 17th inst., there still being 2500 miles of cable on both ships. The Agamemnon encountered furious storms, and rolled so heavily that great fears were entertained for her safety. She sustained considerable damage. The cause of the breaking of the cable is unknown, the strain upon it at the time being quite light. The electric instruments were all injured by the heavy rolling of the ship.

Difficulties have arisen between Germany and Denmark.

Another meeting of the Paris Conference has taken place.

It is contemplated by Queen Victoria to visit Cherbourg to witness the French naval review.

The anniversary of American Independence was duly celebrated in London.

An extraordinary emigration of pilgrims has taken place from Vienna.

For the Crisis.

ABSTRACT OF THE Illinois Annual Conference Minutes.

Conference met in Ottawa, Ill., May 20th, 1858. Was organized as follows, the officers constituting the permanent Conference Committee, ex-officio:

M. Chandler, President; W. Pratt, Vice-President; P. B. Morgan, Secretary; A. S. Calkins, Cor. Secretary; E. L. Halbert, Treasurer.

Voted, The names of members be enrolled. Also, that all brethren in attendance be invited to take part in the deliberations of the Conference.

Voted, The following brethren constitute a business committee, to prepare and present business for the action of the Conference: I. Morgan, W. Pratt, G. W. Rathburn, A. S. Calkins, P. B. Morgan.

Conference listened to a moving discourse on the Unity of the Spirit, by Eld. I. Morgan, of Ct. Text—Eph. 4: 3. Conference then heard reports from preachers and churches.

The Conference Evangelist, Eld. P. B. Morgan, reported:—It has now been eight months and a few days since I commenced my labors in this field, according to arrangements made in our last Conference. . . During this time, I have earnestly endeavored to carry out the mind and object of the Conference in my appointment. And it affords me much pleasure to report to you, that in this attempt I have found abundant encouragement. The general plan proposed for the more effectual cooperation of our churches and brethren, has, with a single exception, met with a most cheering welcome wherever I have been able to introduce it. And after this testing of the subject, and after reviewing it under many varied aspects, my own convictions as to the practicability of the plan proposed are more than ever confirmed. . . . . In the eight months past, your agent has attended three Tent Meetings, seven Protracted Meetings, preached one hundred and sixty-three discourses, organized one Quarterly Conference and two churches. The number converted or reclaimed from a backslidden condition are unknown, although it may be stated that in nearly every place God has blessed and sealed our effort by converting souls. Of brethren newly called to the ministry, I have found but few; and I regret to add, that on the part of our churches, I find but little disposition to encourage the young and inexperienced whom however God may have called to the important work of preaching the Gospel. On this subject it is desirable the Conference take some action, by which the inexperienced but worthy brethren, feeling called to this work, may be suitably encouraged. I have to commend to the favorable notice of this Conference, brethren G. W. Rathburn, J. C. Shaw, Collins and Lombard.

In finances your agent has found himself called to an aspect of our field, and to duties, somewhat new. It has appeared that while our field is so promising and yet so destitute, there are men of understanding and of devoted lives, who might be obtained but for want of means wherewith to support them. . . . . It is evident there is no lack of means on the part of our churches, but merely such an appreciation of the advantages of our cause as will enable them to give with that liberality the cause requires. The amount collected for the Conference and Mission fund, is $304 74. Amount now pledged but unpaid, $48.

With this was tendered a resignation of the office of Evangelist and Agent of the Illinois Annual Conference. Report was accepted.

Elder M. Chandler said he had spent the winter past in itinerating; had traveled and preached in several counties, in the States of Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois; had enjoyed some precious seasons of revival; the Spirit of God had been poured out, and the truth has taken good hold of many hearts; among the converted were those who were formerly Infidels and Universalists. He felt we had great reason for encouragement.

Elder Calkins said: The past had been a prosperous winter. The church at Deer Park, over which he had charge, numbers upwards of thirty, and were growing in faith and grace. In connection with Elds. Spencer and Jones, he had labored successfully in Earlville, where he had baptized some twenty happy converts to the truth, and a good church had been organized. He had also performed some labor in Amboy.

Elder James spoke of his labors at Earlville, Shabbona Grove and Dekalb. Had recently removed to Cordova, and taken charge of the little flock in that place; preached somewhat in Princeton likewise; had also visited Wilton town. Felt we had great reason to hope. Exhorted to labor, pray for, and expect souls to be converted.

Elder Pratt said: I live in a place called Egypt, where they go for rum, slavery and the devil—a few go for the truth; he was from Hancock county; labored also in Brown, Pike and Adams counties. Had been somewhat occupied with temporalities, but since recovering his health had endeavored to preach at least every Sabbath. In some places the cause was in a flourishing condition. On Warsaw Prairie a new field had recently opened up of considerable interest. He felt like going ahead.

Elder Johnson, of Will county, said he was of the Christian connection, but felt at home when with his Advent brethren. He believed the Adventists were more as the Christian connection was in the beginning than they now were themselves. He loved the great truths relating to the destiny of man and our glorious hope as we hold it, and was endeavoring to preach it. The people to whom he preached seemed prospering. [Bro. Johnson is a father in Israel, and though a stranger, was heartily greeted by the Conference.] Other reports were heard and letters read. [See digest.]

Voted, I. Morgan and J. C. Shaw be a committee to make a digest of letters sent to the Conference.

Eld. Hemenway of Mass. being announced as present, was invited to a sitting with the Conference.

Report of the business committee accepted and adopted.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

Whereas, In the mercy of God we are again permitted to meet in Conference, where we hear reports from various portions of this Conference field; and whereas the system of arrangements now introduced among us promises, under God, to essentially forward our cause if carried into effect, therefore

Resolved, That we urge our brethren to a yet more vigorous prosecution of the work devolving upon them, believing as we do that we have unprecedented reason for encouragement.

Resolved, That after another season of labor, during which God has most signally and mercifully blessed our endeavors to save souls, we feel more and more confirmed in our position, believing it our duty to instruct the people as to the nature of the Gospel hope, in connection with the speedy and premillennial advent of our Lord Jesus Christ—and ourselves wait for his appearing.

CHRISTIAN LIBERTY.

Whereas, Theological systems and ecclesiastical creeds are continually multiplying, and sectarian devotees are in many places becoming rampant, and

Whereas, Amid the conflicts of this age we feel ourselves called of God in many places to maintain a position separate from all other churches, for which we are charged with producing creeds and demanding assent thereto, which thing is untrue, therefore

Resolved, The we believe it the duty of all such as are associated with this Conference, to signify in the most emphatic manner, that we recognize the absolute independence of every local church as a first principle in ecclesiastical economy.

Resolved, That as stated in the economy of this church, we believe no Conference has any authority to legislate in matters of faith and doctrine.

Resolved, That we make more prominent the fact that we take the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as our only rule of faith and practice, and make christian character the only test of church fellowship.

AMERICAN SLAVERY.

Whereas, The subject of slavery, as existing in this country, is believed to involve a great moral question naturally affecting the sympathies of the christian part of this Nation, and

Whereas, We deem it important that we state plainly our position upon this subject, therefore

Resolved, That we look upon American Slavery as not only degrading and demoralizing in its influence, and so unworthy of a civilized Nation, but as an institution directly opposed to both the spirit and letter of Christianity.

Resolved, We believe except this Nation speedily repent of this great National crime, God's afflictive judgments cannot be long delayed—if the last judgment does not come—on which account we should not cease to cry day and night.

THE TEMPERANCE REFORM.

Whereas, We believe the vice of intemperance to be one most dreadful in its tendencies and results, and the trafficing in ardent spirits a dishonorable and unworthy calling; and

Whereas, Many worthy persons, young men particularly, are by this vice lured from the path of duty, virtue, morality and religion, therefore

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend all connected with us in Church or Conference capacity, to resort to every and all means which wisdom may dictate, to put down this soul-destroying and far-spreading evil.

Resolution on Sabbath Schools accepted and adopted.

Resolutions declaring our churches must do more for the support of their preachers or suffer them to leave their fields, was also adopted.

Voted, This Annual Conference be divided into the following four Quarterly Conference Districts, viz.: Fox River District, Galena District, Rock Island District and Military Tract District.

Voted, The Conference appoint the time and place for the first session of the several Quarterly Conferences.

Voted, The Secretary of this Conference be instructed to correspond with the several Conferences in the West with a view to effect a general and more effectual cooperation among the churches of this vast field, on the plan proposed in the system of arrangements adopted by the Illinois Conference.

Voted, The Conference Evangelist and Agent be required to keep a strict account of his labors and expenses, the same to be subject to the inspection of the Conference Committee every quarter.

Voted, The salary of the Evangelist be as last year.

Voted, Bro. N. Branch, Jr., of Moline, Ill., be commended as general book and tract agent of the West, he being now ready to fill orders for a large or small amount.

Voted, The Treasurer be instructed to send circular letters to such friends as have heretofore made pledges which they have not paid, laying before them the present urgent necessities of the Western Mission.

Voted, Elder Moses Chandler act as Evangelist and Agent for this Conference the ensuing year.

Voted, The minutes of this Conference with the names and amount contributed by the patrons of the Western Mission be published and bound with the plan of arrangements in pamphlet form for gratuitous circulation at the expense of the Conference.

Of the brethren commended to the notice of the Conference, Bro. G. L. Rathburn was ordained, and of the others it was Voted, they should receive letters of commendation to our Churches.

Voted, the Conference tender its thanks to the Church of Ottawa for their hospitalities.

Voted, to adjourn to the last Tuesday of May, A. D. 1859, the place of the Conference to be hereafter designated by the Conference Committee.

DIGEST OF THE ILLINOIS CONFERENCE.

Churches.	Preachers and Elders.	Numbers.	Nos. of S. S.	Amount paid for C. and M. Fund.
FOX RIVER DISTRICT.
Deer Park,	A. S. Calkins.	30	—	$17 00
Ottawa,	P. B. Morgan, Geo. Whipple.	50	60	70 00
Earlville,	———	30	—	5 00
Shabbona Grove,	N. W. Spencer.	60	×	23 00
Somonauk,	Supplied by Eld. Spencer.	15	×	1 00
Dekalb,	———	12	—	—
Jefferson Grove,	———	—	—	—
GALENA DISTRICT.
Elizabeth,	Eld. Wadley.	—	—	10 00
Cranes Grove,	N. A. Hitchcock.	—	—	—
Plumb River,	———	—	—	—
Monroe,	———	—	—	—
Union Grove,	———	—	—	—
ROCK ISLAND DISTRICT.
Cordova,	H. H. Janes, M. Chandler.	25	×	15 00
Princeton, (Ia.)	Bro. Blackman.	33	×	15 00
Moline,	———	7	—	—
Wilton, (Ia.)	Bro. Collins.	80	×	25 00
MILITARY TRACT DISTRICT.
St. Albans,	W. Pratt, L. L. Scott.	—	—	—
Bascoe,	———	—	—	—
Warsaw Prairie,	Bro. Davenport.	—	—	—
Ripley,		—	—	—
Cooperstown,	J. P. Malary.	—	—	—
Pittsfield,	———	—	—	—

Letters asking help, were received from Muscatine, Iowa; Colona, Ill.; Russel's Corners, Sauk Co., Wis.; Monroe, Wis. But the Treasury being empty, no appropriations of sum or means was made for these localities.

[Herald please copy.]

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Freeport, Me., April 28th, Sister Mercy Davis, aged 86 years and 3 months.

The subject of this notice was converted about thirty-five years ago, at which time she joined the Methodist Church. From that time till her death she ever maintained a christian walk; and although called to pass through many severe trials, she ever manifested the spirit of her Lord.

My acquaintance with her commenced a few years since, at which time she began to feel a special interest in the truth of "the kingdom of God at hand," "sleep of the saints," resurrection," &c. Since that time she has taken great delight in conversing upon the Gospel hope. Though far advanced in years, her mind was strong and her conversation instructive. I visited her a few hours before her death, and found her mind clear and calm. She spoke of the Kingdom, where tears and sorrows, pains and death, would be known no more forever. At her request I prayed with her, and with others sung the hymn she loved so well;—

"We are going home, we've had visions bright."

I gave her the parting hand and bade her farewell, rejoicing in the hope that we should soon meet to part no more.

May the blessed hope of the Gospel ever cheer the sorrowing ones, who are left to mourn the loss of one so dearly beloved.

R. R. York.

Little Willie Webber, son of Sister Mary Webber, died in Yarmouth, Me., May 25th, aged 7 years and 10 months.

The loss of "Willie" is great indeed, and has opened afresh the wounded heart of his dear widowed mother, who has often been called to mourn within the past three years. Little Willie was sick about two weeks, during which time he was ever anxious for the society of those who love Jesus. But he is at rest now in the grave, from whence he will soon be awakened to join the society of the good of every age and clime.

Lord bless and comfort the oft afflicted mother, and all the sorrowing ones, is the prayer of the writer. R. R. York.

Drowned, while bathing in Royal river, in Yarmouth, Me., June 22, Hiram L., aged 9 years and 2 months; and George W., aged 7 years and 9 months; only sons of Bro. Hiram and Sister Ann Howard.

Never has it fallen to my lot before to record a notice of such a sad affliction as that which has befallen Br. and Sr. H. To have our loved ones sicken and die under ordinary circumstances, when we can administer to their wants, is hard; but to have them torn from our embrace in so sudden and unexpected a manner, is heart-rending in the extreme. But while this dear brother and sister are called to drink such a bitter cup of sorrow, because their lovely boys are now asleep in the dark, cold tomb, they are consoled by the blessed hope that soon Hiram and George will come forth from the land of the enemy to dwell forever in Eden's blissful bowers.

Their funeral was attended by the writer at the Baptist Church, where many assembled to shed the sympathizing tear and pay their last tribute of respect to the dead.

God grant that this severe trial may be blessed to the good of the afflicted ones, and they be prepared to gain the land of eternal rest at the coming of our Lord. Amen.

R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me., July, 1858.

NOTICES.

☞ Campmeeting notice next week.

Campmeeting.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept. 6, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, on land of Bro. Johnson. Arrangements have been made for the cars to stop at the ground. Particulars hereafter.

S. G. Mathewson,
For the Brethren.

☞ A Request.—Bro. Zenas Campbell is requested to be at Woodstock, Ct., on or before the 10th day of August next, and preach the word. Bro. C., fail not to be here!

R. V. Lyon.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church,

N. F. Nason.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at Pine Creek, Indiana, to commence on the 13th day of August, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over the Lord's day. The above named meeting will be holden on the farm of Wm. P. Martin, 3 miles north of Goshen, 6 miles south of Bristol, 8 miles south-east of Elkhart.

Brethren coming on the Air Line R. R., will stop at Goshen. Those coming from the east on the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan R. R., will stop at Bristol. Those coming from the west, on R. R., will stop at Elkhart. Brethren leaving the cars at either of the above named stations, on Thursday, will find free conveyance to the meeting.

We hope to see a general gathering of ministers and lay brethren.

By order of the Church,

D. R. Mansfield.
Elijah Beck.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting at Savoy, Mass., commencing Aug. 30th, to continue over the following Sabbath.

Brethren H. Pratt, J. Hemenway and M. Batchelor are expected. Particulars hereafter.

E. M'Cullock,
For the Brethren.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co., Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

Moses Chandler, Evangelist.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. Damman.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,

Elbridge Chisam.
John A. Kennedy.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber. P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Miles Grant appoints to preach at the Town Hall in Rutland, Vt., Aug. 8th.

S. W. Bishop appoints to preach as follows:—

Dover, N. H., - - - - Aug. 1st.
Portsmouth, N. H., - - - " 3d.
Exeter, N. H., - - - - " 4th.
Lowell, Mass., - - - - " 5th.
Groton Junction, - - - " 6th.
Worcester, Mass., - - - " 8th.
Brimfield, (if the brethren will meet me at Warren, middle train, " 12th.
Palmer, (where Bro. A. M. Higgins may appoint,) - - " 13th.
Springfield, (where Eld. R. E. Ladd may appoint,) - - " 15th.

S. W. Bishop.

P. S. I shall look for letters at all of the above-named places. Consequently, if any of the above appointments interfere with previous arrangements, please let me know at the earliest convenient opportunity. S. W. B.

I will hold meetings as follows:—

New Britain, Ct., Wednesday eve'g, Aug 4th.
Bristol, Ct., - - - - - " 5th.
Plymouth Hollow, - - - - " 6th.
Newfield, Sunday, - - - - " 8th.

Will meet Bro. Mathewson Monday, Aug. 9th, at Collinsville, Ct.

Hiram Munger.

If the Lord will, I will preach in East Boston July 25th, and Worcester August 1st.

Geo. Waugh.

The Lord willing, I will speak to the church in Augusta, Me., on the evening of the 27th of July.

Hermon, Me., the first Sunday in August.
Orrington the 2d Sunday.

Will try to be at the conference the Saturday before each Sunday mentioned.

Israel Damman.

If the Lord will, I purpose to preach at Springfield, Mass., evening, July 28th. Jawbuck, Ct., Friday evening and over Sunday, July 30th and Aug. 1st.

Meet me at Thompsonville Depot, July 29th, P. M. If I am desired to visit other places while East, please write me at Worcester, Mass. H. F. Carpenter.

Business.

To Correspondents.

James Essex, Quidnick,—Not received.

Cash Receipts.

☞ Our Canada subscribers, and all in the Provinces, will remember that we have to pre pay the postage on their papers, amounting to 26 cents a year; hence they should send $2.26 for a year's subscription.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

J Jackman, 152, $2.00; N Cole, 156, $1.54; A Wait, 156, $1.50; L N Hanson 163, D C Hart 117, O Budington 163, W P Olmstead 163, Mrs Ross 156, A P Ellis 129,—50 cts. each.

Dr G W Kittle 171, J M Dodge 182, T Lee 130, B McLane 140, E Sanderson 152, S Harding 156, L C Johnson 180, S Porter 182, E J Gilman 182, C B Wilson 167, Jno Caldwell 177, B Potter 175, P S Pekham 177, B Reynolds 177, A B Cahoon 177, A W Slocum 177,—$1.00 each.

C A Twombly 157, J Bush 203, T P Hodgdon 182, G W Johnson 170, D Grant 203, J M Withington 184, F Flanders 156, N Woodcock [illegible],—$2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts—E Bellows, [illegible]; J Bush, [illegible]; O C Berry, $1; W S [illegible]

Books and Tracts.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $20.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 5 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.—The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us [illegible]. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 100 [illegible]

* The Landmarks are [illegible] Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by [illegible] [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves [illegible] Little [illegible] [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE CITY OF UNFADING GLORY.

We are going to a city
  Beyond this vale of time,
Whose portals are of jasper,
  Most beautiful, sublime;
Whose domes are lit with glory,
  And sparkle o'er those plains,
Where the eternal King of kings
  In splendor ever reigns;
'Mid a resplendent retinue
  Of seraphims most bright,
That chant immortal anthems
  Through endless realms of light.

On those resplendent landscapes,
  Throughout a ceaseless age,
The wrath of God shall cease to be,
  The tempest hush its rage;
The rose of Sharon there shall bloom,
  In waving splendor stand
Amid the glittering foliage
  Of that immortal land.
And the paths that wind those plains,
  All gemmed in radiant green,
Shall glitter in the radiance
  Of that eternal scene.

M. R. Phetteplace.

Scituate, R. I.

For the Crisis.

I ASK NOT.

I ask not worldly honor, I ask not wealth or fame,
But all I ask when Jesus comes, that I with him may reign;
That I on Zion's hill may stand, with all the blood washed throng,
And hear the hallelujah's ring and join the conqueror's song.

I ask not always here to stay where sorrows do abound,
Where nought but thorns and thistles through all the land is found;
O no! I would not always roam 'mid storms so fierce and wild,
Where Satan's smooth, deceitful arts my heart so oft beguile.

I would not always wander here upon this world's wide maze,
I long to see that better land and on its glories gaze;
I long to leave earth's toil behind, and gain that peaceful shore,
Where all the downtrod, scattered flock shall meet to part no more.

Julia S.

Upper Woodstock, N. B.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Fourth of July.

Bro. Grant:—Another celebration of "the Glorious Fourth" has been observed throughout the length and breadth of the land. It may be well for the multitude professing the religion of righteousness and love, to inquire, has it been a celebration acceptable to the God of nations, to whom we owe all the freedom and all the blessings of the country?

Man's inalienable right to liberty has been eloquently advocated. The despotisms and tyranny of the old world have been condemned. The act of the American colonies, in breaking the yoke of oppression, and declaring their independence of Great Britain, has been vindicated. All very well, if the conduct of the nation is in harmony with its own avowed principles. Is it so? Has the nation manifested its pure regard for the righteous principles it avows, or has it manifested its selfish hypocrisy by disregarding the mandate of high heaven, to "remember those in bonds as bound with them," and to "break every yoke and let the oppressed go free?"

Is theorizing on the principles of justice and liberty—is gun-powder praise, and rejoicing in our own freedom, while we are robbing millions of our brethren of all the rights dear to humanity, a celebration which God has chosen? Is not this the celebration which he hath chosen? "To loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free; and that ye break every yoke."—Isa. 58: 6.

Ought not every pulpit and every platform to have thundered these commands of the Holy One into the ears of this guilty nation? Ought not the people to be faithfully told, that so long as these commands are practically disregarded, their rejoicing is evil in the sight of the Amighty, who hateth oppression? That when these requisitions of righteousness and this law of love is obeyed, and not until then, will our "light break forth as the morning, and (our) health shall spring forth speedily?"

Alas! how are the clanking of the chains, the groans of the outraged, and the sighs of the oppressed, intermingled with the joyous acclamations of these anniversaries! Shall not the God of justice be avenged on such a nation as this?

[illegible] of their freedom, saying, "We were never in bondage to any man." [illegible] Christ told them, "he that [illegible] sin is the servant of sin." How [illegible] boasting of the nation! It is [illegible] the great sin of oppression [illegible]

Our rulers mock at the eternal law of righteousness, to which the Almighty himself appeals. Ezek. 18: 25. The Supreme Court has now capped the climax of human outrage, by promulgating the damnable falsehood before God, angels and men, that their brother, (made of the same blood, and in the same divine image as themselves,) is neither a man nor a brother! Children of God, born of his Spirit, redeemed by the blood of his Son, destined to "shine as the brightness of the firmament and as the stars forever and ever," are audaciously robbed of their humanity, chattelized, and sold with beasts in the market place; and this too in a land boasting of superior enlightenment in regard to the principles of freedom and christianity!

Forbearing mercy itself has a limited period. The nations that will not "serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling," may learn their doom from that word which cannot fail, though heaven and earth pass away. "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Ps. 2. "O that (we) were wise, that (we) understood this and would consider (our) latter end."

Henry Grew.

Choice Selections.

The Vast Army.

BY REV. EDW. MUNRO, PERPETUAL CURATE OF HARROW-WEALD, ENG.

CHAPTER VII.—THE END.

I was roused from my gazing by an exceeding loud and bitter cry, which burst from the entrance to the King's presence. One came forth, urged on by the Messenger of the King; his hair hung wild and disordered from his agonized brow, his fingers were twisted in it, and I thought he would have torn it off in the extremity of his distress; his eye glowed red with terror and despair, and as he went along he cried bitterly, "Undone! undone! undone!"

Those who followed him, I noticed, urged him on with whips, which added to his sufferings. The agony of his mind seemed far worse than his bodily anguish. They were driving him on to certain hideous and dark chasms among the mountains, which appeared so lonely, and dismal, and chill, so vast and fathomless, that I trembled to look at them. Terrible sounds seemed to come up, sepulchral and hollow, from the chasms; and the whole scene was such as to fill the mind with deep and awful terror: towards this fearful place the Messengers were hastening the boy.

"It is the place," said my guide, "to which all those go who have been found in arms against the King, and have at all deserted from his cause, to live there forever, apart from his presence."

"Forever?" said I with a shudder.

"Forever," answered the guide; "There is no hope of return."

"None," said I, "even if they humble themselves?"

"None! hope is past. They had their time, and did not do their work; time enough was given, and they had their calling, but they let the time slip, and it is too late; no more will be given."

"But," said I, "the King came at last so suddenly."

"That matters not," said he, "if they were told to be watching."

"And so young!"

"Youth and boyhood are no excuse or escape," answered he.

By this time the agonized boy had come near the place where I stood, and I saw it was Ulric. "Undone! undone!" cried he; "undone!" and he tried to linger: he clung to the rock with fearful agony as the Messengers, who followed, by a touch undid his hold, and he was compelled onward. I saw his face was haggard as he passed me, and he was tearing large handfuls of hair from his head, and gnashing with his teeth with horror and despair: I turned sickened from the sad sight, and shuddered. Every now and then I looked after him, and still saw his wretched figure going on, and those bright, stern ones who followed him. I heard his voice raise and fall on the wind, and it bore the same tone of agony, "Undone! undone! undone!" He said no other word, and the word has rung in my ears ever since, and the awful tone with which he said it. I saw him just as he entered the awful chasm, and the Messenger gave him over to some I could not see. I saw him give one look back as he left the light forever, and heard the exceeding bitter cry, "Undone! undone! undone!" as it came up in hollow echoes from the dark chasm. I was riveted to the spot, and could think of nothing but Ulric; it filled my soul with horror.

"How dreadful," said I, "to have a work given us, and not to do it! How dreadful not to watch! Happy, happy Albyn, to have been found watching! how fearful to be found unready, to be overtaken with our work all undone, when we know we had it to do!"

"Fearful, indeed," said my guide, who had been with one of those who had led Ulric to his fearful doom, and had returned to my side; "yon Messenger says, when Ulric stood before the King, the scene was exceeding awful."

Now I noticed that no one could tell what passed who had actually seen it, but each spoke as told by others, so exceeding reverent and awful was their feeling about the King. I strove to catch the Messenger's words as he spoke, and, as far as I could gather, it was as follows, though his whole manner and each word was so full of awe and reverence, that it was hard for me to gain more than a broken account.

"The multitude which gathered round the King," said he, "moved back while Ulric was led up by the Messengers who had brought him to the King: the wretched boy stood, and strove in vain to hide his eyes with his hands, that he might not see the dazzling light around him; but nothing could shut it out, and he trembled so as to terrify those who stood near him, to see one so woefully distressed. It was found he had not the King's mark upon him; for the cross still stood upon his brow, but its light was growing red and fiery, and was losing its lustre. There was a pause, in which the poor boy pressed his hands closer and closer to his burning brow. When the King came, he was found among the enemy; that was enough; he heard it, and could not deny it. He had twice attempted the life of Albyn, whom he had sworn to slay; as those told me who had it from others. The manner of the King was exceeding gentle. But Ulric could not look up nor speak."

"But," said I, "his last acts were the effects of ill example. He had got among false men, who seduced him."

"But what led him there?" said the Messenger; "was it not his own act in leaving his appointed place? and had he not, from time to time, many and distinct warnings of the King's approach and his own danger?"

"But," said I, "the leaving his post a few moments was but a slight offence for so terrible a punishment."

"Nay, see," said he, "see what it led to; it brought him among the King's enemies; it helped the enemy to an advantage; they would never have had such power over the lives of so many of the King's faithful servants; it led him on to plot against young Albyn, and to be at last found among the King's bitterest foes."

"True," said I; "but having taken one false step, it was so difficult to draw back."

"He had many warnings, and might often have turned back, and did begin, but returned again to his sin. He had warning after warning: see the King's watchfulness in sending the Messenger to him, to give him hope if he would return to his post, even after his attempt on Albyn's life on the hill; but he neglected all."

"But," said I, "it was not made so clear to him as it might have been, that the King was so near."

"The King is not wont to make it more clear. He expects his servants to be ever watchful and looking out."

I could say nothing more; I was silenced; it was all true.

"And Ulric,—" said I.

"And he, continued the Messenger, "having naught to say, was led away; and in his bitterness as he moved away, he caught a sight of Albyn, and stretching out his hand to him, cried, "Oh, Albyn! save me! save me!" but it was too late, and he was forced on: the door was shut —you saw the rest," said he; but I did not answer, for at the moment I fancied I heard the awful echo from the chasm, "Undone! undone! undone!"

While I was thinking on all he had told me, the Bright One stood by me, and I was again aroused from my thoughts by his voice.

"You seem interested," said he, "to hear how it fares with the soldiers of the King. There was one who," continued he, "was summoned to meet Him, just after Ulric was condemned, whose manner and bearing struck the Vast Army who were standing round. He came forward with a quick step and free manner, so much so that all were awe-struck. He seemed sure of his being safe."

"Was his name Rolfe?" asked I, struck with the account of his easy manner.

"The same," said the Messenger. "He was followed by a number of persons who seemed to dog his steps, though he was fain to shake them off. 'My friends,' said he, 'follow me not just now;' but they clung to him, and said their cause was bound up with his; and I heard it was said against him that he had deserted his post, and was found taking a totally different direction from that appointed him by the King.

"He had deserted the outward form of his army, and taken his own line of operation, and had caused many to do the same by specious words and fair promises; and many of these, by his having led them out of their appointed place, were brought in such close contact with the enemy as to be actually shaken in their fidelity to the King altogether, so as to induce them to desert in many cases; and this they clamorously urged upon him as the cause of their ruin. The only defence he could make was, that he still served the King in affection and heart; that he only took his own way to show it; that it mattered not whether he remained in the main army or not, so as he worked for the common cause: but in this he was found woefully mistaken; he had disobeyed the King's word, and had led others away from their posts and allegiance; every word of defence he uttered, the men around him were clamoring against him as the cause of their ruin."

"And what became of him?" asked I, impatient to hear the end of the man who had chosen his own way. But my question was answered in a different way to that I expected; for the Messenger, pointing with his hand, led my eye to the entrance through the rocks, where, pale and silent as living death, with his hands crossed on his breast, and his eye fixed with intense despair, as of one thunder-struck and astonished, suddenly Rolfe came forth, driven on by the Messengers, and the door was shut.

"And is his case hopeless?" said I, anxiously.

"Utterly," said the other. "He chose his own path, deserted the Visible Army of the King, which alone was an act of high rebellion, and led others to do the same, though he did not mean harm at first; but it was done, and he must abide the result."

"And that," said I, "is ruin?"

"Utter and hopeless," said he.

I followed with my eye Rolfe's sad figure, as it followed Ulric to his fearful doom; I watched it far amid the rocks, till I could see it no more; he never stopped. He neither turned nor spoke. I followed him with my eye till he seemed to enter the same awful chasm which Ulric had gone into, and I dared look no longer.

"There was one," continued the Messenger, "who tried to be sheltered by the shadow of another; he was an old man, and came crouching behind the form of one whom he had trained to arms, and seemed to think that his having done that would screen him from the rigor of the King, in having deserted his own post; but it was wonderful to see how hopeless the poor man's efforts were; turn which way he would, the shadow became no shadow, so keen and penetrating was the light which filled every thing; and the old man was compelled to stand forth, for he could find no dark place to hide him from the eye of the King."

"Then his having trained a good soldier served him in no stead?" said I.

"None whatever; far from it: the King cares more for one act of obedience to his orders, which shows self-devotion or denial, than for the training of fifty soldiers for his cause.

At this moment the old soldier appeared, tearing his hair and gnashing his teeth in despair: he cried out bitterly at having spent his time in preparing the young soldiers, and having neglected himself. As he passed the threshold I saw him turn continually round, and, clasping his hands, begged to be let back. "One moment more!" said he; "one moment more to get myself ready! only one hour, one short hour!" but the door was shut.

"Did you see aught of one Erza?" said I to the Messenger.

"Ezra! yes, indeed," he answered; "it will be long before I forget him. He was a young boy, and he held back in the rear of the multitude of the Vast Army. A banner was bound around him, which was stained with his blood; his face was like what I never saw before, so anxious, so full of earnest inquiry; and he stood near Albyn, the faithful one, and seemed clinging to his dress, and bathing his hands with his tears. I shall never forget it, the bitter look of intense love and anxiety which he cast on Albyn when he was compelled to go forward; but Albyn could not go with him. He seemed to say kind, soothing words to them as they parted, for they chased from him the cloud which was gathering on the poor boy's brow. The boy hung his head on his bosom, and folded his hands on his breast; his sword, which seemed to have done good work, hung by his side; his shield hung from his neck; in one place it had been pierced through. The boy's face was so simple and beautiful, yet so full of awe and anxious fear, I could never forget it, nor the way in which he left Albyn's side; they said the King called him; he looked up to Albyn's face, and said, 'Oh, Albyn! the King! the King!' It seemed as if meeting the King had long been the object of his thoughts and fears, as if his whole soul had been taken up in how he was to meet the King. Poor boy! I have heard since it was his one thought, night and day, how to meet the King."

"And how went it?" said I, anxious to hear the end.

"There was a long pause; and enemies of Erza's came forward to show how he had injured the King's cause by a false step taken at the first beginning, which had brought about many other errors, and they were clamorous he should be condemned; but he had bitterly repented it, and gave up his whole time to make amends; not that he pleaded that for himself, for he pleaded nothing, but was as one who felt himself all wrong, and remained with his hands folded, and his head fallen on his bosom. All the time I saw not a muscle move in him: his banner and sword bore witness to his efforts and earnestness of late."

"But the end, the end!" said I; "was Erza forgiven?"

"He was," said he. "With his garments white as driven snow, his cross on his brow glowing with heavenly light, his face radiant with perfect peace, his hands still folded in his bosom, young Erza returned to Albyn's side, forgiven."

I bowed in thankfulness.

"And Albyn?" said I.

"Albyn!" said the other. "Before the gathered millions of the Vast Army he stood before the King. He had kept his post and fulfilled his work; he had been faithful to the end. I saw him, and I shall never forget him again; the young soldier's bearing, and his peaceful brow with the cross, like living light glowing on it: all eyes were on him. He had been found watching, and before the assembled army he received his full reward. I gazed, till I could see no more the young boy's single figure as it stood in the living light; and as I gazed, I found at last my eyes were fixed on vacancy, for Albyn had passed away. He had gone with Erza to the land of the King. They had passed beyond the ancient hills; they had gone to the world of the eastern glow; they were seeing the King they had served, and gazing on him they had loved. They have put off the helmet for the conqueror's crown, and the sword for the harp of joy, in the land where the noise of the battle has ceased, and the soldier strives no more.

For the Children.

For the Crisis.

THOUGHTS OF GOD.

TO HELP MY LITTLE NEPHEW.

If I cannot in face see God,
  I must obey his Word;
And freely learn to do those things
  Which I so long have heard.

Early begin to do His will,
  To walk in wisdom's ways;
Thus may I know more of the Lord
  The remnant of my days.

If I begin, then I shall find
  All nature speaks of God:
The earth is but his handiwork,
  According to his word.

He rides upon the ocean storm,
  The waves tell of His might;
Upon the earth He shows his power,
  Speaking by day and night.

The heavens tell of God by day,
  The glorious sun at noon;
By night the little twinkling star,
  And ever changing moon.

Upon the mountain, in the vale,
  No place but God is there;
Nothing can hide us from His eye,
  For God is everywhere.

Well then may I think of my ways,
  My actions and my deeds;
My words are all before the Lord,
  And every thought He reads.

A solemn day is coming fast,
  God must fulfill his Word;
Good children will be happy then,
  Forever with the Lord.

A. B.

Jesus loves Idiots.

"I have seen Jesus," said a poor imbecile, who for many years had been the terror of his neighborhood, but who, under the divine influence, had become a mild and gentle creature; "I have seen Jesus," was his only reply to those who inquired what had induced a change so wonderful—and as the years passed on, and the love of Jesus showed itself in his every act, this simple testimony to the power of the cross won many a stouter heart to yield to the blessed Redeemer.

"Does Jesus love foolish boy?" asked an idiotic lad of the Superintendent of the Idiotic Asylum, at Essex Hall, England. On being told that he did, the poor child could hardly contain himself for joy—"Jesus love, Jesus love me," he cried—"nobody love foolish boy before," and as time passed on, the consciousness of the love of Jesus made even the lack-lustre eye and grinning face of the boy to assume a look of intelligence, and his struggles to subdue the evil propensities of his wayward nature showed that grace had indeed found a lodgment in his heart."

Do not Scold the Child.

Suppose the little thing did put its fingers into the dish, it knew no better; suppose the cup or saucer was swept from the table, and broken when it fell to the floor, the child did not mean to do it. Now, mother, do not scold, pray don't. It will not help the trouble at all—the fragments will still continue fragments, and pieces will not unite again into a healthy cup or saucer. The least said, the better for the peace of all concerned; besides, why worry over such a trifle? The cost to replace it would be but little, while the rich affection which at times you have shown for your little one, and are now throwing away, is worth more than a hundred dishes; all the shops of the city could not begin to match the beautiful vase—your child—that often yielded to the touches of your hand, as you, with a mother's care and solicitude, attempted the adornment of its little form.

Can you reprove the little honest boy that says, "mother, I did it," or the little girl whose mild eye imploringly looks up to your face, and expresses a hope for your forgiveness; can you use harsh words now? Just wait a moment. How would you feel it the child were to die? To see the outstretched form, or looking into the coffin behold only the face, and those eyes that are beseeching your forgiveness, close forever, and know that the hand that helped break the cup should never open again, or close its fingers within yours?

Would you then ask, "How could I reprove the dear one so sternly? Oh, how sorry I am, that he was caused a moment's pain by me, and that too when he so nobly acknowledged that he did it. My dear little sonny, dear little cherub sister, you are gone—gone where there is no discord, where there are no saucers to break now; how could I, how could I speak so hasty to you."

And as you stoop down to kiss the marble forehead, would not the memory of those cruel words come back again, and fill your heart with fresh sorrow! Do not scold now, mother, but take up little brother, soothe the sweet sister, and perhaps you may receive in return the loving prattle of innocence, and the childish gratitude of little hearts nearly bursting with the consciousness of forgiven sin.

Health Department.

Position in Sleeping.

It is better to go to sleep on the right side, for then the stomach is very much in the position of a bottle turned upside down, and the contents are aided in passing out by gravitation. If one goes to sleep on the left side, the operation of emptying the stomach of its contents is more like drawing water from a well. If you sleep on your back, especially soon after a hearty meal, the weight of the digestive organs, and that of the food, resting on the great vein of the body, near the back bone, compresses it, and arrests the flow of blood more or less. If the arrest is partial the sleep is disturbed, and there are unpleasant dreams. If the meal has been recent or hearty, the arrest is more decided, and the various sensations, such as falling over a precipice, or the pursuit of a wild beast, or other impending danger, and the desperate effort to get rid of it, arouse us; that sends on the stagnating blood, and we awake in a fright, or trembling, or perspiration, or feelings of exhaustion, according to the degree of stagnation, and the length or strength of the effort made to escape the danger. But when we are not able to escape the danger, when the tumbling building crushes us, what then? That is death! That is the death of those of whom it is said, when found lifeless in their bed in the morning, "They were as well as they ever were the day before;" and often it is added, and ate heartier than common! This last, as a frequent cause of death to those who have gone to bed well to wake no more, we give merely as a private opinion. The possibility of its truth is enough to deter any rational man from a late and hearty meal. This we know with certainty that waking up in the night with painful diarrhœa, or cholera, or bilious colic, ending in death in a very short time, is properly traceable to a late large meal. The truly wise will take the safer side.—Journal of Health.

Working and Thinking.—It is no less fatal error to despise labor when regulated by intellect, then to value it for its own sake. We are always, in these days, trying to separate the two; we want one man to be always thinking and another to be always working, and we call one a gentleman and the other an operative; whereas the working man ought always to be thinking, and the thinker often to be working; and both should be gentlemen in the best sense. As it is, we make both ungentle, the one envying, the other despising his brother; and the mass of society is made up of morbid thinkers and miserable workers. Now it is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy, and the two cannot be separated with impunity. All professions should be liberal, and there should be less pride felt in peculiarity of employment, and more in excellence of achievement.—Ruskin.

Cure for the Bite of a Mad Dog.—A writer in the National Intelligencer says that spirits of hartshorn is a certain remedy for the bite of a mad dog. The wound, he adds, should be constantly bathed with it, and three or four doses, diluted, taken inwardly during the day. The hartshorn decomposes, chemically, the virus insinuated into the wound, and immediately alters and destroys its deleteriousness. The writer, who resided in Brazil for some time, first tried it for the bite of a scorpion, and found that it removed the pain and inflammation almost instantly.

Chalk for Warts.—A correspondent informs us that by rubbing chalk frequently on warts they will disappear. In several instances known to him in which this simple remedy was tried, it proved successful. We have known slightly moistened pearlash to remove warts by rubbing it onthem.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Canada Subscribers have to pre-pay the post age on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or [illegible] a year. [illegible] to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NO. 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1858. WHOLE NO. 153. VOL. VII. NO. 23.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

HOME REMINISCENCES OF A WOUNDED SAILOR.

Who occupies the dearest part
Of my sad, desolated heart,
Holy amid its sinful mart?
My Mother!

Sweet the remembrance of those days,
When on my thoughtless, childish plays,
Thine eyes beamed soft with loving rays,
My Mother!

And when some law by me unheeded
You saw the fault correction needed,
The rod fell light because I pleaded,
My Mother!

And O, the day when from thy side
My first ship bore me o'er the tide,
How bitterly you sobbed and cried,
My Mother!

And when that night by grief oppressed,
I knelt beside my little chest,
Fain I'd have leant upon thy breast,
My Mother!

And when the burning fever, dread,
Thro' all my veins with fury spread,
Methought you watched beside my bed,
My Mother!

And when from out the danger wild,
Grim Death was of his prey beguiled,
Thy prayers heaven-reaching saved thy child,
My Mother!

And when from ocean back I came,
Tho' changed by storm and tropic flame,
Thy heart, thy love was still the same,
My Mother!

O, many a time from home and thee
I've parted, but if thou could'st see
Me now, heart-broken then would'st be,
My Mother!

If ere again old ocean's roar
I cross, and reach my native shore,
I'll never, never leave thee more,
My Mother!

JNO. F. COTTON.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Coming of Christ.

BRO. GRANT:—We have abundant evidence, by passing events, that we are nearing the time when Christ will take to himself his power, and reign. I heartily believe that any one who is diligently at work in the vineyard of the Lord, with his heart set upon the salvation of souls, will be interested in this subject. I do not find anything in the word of God to confirm me that the precise time of the Lord's coming will be known, but we have abundant evidence that we are living in the time of the end, and that Christ is near, even at the doors, and knocking loudly for us to prepare to receive him; and any one who will not heed these warnings will be unlikely to prepare for that great event, were the time definitely known, for incredulity and speculation upon this subject is dishonoring to God, and shows a lack of confidence and trust in him. It is like a child who has a promise from his p rents that in the fall of the year he shall go to the fair and have a new dress. But he is not satisfied with this, but continually teazes his father to know the day, and the hour, and is so anxious about it that he neglects his study, and some days does not go to school at all, and is very careless about his duties to his playmates. The day of the fair is all with him.

I know we are exhorted to search the Scriptures for eternal life, and contend for the faith; but there are many things in the word of God for which we may contend earnestly, which will be of no benefit to us if we are destitute of the seal of adoption. Many, no doubt, will awake in that day to the reality that they have neglected this subject, while they have contended earnestly for many things non-essential to salvation.

One thing is certain: we are near the time when all who are to be saved will be tried as by fire, and the only foundation upon which we can stand unharmed will be the Spirit of God ruling in us; for the spirit of devils will rule those who will oppose us, and all the knowledge, or science, or logic, or learning, without the Spirit of God, will fall before them. The Lord give all his humble followers all the grace they need in this time of temptation.

D. N. SMITH.

For the Crisis.

Our Position.—A Suggestion.

That the Lord does not wish his people to forever be doubting, undecided and trembling, because fearful of what their present position may ultimate in, is a point demonstrated by almost every page of the Bible. Nor does the Bible sanction the idea that it is becoming the disciples of Christ to be frequently shifting in their position, in a manner by which they repudiate their previous standing. In this we do not mean to say that a person finding himself wrong, should not try to get right. But the position which the church of God should occupy, is one so clearly defined in the Scriptures, and so surrounded by divine light, that no feeling should occupy the mind other than of the most positive and decided character. There is more than one thought wrapt in the declaration—"He that doubteth is damned." And beside, according to the laws of mental analysis, few things more completely unfit a person for accomplishing a great or small work, than an undecided and consequently perturbed mind.

We say then, for the accomplishment of any work in the church, whether it be of a private and local, or of a more conspicuous and general character—consisting in meeting an antagonist, routing an enemy, besieging a city, or storming a camp—or, in other words, whether it be an effort to make interesting and profitable a prayer meeting, promote a revival, or by other means to build up the church in the most holy faith, we must act with so firm a conviction of faith as will utterly forbid even the appearance of duplicity or pervarication. Otherwise, what we do will be but feebly done, and will very probably end in futility. And then, if you are a MAN, and yet have for any reason yielded to such a course, you must in your subsequent reflective moments feel sorely scorched with a sense of one fact: that the time and energy so employed was used unworthily and in vain, because not used as it should have been. If anything is worth doing, it is worth doing well.

Among the things required to give positiveness and energy to faith in any effort, may be mentioned the following:

1. An end worthy the effort proposed.

2. Conditions warranting the attainment of the end proposed, if complied with, and

3. So clear a perception of the individual and relative importance of both the end and the condition proposed, as will amount to a settled conviction of personal duty.

And now, what lack we as a people? Of the end proposed—eternal life in the kingdom of God—we are instructed. Of the conditions required—faithfulness in holding up and obeying the truth as we understand it in Christ—we are fully informed; so being informed, we have for fifteen years been fully settled as to our convictions concerning our duty, and in that time have not seen a moment when we could not in this matter define our position, or "give a reason for the hope that is within us." And then, what lack we more as to position? We answer: not a creed other than we have got—the Bible;—nor a general understanding and sympathy in doctrine; nor is it so much a want of proper appreciation of truth, because for this we have many of us "suffered the loss of all things." What, then, we as a people more especially need, is concert of action—a better understanding and agreement as to ways and means. Of the necessity of this, nothing need be said in this place, because, with few exceptions, this necessity is already felt. But, it may be added, a position on this subject to be generally acceptable, must have among others the following qualities:

1. It must not so relate to faith as will appear to legislate or dictate to any one what shall or shall not be believed, further than to believe the Scriptures as the conscience of each shall allow. Further than this is popery, defacto.

2. It should be a position which, to commend itself to our people generally, must not interfere with their personal or individual christian liberties.

3. It should not in any measure clash with the independence of local churches.

4. It should not render us less qualified to labor amongst other churches or in other fields.

5. It should not render us necessarily sectarian in our spirit.

6. It should not be a position that will necessarily unpleasantly affect my existing relations.

7. But should be a position calculated to make our efforts more harmonious, and consequently more effectual than they otherwise are. And yet, it may be added, such a plan as is here hinted at, should not be expected to be necessarily perfect in all its parts to begin with.

A SUGGESTION.

The Illinois Annual Conference has adopted what they denominate A Plan of Arrangements. This they have ordered to be published with the minutes of their last Conference. In this there is an effort made, in the spirit of a liberal christianity, to gather what, from the exigencies of our cause, seems to be required; and what, from the experience of the past, has proved itself potent as "ways and means" for advancing the cause of God in the earth. In this there is provision for organizing churches (by covenant,) and the disciplining of members, the organization of quarterly, annual and general Conferences, in connection with provision for the labors of Evangelists, but which in no measure interferes with the relation existing between pastors and churches.

Now although this plan of arrangements is far from being perfect, why may it not constitute the basis, or be used as suggestive of a plan that shall be so adapted to the wants of our common cause as will warrant an effort to effect its adoption by the churches of every state in the Union? And if so, why not the subject be fully canvassed through our papers, and at the coming general meetings of this season be taken into consideration in Conference?

Our cause, as distinct from all others, is too precious to be abandoned. But from the history of the past, it is no indication of a speculative or particularly sagacious mind, to conclude that churches pursuing the policy of the past, must before very long be among the "things that were," or else change their modus operandi. Then let the church arouse to this important matter. Let our cause from henceforth be one throughout our land—even such as becomes the precious cause of a soon-coming Redeemer.

P. B. M.

For the Crisis.

The Western Mission.

To my brethren in Christ who are waiting for the consolation of Israel, I wish to say: I have recently received a letter from our Conference Evangelist, who says he is receiving barely enough to pay his traveling expenses, while he has nothing left to clothe or feed a large family whom God has entrusted to his care. Now, brethren, what shall be done? It is left for you to say. Shall the Western Mission fail to sustain in the field a single Evangelist? If so, we ask why? Is it because we are not engaged in what is positively the cause of Jesus Christ? or is it because those who—East and West—have got houses and lands, sheep and cattle, are unwilling to replenish the Lord's treasury as they ought?

And now I have one thing more to ask: if the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, whose will be the condemnation in the day of judgment if, for want of means, the Gospel of the Kingdom is not published to the millions in the West who are perishing for lack of knowledge, if you retain the one, the five, or the fifty dollars which the Lord wished you to put in his treasury?

Another brother who labored effectually last winter, and saw souls converted by multitudes, said he paid out forty dollars, and received ten. And you who pretend to be christians, I ask, shall these things continue thus up to the judgment?

P. B. MORGAN.

Ottowa, Ill., July, 1858.

For the Crisis.

"Then Cometh the End."

1 Cor. 15: 24.

"Then cometh the end." . . . "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that did put all things under him (under the Son) that God might be all in all." Put under him, not conquer for him. The Father gives the powers of earth, places them in his hands, or gives the Son the right to take the kingdom out of the hands of these wild beast powers.

David, a type of Jesus, slew a lion and a bear that came down upon his flock. So Jesus will save his flock by slaying the wild beasts that have ever oppressed the church. This is plainly God's purpose. See 110th Ps. "Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool." When are they his footstool, before or after conquest? Some say, "As God promised so to do this, he means to utterly destroy them, reduce them to ashes, while the Son is yet at the right hand of the Father." This will not do. It is an unmeaning view of the text. Notice, in the same Psalm, "The Lord will send forth the rod of his strength out of Zion," "Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies," not in their ashes. This rod is Jesus and his army. From the same Psalm—"Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power; in the beauties of holiness, from the womb of the morning; thou hast the dew of thy youth." See also Rev. 19: 11, &c.; Dan. 12: 1. There is another clause in this Psalm to the point, showing that after these enemies are made the footstool of Jesus, he destroys them. "The Lord at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath." Compare with Rev. 6: "The great day of his wrath has come." It is the wrath of the Lamb. Also 11th chap.—"And thy wrath is come, . . and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth." There can be no question who is to do this work. We have another testimony in Isa. 63: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? . . . I have trodden the wine press alone. . . For I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments; and I will stain all my raiment. For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. . . . . And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk with my fury." In the 110th Psalm—"He shall fill the places with the dead bodies." In Isaiah—"The slain of the Lord will be many."

It is very plainly to be seen from the foregoing—

1st. That Jesus conquers and destroys his enemies (present instituted authorities) after his term of service at the right hand of the Father expires by limitation.

2d. That they are made his footstool to this end. And

3d. This is done before the Advent, and is quite convenient to believe.

"Then cometh the end." What end? The end of death and hell, of sin and weakness, infirmity, folly and mortality. This is not the end of the age, or world, as commonly expressed. The age, the times of the Gentiles, fullness of the Gentiles be come in, which times, age or dispensation, must end before.

The Father cannot be supposed to make the Gentiles the footstool of his Son before their times have expired. Nor can we suppose that the Father would send his Son to dash the nations to pieces before their lease has expired by limitation. Neither the Father nor the Son would be willing to perpetrate such injustice. Their powers and official rights cannot in justice be interfered with while there is a day of the stipulated time on their hands. The end under consideration comes after the nations are dashed in pieces.

"Then cometh the end." When? When he (Christ) shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father. When will that be? When he shall have put down all rule, and authority, and power. Then, when our Lord has conquered a peace, has reduced all kingdoms, principalities and powers; has brought back this revolted province of his Father's mighty empire; he, like an obedient Son, will lay all titles, honors and trophies at the feet of his Father. "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." But the Father will say, "My Son, they are all yours. You have bought them and won them in awful battle. Take the crown, wield the sceptre. Said I not unto thee, after the wicked rulers had thrust thee out of thy kingdom, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool? And now who shall reign over the earth I intended for Adam, but my Son in whom I am well pleased? And then the flock which thou hast bought have been encouraged in the hope of reigning with thee, and they sing of their hope—'We shall reign on the earth.' There are the prophets, also, who by authority have written—'The meek shall inherit the earth.' And my twelve tribes must not be disappointed; for the hope of this promise they served me instantly day and night, hoping to come to it. And they shall come! Then what would their coming avail, if their elder brother should not be there, covered with glory? Besides all this, it was in your own expectation, and thou did'st endure the cross, and despise the shame. Take the kingdom, beloved, to have and to hold it; all and singular—its mountains and vales, its fruits and forests, the beasts and birds, forever. And the great multitude redeemed out of all nations are there, and they rejoice to owe their redemption to thy love; and they shall walk with thee in white; and they shall serve thee, and thou shalt feed them, and lead them to fountains of living water."

Now all is made plain, when this question of time is settled. "Then cometh the end." When? At the appearing of Christ to raise the dead. This is the point under consideration. Ver. 52: "The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 54: "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory." This is the destruction of the last enemy, and is when Christ comes in his kingdom. Swallowing up death is identical with casting death and hell into the "Lake of fire and brimstone." The same event, under different figures. Before this, Babylon falls, and the beast and false prophet go into a lake of fire and brimstone, which in another place is called perdition. This destruction of the beast is the same as putting down all rule, and authority, and power. And all this is done before the abolition of death. 1 Thess. 4: 15—"For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." This is the end referred to. For he must reign (ruled is the word used in the 110th Psalm quoted by the apostle,) until he hath put down all rule, and all authority; and the last enemy is death. This enemy is put under his feet at his appearing and kingdom—not a thousand years after. Then is it not settled that our blessed Lord destroys the last enemy, which is death, by raising the dead saints? Then the prison is broken up and demolished, and the keeper destroyed; then the head of the serpent is bruised, and he dies!

Let it be remembered that all these victories over kingdoms and powers are achieved by the stone kingdom. It afterwards becomes a great mountain, and fills the whole earth. "And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things. . . . And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it." This scripture is most important in its bearing upon the subject before us. It declares the fact of the destruction of the last enemy, and the order of time for it. The fact is first declared under a simile—He will destroy the face of the covering, and the veil; or destroy the covering cast over the face of all people. When Haman was to be executed, the servant of the king of Persia threw a veil over his face. When Cæsar fell dead at the foot of Pompey's statue, he muffled up his face with his own robe. All civilized people cover the faces of criminals. All people, when in distress, and are weeping, instinctively cover their faces. They do not care to present a disfigured countenance to open view. The "rebuke" was, Die!—when the pall of death was spread over all nations. All the people have been outlawed, condemned, and sentenced to death. Repentance, faith, righteousness or obedience did not save Noah, Job and Daniel, from death. And Paul says that without the resurrection we are yet in our sins.

The other thing taught by this Scripture is, that death is destroyed when the kingdom has become a mountain. All ordinary enemies are destroyed by the stone kingdom, when the victorious hosts of the Lord—the saints of the Most High—TAKE THE KINGDOM, as David took the kingdom, after Babylon fell by the hand of Cyrus. And then this universal subjugation is celebrated with a feast, as it is meet it should be. And death, the common enemy, is led forth (so to speak) and executed. The Jews were wont, on their great feast, to signalize it by the release of a prisoner. Jesus will signalize this feast to all people, by a universal delivery from prison and reproach. And Palestine will be the place for the exhibition of the brighter glory.

Yours, hoping to be there,
BARNET MATTHIAS.

Salterville, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

"The Time Appointed."

The time appointed in Dan. 8, is the "set time"—the time determined for Gentile domination to cease over "the place of the Sanctuary"—there named. As to this time's precise "end," there is much said in the Holy Scripture. On this, the faith of God's people has been and still is deeply exercised. Next to the face of a note, the most important point is the "time appointed" for payment. And in all well directed transactions, human or divine, time and event go together.

Without time, there would be no event! Without events to measure it, there could be no time; and no one can "watch" the events of prophecy understandingly, except as they exercise some regard to their order of succession, and time, as it is revealed. Time is an essential element in prophecy, that cannot altogether be dissociated from the preached events; and as surely as we desire the event, so surely we must welcome "the time appointed" for it.

But the convictions of my mind are not matured sufficiently for further publication now. May "the Lord give us understanding in all things." Amen.

J. B. C.

FRETTING.—Do not fret! If you are poor, look to the miseries of many who are possessed with wealth, and thank God for your poverty. If you are sick, there is no necessity for fretting, for the morrow may bring you to health. Have you enemies? If so, don't fret or get in a passion, but strive to outlive their maliciousness and envy by noble deeds. Don't fret if you cannot wear such fine clothes and live in such a big house as your neighbor, but resolve that in whatever state God has placed you, with whatever circumstances he has encompassed you, to be content. 'Tis a short time we have to live, at the most—don't spend it in fretting. There's not much comfort to be taken in this world, unless we endeavor to take everything easy.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NO. 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1858. WHOLE NO. 153. VOL. VII. NO. 23.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

HOME REMINISCENCES OF A WOUNDED SAILOR.

Who occupies the dearest part
Of my sad, desolated heart,
Holy amid its sinful mart?
My Mother!

Sweet the remembrance of those days,
When on my thoughtless, childish plays,
Thine eyes beamed soft with loving rays,
My Mother!

And when some law by me unheeded
You saw the fault correction needed,
The rod fell light because I pleaded,
My Mother!

And O, the day when from thy side
My first ship bore me o'er the tide,
How bitterly you sobbed and cried,
My Mother!

And when that night by grief oppressed,
I knelt beside my little chest,
Fain I'd have leant upon thy breast,
My Mother!

And when the burning fever, dread,
Thro' all my veins with fury spread,
Methought you watched beside my bed,
My Mother!

And when from out the danger wild,
Grim Death was of his prey beguiled,
Thy prayers heaven-reaching saved thy child,
My Mother!

And when from ocean back I came,
Tho' changed by storm and tropic flame,
Thy heart, thy love was still the same,
My Mother!

O, many a time from home and thee
I've parted, but if thou could'st see
Me now, heart-broken thou would'st be,
My Mother!

If ere again old ocean's roar
I cross, and reach my native shore,
I'll never, never leave thee more,
My Mother!

JNO. F. COTTON.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Coming of Christ.

BRO. GRANT:—We have abundant evidence, by passing events, that we are nearing the time when Christ will take to himself his power, and reign. I heartily believe that any one who is diligently at work in the vineyard of the Lord, with his heart set upon the salvation of souls, will be interested in this subject. I do not find anything in the word of God to confirm me that the precise time of the Lord's coming will be known, but we have abundant evidence that we are living in the time of the end, and that Christ is near, even at the doors, and knocking loudly for us to prepare to receive him; and any one who will not heed these warnings will be unlikely to prepare for that great event, were the time definitely known, for incredulity and speculation upon this subject is dishonoring to God, and shows a lack of confidence and trust in him. It is like a child who has a promise from his p rents that in the fall of the year he shall go to the fair and have a new dress. But he is not satisfied with this, but continually teazes his father to know the day, and the hour, and is so anxious about it that he neglects his study, and some days does not go to school at all, and is very careless about his duties to his playmates. The day of the fair is all with him.

I know we are exhorted to search the Scriptures for eternal life, and contend for the faith; but there are many things in the word of God for which we may contend earnestly, which will be of no benefit to us if we are destitute of the seal of adoption. Many, no doubt, will awake in that day to the reality that they have neglected this subject, while they have contended earnestly for many things non-essential to salvation.

One thing is certain: we are near the time when all who are to be saved will be tried as by fire, and the only foundation upon which we can stand unharmed will be the Spirit of God ruling in us; for the spirit of devils will rule those who will oppose us, and all the knowledge, or science, or logic, or learning, without the Spirit of God, will fall before them. The Lord give all his humble followers all the grace they need in this time of temptation.

D. N. SMITH.

For the Crisis.

Our Position.—A Suggestion.

That the Lord does not wish his people to forever be doubting, undecided and trembling, because fearful of what their present position may ultimate in, is a point demonstrated by almost every page of the Bible. Nor does the Bible sanction the idea that it is becoming the disciples of Christ to be frequently shifting in their position, in a manner by which they repudiate their previous standing. In this we do not mean to say that a person finding himself wrong, should not try to get right. But the position which the church of God should occupy, is one so clearly defined in the Scriptures, and so surrounded by divine light, that no feeling should occupy the mind other than of the most positive and decided character. There is more than one thought wrapt in the declaration—"He that doubteth is damned." And beside, according to the laws of mental analysis, few things more completely unfit a person for accomplishing a great or small work, than an undecided and consequently perturbed mind.

We say then, for the accomplishment of any work in the church, whether it be of a private and local, or of a more conspicuous and general character—consisting in meeting an antagonist, routing an enemy, besieging a city, or storming a camp—or, in other words, whether it be an effort to make interesting and profitable a prayer meeting, promote a revival, or by other means to build up the church in the most holy faith, we must act with so firm a conviction of faith as will utterly forbid even the appearance of duplicity or pervarication. Otherwise, what we do will be but feebly done, and will very probably end in futility. And then, if you are a MAN, and yet have for any reason yielded to such a course, you must in your subsequent reflective moments feel sorely scorched with a sense of one fact: that the time and energy so employed was used unworthily and in vain, because not used as it should have been. If anything is worth doing, it is worth doing well.

Among the things required to give positiveness and energy to faith in any effort, may be mentioned the following:

1. An end worthy the effort proposed.

2. Conditions warranting the attainment of the end proposed, if complied with, and

3. So clear a perception of the individual and relative importance of both the end and the condition proposed, as will amount to a settled conviction of personal duty.

And now, what lack we as a people? Of the end proposed—eternal life in the kingdom of God—we are instructed. Of the conditions required—faithfulness in holding up and obeying the truth as we understand it in Christ—we are fully informed; so being informed, we have for fifteen years been fully settled as to our convictions concerning our duty, and in that time have not seen a moment when we could not in this matter define our position, or "give a reason for the hope that is within us." And then, what lack we more as to position? We answer: not a creed other than we have got—the Bible;—nor a general understanding and sympathy in doctrine; nor is it so much a want of proper appreciation of truth, because for this we have many of us "suffered the loss of all things." What, then, we as a people more especially need, is concert of action—a better understanding and agreement as to ways and means. Of the necessity of this, nothing need be said in this place, because, with few exceptions, this necessity is already felt. But, it may be added, a position on this subject to be generally acceptable, must have among others the following qualities:

1. It must not so relate to faith as will appear to legislate or dictate to any one what shall or shall not be believed, further than to believe the Scriptures as the conscience of each shall allow. Further than this is popery, defacto.

2. It should be a position which, to commend itself to our people generally, must not interfere with their personal or individual christian liberties.

3. It should not in any measure clash with the independence of local churches.

4. It should not render us less qualified to labor amongst other churches or in other fields.

5. It should not render us necessarily sectarian in our spirit.

6. It should not be a position that will necessarily unpleasantly affect my existing relations.

7. But should be a position calculated to make our efforts more harmonious, and consequently more effectual than they otherwise are. And yet, it may be added, such a plan as is here hinted at, should not be expected to be necessarily perfect in all its parts to begin with.

A SUGGESTION.

The Illinois Annual Conference has adopted what they denominate A Plan of Arrangements. This they have ordered to be published with the minutes of their last Conference. In this there is an effort made, in the spirit of a liberal christianity, to gather what, from the exigencies of our cause, seems to be required; and what, from the experience of the past, has proved itself potent as "ways and means" for advancing the cause of God in the earth. In this there is provision for organizing churches (by covenant,) and the disciplining of members, the organization of quarterly, annual and general Conferences, in connection with provision for the labors of Evangelists, but which in no measure interferes with the relation existing between pastors and churches.

Now although this plan of arrangements is far from being perfect, why may it not constitute the basis, or be used as suggestive of a plan that shall be so adapted to the wants of our common cause as will warrant an effort to effect its adoption by the churches of every state in the Union? And if so, why not the subject be fully canvassed through our papers, and at the coming general meetings of this season be taken into consideration in Conference?

Our cause, as distinct from all others, is too precious to be abandoned. But from the history of the past, it is no indication of a speculative or particularly sagacious mind, to conclude that churches pursuing the policy of the past, must before very long be among the "things that were," or else change their modus operandi. Then let the church arouse to this important matter. Let our cause from henceforth be one throughout our land—even such as becomes the precious cause of a soon-coming Redeemer.

P. B. M.

For the Crisis.

The Western Mission.

To my brethren in Christ who are waiting for the consolation of Israel, I wish to say: I have recently received a letter from our Conference Evangelist, who says he is receiving barely enough to pay his traveling expenses, while he has nothing left to clothe or feed a large family whom God has entrusted to his care. Now, brethren, what shall be done? It is left for you to say. Shall the Western Mission fail to sustain in the field a single Evangelist? If so, we ask why? Is it because we are not engaged in what is positively the cause of Jesus Christ? or is it because those who—East and West—have got houses and lands, sheep and cattle, are unwilling to replenish the Lord's treasury as they ought?

And now I have one thing more to ask: if the earth IS the Lord's and the fulness thereof, whose will be the condemnation in the day of judgment if, for want of means, the Gospel of the Kingdom is not published to the millions in the West who are perishing for lack of knowledge, if you retain the one, the five, or the fifty dollars which the Lord wished you to put in his treasury?

Another brother who labored effectually last winter, and saw souls converted by multitudes, said he paid out forty dollars, and received ten. And you who pretend to be christians, I ask, shall these things continue thus up to the judgment?

P. B. MORGAN.

Ottowa, Ill., July, 1858.

For the Crisis.

"Then Cometh the End."

1 Cor. 15: 24.

"Then cometh the end." . . . "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that did put all things under him (under the Son) that God might be all in all." Put under him, not conquer for him. The Father gives the powers of earth, places them in his hands, or gives the Son the right to take the kingdom out of the hands of these wild beast powers.

David, a type of Jesus, slew a lion and a bear that came down upon his flock. So Jesus will save his flock by slaying the wild beasts that have ever oppressed the church. This is plainly God's purpose. See 110th Ps. "Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool." When are they his footstool, before or after conquest? Some say, "As God promised so to do this, he means to utterly destroy them, reduce them to ashes, while the Son is yet at the right hand of the Father." This will not do. It is an unmeaning view of the text. Notice, in the same Psalm, "The Lord will send forth the rod of his strength out of Zion," "Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies," not in their ashes. This rod is Jesus and his army. From the same Psalm—"Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power; in the beauties of holiness, from the womb of the morning; thou hast the dew of thy youth." See also Rev. 19: 11, &c.; Dan. 12: 1. There is another clause in this Psalm to the point, showing that after these enemies are made the footstool of Jesus, he destroys them. "The Lord at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath." Compare with Rev. 6: "The great day of his wrath has come." It is the wrath of the Lamb. Also 11th chap.—"And thy wrath is come, . . and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth." There can be no question who is to do this work. We have another testimony in Isa. 63: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? . . . I have trodden the wine press alone. . . For I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments; and I will stain all my raiment. For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. . . . And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk with my fury." In the 110th Psalm—"He shall fill the places with the dead bodies." In Isaiah—"The slain of the Lord will be many."

It is very plainly to be seen from the foregoing—

1st. That Jesus conquers and destroys his enemies (present instituted authorities) after his term of service at the right hand of the Father expires by limitation.

2d. That they are made his footstool to this end. And

3d. This is done before the Advent, and is quite convenient to believe.

"Then cometh the end." What end? The end of death and hell, of sin and weakness, infirmity, folly and mortality. This is not the end of the age, or world, as commonly expressed. The age, the times of the Gentiles, fullness of the Gentiles be come in, which times, age or dispensation, must end before.

The Father cannot be supposed to make the Gentiles the footstool of his Son before their times have expired. Nor can we suppose that the Father would send his Son to dash the nations to pieces before their lease has expired by limitation. Neither the Father nor the Son would be willing to perpetrate such injustice. Their powers and official rights cannot in justice be interfered with while there is a day of the stipulated time on their hands. The end under consideration comes after the nations are dashed in pieces.

"Then cometh the end." When? When he (Christ) shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father. When will that be? When he shall have put down all rule, and authority, and power. Then, when our Lord has conquered a peace, has reduced all kingdoms, principalities and powers; has brought back this revolted province of his Father's mighty empire; he, like an obedient Son, will lay all titles, honors and trophies at the feet of his Father. "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." But the Father will say, "My Son, they are all yours. You have bought them and won them in awful battle. Take the crown, wield the sceptre. Said I not unto thee, after the wicked rulers had thrust thee out of thy kingdom, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool? And now who shall reign over the earth I intended for Adam, but my Son in whom I am well pleased? And then the flock which thou hast bought have been encouraged in the hope of reigning with thee, and they sing of their hope—'We shall reign on the earth.' There are the prophets, also, who by authority have written—'The meek shall inherit the earth.' And my twelve tribes must not be disappointed; for the hope of this promise they served me instantly day and night, hoping to come to it. And they shall come! Then what would their coming avail, if their older brother should not be there, covered with glory? Besides all this, it was in your own expectation, and thou did'st endure the cross, and despise the shame. Take the kingdom, beloved, to have and to hold it; all and singular—its mountains and vales, its fruits and forests, the beasts and birds, forever. And the great multitude redeemed out of all nations are there, and they rejoice to owe their redemption to thy love; and they shall walk with thee in white; and they shall serve thee, and thou shalt feed them, and lead them to fountains of living water."

Now all is made plain, when this question of time is settled. "Then cometh the end." When? At the appearing of Christ to raise the dead. This is the point under consideration. Ver. 52: "The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 54: "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory." This is the destruction of the last enemy, and is when Christ comes in his kingdom. Swallowing up death is identical with casting death and hell into the "Lake of fire and brimstone." The same event, under different figures. Before this, Babylon falls, and the beast and false prophet go into a lake of fire and brimstone, which in another place is called perdition. This destruction of the beast is the same as putting down all rule, and authority, and power. And all this is done before the abolition of death. 1 Thess. 4: 15—"For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." This is the end referred to. For he must reign (ruled is the word used in the 110th Psalm quoted by the apostle,) until he hath put down all rule, and all authority; and the last enemy is death. This enemy is put under his feet at his appearing and kingdom—not a thousand years after. Then is it not settled that our blessed Lord destroys the last enemy, which is death, by raising the dead saints? Then the prison is broken up and demolished, and the keeper destroyed; then the head of the serpent is bruised, and he dies!

Let it be remembered that all these victories over kingdoms and powers are achieved by the stone kingdom. It afterwards becomes a great mountain, and fills the whole earth. "And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things. . . . And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it." This scripture is most important in its bearing upon the subject before us. It declares the fact of the destruction of the last enemy, and the order of time for it. The fact is first declared under a simile—He will destroy the face of the covering, and the vail, or destroy the covering cast over the face of all people. When Haman was to be executed, the servant of the king of Persia threw a veil over his face. When Cæsar fell dead at the foot of Pompey's statue, he muffled up his face with his own robe. All civilized people cover the faces of criminals. All people, when in distress, and are weeping, instinctively cover their faces. They do not care to present a disfigured countenance to open view. The "rebuke" was, Die!—when the pall of death was spread over all nations. All the people have been outlawed, condemned, and sentenced to death. Repentance, faith, righteousness or obedience did not save Noah, Job and Daniel, from death. And Paul says that without the resurrection we are yet in our sins.

The other thing taught by this Scripture is, that death is destroyed when the kingdom has become a mountain. All ordinary enemies are destroyed by the stone kingdom, when the victorious hosts of the Lord—the saints of the Most High—TAKE THE KINGDOM, as David took the kingdom, after Babylon fell by the hand of Cyrus. And then this universal subjugation is celebrated with a feast, as it is meet it should be. And death, the common enemy, is led forth (so to speak) and executed. The Jews were wont, on their great feast, to signalize it by the release of a prisoner. Jesus will signalize this feast to all people, by a universal delivery from prison and reproach. And Palestine will be the place for the exhibition of the brighter glory.

Yours, hoping to be there,

BARNET MATTHIAS.

Salterville, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

"The Time Appointed."

The time appointed in Dan. 8, is the "set time"—the time determined for Gentile domination to cease over "the place of the Sanctuary"—there named. As to this time's precise "end," there is much said in the Holy Scripture. On this, the faith of God's people has been and still is deeply exercised. Next to the face of a note, the most important point is the "time appointed" for payment. And in all well directed transactions, human or divine, time and event go together.

Without time, there would be no event! Without events to measure it, there could be no time; and no one can "watch" the events of prophecy understandingly, except as they exercise some regard to their order of succession, and time, as it is revealed. Time is an essential element in prophecy, that cannot altogether be dissociated from the preached events; and as surely as we desire the event, so surely we must welcome "the time appointed" for it.

But the convictions of my mind are not matured sufficiently for further publication now. May "the Lord give us understanding in all things." Amen.

J. B. C.

FRETTING.—Do not fret! If you are poor, look to the miseries of many who are possessed with wealth, and thank God for your poverty. If you are sick, there is no necessity for fretting, for the morrow may bring you to health. Have you enemies? If so, don't fret or get in a passion, but strive to outlive their maliciousness and envy by noble deeds. Don't fret if you cannot wear such fine clothes and live in such a big house as your neighbor, but resolve that in whatever state God has placed you, with whatever circumstances he has encompassed you, to be content. 'Tis a short time we have to live, at the most—don't spend it in fretting. There's not much comfort to be taken in this world, unless we endeavor to take everything easy.

For the Crisis.

A Letter about Matters and Things.

[Bro. Grant:—The following letter was written in answer to one just received from a good Bro., and I send it to you for the Crisis, at the request of several persons who heard it read.]

Dear Bro. H——:—Tell anybody that finds fault with the price of any of my publications that they can have them for nothing, and I'll pre-pay the postage on them, as I do on hundreds every year. Tell them if they'll give away half they get and will take $20 worth at a time, and send the cash in advance, I will let them go at less than half the retail price. Or if they'll take my stereotype plates and pay me what they cost me, they may have them, and this on condition that they will keep on hand and for sale to the public as I do,—and allow me to print a few copies of such as I want to distribute where I preach and am acquainted.

Further: if they will give me two-thirds of the wholesale prices of all the books that I have sent out on commission all over the country, they may have my account books and collect all they can.

Further: if they can find any publisher under heaven who will publish religious books of an unpopular character in as good style and type, and embodying these truths at a cheaper rate than I do, and scatter as many of them as I do, I'll give them all the books that I have for sale and turn the matter into their hands.

As to selling my books as cheap as other "religious SOCIETIES sell theirs," you will bear in mind,

1. That I am not a religious society, but a man.

2. That no publisher in the country sells books of the same kind as cheap as religious societies do.

3. That hundreds of thousands of dollars are begged for and given to these great societies, so that they can print books cheap.

4. That many of their books are stereotyped by private individuals, so that the books only cost the society just the price of paper, printing and binding.

5. That they then charge more than twice the actual cost for most of their publications.

6. That they own types, presses, binderies, and so don't pay any profit to anybody else, but have it all within themselves.

7. That all the officers that attend to the publishing of these books have fat salaries, fine houses and nothing else to do, and are not forced to preach eight or ten times a week, wear ragged clothes, go without dinners, ride in second class cars, peddle, trade, and work for a living,—write, revise, stereotope and sell books; nor are their families forced to live on Indian meal and apples for weeks together, so as to keep out of debt, and pay printers' bills, nor be without such food at times as their health actually requires, nor to work themselves down sick every week for want of somebody to help them, or for want of means to hire assistance.

8. That when these societies send out books, they dont have to wait for their pay two years and then not get it.

9. That about one-half or two-thirds of all the moneys donated from all parts of the country frequently go to pay the expenses of these "religious societies," i. e., the salaries of the men that collect the cash and manage the concern.

10. That I dont own a type, a press, or an office; and have not a clerk nor an assistant, besides my wife, under the sun, and so have to do my work myself; and after publishing more than two hundred and fifty thousand books, pamphlets and tracts, preaching for ten years, traveling between six and seven thousand miles per year a part of the time; going hungry for the sake of saving money, practicing medicine, riding on the decks of steamboats and in "Jim Crow cars," while my wife has taught school, sewed, and worked herself almost to death to do good and get a living, I have to show for it all, a few books and tracts on hand, that I cannot sell as yet; a few stereotype plates that I cannot use till the books are sold; a few accounts that I cannot collect now, and perhaps never shall be able to; a few books in my library that I dont get time to study one day in a month; a little house, homely looking and poorly built, that I dont live in half the time; a poor garden, that I dont get time to hoe, with no fence on one side and a poor one on the other, the whole concern being rated [illegible] three hundred dollars, damaged lungs; a few debts; a reasonable quantity of reproach and slander from the world and false brethren, and about two suits of old clothes, every garment of them, I believe, either patched or ragged.

Now if "men say they dont believe the doctrine, and it looks to us as though the man that printed the books calculated to make a speculation of it," just tell them to read their Bibles and try and believe them; and as Yankees are pretty keen hands at "speculating," I'll give any of them one of the grandest chances they ever saw to "make money" SCARCE, if they will take hold of it with me or without me.

And if they'll serve God as I try to, I'll warrant they'll feel richer by far in the end, than they do when they stand and try to higgle away and beat a sixpence off from the price of a shilling book.

I remain your brother in Christ, boasting only in the Lord, and praying that he may have mercy upon his unprofitable servant. H. L. Hastings.

Rochester, N. Y.

P. S. I have baptized twenty-seven this week, given away some books, sold others, and had a good time generally; got my fare paid too. I wrote this to send to brother H——, but thinking others might be benefitted by reading it, I send it to the Crisis.

Pa., July 17, 1858.

For the Crisis.

Harvest Hands.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."—Mat. 9: 37, 38.

At this time, when the men of the world are calling for hands, and sending them into their harvest fields to labor, God is calling for and sending forth laborers into his harvest field. What a contrast! Now, when the fields of this world are yellow with ripening grain, the man of the world wants hands to labor for him; and he calls once, and a multitude surrounds him ready to go at his bidding, so anxious are they for employment whereby they can by the sweat of their brow earn bread for their families. The demand is thrice more than filled by the industrious, hard working men at the first call for "harvest hands."

God looks forth upon his fields and sees that "the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few," and calls for faithful laborers to go forth into his field. But look! why do not men flock around to get a chance to labor in his field? Why is it that so few heed his call and labor for him? He offers the best of wages, and pays when the grain is reaped. He holds out the richest promises of good gifts when the harvest is completed; but still only very few are willing to go into his field and do his work. Why is this contrast? The man of the world can summon so many around him when he calls, but "the Lord of the harvest" calls, and men do not care about the call. O, why is man so unwilling to work for God? Does he require more than we can perform? Surely he does not. Then why not obey? When he says, "thrust ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe," how few obey. Men begin to make all kinds of excuses. One says he has a family to support. Another, I have great possessions to see to. The third, I am engaged in merchandize and cannot go. The fourth says he is in debt, and must ply his needle until he gets free from debt; and so all will excuse themselves from laboring in God's harvest field. O it ought not to be so. God's demand ought to be supplied before ours.

The harvest of the earth is ripe. "O pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers." When you pray so and God answers your prayer and sends forth men that are willing to forsake friends, home and all, and go forth and do what they can, oh, do not try to discourage them by telling them it is not their duty to labor. I have heard men pray that God would raise up and send forth laborers into his field, and God heard their prayers and impressed upon the mind of some certain one of his children the duty of laboring in His field. He looks the matter square in the face and sees all the discouragements that he will meet with—sees the amount of labor to be done and how few laborers there are to do it, and he is almost discouraged before he undertakes it; but the grace of God sustains him, and he resolves that, by the help of the Lord, he will do what he can. He starts out and perhaps the very one that prayed that God would send forth laborers, will begin to discourage and drive him from the field. Tells him it is not ought not to think of leaving his family to go laboring in God's harvest field—that he is not the one for that place. Say, friend, you forgot that you was just praying that the Lord of the harvest would send forth laborers. "Well, he is not the man for such a work." Who knows best, you or "the Lord of the harvest?" Do you want to set yourself up as a Lord over God's heritage? Better be a little careful, for you are but a man yourself.

What would you think of a man that was reaping down a large field of grain, and there should another one come into the field and want to labor, and the former should drive him from the field because he could not cradle? Why you would say he was a tyrant; that if he needed help and the man wanted work, let him work. If he could not reap, perhaps he could bind or gather the gleanings, or pitch the bundles, or load the grain, or something else. Well, you act just like such a man. You want to drive that servant from the field because you know a little more than he happens to. Remember there was a time when you did not know any more than he does. Are you afraid he will "grow in grace and knowledge," and some will hear the word besides the few that you preach to? Are you afraid that if the laborers are increased you will not get as good a living as you do? Are you afraid some one besides you will convert a sinner from the error of his ways and save a soul from death? O, cast away at once such feelings and think of the "harvest of the Lord," and how few the laborers are. Think of the multitudes of perishing men in the world, and when you see one that is willing to "trust in the Lord and do good," try to stay up his hands; and instead of trying to discourage him, speak words of comfort and cheer to him. Remember he will have discouragements enough from the world without any from you. Remember a raw hand cannot go into a harvest field and begin to reap the first thing. We must learn one thing at a time, and in due time he can do any labor his employer would require. So it is in the Lord's field—he must learn the simplest work first and so gradually increase in knowledge and eventually will be able to labor equal to some that have been in the field a long time.

O! remember perishing men all over the land, and encourage every effort that is put forth to advance the labors of God's harvest field! The fields are now already whitening. Soon "the Lord of the harvest will send forth his angels to gather the wheat into the garner and bind the tares in bundles to be burned." "The harvest truly is plenteous but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest;" and when he does don't try to beat them from the field because they do not suit you. A. P. Moore.

For the Crisis.

Private Prayer.

Private prayer is a privilege of which a christian may at all times avail himself. Ill health, affliction in his or her family, unfavorable weather, the distance and a variety of other circumstances, may detain him or her from the public means of grace; but none of these can prevent his praying in secret; neither friends nor enemies have power to prevent our holding communion with our God in secret. No time is unseasonable for such a purpose—no place unfit for such devotions. There is no corner so dark, no place so secret, but God is there. He never wants an eye to see, an ear to hear the cries and groans, nor a heart to grant the requests of those who sincerely pray to him in secret. There are no desires so confused, no requests so broken, no effort so feeble, as to escape his notice. The eye that God hath upon his people in secret is such a special tender eye of love, as opens his ear, his heart and his hand for our good. "The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry."

Should our petitions be feeble and faint, and seem to us scarcely to reach the heavens, he will graciously bow down his ear, and attend to the prayer that goeth not out of feigned lips. He knows the intentions of the heart, he perceives the motions of the soul, he records them all in the book of his remembrance, and will in the great day of his coming openly reward all our secret transactions.

Did christians more fully believe this, and more seriously consider it, they would live more thankfully, labor more cheerfully, suffer more patiently, fight against the world, the flesh and the devil more manfully, and lay themselves out for God, his interests and glory more freely. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God." James 1: 5; Acts 10: 30, 31; Acts 11: 13, 14; Dan. 9: 20, 23; John 14: 26; 1 Tim. 4: 8; 1 Sam. 2: 30; Ps. 68: 12; Col. 3: 2.

And now may God enable us so to live as to have an abundant entrance ministered unto us into the everlasting kingdom, is [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 4, 1858.

River Point.

Our late visit to River Point, R. I., was one of deep interest and rich enjoyment. During the winter past, a flourishing church, of about sixty members, has been established by the labors of Brn. Geo. Champlin and E. Bellows. It is rarely that we meet with a more active, devoted and energetic church than this, or a community where the people are more anxious to hear the truth.

There are several villages within a few miles of this place where the harvest is ripe, and where much might be accomplished by faithful labors. Indeed, the truth is spreading rapidly in this section, in consequence of the persevering efforts of Brn. Champlin and Bellows and brethren associated with them. They show, by their efforts, that they consider the truth of the Lord of some value in these perilous times; and there is a corresponding interest on the part of the people. And we have ever found that when the church is active, then the unconverted will have an interested feeling; and vice versa. If we would have our friends and neighbors converted, we have something to do as well as wish. More action is needed, more prayer, exhortation, and holy living.

At five o'clock, we had a large gathering under the trees at Quidnick. The intelligent congregation gave excellent attention. At 7 1-2 o'clock we assembled for a prayer meeting and had a blessed season. Many could not get into the house. Some walked about seven miles to this prayer meeting, and returned again the same evening. It was a rich feast to the way-worn pilgrims.

"Sing on, pray on Ye followers of the Lamb."

Demoniacal Prophecy.

We hear much said at the present day about prophecy given by the spirits. Let us look into this matter, and see how far they are reliable, and to what extent they can foretell.

In the Spiritual Telegraph, of Feb. 27th, 1858, is an article from Judge J. W. Edmonds, a distinguished Spiritualist, which gives a true view of the subject. He says,

"It is true that Spirits can foretell future events. But to what extent? Not, certainly, to an unlimited extent, for that belongs alone to Omniscience. What, then, is the boundary? A very simple one, it seems to me, and the same which bounds our power to foretell even when in the form.

For instance: I prophesy that you will go to Detroit next week! I do so because I know it is your intention to do so, and I merely say you will execute your intention. Still it is in me a prophecy. So I prophesy that at a certain hour you will go from your office to your home. I know that you are in the habit of doing so to get your meals, and reasoning from cause to effect, I prophesy truly an event which actually happens.

Now, as I understand it, that is exactly what Spirits do when they prophesy, and no more. They tell us events which will be the result of their own action, or reasoning from cause to effect, they tell us the probable result. And as they have great power over events on earth—affecting them far more than we have been taught to believe—and as they frequently have a greater knowledge of causes than we have, so to that extent their power of prophecy is greater than ours.

But I do not believe that, in any case, they can foretell the hour of our death, save only one, and that is where we have some fatal disease about us which they discover, and from which they reason, as any doctor would from the same premises, that ere long it must terminate life. How often do our doctors thus prophesy by the sick bed!—and I have never yet found any reason for supposing that Spirits can do any more. So much they doubtless can do; when seeing the actual reality of an existing disease, they reason as to its termination, and they do more in this respect than mortals can, only when—as is often the case—they obtain a better knowledge of the disease existing within us."

We are glad to see this frank admission from one who has thoroughly examined the subject. The Lord gives all such prophets a challenge, and says, "Produce your cause . . . bring forth your strong reasons . . . and show us what shall happen. . . . Show the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods."

Atlantic Telegraph.—The Atlantic telegraph fleet is again on its way to make another trial at laying the cable between Europe and America. We shall soon hear of their success[illegible]

Popular Theology.

The popular view of future punishment is well set forth in the following poetic lines. We do not wonder there are so many infidels and Universalists; our wonder is, that there are not more. We cannot conceive of a being more cruel and revengeful than one who would keep men and women alive eternally for the sake of tormenting them, continually increasing their capacity for suffering and in the same ratio adding to their torment; but our heavenly Father is made just such a being by those who teach the doctrine of eternal misery.

MEASURE OF ETERNITY—OF WOE.

"Ah! must I live in torturing despair
As many years as atoms in the air?
When these are spent, as many thousands more
As grains of sand that crowd the ebbing shore?
When these are done, as many yet behind
As leaves of forests shaken with the wind?
When these are gone as many to ensue
As stems of grass on hills and dales that grew?
When these run out, as many on the march
As starry lamps that glide the spangled arch?
When these expire, as many millions more
As moments in the millions past before?
When all these doleful years are spent in pain
And multiplied by myriads again,
Till numbers drown the thought: could I suppose
That then my wretched years were at a close,
This would afford some ease; but ah! I shiver
To think upon the dreadful sound, forever!
The burning gulf, where I blaspheming lie,
Is Time no more, but vast Eternity."

"Hard Times."

We often hear it remarked—"What every body says must be true." If this is a true proposition, then certainly these are hard times. They are so politically, financially and morally. Those who flattered themselves that "the good time" was about to commence, when men would generally turn to the Lord and become honest, and thereby establish business upon a firm basis, begin to look blank upon the subject, and wonder why prosperity does not return and smile upon their efforts, as in former days. But the student of prophecy sees the word of the Lord fulfilling before his eyes, and with joyful heart exclaims, "We are almost home." We are often astonished at the blindness of many who even profess to be the followers of the Lord. Having adopted the spiritual or mystical interpretation of the Scriptures, their Bible becomes to them as a dark lantern, instead of "a light that shineth in a dark place." How richly valuable is the prophetic light at the present time. How indispensably necessary to the christian voyager. He who neglects it, perils his all. The mariner on the ocean, who throws away his compass, and runs his ship by guess work, may be considered wise when compared with the man who, in these days, neglects the light of prophecy. If the churches ever needed it, they do now. If it were not for the prophetic light, we could have no knowledge of our position relative to coming events, and the distance to the land of promise—the home of the christian pilgrim. It is to be feared that many who have the light, greatly undervalue its importance. Such are in danger of being found in the class who say, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out." He who has the light must let it shine, or he will soon find himself walking in darkness.

We would say to all christians, study the prophets, and you will there find the history of our world foretold and written in advance, without a single mistake. How comforting, in these days of fables, to have one book by which we can try all creeds and religious opinions. Thank the Lord for a standard of truth, a sure guide amid the perils of these last days. Let us be Bible men, not only in doctrine, but in our daily practice.

Although these are 'hard times," we may expect that the world will more fully understand the meaning of the phrase, "distress of nations with perplexity," than they do at present. When the Savior was giving the signs of his second coming, he mentions the foregoing as one of the last.

The following, from the Boston Journal, July 16th, 1858, expresses the true state of things at the present time.

NOTHING TO DO.

This is the complaint, here and elsewhere. Everybody says there is nothing going on—business never was so poor, &c. Last year at this time the story was quite different—enough to be done if one could only find the means; but money was scarce—the banks could not supply the demand—what they did furnish was made to yield at the rate of 9 per cent., and in the streets the rate was still dearer. So people were compelled to forego doing many tempting things because the means were not easily attainable, nor on moderate terms. Now that part of the story is all different—bank officers are very polite, rather grateful, in fact, for the offer of good paper, while "shaving" on a large scale, at high rates, is obsolete. There is some fallacy about this which had better be looked into and understood by those concerned.

Notice.

We would earnestly request those who are indebted to this office for Hymn Books, to remit us the amount due, as we, in all cases, have to pay cash for the same, and cannot afford to be out of the money. Probably some of our brethren have overlooked the fact that they are so long indebted for books. We would, therefore, in all love and earnestness, call their attention to the matter, as the funds of the paper are too contracted to afford lengthened credit.

Inquiry.

Does the word "spirit," in the verses, "God is a "spirit," and in Eccl. 12: 7, which says, "the spirit shall return unto God who gave it," mean the same? Or what are we to understand by "the SPIRIT returning unto God?" and "God is a SPIRIT?" J. W. R.

In answer to the above "inquiry," we would say, the word "spirit," in these two passages, does not mean the same thing, as is very evident from the first view of the subject. If their meaning were the same, then it would be correct to read Eccl. 12: 7, God shall return unto God who gave God. A being may return unto a place but not unto himself.

The word "spirit," in the sentence, "God is a spirit," is from pneuma, and is used in four different relations:

1. A being. See Heb. 1: 7, 14.
2. An influence from a being.—John 15: 26.
3. A state of mind.—Eph. 4: 23.
4. The breath of life.—Jas. 2: 26.

The same is true of ruakh, the word rendered spirit in Eccl. 12: 7. In this last case, it is the "breath of life," which returns from man to its Creator; and this breath of life, according to the Bible, is common to all living beings upon the earth.

Table Turning.

The following extract shows that table tipping was performed by demons long before the Fox girls had an existence. The old heathen oracles were conducted in a manner similar to the modern demoniacal operations. The devil has ever been trying to make men believe that he spoke the truth to our first parents, when he said, "Ye shall not surely die."

TABLE-TURNING IN THE OLDEN TIME.

While Valens (the Roman Emperor) was at Antioch in his third consulship, in the year 370, several Pagans of distinction, with the philosophers who were in so great reputation under Julian, not being able to bear that the empire should continue in the hands of the Christians, consulted privately the demons, by means of conjurations, in order to know the destiny of the Emperor, and who should be his successor, persuading themselves that the oracles would name a person who should restore the worship of the gods. For this purpose they made a three-footed stool of laurel, in imitation of the tripod at Delphos, upon which having laid a basin of divers metals, they placed the twenty-four letters of the alphabet round it; then one of these philosophers, who was a magician, being wrapped up in a large mantle, and his head covered, holding in one hand vervain, and in the other a ring, which hung at the end of a small thread, pronounced some execrable conjurations in order to invoke the devils; at which the three-footed stool turning round and the ring moving of itself, and turning from one side to the other over the letters, it caused them to fall upon the table and place themselves near each other, while the persons who were present set down the like letters in their table books, till their answer was delivered in heroic verse, which foretold them their criminal inquiry would cost them their lives, and that the Furies were waiting for the Emperor (he was subsequently burnt alive by the Goths) at Mimas, where he was to die a horrid kind of death; after which the enchanted ring turning about again over the letters, in order to express the name of him who should succeed the Emperor, formed first of all these three characters, T H E O; then having added a D to form THEOD, the ring stopped, and was not seen to move any more; at which one of the assistants cried out in a transport of joy, "We must not doubt any longer of it; Theodorus is the person whom the gods appoint for our Emperor." (Theodorus was a patron of idolatry; it was not he, however, but Theodosius who ascended the throne after the dreadful end of Valens.) . . . The conspiracy was discovered by one of the accomplices, and Valens ordered them all to be put to death. And that cursed race of false sages, who, under the color of philosophy, exercised the detestable art of infernal magic, particularly from the time of Julian, was almost entirely destroyed, with their magic books, which were strictly inquired after, and publicly burnt in large parcels. Valens, indeed, was in the right to punish so horrid a crime, by means of which, in violation of both divine and human laws, men attempted to penetrate into the secrets of futurity, and, what is still more criminal, to inquire into the destiny of princes by such abominable practices.
—Notes and Queries.

For the Crisis.

Morning Prayer Meeting.

Bro. Grant:—It may be of some interest to the readers of the Crisis to know something of the morning meeting at the Old South Chapel. It was commenced in the fall of 1850, and has been continued every morning since, excepting on Sunday and Thanksgiving days. It is a union meeting of laymen, of different denominations. Monday morning is devoted to revival intelligence, and it is interesting to listen to reports from different parts of the country, and especially since the great awakening of last winter.

A few weeks since the subject of Spiritualism was introduced by the reading of a letter from a young lady who had been deceived by these last day spirits, but has seen the error of her ways and become a christian. Most of the time was occupied upon this subject, and it was called by its Scriptural name—spirits of devils. I am glad that so many who do not see with us the sign of the Lord's coming, in these manifestations are so far enlightened as to detect these evil spirits and expose them. I think the time is not far distant when this iniquity will be so manifest that every one will have to take sides either for or against it. I think the public need a Scriptural exposition of this heresy.

This morning an interesting account was related of a town in Maine where there had been occasional preaching, but no church organization. At the time of the religious interest, it reached that place, and the Methodists were about forming a church, when a few Universalists in the place were aroused, and concluded that they must also have a church. The one who was foremost in the movement had been a swearer and dishonest. He began to reason on this wise: "If I become a member of a church I must leave off swearing, and become an honest man;" and looking into his heart he saw that there was nothing there but corruption. This self-condemnation was the means of his conviction and conversion. A revival followed. Truly the Lord is a wonder working God.

An interesting account was related of a Mahometan family, now in Boston, who are not satisfied with the Koran, and are seeking the true way of life. Reports were also received from New Bedford, New York, Philadelphia, Richmond, Va., and other places, all of which were encouraging.

Yours, &c.,
D. N. Smith.

Boston, July 26th.

Summary of News.

Foreign News.

By the arrival of the Europa, we have news from Liverpool to July 17th.

The Atlantic telegraph fleet would leave Queenstown, as before stated, on the 17th inst., and should by this time have reached the ocean rendezvous.

It was expected Parliament would be prorogued on the 31st of July.

The political news of the Europa conveys no feature of special importance.

FRANCE.

It is officially announced that Queen Victoria will visit Napoleon at Cherbourg on the 4th of August. It is generally received as a confirmation of the continued alliance of England and France, and a guaranty of the peace of Europe.

It is said that orders have been sent to the commander of the French Naval Division in China to dispatch two ships-of-war at once to the Red Sea.

RUSSIA.

St. Petersburg letters say the military character of the administrative system for Poland is about to be superseded by a new system, in which the civil element will predominate.

TURKEY.

Private dispatches intimate that the Turks had attacked the Montenegrins, and that after three conflicts the latter had retreated to the mountains. The story lacks confirmation.

ARABIA, &c.

The Turkish Envoy in Paris has received a telegraphic dispatch from his government, promising all satisfaction in its power for the massacre at Jeddah, and that the Arabs shall be severely punished. It is affirmed that Jeddah will be occupied by a French and English force.

When the news of the massacre reached Mecca, the Mussulmen held a rejoicing.

Further outrages in Turkey against the Christians are reported.

From Athens it is stated that a terrible reaction by Mussulmen against Christians had taken place in Candia. The European Consulates and the Catholic Church had been attacked, and Christians were quitting the city.

There had been considerable agitation at Suez against Europeans, and troops were being sent to prevent any hostile movement.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says, advices from Constantinople announce that the Porte has sent 2000 troops to Jeddah, to inflict exemplary punishment upon the murderers of the Christians.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, June 30. The steamship Hammonia arrived this afternoon, with Southampton dates of the 18th, and London papers of the 17th.

Preparations were making for the grand fete througout France on Napoleon's birthday,

A Paris correspondent of the Augsburg Gazette states that diplomatic relations would probably have been renewed between England and Naples had it not been for the French government.

A misunderstanding is reported between Austria and the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

On the 8th, hostilities recommenced between the Mussulmen and Ragalis in Bosnia, and no less than 3000 or 4000 Christians crossed the frontier into Austrian Croatia. More violent conflicts are rumored.

At Warsaw it is publicly related that there will soon be a general rising in European Turkey, and the presence of so large a Russian force in Poland is said to be to counteract the influence of Austria.

It is stated that an expedition of 10,000 men is preparing in Spain for the purpose of proceeding to Mexico to enforce satisfaction for unredressed grievances against the Mexican government.

AUSTRIA.

The Cologne Gazette spreads the rumor that the concentration of Russian troops in Poland is to threaten Austria into fulfilling the treaty of 1846 relative to the incorporation of Cracow into the Austrian monarchy. It is positively denied that Austria has bound herself by treaty to give assistance to Turkey in case of need.

ARABIA.

On the 15th of June the Mohammedans in Jeddah rose and massacred the Christians. Among the victims were the English and French Consuls, the wife of the latter, and over twenty others. The consulates were plundered. The British steamer Cyclops rescued 26 Christians and took them to Suez. No Christians remained in the place. Two boats from the Cyclops had to fire on those who attempted to intercept their retreat from the town.

CHINA.

Hong Kong dates are of May 22. The allied fleet was at anchor off the mouth of Peiho on the 29th of April. Six days had been allowed for the reply to the demands of the Plenipotentiaries, and the time having expired, a steamer had taken up two gun boats and 150 sappers to the Pehio.

A French transport, with 900 marine infantry, had arrived.

The French had got two gun boats over the bar of Peihehe, but two English dispatch boats had stuck fast.

The English and French Admirals were both at Peehelc, and it was expected that in a few days the first blow in the north might be struck by the capture of the forts at the mouth of the river.

STILL LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, Aug. 1.—The steamship Vanderbilt arrived at this port this morning at 5 o'clock, bringing Liverpool dates of the morning of the 21st, and London of evening of the same day. She brings nearly 300 passengers, and reports favorable weather for laying the Atlantic cable.

The Niagara passed Cape Clear on the morning of the 18th, and the Agamemnon was off Kinsale the same forenoon.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The attempt to raise funds for the completion of the steamship Great Eastern had failed, and it is now proposed to raise a new company to purchase her.

The Times Paris correspondent says Queen Victoria will arrive at Cherbourg on the eve of the 4th of August. The Emperor and Empress will make their entrance into the town on the afternoon of the same day. Their Imperial Majesties will remain at Cherbourg on the 5th, 6th and 7th, and on Sunday, 8th, will embark on board the Bretagne, screw line-of-battle ship, to proceed to Brest.

The first interview between the sovereigns of France and England will take place on the 5th. Their Majesties will pass the 6th in the roadstead. On the 7th, the inauguration, benediction and immersion of the dock Napoleon III. will take place, and in the afternoon the "Ville de Nantes" screw liner, which has been built on one of the slips of the Weir dock, will be launched. In the evening there will be a grand ball offered by the town. A grand dinner will be given by the Emperor to the persons attached to his suite. It will take place under a tent fitted upon the deck of the Bretagne.

All Plenipotentiaries forming a part of the Conference at Paris, have received invitations for the fetes at Cherbourg.

The Sultan is seriously ill.

Domestic News.

By the arrival of the steamer Moses Taylor, we have news from California to July 5th.

The Frazer river excitement was unabated. The reports from the new gold fields are getting to be quite fabulous. One letter-writer, vouched for in the San Francisco papers as reliable, says his first day's yield at the mines was $700. Victoria was crowded with Americans, who had run up building lots to enormous prices, some as high as $20,000.

The Hudson's Bay Company was buying dust at $15 per ounce.

The Indians had begun to molest the emigrants on their way to the mines. A party of ten encamped near Sehone were attacked, and six killed. Twenty-two canoes, filled with Indian warriors, were passed going into Victoria, by the steamer Sea Bird, and two hundred more were on the way, and daily expected at that port. It was feared that the mining regions would be overrun with these warriors, and that indiscriminate massacre would follow.

Fourteen steam and sailing vessels left San Francisco during the fortnight, for Frazer's River.

OREGON.

Advices from Oregon state that the Indians of the Upper Columbia are collecting in large numbers; the object unknown.

Advices from both Oregon and Washington territories mention a general gathering of Indians in that region, with evident hostile intentions.

The Commander of the Pacific Army is hurrying thither all the troops at his command, but their number and equipments are wretchedly inadequate.

Money and Business.—The New York Evening Post says of the money market, that the applications at bank are now lighter than they ever have been known in the experience of our oldest bankers. A number who in ordinary times are accustomed to offerings representing between three and four hundred thousand dollars, are not surprised to find them reduced to about twenty or thirty thousand, and this limited to perhaps four or five

Married.

At Bakerville, (Pleasant Hollow,) June 28th, by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, Mr. George A. Tatro, of Collinsville, to Miss Martha A. Dailey, of Farmington.

Obituary.

My beloved son, Luman B. Dudley, sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, June 23d, aged 15 years, 3 months.

His sickness was of short duration, (continuing only one week,) but very distressing in its nature, being inflammation of the stomach and bowels, together with a bilious difficulty. He retained his reason until the last two days, and then at intervals was rational. He spoke of dying with calmness and composure. When I asked him if he was not afraid to lie down in the cold grave, he replied: "No, mother, Jesus has lain there." He said he loved the Savior better than any other being, for he had done more for him; he had died to save him. To four of his schoolmates who visited him, while they were weeping at his bedside, he was perfectly calm and composed, he said: "Boys, I cannot talk much with you, I am going to die; meet me in heaven." I then asked him if he was willing to die, when he replied: "If it is God's will, I should like to live; but if not, I am willing to die." Seeing a smile upon his countenance at one time, while I knew he was suffering severely from pain, I said: "What were you thinking about, Luman?" He replied: "I was thinking about going home to my heavenly home, that city of love." At another time he said: "Mother, I am not ashamed to pray. If I live, I will live a christian."

But he is gone. We listen in vain for the sound of his well-remembered voice; he is not found in his accustomed seat at the table, and all the places he once filled are now vacant. Yet he sleeps in Jesus, and we have the blessed assurance that those which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Blessed consolation! I trust this great and sudden bereavement may prove a lasting blessing to me and mine, for which I humbly beg the prayers of God's children.

Susan M. Dudley.

NOTICES.

Fare Reduced.

The fare on the Western R. R. to the Wilbraham campmeeting, is reduced to half price, which is $2 50 from Boston, for both ways. We hope to make similar arrangements with other roads, which will be noticed in due time.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, Aug. 23d, and continue one week. Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 50 cts. per day; or one shilling per meal for breakfast and supper, and 25 cents for dinner. The fare is reduced to half price on the Western R. R., which will be $2.50 from Boston, for both ways. We hope to make similar arrangements with other roads, which will be noticed in the Crisis.

This meeting is pleasantly located in a neighborhood noted for sustaining good order, and for acts of kindness towards those who assemble there from year to year to worship the God of our fathers. We anticipate a large gathering of the Lord's dear children, and that much good will be accomplished. Those who were present last year will remember that the great object of the meeting was for the salvation of sinners, and that the effort was greatly blessed. We hope that our Brn. and Srs. will come again this year, strong in the Lord, and bring their unconverted children and neighbors for the purpose of persuading them to be christians.

All who believe in Christ as our Savior, and are willing to labor for the salvation of sinners, are invited to take part in the meetings. We would earnestly request all to make this meeting a subject of special prayer, that many wanderers may be reclaimed, the saints greatly strengthened, and the name of the Lord magnified among the people.

R. E. Ladd, Hiram Munger, Geo. T. Adams, } Committee of Arrangements.

Notice is hereby given to all our friends who wish to avail themselves of the privilege of being at the shore, and enjoying a salt water bath in the beautiful Narraganset Bay; that our Brn. Spencer and Bowen, who keep a respectable stand at the Old Button Woods in Warwick, will make special preparations for the accommodation of all that wish to come, on Thursday, Aug. 12th. If stormy, the next day. A carriage will run from the Appanug Depot to the ground. Religious services will be held on the ground. Price of dinner 37 cts.

E. Bellows.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Grove Meeting at Southington, Conn., on Sunday, Aug. 15th. The above named meeting will be holden in a grove about half a mile directly west of the Congregationalist Church. We hope to see a general gathering of those that love the truth.

For the Brethren,
R. W. Neale.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co., Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets.

WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.

Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at Pine Creek, Indiana, to commence on the 13th day of August, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over the Lord's day. The above named meeting will be holden on the farm of Wm. P. Martin, 3 miles north of Goshen, 6 miles south of Bristol, 8 miles south-east of Elkhart.

Brethren coming on the Air Line R. R., will stop at Goshen. Those coming from the east on the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan R. R., will stop at Bristol. Those coming from the west, on R. R., will stop at Elkhart. Brethren leaving the cars at either of the above named stations, on Thursday, will find free conveyance to the meeting.

We hope to see a general gathering of ministers and lay brethren.

By order of the Church,
D. R. Mansfield.
Elijah Beck.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,
Elbridge Chisam.
John A. Kennedy.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

Campmeeting.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept 6, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, on land of Bro. Johnson. Arrangements have been made for the cars to stop at the ground. Particulars hereafter.

S. G. Mathewson,
For the Brethren.

☞ A Request.—Bro. Zenas Campbell is requested to be at Woodstock, Ct., on or before the 10th day of August next, and preach the word. Bro. C., fail not to be here!

R. V. Lyon.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.
N. F. Nason.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. Damman.

☞ All communications for Dr. L. Kimball, should be directed hereafter to Nashua,

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, Eld. Edwin Burnham will preach in Boston the 2nd Lord's day in August.

I will preach in Goshen, Mass., Wednesday evening, August 18th, and every evening through the week; and over the following Sunday.

S. W. Bishop.

If Providence permit, I will hold meetings as follows:—

Arnold's Bridge, R. I., Tuesday eve'g, Aug. 17th.
River Point, where Bro. Taylor may appoint, 18th.
New Britain, Ct., Thursday evening, 19th.
Bristol, Ct., Friday evening, 20th.

From Saturday until Monday, Plymouth Hollow and vicinity, where Bro. Humphreyville will appoint.

George Baxter.

[I learn this young brother is worthy, and out of health. Will the brethren help him from place to place.]

Hiram Munger.

Miles Grant appoints to preach at the Town Hall in Rutland, Vt., Aug. 8th.

S. W. Bishop appoints to preach as follows:—

Portsmouth, N. H., - - -	Aug. 3d.
Exeter, N. H., - - - -	" 4th.
Lowell, Mass., - - - -	" 5th.
Groton Junction, - - -	" 6th.
Worcester, Mass., - - -	" 8th.
Brimfield, (if the brethren will meet me at Warren, middle train,	" 12th.
Palmer, (where Bro. A. M. Higgins may appoint,) - -	" 13th.
Springfield, (where Eld. R. E. Ladd may appoint,) - - -	" 15th.

S. W. Bishop.

P. S. I shall look for letters at all of the above-named places. Consequently, if any of the above appointments interfere with previous arrangements, please let me know at the earliest convenient opportunity.

S. W. B.

I will hold meetings as follows:—

New Britain, Ct., Wednesday eve'g,	Aug 4th.
Bristol, Ct., - - - -	" 5th.
Plymouth Hollow, - - - -	" 6th.
Newfield, Sunday, - - - -	" 8th.

Will meet Bro. Mathewson Monday, Aug. 9th, at Collinsville, Ct.

Hiram Munger.

Business.

To Correspondents.

M. Greenough—Money received.

Jas. Baker—All right.

Wm. Jackson—Money received.

Sr. Nancy J. Pribble—We have received your remittance from Windsor, but you have not named the State. You will please let us know, as we cannot see your name upon our books.

James Essex, Quidnick,—Not received.

Cash Receipts.

☞ Our Canada subscribers, and all in the Provinces, will remember that we have to pre pay the postage on their papers, amounting to 26 cents a year; hence they should send $2.26 for a year's subscription.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

I Rice 165, $3.00; W C Keve 178, 94 cts.

B Estes 172, R B Blackstone 178, A Coombs 180, Wm. Mix 190, G Wheeler 156, J E Ainsworth 173, J Spear 171, L Hamock 175, J Curtis 156, H Barnard 262, H Porter 144, O D Eastman 182, H J Howe 178, T Waters 156, R Boston 182, M V Cady 177, Nancy J Pribble, I J Stedman 177,—$1 each.

J M Muhlig 166, L A Follansbee 185, M Burlen 156, B L Clark 205,—$2 each.

For Books and Tracts.—M Batchelor $12.00; E D Searle 33 cts; Corea Patnoe $2.00; J Pinkham $4.00; W C Keve 9 cts.

☞ Wanted, 10,000 orders for "The Great Controversy between God and Man," by H. L. Hastings. Price, post paid, 60 cts., neatly bound in cloth gilt. Send in your orders with the cash. Address H. L Hastings, Rochester, N. Y. For sale at this office. Also by Smith, English & Co., No. 40 North 6th St., Philadelphia. G. W. Young, 109 Nassau St., New York. N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois. Moses Cumings, Irvington, N. J. R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass.

Subscribers to the Camp Ground fund are requested to forward their subscription to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., at as early a date as possible. Arrangements are now being made to make the contemplated improvements, and it is desirable to have the means at hand to meet all bills as they are made. All our brethren and sisters are invited to contribute to the fund, whether they are subscribers or not.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price [illegible]. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. [illegible]

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—[illegible]

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 80 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger. including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.–The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. [illegible] Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free, by sending stamps to pay the postage, and those that [illegible] poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in [illegible] which can be separated for distribution. The [illegible] contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the [illegible] Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church [illegible] [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves are [illegible] Little Children [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

BEAUTY OF LIGHT.

Beautiful with light,
All nature is glowing;
Above and below
Its blessings bestowing.

Beautiful is light
From the clear rising sun;
How dazzling its rays
Come down at mid-noon.

Beautiful is light,
When the day is done;
Gentle its beams
From the milder moon.

Beautiful the light
Of a twinkling star,
Gleaming to us
At the midnight hour.

Beautiful is light,
With its changing hues,
O'er the rippling stream,
Through the forest boughs.

Beautiful the beams
Of a fireside light,
In a home, sweet home,
Where friends all unite.

Beautiful is light
To the poor man's cot;
It brightens the scenes
Of his humble lot.

Beautiful is light
To the believing one;
Gems of bright beauty
In his heart have a home.

JULIA A. LIBBY.

Biddeford, Me.

For the Crisis.

SHE SLEEPS.

Suggested by the death of Mrs. P. B. Curtis, who died July 11th, 1858, at Cold Spring, Mass.

She sleeps! the voyage of life is o'er,
Outrode each stormy billow;
The fevered brow will throb no more
Upon death's quiet pillow.

She sleeps! the eye has done with tears,
The aching heart with sorrow;
The trembling bosom hides no fears,
No care for the to-morrow.

She sleeps! no sound of earth's turmoil,
No startling dreams shall waken;
Blest sleeper! 'mid life's fruitless toil
By slumbers soft o'ertaken.

She sleeps! hark! o'er the blessed dead
The word of promise spoken—
O death, the mighty One hath said
Thy fetters shall be broken!

She sleeps! oh, lay her gently down
To long and peaceful slumber,
Till God shall all his ransomed crown,
And all his jewels number.

MARIA.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Stand Fast.

"Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."—GAL. 5: 1.

The state of the sinner has ever been considered and properly spoken of in the Bible as that of the most abject slavery, although the wallowing victim may not always be conscious of the degrading yoke under which his neck is bowed. To the natural man sin is presented in as many forms and bright colors as the ever varying hues in the Kaleidoscope; and the arch vender of abominations has temptations of every size, color and intensity, to suit the temperament of every son of Adam, and arranged in three classifications—the world, the flesh and the devil.

Although men take a sip from many of the cups of pleasure and iniquity which are in the world, there is generally one which constitutes his favorite beverage, his "constant drink," at which he swills until the man is submerged in the demon and the brute. This "besetting sin" is of all others the most difficult to eschew, because it is nearest akin to our natural inclination or vitiated tastes; and when, by the grace of God, the sinner is plucked from its destroying influence, it requires the greatest caution and watchfulness lest he be drawn again into the fell gyrations of that moral whirlpool from which he has escaped. When Satan first presents temptation to the young, every hideous impress of his dirty fingers is gilded, or covered over with the brightest and attractive tints; but, like the fabled fruit upon the dreary shores of the dead Asphaltis, all glowing and beautiful in the hand, they turn to bitter ashes in the mouth, and to [illegible] poison in the stomach.

[illegible] the hand which is mighty to [illegible] who are willing to be [illegible]

when he has eaten the bread and drunk the waters of life instead of husks and swinish puddle, what ingratitude is it to turn his back upon his benefactor and friend, wound the hand which would have cherished him, join the mortal enemy of heaven's King; once more plunge madly into the reeking vortex of excess, like the dog to his vomit and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

Paul in thus writing to the Galatians, referred to two kinds of bondage from which they had been emancipated. First, the observation of the days and months and years of the Mosaic dispensation; for, while they rejected the yoke of Christ which was easy, they were observing the painful ritual of the old law. Second, they had just been set free from the bondage of sin and death, and now breathed the pure air of Gospel liberty and salvation. He sets in vivid contrast the works of the flesh and the fruit of the Spirit; and after summing each up, of the former he says, "They which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God;" of the latter, "Against such there is no law." "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

The soul which has once tasted and seen that the Lord is good, can never be happy unless the love of God abideth in him. I know from sad, sad experience, that the state of the backslider is one of dreadful peril, suffering and agony of soul. The fearful thought that he is under the wrath of God, and if the sword of divine justice falls upon him he is lost; the remembrance of "the peaceful hours he once enjoyed" in the society of God's people; and the "aching void" which all the pleasure and riches this world can afford would never fill up, makes his state one of the most deplorable which can be imagined, nor can he rest day or night till he is reconciled to his Maker.

The progress of the christian is one continued struggle. If he ceases to strive he immediately slides, and the second slide is longer and more rapid than the first, and so on, increasing in velocity till he shoots into destruction, if his cries for salvation do not arrest his swift career.

At no time in the annals of Christianity has there been more need for every true friend of Christ taking a position than at the present, and every one who bears His colors should draw the sword, and throw away the scabbard, resolved never to wax weary or relax in vigilance till the Lord shall come himself, terminate the war, and put every enemy under his feet. Every one on board can do something. While some work the ship let others stand by the guns; and those that are too weak for either, let them become "powder monkeys" and hand up cartridges; but let us all do something, for the enemy is bearing down upon us under a press of canvas, manned with Mormons, Free-lovers, Spiritualists, and all kinds of infidels.

Stand fast, then. You may hear the report and see the effect of a random shot once in a while, and soon the battle will begin in earnest. Remember when the hand-to-hand combat begins, when God or Satan must forever triumph, obey strictly and to the letter the commands laid down in Emmanuel's code, the Bible. Then shall there be no confusion in the face of the enemy.

"Then welcome the infidel bands to the shock,
Let them dash their proud foam like the waves on a rock."

Although the "God of battle" could crush his enemies at a blow, yet for his own glory and the good of his people, he makes use of the weak to confound the mighty, even as, by the handful in Gideon's little army, he put legions to flight, that the wicked may know that there is a God in Israel!

May He make you and me, and all of us, more humble and faithful, that when He comes we may be found watching.

JNO. F. COTTON.

IMAGINATION.—Thomas Fuller relates a curious incident, which is truly characteristic, and shows how fancy will put life into young limbs. "A gentleman," he says, "having led a company of children beyond their usual journey, they began to be weary, and jointly cried to be carried; which, because of their multitude, he could not do, but he told them he would provide them horses to ride on. Then cutting little wands out of the hedges as nags for them, and a large one for himself, they mounted, and those who could scarce stand before, now full of mirth, bounded cheerfully home."

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

From Danville, C. E.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—Some time has passed since I have spoken to you through the Crisis. How are you? still faithful? God grant it. I have some good news to communicate to those who have been and are thinking that the time of real whole-hearted conversions is past. God has been working by his Spirit among us. When hearing of the "conversions" among the New Englanders last winter, I could but pray that the work might go on—that the church which I was separated from might be revived, and that some might be added thereto. Thank God, my prayers are answered, and the reward is more than expected. Watchmen, toil on, your work is not finished.

The church in Danville has been favored with a visit from Eld. O. R. Fasset, of Boston. Although an able warrior, we are sorry to say that these meetings were not so well attended as formerly. Still no doubt we had the wheat; therefore will not complain. The church was blest while listening to five plain, gospel sermons. I was pleased at the kind, mild, simple method of speaking which characterized his whole course. O that others would imitate! Plainness and mildness are kindred friends.

On Sabbath eve two hopefully converted souls were planted in the likeness of Christ's death. One is the son of a Methodist clergyman, and has been a professed infidel. The cause is undoubtedly owing to the manner in which the gospel has been mangled, and I only wonder that there are not more infidels.

On Wednesday eve listened to a very instructive discourse, directed to preachers and others. At the close, Bro. G. Bangs, of Danville, was ordained. We trust that he will do good, and so be presented with a star-gemmed crown. It was a most solemn scene.

On Thursday, five more walked down the liquid wave, and entered the mystical grave. One was an aged man, whose brow is frosted by the storms of 83 winters. Falteringly, but fearlessly he entered the stream, following in the steps of Jesus. O that he had chosen this path before! Is it not sad and yet joyful to see an old person putting on Christ? We trust he thinks so. But there is another instance, the like of which Danville never witnessed. A poor, blind sister came forward as a candidate for baptism! Is it not well that God can hold communion with those who are afflicted? Poor sister cannot see the beautiful sun and stars,—all this somewhat lovely earth is a blank to her. But, praise God, though all without is darkness, we trust that all within is light.

On Friday I left them. The next Sabbath I sat down to partake of the Lord's blessed bread. There was not a crowded table. No; and now what would you all think to sit down with a church numbering only—two? Think of us, as you meet in crowds. Pray for us. The cause is very low here. People shun us. All eyes are upon us, and this is where lights should shine.

Now, dear pilgrims, be encouraged, and start anew for the Kingdom. It is nigh. Would you lose it now? Fight manfully. Be bold. Warn that sinner. Save that soul. Christian, would you have a starless crown,—just get a crown without additional honorable beauty? O strive for a superior crown,—to be "greatest in the kingdom." People often ask me if Eld. E. Burnham is alive. They want to hear from him through the Crisis. Will he let his pen be silent much longer? Now is the time for work. Brother, your pen is needed as well as your verbal language. Let us hear from you.

Your Sr. in tribulation,
M. MATHEWS.

New Glasgow, C. E.

TEMPTATION.—Temptation will give oil and fuel to our lusts—incite, provoke, and make them tumultuate and rage beyond measure. Tendering to a lust a suitable object, advantage, occasion, it heightens and exasperates it, makes it for a season wholly predominant; so dealt it with carnal fear in Peter, with pride in Hezekiah, with covetousness in Achan, with uncleanliness in David, with worldliness in Demas, with ambition in Diotrephes. It will lay the reins on the neck of a lust, and put spurs to the sides of it, that it may rush forward like a horse into the battle. —Owen.

A religion that never suffices to govern a man, will never suffice to save him; that which does not sufficiently distinguish one from a wicked world, will never distinguish [illegible]

Choice Selections.

The Saints' Home.

The scriptures all agree in representing the church as strangers and pilgrims here and journeying to her long-lost home; but religionists differ essentially in regard to what and where that home is.

Some tell us that home is in a world just along-side of this, the other side of the vail, which vail is passed by the gate of death. Such teach that within "this shell,—this mortal coil,—this lump of clay,—this shackle of mortality!" exists an immortal part—the better part of man—the man proper—the soul which escapes at death, and beyond is made partaker of immortal joys in their own happy home. Such sing,

Death is the gate to endless joy,
But still we dread to enter there.

With this view, the journey of the church is only from the cradle to the grave—beyond, the saints are crowned with everlasting life at home.

The word of God affords no evidence of a world along side of this; no evidence of such a soul—the man proper—to escape at death; no evidence that death is the gate to endless joy; no such an home prepared for the saints, nor that the crowns of life are given to the church at, or just beyond death, but is diametrically and positively opposed to every item of this theory of the saints' home.

Others teach us, that the saints' home is entered by the gate of death, and holding the above items in regard to the soul, teach that the man proper escapes at death and soars away to its native heaven, somewhere, anywhere, everywhere and yet nowhere, for such sing that the saints' home is which is as near nowhere as one can well imagine. The Bible furnishes no evidence of such a home as this, or warrant for the items of theory which result in such a climax.

Beyond the bounds of time and space,

Yet others tell us that the saints' home is in the spheres. Such hold the popular theory of the immortal soul in common with modern popular religionists. They teach that death is the gate to endless joy—that it is a gracious boon to die, for the soul at death enters the spheres from one to seven upwards, according to its purity and perfection in harmonial philosophy, where departed spirits progress forever and ever.

This theory of spirits and view of the saints' home, has not a single stepping stone in the scriptures of truth, but is directly condemned, and is marked as a whole as one of the special signs of the last days.

Other theories, differing from the above in certain features, but equally unsupported by the Bible, are being advocated at the present time; the people have come to have "itching ears—they heap to themselves teachers" who will present these subjects as they desire the result shall be; thus the multitude have their ears turned away from the truth and are turned unto these fables. As saith the prophet, (Jer. 5: 32,) "The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof?"

All these theories of the christians' home are as false and vain as is the theory of the Mohammedan heaven, or like views which are held with equal sacredness by the heathen tribes. The christian church is to find a home at last—that home—its direction and locality are revealed in the record of redemption's plan. Relying upon the Bible, untarnished by the polluting touch of tradition and fabled theories, we readily learn the location, character and duration of the saints' home. More than this, we learn from the word of God the state in which man was created to live—the cause of his unhappy fall and the present state of things, together with the final result of mercy's stupendous plan to redeem.

In the light of the sacred oracles, we clearly perceive that the church are on a journey from paradise lost to paradise restored. When man was driven from the garden, the gate was shut and guarded, (not to be opened at the first Advent, but) to be re-opened at the finale of the entire plan, beyond the probation of men—beyond the Judgment scene. If the true church be interrogated, or as the mariners say, spoken on her journey or voyage, and asked in the familiar phrase of seamen—where do you hail from? she answers with readiness, from paradise lost. And where bound? To paradise restored. And where are you? By counting her log, the foretold events which have been fulfilled, marking how many of the whole amount remain to be fulfilled, she is enabled to give her whereabouts definitely and demonstrate her approach to her destined haven—her final home.

Although, by the introduction of sin, man was driven from Eden's peaceful bowers, and earth, which by its Creator had been pronounced very good, became a groaning creation,—the scriptures teach us that redemption's plan complete shall bring a new creation, not of new things, but saith the Lord, BEHOLD I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW. The new creation—the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, will be paradise restored—will be the saints eternal, unchanging, happy home. The earth—the whole earth renewed and adorned in her primeval glory, is the homestead inheritance of the saints, and is the kingdom of God under the whole heavens, to be given to them after all the tares are burned up, which kingdom they [illegible]

No other home is pointed to in the word of God—no other inheritance promised—no other kingdom to come, for the Savior instructed his disciples to pray, saying, Our Father who art in heaven . . . THY KINGDOM COME, THY WILL BE DONE in earth (not in Judea) as it is done in heaven.*

But such as have been taught to feed on the imaginations of men, at once reject this only promised inheritance, as not sufficiently refined—as being too gross—too literal—too substantial, and prefer the sublimated gaseous theory of a visionary heaven beyond the bounds of time and space, of which the word of God says just nothing.

The heaven—the home—the kingdom—the inheritance, which the plan of redemption holds out before the weary, way-worn pilgrim church, we repeat, is the whole earth made new, under a new heaven; the kingdom under the whole heavens is the only one given to the saints—the same which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world; therefore, such as despise this only promised home of the church, will necessarily find themselves homeless when the voyage is over; such as contend for some other inheritance, will find at the end that they have fought as those that beat the air.

This home not sufficiently refined? too gross? Let us gaze at it a moment through the gospel telescope; we think, beloved brethren, that such a home will be perfectly satisfying to every saint. Said Peter, after showing that the present heavens must pass away with a great noise, the elements melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein be burned up; . . . nevertheless, we, according to his promise, look for a new heaven and new earth IN WHICH DWELLETH RIGHTEOUSNESS. Is not righteousness sufficiently refined? is it too gross? But mark, a new earth—Eden has come again and earth again puts on her pristine charms. A carpet of abiding evergreen covers the surface of the new creation; forests in harmonious order, studded with the fir, the box and pine, mingled in delightful variety, beautify this the Lord's sanctuary, and make the place of his feet glorious; groves of every variety of fruit trees, divinely arranged, overhang earth's carpet green, bending with fruits of paradise; yonder, all along the vale, are seen bowers of shrubbery, loaded with blossoms of every variety of color and fragrance, constantly imparting to the soft, the gentle zephyr-breeze, their rich, reviving perfumery; along that vale, in smooth and graceful loveliness, glides the river which makes glad the city of God. On yon elevation, moulded by Omnipotence, is seen, in splendor indescribable, the New Jerusalem—late the Jerusalem above, the mother of us all—this Zion of the Lord has come down from heaven, and rests upon the new-made earth. O how her precious stones and pearly gates glitter in their own native light reflected! Within her shining gates that never close, amid the brightest glory upon the throne, the Savior sits amid angelic legions. The saints of every age are there, and their tears are wiped away forever.

"There sickness, sorrow, pain and death
Are felt and feared no more."

Another grave-yard will never be seen; another hearse will never be called for; another funeral will never occur; another dying scene will never be witnessed, not even another pain felt, for in all that holy mountain there is nothing to hurt or destroy; the people are all righteous—righteousness dwells there. And now the glory of God fills the earth, the entire new creation; all the variegated beauties of the new earth are gilded—pervaded with the glory of God, and will so abide forever and ever.

Such, reader, is a faint description of the saints' home. Is it sufficiently refined? Say, brethren, will it do for you? Reader, it may be your home in a few more days, if you serve the Lord Jesus Christ.

A LOVER OF HOME.

[Selected by S. S. Brewer, from the "Watchman."]

* If the Savior had intended that we should pray for his kingdom to come, he would have so said, but such as pray as he directed, will pray for the kingdom of God—the Father to come.

MOTIVE.—Holy intention is to the actions of a man that which the soul is to the body, or form to its matter, or the root to the tree, or the sun to the world, or the fountain to a river, or the base to a pillar: for, without these, the body is a dead trunk, the matter is sluggish, the tree is a block, the world is darkness, the river is quickly dry, the pillar rushes into flatness and a ruin; and the action is sinful, or unprofitable and vain. The poor farmer that gave a dish of cold water to Artaxerxes was rewarded with a golden goblet; and he that gives the same to a disciple, in the name of a disciple, shall have a crown; but if he gives water in despite, when the disciple needs wine or a cordial, his reward shall be to want that water to cool his tongue.—Jeremy Taylor.

PUBLIC OPINION.—Our greatest evil has its source in the practice of modifying ourselves according to public opinion; we think that alone estimable which is universally approved, or which is authorized by prevailing example, or modish custom; thus instead of living exempt from all constraints, except those imposed upon us by the principles of reason, we are compelled to be the imitators of others, and the slave of vulgar fashion.—Seneca.

The odor of flowers is never so sweet and strong as before a storm. Beautiful soul, when the storm draws nigh thee, be a [illegible]

"BRINGING OUR SHEAVES WITH US."

The time for toil is past, and night has come,—
The last and saddest of the harvest eves;
Worn out with labor long and wearisome,
Drooping and faint, the reapers hasten home,
Each laden with his sheaves.

Last of the laborers thy feet I gain,
Lord of the harvest! and my spirit grieves
That I am burdened not so much with grain
As with a heaviness of heart and brain;—
Master, behold my sheaves!

Few, light, and worthless,—yet their trifling weight
Through all my frame a weary aching leaves;
For long I struggled with my hapless fate,
And staid and toiled till it was dark and late,—
Yet these are all my sheaves.

Full well I know I have more tares than wheat,—
Brambles and flowers, dry stalks and withered leaves;
Wherefore I blush and weep, as at thy feet
I kneel down reverently, and repeat,
"Master, behold my sheaves!"

I know these blossoms, clustering heavily
With evening dew upon their folded leaves,
Can claim no value nor utility,—
Therefore shall fragrancy and beauty be
The glory of my sheaves.

So do I gather strength and hope anew;
For well I know thy patient love perceives
Not what I did, but what I strove to do,—
And though the full, ripe ears be sadly few,
Thou wilt accept my sheaves.

—Atlantic Monthly.

God never made an idle man,
To cull alone the flowers of life;
It controverts His glorious plan,
And turns perfection into strife;
Try—keep trying.

'Tis written in the stars on high—
'Tis written in the earth beneath—
Man's is a wondrous destiny—
And he must act as well as breathe;
Try—keep trying.

Then onward—true as you exist,
Success will crown each effort made;
Objections vanish like the mist,
Where truth and nature are obeyed;
Try—keep trying.

POWER OF TEMPTATION.—I know from experience that habit can, in direct opposition to every conviction of the mind, and but little aided by the elements of temptation, induce a repetition of the most unworthy actions. The mind is weak where it has once given way. It is long before a principle restorod can become as firm as one that has never been moved. It is as in the case of the mound of a reservoir: if this mound has in one place been broken, whatever care has been taken to make the repaired part as strong as possible, the probability is that, if it give way again, it will be in that place.—Foster.

Do not be troubled because you have not great virtues. God made a million spears of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but with grasses. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities, and you need not mourn because you are neither a hero nor a saint.—Life Thoughts.

Learn to say "No" with decision. "Yes" with caution. "No" with decision whenever it resists a temptation—"Yes" with caution whenever it implies a promise. A promise once given is a bond inviolable. A man is already of consequence in the world when it is known that we can implicitly rely upon him.

Leaves are light, and wavering, and changeable; they even dance; yet God, in his wisdom, has made them a part of the oak. In so doing, he has given us a lesson not to deny the stout-heartedness within, because we see the lightsomeness without.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to pre-pay the post age on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above. $ 2.26 will pay for twenty-three numbers [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1858. | WHOLE NO. 154.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THAT AFFLICTED ONE.

Deep hast thou drunk from sorrow's cup,
Drunk long and bitter draughts;
Keen hast thou felt the blight of hope,
Blighted by slander's shafts.

Thou, too, hast felt the pang of pain
In all thy system through;
Disease has marked thee for its own—
His mark is on thy brow.

But while affliction is thy lot
Of body and of mind,
Let thy whole soul be staid on Him
Who'll keep thee to the end.

Let Patience her great work perform,
And all thy graces prove.
Sweet be the trust in that strong Arm,
Whose chastening is in love.

Soon Time's last tick will touch the ear,
And all earth's scenes be o'er;
"Then sighs and groans and griefs and fears,"
And death shall be no more.

O, then the bliss, O, then the joy!
That shall our bosoms swell,
Sweet peace and rest without alloy,
No human tongue can tell.

There aspirations' joyful swell
Shall roll though Eden's grove,
And the redeemed of earth shall feel
Their hearts all joined in love.

So. Wilbraham. D. D. C.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Adventures of a Book.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—The work I have published on "The Doctrine of a Future Life" has been kindly noticed in your paper, and you have also republished many of the other notices of the press. Thus your readers all know something about it, and the merits attributed to it. Whether those merits are real, others must judge. But there is a story about the fortunes of the book, both before and after its birth, which I have a right and good reason to tell. The occasion is this: I have a note of $375 to pay for it on the 24th inst. Of this, $150 must be paid, or the note will be protested. I must raise this, either by a loan in these days when loans are like angels' visits, or by sales of the book; or I am driven to the wall.

The reason of this necessity is told in a word: Jewett & Co. were to publish, i. e. print and sell the book. I was to stereotype, a friend pledging himself for about that expense. When the stereotyping was nearly done, publisher and friend failed in the general crash, and with more other debts than dimes I had $700 new debt on the day of publication. Hopeful pay did that seem then, for four years' labor.

To reduce the debt, I have now been for nine weeks following the unenviable trade of selling my own book. I call it unenviable for these reasons: 1st. One hates to tell over, or hand out, the encomiums bestowed on his own work. 2d. One is sometimes suspected of having made a book for money. 3d. Every few days I meet a man who denounces me as doing the devil's work. This is unpleasant unless one has acquired a friendly callous, which so far unfits him for book-making. One cannot keep a nice discernment without a tender heart. I find it is no wonder, in this great work of trying to break the spell of a supposed Eternal Evil, by which the Church has been bound for 1500 years, if one gets a little hard, rough, or even bitter. God save us from that.

Such is the shady side of my present mode of life. It has also its bright spots, and I must give your readers an inkling into this happier experience.

The book generally takes well in and about a college. Those who read many books are not wont to be afraid of a new book, even though it contains heresy, provided it gives reliable information, and is written in a fair spirit. One theological professor was glad to see such a book just because there is great danger that current truths will cease to be believed traditionally. They need to be challenged, so that men may think [illegible] for themselves [illegible] blessing [illegible] this [illegible]

I frequently have very pleasant chats with ministers of high culture and refinement, and who are able to suggest topics of interest connected with the great subject. Many persons ask manifold questions, not captiously, but in the spirit of honest inquiry. The objections to the doctrine are of course legion; though I think I may safely say that, without any formal list of "objections," I have met none for which I could not find an answer in the book.

I have sold to ministers of almost every denomination; in several instances, to Roman Catholics. One such was very sorry he could give me no names in his parish to call upon, they were so poor. This was a fine offset against the narrowness of a High Church Episcopalian of the neighborhood, who treated me with all personal friendship, seemed really glad to talk with me, though he differed toto cœlo from my Protestant notion of the right of private judgment, and the next Sunday kindly requested his people not to buy my book.

One of the commonest objections to the doctrine is that it would do no good to be known, even if it were true. One person, an old friend and a minister, said he would rather take the prevalent doctrine to preach, though this were true. I could not help quoting for his benefit those words in Cicero about the immortality of the soul:

"Malo cum Platone errare quam cum istis vera sentire."

"I would rather err with Plato than hold the truth with these fellows."

My Orthodox friend loved the truth about as well as a Universalist, who, after hearing my lecture on the subject, said he "did not want to believe the doctrine even if it were true."

I will give your readers another chapter of "adventures," if they find this worth reading. But I must frankly say I have not time to tell stories for nothing. I have been trying to loan $150, and fear I shall not succeed. If any of your readers can lend it, for six months, I think I can secure their payment by that time. But if I cannot loan, I must try my hand at selling books. So I will offer the mendicant volume, single copies at the usual price, post paid, and more copies than one at $1 each, expenses paid. Orders sent to you will greatly oblige,

Yours in Christ,

C. F. HUDSON.

Working Christians.

Learn to be working Christians. "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." It is very striking to see the usefulness of many Christians. Are there none of you who know what it is to be selfish in your christianity? You have seen a selfish child go into a secret place to enjoy some delicious morsel undisturbed by his companions. So it is with some christians. They feed upon Christ and forgiveness; but it is all alone, and all for themselves. Are there not some of you who can enjoy being a Christian, while your dearest friend is not; and yet you will not speak to him? See, here, you have got work to do. When Christ found you he said, "Go, work in my vineyard." What were you hired for if it was not to spread salvation? What blessed for? O my Christian friends! how little you live as though you were the servants of Christ! How much idle time and idle talk you have! This is not like a good servant. How many things you have to do for yourself! how few for Christ and his people! This is not like a servant.—Mc Cheyne.

JESUS.—The name of Jesus is not only light, but also food; it is likewise oil, without which all the food of the soul is dry; it is salt, unseasoned by which, whatever is presented to us is insipid; it is honey in the mouth, melody in the ear, joy in the heart, medicine to the soul; and there are no charms in any discourse in which his name is not heard.—Bernard.

HAPPINESS.—There are two things which will make us happy in this life, if we attend to them. The first is, never to vex ourselves about what we can't help; and the [illegible]

From Sr. L. C. Johnson.

BRO. GRANT:—Our meetings in North Attleboro' continue to be very interesting. Bro. Burnham has baptized upwards of forty at three different times. He has left for the present, and Bro. Robinson is with us for a short time. We would desire an interest in your prayers for a deeper work of grace upon our hearts, and be prepared for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. May heaven's blessings attend your labors is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

LUCY C. JOHNSON.

Sheldonville, July, 1858.

For the Crisis.

The Cause at the West.

BRO. GRANT:—Being appointed by our last Annual Conference to travel as an Evangelist this Conference year, (and our Conference being divided into four districts, each district entitled to four Quarterly Meetings,) and the Conference making it my duty to attend all these meetings, it may be expected to hear from me from time to time through the paper. I shall endeavor to give a brief account of the prosperity of the cause.

We held our first Quarterly Meeting in Princeton, Iowa, according to the appointment, commencing June 3d. Bro. W. Pratt was with me. We had a good and, I think, a profitable time. The church was revived, and encouraged to put forth a greater effort to sustain the cause, and concluded to employ Bro. Janes part of the time to preach to them, he being located at Cordova, on the opposite side of the river, and has the charge of the church there.

June 9. I started for my two Quarterly Meetings in Hancock County, Ill., about one hundred and thirty miles down the Mississippi river. On my way I had an appointment at Wilton, Iowa, and also Sweetland, in Bro. Covell's neighborhood.

I took a packet down the river to Davenport, expecting to take the cars there for Wilton, but found the road impassable, being partly washed away by the almost constant heavy rains. Next day (10th) I took the packet again for Muscatine, Iowa. Arrived there, and unexpectedly found Bro. P. B. Morgan and father there. Bro. Morgan had arranged to preach over the Lord's day.

Friday, (11th,) Bro. Ira Morgan and myself went to Sweetland. Bro. I. Morgan remained there over the Lord's day. Preached on Friday evening and twice Sunday. I preached on Saturday evening, and Sunday morning Bro. Covell and myself started on horseback for Wilton, ([illegible] miles.) We had anything but a pleasant road. The great amount of rain caused the roads in this region to be almost impassable. When we arrived at Wilton, about 9 o'clock, we were besmeared with mud, but rejoicing in prospect of a better land, where there will be no inconveniences of the curse. Preached there three times, and returned Monday to Sweetland, and preached there on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The Lord's Spirit was with us in truth.

Wednesday, (16th,) I started for my Quarterly Meeting. Took steamboat for Warsaw, Ill. Arrived there on Thursday, 17th, in the morning. Got passage to St. Albans, or Bro. L. Scott's neighborhood, eighteen miles back from the river. Met my appointment in the evening. Here I found some warm hearts; glad to hail them as Pilgrims. How sweet such a meeting. But how glorious to meet all the saints of all ages on the shores of immortality! I want to be there. Continued over Sunday. Preached every evening. Sunday preached twice; had a good congregation, and I think, a profitable time. Monday evening preached at Basco. Tuesday left for Sweetland. Arrived there on Wednesday evening. Remained there over Sunday. Had a precious time Sunday. Baptized eighteen. Monday returned home after being thirty [illegible] weeks.

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

An Exposition of the Second Psalm.

BY ELDER S. S. BREWER.

Dear Reader:—With humility I submit the following exposition of the above portion of holy writ to your serious and candid attention, believing it to be frequently wrested from its legitimate design by multitudes of candid and honest persons. With the above remarks, we will proceed at once to the subject.

Psalm II. Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast way their cords from us.

We find the above quoted and applied by Peter and John. See the 4th chapter of Acts, 25th, 26th, 27th verses:

> Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together, against the Lord, and against his Christ. For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles and the people of Israel were gathered together.

There can be no difference with any one thus far, as it regards the correctness of the above. For the above malicious and cruel rejection of the Lord Jesus, he, God the Father, decides to speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure:

> He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure.

Read the following declaration of the Apostle:

> I Thess., 2: 14-16. For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: Who both killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men; Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins always; FOR THE WRATH IS COME UPON THEM TO THE UTTERMOST.

The prophet Isaiah, 8: 21, 22, speaks of their suffering, and declares they would curse their King and their God, and yet continue to look upwards. They did curse, crucify their King, as it is written: "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." Yet they look upwards, look to God, notwithstanding he has declared there is no other name given under heaven whereby men must be saved.

> Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee.

"Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is MOUNT ZION, THE CITY of the Great King." In this city did God set forth Jesus before that people, as their King. See Zech. 9: 9.

> Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.

> Matt. 21: 4, 5. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, Tell ye the daughters of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.

See also John 12: 12-16.

> On the next day, much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hosanna! BLESSED IS THE KING OF ISRAEL THAT COMETH IN THE NAME OF THE LORD! And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written, Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, THY KING COMETH, sitting on an ass's colt. These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

[illegible]

Lord has said unto me, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." We have the testimony of the Apostle concerning this matter. See Acts 13: 32, 33.

> AND WE DECLARE UNTO YOU GLAD TIDINGS, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, THOU ART MY SON, THIS DAY HAVE I BEGOTTEN THEE.

The next verse of this psalm has, in all probability, formed the basis of more sermons, addresses and remarks at missionary gatherings, than any other portion of the Scriptures; but, in my humble opinion, has been misinterpreted. We will first read it as it stands:

> Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

Now, reader, please leave out the italics which have been supplied by the translators, and it will read thus: "Ask of me, and I shall give the heathen thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth thy possession." For a literal accomplishment of this, we will refer you to Christ's words respecting the matter. See Matt. 21: 33-39.

> Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country: And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it. And the husbandmen took the servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. Again he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise. But, last of all, he sent unto them his son, saying: They will reverence my son. BUT WHEN THE HUSBANDMEN SAW THE SON, THEY SAID AMONG THEMSELVES, THIS IS THE HEIR: COME, LET US KILL HIM, AND LET US SEIZE ON HIS INHERITANCE. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

The same heathen referred to in the first verse, and spoken of by the Apostle in the 25th, 26th and 27th of the 4th of Acts, are the same introduced in the 38th verse of the above parable, who took the heir, slew him, and seized ON HIS INHERITANCE; and they, the heathen, have the uttermost parts of the earth in their possession, and will until the Lord Jesus is "revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."

We will now proceed to give an exposition of the 9th verse of this Psalm, which is almost universally placed in the future:

> Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

I understand the rod spoken of by the prophet to be similar to the one prophesied of by Isaiah 10: 5, 6.

> O Assyrian, THE ROD OF MINE ANGER, AND THE STAFF IN THEIR HAND IS MY INDIGNATION. And I will send him against an hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets.

If God did make the Assyrian nation A ROD OF HIS ANGER to punish that disobedient people over seven hundred years before the birth of our Lord Jesus, then I shall proceed to show that he did also take the Roman Empire, and dash the Jewish nation and city to pieces like a potter's vessel.

> Jer. 19: 7-12. And I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; and I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hand of them that seek their lives: and their carcasses will I give to be meat for the fowls [illegible] beasts of the earth [illegible]

> so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again: and they shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury. Thus will I do unto this place, saith the Lord, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet.

The Roman, the Iron Kingdom of Daniel's metallic image, did fulfil the word of God, as spoken by the [illegible] and, in my humble opinion, also the breaking predicted in the 9th verse of the second Psalm. How any one can reconcile the idea of Jesus taking the heathen for his inheritance, then dashing them to pieces as a potter's vessel, I leave them to reconcile. But it is a fact, that after the proclamation of John the Baptist—"THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS AT HAND;" also the testimony of the Lord Jesus Christ, contained in Luke 10, (Please read from 1-12.) Notice especially the following:

> And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh you. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

They did reject their King. In consequence of this the rejected King declared in Matt. 21: 43;—"THE KINGDOM OF GOD SHALL BE TAKEN FROM YOU AND GIVEN TO A NATION BRINGING FORTH THE FRUIT THEREOF." You will observe in the 45th verse that the chief priests and pharisees applied this declaration to themselves.

The Psalmist closes by an exhortation TO KINGS AND JUDGES OF THE EARTH, to learn wisdom from the exhibition of his judgment on this once honored and heaven favored people and city,—once the joy and beauty of the whole earth, but now a shame and reproach among all nations,—their city in ruins—broken to pieces as a potter's vessel, that never can be made whole again. Read the expostulation of the Psalmist:—

> Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings; be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

I will close with a few remarks on the above subject. From Moses, in Deut. 18: 15;—

> The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me: unto him ye shall hearken.

The above language is quoted in Acts 3: 22-23;—

> For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me: him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that Prophet shall be destroyed from among the people.

Hear him, he that hath ears to hear. The kingdom was taken from the legitimate heirs and is to be given to a nation bringing forth the fruit thereof. See 1 Pet. 2: 7-10;—

> Unto you, therefore, which believe, he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

[illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NO. 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1858. WHOLE NO. 154. VOL. VII. NO. 24.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THAT AFFLICTED ONE.

Deep hast thou drunk from sorrow's cup,
Drunk long and bitter draughts;
Keen hast thou felt the blight of hope,
Blighted by slander's shafts.

Thou, too, hast felt the pang of pain
In all thy system through;
Disease has marked thee for its own—
His mark is on thy brow.

But while affliction is thy lot
Of body and of mind,
Let thy whole soul be staid on Him
Who'll keep thee to the end.

Let Patience her great work perform,
And all thy graces prove.
Sweet be the trust in that strong Arm,
Whose chastening is in love.

Soon Time's last tick will touch the ear,
And all earth's scenes be o'er;
"Then sighs and groans and griefs and fears,"
And death shall be no more.

O, then the bliss, O, then the joy!
That shall our bosoms swell,
Sweet peace and rest without alloy,
No human tongue can tell.

There aspirations' joyful swell
Shall roll though Eden's grove,
And the redeemed of earth shall feel
Their hearts all joined in love.

So. Wilbraham. D. D. C.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Adventures of a Book.

Dear Bro. Grant:—The work I have published on "The Doctrine of a Future Life" has been kindly noticed in your paper, and you have also republished many of the other notices of the press. Thus your readers all know something about it, and the merits attributed to it. Whether those merits are real, others must judge. But there is a story about the fortunes of the book, both before and after its birth, which I have a right and good reason to tell. The occasion is this: I have a note of $375 to pay for it on the 24th inst. Of this, $150 must be paid, or the note will be protested. I must raise this, either by a loan in these days when loans are like angels' visits, or by sales of the book; or I am driven to the wall.

The reason of this necessity is told in a word: Jewett & Co. were to publish, i. e. print and sell the book. I was to stereotype, a friend pledging himself for about that expense. When the stereotyping was nearly done, publisher and friend failed in the general crash, and with more other debts than dimes I had $700 new debt on the day of publication. Hopeful pay did that seem then, for four years' labor.

To reduce the debt, I have now been for nine weeks following the unenviable trade of selling my own book. I call it unenviable for these reasons: 1st. One hates to tell over, or hand out, the encomiums bestowed on his own work. 2d. One is sometimes suspected of having made a book for money. 3d. Every few days I meet a man who denounces me as doing the devil's work. This is unpleasant unless one has acquired a friendly callous, which so far unfits him for book-making. One cannot keep a nice discernment without a tender heart. I find it is no wonder, in this great work of trying to break the spell of a supposed Eternal Evil, by which the Church has been bound for 1500 years, if one gets a little hard, rough, or even bitter. God save us from that.

Such is the shady side of my present mode of life. It has also its bright spots, and I must give your readers an inkling into this happier experience.

The book generally takes well in and about a college. Those who read many books are not wont to be afraid of a new book, even though it contains heresy, provided it gives reliable information, and is written in a fair spirit. One theological professor was glad to see such a book just because there is great danger that current truths will come to be believed traditionally. They need to be challenged, so that men may think them out, anew for themselves, feel them as living truths, and not blindly cling to them as old and dead things.

I frequently have very pleasant chats with ministers of high culture and refinement, and who are able to suggest topics of interest connected with the great subject. Many persons ask manifold questions, not captiously, but in the spirit of honest inquiry. The objections to the doctrine are of course legion, though I think I may safely say that, without any formal list of "objections," I have met none for which I could not find an answer in the book.

I have sold to ministers of almost every denomination; in several instances, to Roman Catholics. One such was very sorry he could give me no names in his parish to call upon, they were so poor. This was a fine offset against the narrowness of a High Church Episcopalian of the neighborhood, who treated me with all personal friendship, seemed really glad to talk with me, though he differed toto cœlo from my Protestant notion of the right of private judgment, and the next Sunday kindly requested his people not to buy my book.

One of the commonest objections to the doctrine is that it would do no good to be known, even if it were true. One person, an old friend and a minister, said he would rather take the prevalent doctrine to preach, though this were true. I could not help quoting for his benefit those words in Cicero about the immortality of the soul:

"Malo cum Platone errare quam cum istis vera sentire."

"I would rather err with Plato than hold the truth with these fellows."

My Orthodox friend loved the truth about as well as a Universalist, who, after hearing my lecture on the subject, said he "did not want to believe the doctrine even if it were true."

I will give your readers another chapter of "adventures," if they find this worth reading. But I must frankly say I have not time to tell stories for nothing. I have been trying to loan $150, and fear I shall not succeed. If any of your readers can lend it, for six months, I think I can secure their payment by that time. But if I cannot loan, I must try my hand at selling books. So I will offer the mendicant volume, single copies at the usual price, post paid, and more copies than one at $1 each, expenses paid. Orders sent to you will greatly oblige.

Yours in Christ,

C. F. Hudson.

Working Christians.

Learn to be working Christians. "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." It is very striking to see the usefulness of many Christians. Are there none of you who know what it is to be selfish in your christianity? You have seen a selfish child go into a secret place to enjoy some delicious morsel undisturbed by his companions. So it is with some christians. They feed upon Christ and forgiveness; but it is all alone, and all for themselves. Are there not some of you who can enjoy being a Christian, while your dearest friend is not; and yet you will not speak to him? See, here, you have got work to do. When Christ found you he said, "Go, work in my vineyard." What were you hired for if it was not to spread salvation? What blessed for? O my Christian friends! how little you live as though you were the servants of Christ! How much idle time and idle talk you have! This is not like a good servant. How many things you have to do for yourself! how few for Christ and his people! This is not like a servant. —McCheyne.

Jesus.—The name of Jesus is not only light, but also food; it is likewise oil, without which all the food of the soul is dry; it is salt, unseasoned by which, whatever is presented to us is insipid; it is honey in the mouth, melody in the ear, joy in the heart, medicine to the soul; and there are no charms in any discourse in which his name is not heard.—Bernard.

Happiness.—There are two things which will make us happy in this life, if we attend to them. The first is, never to vex ourselves about what we can't help; and the second, never to vex ourselves about what we can help.

From Sr. L. C. Johnson.

Bro. Grant:—Our meetings in North Attleboro' continue to be very interesting. Bro. Burnham has baptized upwards of forty at three different times. He has left for the present, and Bro. Robinson is with us for a short time. We would desire an interest in your prayers for a deeper work of grace upon our hearts, and be prepared for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. May heaven's blessings attend your labors is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

Lucy C. Johnson.

Sheldonville, July, 1858.

For the Crisis.

The Cause at the West.

Bro. Grant:—Being appointed by our last Annual Conference to travel as an Evangelist this Conference year, (and our Conference being divided into four districts, each district entitled to four Quarterly Meetings,) and the Conference making it my duty to attend all these meetings, it may be expected to hear from me from time to time through the paper. I shall endeavor to give a brief account of the prosperity of the cause.

We held our first Quarterly Meeting in Princeton, Iowa, according to the appointment, commencing June 3d. Bro. W. Pratt was with me. We had a good and, I think, a profitable time. The church was revived, and encouraged to put forth a greater effort to sustain the cause, and concluded to employ Bro. Janes part of the time to preach to them, he being located at Cordova, on the opposite side of the river, and has the charge of the church there.

June 9. I started for my two Quarterly Meetings in Hancock County, Ill., about one hundred and thirty miles down the Mississippi river. On my way I had an appointment at Wilton, Iowa, and also Sweetland, in Bro. Covell's neighborhood.

I took a packet down the river to Davenport, expecting to take the cars there for Wilton, but found the road impassable, being partly washed away by the almost constant heavy rains. Next day (10th) I took the packet again for Muscatine, Iowa. Arrived there, and unexpectedly found Bro. P. B. Morgan and father there. Bro. Morgan had arranged to preach over the Lord's day.

Friday, (11th,) Bro. Ira Morgan and myself went to Sweetland. Bro. I. Morgan remained there over the Lord's day. Preached on Friday evening and twice Sunday. I preached on Saturday evening, and Sunday morning Bro. Covell and myself started on horseback for Wilton, (10 miles.) We had anything but a pleasant road. The great amount of rain caused the roads in this region to be almost impassable. When we arrived at Wilton, about 9 o'clock, A. M., we were besmeared with mud, but rejoicing in prospect of a better land, where there will be no inconveniences of the curse. Preached there three times, and returned Monday to Sweetland, and preached there on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The Lord's Spirit was with us in truth.

Wednesday, (16th,) I started for my Quarterly Meeting. Took steamboat for Warsaw, Ill. Arrived there on Thursday, 17th, in the morning. Got passage to St. Albans, or Bro. L. Scott's neighborhood, eighteen miles back from the river. Met my appointment in the evening. Here I found some warm hearts; glad to hail them as Pilgrims. How sweet such a meeting. But how glorious to meet all the saints of all ages on the shores of immortality! I want to be there. Continued over Sunday. Preached every evening. Sunday preached twice; had a good congregation, and I think, a profitable time. Monday evening preached at Basco. Tuesday left for Sweetland. Arrived there on Wednesday evening. Remained there over Sunday. Had a precious time Sunday. Baptized eighteen. Monday returned home after being absent about four weeks.

M. Chandler.

(To be concluded.)

Brave actions are the substance of life, and good sayings are the ornaments of it.

For the Crisis.

An Exposition of the Second Psalm.

BY ELDER S. S. BREWER.

Dear Reader:—With humility I submit the following exposition of the above portion of holy writ to your serious and candid attention, believing it to be frequently wrested from its legitimate design by multitudes of candid and honest persons. With the above remarks, we will proceed at once to the subject.

Psalm II. Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast way their cords from us.

We find the above quoted and applied by Peter and John. See the 4th chapter of Acts, 25th, 26th, 27th verses:

Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together, against the Lord, and against his Christ. For of a truth, against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles and the people of Israel were gathered together.

There can be no difference with any one thus far, as it regards the correctness of the above. For the above malicious and cruel rejection of the Lord Jesus, he, God the Father, decides to speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure:

He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure.

Read the following declaration of the Apostle:

I Thess., 2: 14–16. For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: Who both killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men; Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins always; FOR THE WRATH IS COME UPON THEM TO THE UTTERMOST.

The prophet Isaiah, 8: 21, 22, speaks of their suffering, and declares they would curse their King and their God, and yet continue to look upwards. They did curse, crucify their King, as it is written: "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." Yet they look upwards, look to God, notwithstanding he has declared there is no other name given under heaven whereby men must be saved.

Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee.

"Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is MOUNT ZION, THE CITY of the Great King." In this city did God set forth Jesus before that people, as their King. See Zech. 9: 9.

Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.

Matt. 21: 4, 5. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, Tell ye the daughters of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.

See also John 12: 12–16.

On the next day, much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hosanna! BLESSED IS THE KING OF ISRAEL, THAT COMETH IN THE NAME OF THE LORD! And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written, Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, THY KING COMETH sitting on an ass's colt. These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

Please turn to your Bible and read the margin as follows: "I will declare for a decree." Then the 7th verse will read thus: "I will declare for a decree, the Lord has said unto me, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." We have the testimony of the Apostle concerning this matter. See Acts 13: 32, 33.

AND WE DECLARE UNTO YOU GLAD TIDINGS, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, THOU ART MY SON, THIS DAY HAVE I BEGOTTEN THEE.

The next verse of this psalm has, in all probability, formed the basis of more sermons, addresses and remarks at missionary gatherings, than any other portion of the Scriptures; but, in my humble opinion, has been misinterpreted. We will first read it as it stands:

Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

Now, reader, please leave out the italics which have been supplied by the translators, and it will read thus: "Ask of me and I shall give the heathen thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth thy possession." For a literal accomplishment of this, we will refer you to Christ's words respecting the matter. See Matt. 21: 33–39.

Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country: And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it. And the husbandmen took the servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. Again he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise. But, last of all, he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son. BUT WHEN THE HUSBANDMEN SAW THE SON, THEY SAID AMONG THEMSELVES, THIS IS THE HEIR: COME, LET US KILL HIM, AND LET US SEIZE ON HIS INHERITANCE. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

The same heathen referred to in the first verse, and spoken of by the Apostle in the 25th, 26th and 27th of the 4th of Acts, are the same introduced in the 38th verse of the above parable, who took the heir, slew him, and seized ON HIS INHERITANCE; and they, the heathen, have the uttermost parts of the earth in their possession, and will until the Lord Jesus is "revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."

We will now proceed to give an exposition of the 9th verse of this Psalm, which is almost universally placed in the future:

Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

I understand the rod spoken of by the prophet to be similar to the one prophesied of by Isaiah 10: 5, 6.

O Assyrian, THE ROD OF MINE ANGER AND THE STAFF IN THEIR HAND IS MY INDIGNATION. And I will send him against an hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets.

If God did make the Assyrian nation A ROD OF HIS ANGER to punish that disobedient people over seven hundred years before the birth of our Lord Jesus, then I shall proceed to show that he did also take the Roman Empire, and dash the Jewish nation and city to pieces like a potter's vessel.

Jer. 19: 7–12. And I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; and I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hand of them that seek their lives; and their carcasses will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth. And I will make this city desolate, and an hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss, because of all the plagues thereof. [illegible] so will I break this people, and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again; and they shall bury them in tophet, till there be no place to bury. Thus will I do unto this place saith the Lord, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet.

The Roman, the Iron Kingdom, in Daniel's metallic image, did fulfill the word of God, as spoken by the Prophet Jeremiah; and, in my humble opinion, also the breaking predicted in the 9th verse of this second Psalm. How any one can reconcile the idea of Jesus taking the heathen for his inheritance, THEN dashing them to pieces as a potter's vessel, I leave them to reconcile. But it is a fact, that after the proclamation of John the Baptizer,—"THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS AT HAND;" also the testimony of the Lord Jesus Christ, contained in Luke 10. (Please read from 1–13.) Notice especially the following:

And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh you. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

They did reject their King. In consequence of this, the rejected King declared in Matt. 21: 43;—THE KINGDOM OF GOD SHALL BE TAKEN FROM YOU AND GIVEN TO A NATION BRINGING FORTH THE FRUIT THEREOF. You will observe in the 45th verse that the chief priests and pharisees applied this declaration to themselves.

The Psalmist closes by an exhortation to KINGS AND JUDGES OF THE EARTH, to learn wisdom from the exhibition of his judgment on this once honored and heaven favored people and city,—once the joy and beauty of the whole earth, but now a shame and reproach among all nations,—their city in ruins—broken to pieces as a potter's vessel, that never can be made whole again. Read the expostulation of the Psalmist:—

Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings; be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

I will close with a few remarks on the above subject. From Moses, in Deut. 18: 15;—

The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me: unto him ye shall hearken.

The above language is quoted in Acts 3: 22–23;—

For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me: him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that Prophet shall be destroyed from among the people.

Hear him, he that hath ears to hear. The kingdom was taken from the legitimate heirs and is to be given to a nation bringing forth the fruit thereof. See 1 Pet. 2: 7–10;—

Unto you therefore which believe, he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

When will this chosen generation, this royal priesthood, this holy nation, receive the Kingdom? Please turn to Matt. 25: 31st to the end. Then shall he sit upon the Throne of his Glory. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Are We a People?—No. 7.

WHAT IS OUR PRESENT PURPOSE?

The purposes of a church would signify union and authority; but as the individual object should be necessary to the design of the whole—the only exceptions being instances of objection, overborne by the concurrent will of the mass—we shall at once be prepared to admit that, in proportion as disunion prevails, and authority is lost, the purpose of any people loses identity, point, and force.

There may be a dozen distinct objects, and some of them directly antagonistic to the others, labored for by so many different men or different churches, all claiming to form part of the same church. The great object of one brother in the ministry or of one congregation is not the object of another. This is precisely the state of things with us as a people—if we are yet a people—for in one view it appears that we are already in our decline—our existence, though short, may have passed its meridian; and decrepitude and age already have fastened on the trembling system. In another view, our being is embryotic; the development is hardly that of infancy, much less that of manhood.

One minister will tell you that he has no confidence in another; one is jealous of another, and he will not disguise it, nor his opposition to him. One congregation will not receive a minister who is well received elsewhere. One church takes position on some isolated points and will have no fellowship with any thing else. One man will contend for church order, when it suits his convenience to argue for it, when by supposing its absence he can account for the want of righteousness, honesty and brotherly kindness; such as it is assumed he should have seen; but when the church wants to put a man in order, as a member of the church—when it means to keep all in order, why then it is an "Iron Bedstead" forsooth. It must be confessed that the power to set in order implies the power to control; and the power to control implies the power to disfranchise, disfellowship or excommunicate—only, however, observing the articles of federation.

This, on the principle that we concede personal privileges to secure collective advantages, is right; the gospel assumes the principle in regard to church relations, and gives directions accordingly. Thus as a whole the church controls itself; thus the individual controls himself—with the help of others—and at the same time gives his aid in the control or discipline of others. When this is done in the spirit of the gospel, which directs this union, it is harmonious and happy. It becomes the privilege and enjoyment of the believer—he does not feel the restraint.

If a man would complain of discipline, he ought to complain of—certainly he should not seek—the blessings of association. If he will not adopt a constitution which is offered for the whole, he has no right to complain if others violate the provisions of that instrument till his own personal rights are invaded, nor that they carry out the covenant till his individual, proper rights are infringed. In one word, without a covenant and consent of the members, it is an individual matter and not collective—a man, alone, though twenty might stand near each other, and not a community.

But we are not left to make out a case by a process of reasoning on the subject. The Gospel enjoins upon the believing, the church and its obligations. It makes up its church of believers. Well, it may be they sin if they refuse to enter those relations which are necessary to its perpetuity. I believe that the church should entertain the Advent doctrines, and must claim that we are a people, seeking improvement; therefore, it cannot be amiss to inquire what this people now propose to do.

I have no doubt that some propose to set in order the church; well, let us be careful that we do not institute any Procrustean platform, but work in wisdom and kindness. We should remember that all the brethren who have come out have sought gospel liberty, and all order must still secure gospel liberty to them.

The churches too that are strong, or comparatively so, should not be too rigorous, and get "straitened in their own bowels," refusing fellowship where the purpose [illegible] but the mind is not fully enlightened or distinctly impressed with duty. In their case "be kindly affectioned one [illegible]." Let charity, wisdom, and [illegible] tenacity, a disposition to compel people to take the position we have taken, will drive our friends who differ further from us. Let the effort of each minister, and each man and woman be, to secure a harmonious, concentrated and consolidated body of christians, who shall hold and advocate the great truths which we regard as lying at the basis of our existence; let the very genius of the gospel inspire our movements, while all minor points shall be held wisely and kindly; others not receiving, treating with respect, and all will move on smoothly. There is plenty to do. Work enough for all, and work that may be done to advantage, too, if we are prepared to work aright, unitedly to gather to something and build up.

Others, again, intend, as I conclude, to do just as they have done heretofore, and this class embraces some of the best brethren in the ministry and membership; they are bound to live and work, and let the order (other than to live right themselves and exhort others to do the same,) take care of itself. They should manifest as much interest in giving the sinner a home in Christ, by a proper church relation, as to bring him to Christ by conversion; for the church of Christ is the home in Christ as fully as he is the door. In respect to the form in which one may live godly, in regard to it, and another may not, there is as much difference as there is between a man and a babe, or strong meat and milk. A babe must have a home and quiet, with nursing and regularity of food and sleep, or about so much each day, and have milk to live; a man may (and he may not) knock about the country, sometimes living in one place, sometimes in another, sleeping out of doors, on the deck of a vessel, standing at the wheel drenched with the storm, eating clams, pork and some bread, or milk if he can get it, and still live. But, you see, the infant would die; the young, tender, delicate being would die. Now "him that is weak in the faith receive ye." Oh! you ought to have a place to house them. They ought to find shelter and refreshment, and simple diet, as well as to see the overloaded, luxurious board of hearty meats, powerful viands, and plenty of older and stronger ones gorging themselves with the rich provision.

So it has been with many of our young converts. They have indeed been converted; they have seen the old ones and parents feasting on these great truths of the kingdom; but soon there seems a want of adaptation; the great difficulty is the want of a place to be as young christians, to grow up to manhood, i. e., in their apprehension; to say nothing of the watch care they would receive if they were in the church, in proper form; the apprehension they have of the matter is unfortunate. To be converted involves the idea of being baptized and joining the church. Now our young converts, our children and others, can hardly consider themselves members of the church even if they have been baptized; hence, they do not feel the responsibility they would, nor are they cared for as they would be. They have not the inspiring motive they would have to be good and do good if they saw, as they might, by simply joining the church, that the body must soon depend upon themselves as well as others for its respectable, responsible position—its prosperity and advancement. Is it wrong to inspire the young with a desire to be active and responsible in the cause they embrace? to "be somebody," even if the cause is persecuted? I think not.

The objection that the Lord is coming so soon, will not do now. Fifteen years ago some persons not only did not want their children to join the church, but did not want them to attend school even, and some thought they need not attend the services of the church because the Lord was so soon to come. What has been the consequence? The same persons would at times complain that others did not believe strongly enough. My opinion is now, today, they did quite "strong enough," if any more strength would have taken a child of proper age from a good school. I don't believe a man can believe "strong enough" for that. This seems to be rather a digression. Discipline will be secured, such as young converts require: some one will not kill a little lamb by uncalled for severity, in reproving, because the proper course of advice and counsel will be followed.

Some, again, will still aim at their own personal interests—the advancement of their own party. Some give no encouragement of any other design. The worse things are, the better they like it.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 11, 1858.

☞ The fare to the Wilbraham campmeeting is reduced to half price on the Connecticut Railroad.

☞ We hope our new friend "Minnie" will often favor us with thoughts from her pen.

Fast.

We would recommend to those interested in our general Campmeeting at Wilbraham, that they observe Friday, Aug. 20th, as a day of fasting and special prayer, in behalf of this important meeting. It will be in vain for us to assemble in the tented grove unless the Lord be with us. "Ask and receive."

Let all come up to this meeting leaning on the arm of the Lord, ready to work earnestly for the salvation of sinners, and we shall have a rich feast, and be instrumental in causing "joy in the presence of the angels."

Campmeetings.

We sometimes hear it asked, "what good comes from campmeetings?" We answer, much every way. Thousands of voices echo an answer, "There I first found Jesus," and as many more, "there I was reclaimed from a backslidden state." If any one should be saved by means of all the campmeetings ever held, the reward would be inestimable. Ask that saved one, after he has spent a few hundred thousand years in glory, if he thinks his salvation is worth so much labor and expense as would be requisite to sustain all the campmeetings; and do you think he would pause for a reply? But when we consider the host that will range the fields of glory, who were converted at these meetings, we hesitate not to say that no meetings have accomplished so much good in so little time. We believe there are no meetings held, that are more like those in the days of the Savior and the Apostles, than well regulated campmeetings. No place where christian devotion, love and union, find greater help and a more genial atmosphere, than in the tented grove. No meetings so beneficial to the general cause of religion. No place where the worldly professor finds it so easy to unload his grievous burdens, and get freighted with heavenly treasure. No place so good to cheer the lonely and afflicted pilgrim, who has wandered in sorrow's vale for many long months. It is to them like going upon Pisgah's top to see the promised land. They go in the strength of the blessing more than "forty days and forty nights." It lasts them almost the whole year, and as the time draws near for another gathering, they count the passing days for weeks before the glad time arrives, as do children before "thanksgiving" pleasure scenes. Here the rich, poor, high and low, bond and free, learned and unlearned, meet upon a common level, sit upon the same seat, eat at the same table, sleep under the same canvas, side by side on the same straw, covered by the same blanket, and then feel like having a union prayer meeting and singing the same hymn of praise to "the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity." The stiff, formal "Mr," is delightfully changed into the warm-hearted, soul-cheering, hope-inspiring "brother."

Ask what good campmeetings do!—might as well ask what good does it do for a man to see his family after a long absence—for Jacob to see his son Joseph. Try it once and see and know for yourselves. There is no place on earth where we would so gladly spend our days as with the children of the Lord in the tented grove. But when separated, the remembrance even of the hallowed scenes, serves to give us a new impulse, when burdened beneath the cares and temptations of a cold, heartless world, and stimulates us to endure hardness a little longer, till the time comes to pitch our tents upon Eden's plains in the great "camp of the saints."

Another objector says, "campmeetings were good in their day, but the time is past for holding them." We think if such an one could have been at Wilbraham last year, he would have voted for another this season, and persuaded as many as possible to come with him. If he had come alone then, we should expect to see all his family with him this year. We fear the objector is not so engaged in the cause of the Lord now, as formerly, and that for this reason, some meetings have not accomplished so much good as in days by-gone. Come this year, brother, and labor for the Lord, and we think the objections against campmeetings will be turned to arguments in their favor.

A third objects, because there is "so much wickedness practiced." It is true that wicked people act wickedly at campmeetings as well as in other places; but we have yet to learn that they act any worse, or even as bad at such meetings, as they would have done if they had staid away. The campmeeting does not make them wicked. They swore, got drunk and practiced all kinds of iniquity before they came to the meeting; but such have often been away happy in the Lord. With few exceptions, so far as our experience goes, the wicked have been under more restraint at these meetings than when away, and evidently committed less sin there than they would if they had been separated from the holy influence which was there exerted upon them.

We will notice but one more objection, viz., "the expense." It is true that it costs something to go to these meetings, and so it did for the Jews to go up to the feast of tabernacles. It costs something to sustain meetings anywhere. Our salvation cost something. We venture to say, that most have paid out enough during the past year for things, without which they would have been better off, to pay all the necessary expenses of attending the campmeeting. Let us reckon up. For tea and coffee—moderate use—two cups in the morning and two at night, (and many use the same at noon also,) one cent per cup—4 cts. per day, which is $14.60 per year. This moderate estimate gives an abundance to pay expenses of the campmeeting, and take the paper besides. This is not all; many have used nearly the same amount of money, and some more, for the poisonous weed, called tobacco, thereby destroying their physical and spiritual health, besides exciting a feeling of disgust in the minds of all who are not slaves to this filthy habit. And besides all this, many have paid out enough for jewelry and other foolish things that the world are lusting after, to meet all their expenses if they lived two hundred miles from the meeting.

When we go to campmeeting, we feel that we get the worth of our money, but when it is spent for tea, coffee, tobacco, jewelry, &c., we have done worse than to throw it away. We have paid it out to injure our health, dry up our spirituality, and to ensnare the innocent by our bad example. Let us learn to eat, drink, and do all things to the glory of God.

Atlantic Telegraph.

"Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go and say unto thee, here we are?" Job 38: 35.

The Atlantic Telegraph Cable is now successfully laid between Europe and America. This truly is an age of wonders. We may now read at noon what takes place in London at the middle of the forenoon. Instead of waiting one month for an answer from Europe, and two and three months as we used to before the steamships ploughed the waters of the ocean, we can send and receive our answer back in a few minutes. The lightning has now become man's errand boy, leaping from hill-top and mountain over broad streams and low dales, vast prairies, forests of the wild wood, and then plunging into the ocean depths, and running upon its low bed among its hideous monsters, where no tempests ever disturb the silent deep; then emerging, and darting down to tell the Queen a news item that happened a few moments since, thousands of miles away. These are fast times.

"Debt and Grace."

A theological professor, in speaking of Bro. Hudson's great work on future punishment, in which he clearly shows that the wicked will be destroyed, says:

"The most complimentary notices have certainly done it no more than justice—hardly that. The more I have read it, the more I have admired the very thorough and pains-taking research, the profound scholarship, and the [illegible]ble, fair reasoning which pervades the whole work. I really think it is a book of higher theological character than we have had among us for a long time."

THANKFULNESS.—Many favors which God giveth us ravel out for want of hemming, through our own unthankfulness; for though prayer purchaseth blessings, giving praise doth keep the quiet possession of them.—Thomas Fuller.

Say nothing of yourself, either good, bad or indifferent; nothing good, for that is vanity; nothing bad, for that is affectation; nothing indifferent, for that is silly.

For the Crisis.

Familiar Letters.—No. 9.

TO UNCLE FRED:—I promised in my first communication to give you my views on the Kingdom of God—the Millennium—and reasons for believing that the Kingdom is soon to be established, and the glorious Millennium commence. I have occupied more time upon the first topic than I designed, and will endeavor to be more brief in the remainder.

Methinks it is the most easy thing imaginable, to prove from the Word of God that the Millenium must follow and not precede the advent of Jesus Christ. If we go to the Old Testament Scriptures for proof, we find it contained in Dan. 7. I have in a previous letter, cited your attention to this chapter, in giving you the chronology of the kingdom; and I now wish you to note this fact, viz: that prior to the establishment of Christ's Kingdom, beastly governments exist, and the "little horn" power prevails, even to the time of the coming of the "Ancient of days," and the time of judgment; at which time that power is destroyed, thus harmonizing with Paul's testimony in 2 Thess. 2: 1, 8. Previous to this destruction, satan works "with all power and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Mark this, Christ's coming is after satan thus works with great power, and signs, and lying wonders to deceive those who love not the truth, and at his coming he destroys the "Wicked" one—the Man of Sin—that "horn" power which has for centuries prevailed against the saints of the Most High, and thus no space of a thousand years can intervene for a Millennium of peace, and holiness, and happiness.

Permit me to offer a few thoughts respecting this working of Satan, which is to precede the coming of the Holy One. I am inclined to the opinion that this working of satan is identical with the "seducing spirits" which in the "latter times" should teach the "doctrines of devils," and thereby cause some to "depart from the faith," who shall speak "lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with an hot iron." I am also of the opinion that in the recent astonishing and wide spreading influence of Spiritualism, we see fulfilled the prophecies uttered by the apostle Paul.

"With all signs and lying wonders" satan was to work; it was to be a "strong delusion," causing those who love not the truth of God to believe a lie. And is it not by means of "seducing spirits" that satan is to work, and by the influence of those "doctrines" which the "spirits of devils" teach, confirmed with "signs and lying wonders," that men are to be turned away from the truth unto fables? Not only are those who have no love for the truth to be deceived, but "some" who have "the faith," by "giving heed" to these seductive spirits and "doctrines of devils," "depart" therefrom, and their consciences become so "seared" that they will even speak lies in hypocrisy, and forbid to marry, and "to abstain from meats which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth." Whether this be now in process of fulfillment, in the development of modern Spiritualism or not, it has a wonderful appropriateness. We see these same principles, by that "strong delusion," developing themselves with astonishing rapidity, and the recent discussion of the marriage question would seem to indicate that its votaries are approximating a point where the entire disannulling of the present system of marriage will be evinced, and "soul-marriage" take its place.

Be this as it may, the point especially to be noticed, as bearing upon the question before us, is this: that the coming of Christ, and not a previous Millennium, is to destroy these evil influences. The "mystery of iniquity" was working in the Apostle's time, and when the hindrance was removed, and the "Wicked" is fully revealed, a development of iniquity was to be more fully manifest, continuing until the final consuming and destruction at the brightness of Christ's coming; and thus we find no space whatever for the "good time" which has been the theme of saints for ages past.

Often do we hear it said that in the "latter days" the gospel will have an universal influence over the hearts of men; that every corner of the earth shall be illuminated with its light, and peace, prosperity and happiness prevail. But in the prediction of the Apostle, we see a far different characteristic of the "last days" brought to view. Please notice it again, Uncle Fred, and contrast the inspired Apostle's description of the "departure from the faith," the "giving heed unto seducing spirits and doctrines of devils" in the "latter times," with the commonly received doctrines of a Millennium, and say which is true.

More anon, from

KATE.

From Eld. J. T. Ongley.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—For the benefit of those of like precious faith, I thought I would write a few lines to inform them of the prosperity of the cause in Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., and vicinity. To the praise of our heavenly Father, good has been, and is being done. Within two months, thirty have been baptized. Bro. Wendell of Edenboro', Erie County, Pa., has been with us some of late, and assisted in proclaiming the blessed word.

The church being in a good position, and the hearts of the people being somewhat prepared for receiving seed, we concluded to send for Bro. H. L. Hastings of Rochester, N. Y. He remained with us one week. His labors have been blessed. To God be all the glory. Quite a number professed faith in Christ, by witnessing the good confession—"Buried with Christ by baptism." He led down twenty-seven into the watery grave—from the youth of sixteen years, to the gray-headed, the majority being heads of families. A remark was made the other day by a good Methodist brother, that he could not see how it was that the converts the Advent people got were those of mature age, while those they got were children. The fact lies here: we appeal to the mind of men and their reason. For God has said—"Come and let us reason together." Quite a number stated through our meetings, that they never saw such a work, and no excitement. There was a steady, calm, fervent prayer, though mostly in silence; and the God of heaven, who hears and sees, has, we trust, shown openly that he does hear and answer his children.

Since we came to Pennsylvania, which will be two years next November, we have endeavored to hold up the truth, especially the practical part of it; and at times have been almost discouraged; but praise His name, he is better to us than all our fears. Our first work was to set in order the things that did remain. The result was, in Blooming Valley, eleven gave in their names, being willing to identify themselves as the Church of God in this place, believing the Word of God to be the only correct rule of faith and practice. Now there are forty-five names, although four have removed. Others are coming in weekly. Also, one licensed preacher of the Baptist denomination, who has come out in the whole truth, and will identify himself with us soon.

In the Root settlement, town of Athens, Crawford County, Pa., about fourteen miles from here, we organized with only three; now there are fourteen names. Two weeks from next Saturday and Sunday, August 14th and 15th, Bro. Wendell and myself intend to hold a Grove Meeting there, and I expect to see good done in the name of the Lord. The last time I was there one arose for prayers, and quite a number are satisfied that we have the truth, and I trust will go forward in obedience to the commandments of God.

I cannot speak as favorably of other places. There are some good brethren in Girard, Erie County, Pa., but the majority have been in opposition to what we consider Gospel Order, and the result is not good. I desire to see them come up to their duty. I am satisfied that we as a people have not done the good we might have done, if we had attended to that matter before. I hope our brethren will read the last article in the Crisis—"Are we a People? No. 6," and then act.

Yours in hope,

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Blooming Valley, Pa., July 30th.

ANCIENT COPY OF THE SCRIPTURES.—The oldest Bible in the United States belongs to Rev. Mr. Duffield of Detroit. It covers six hundred pages and the lettering is all done by hand with pen and ink. Every letter is perfect in its shape and of about the size of the type used in our news columns. The date of this Bible is A. D. 940. It was consequently made 560 years before printing was invented, and is 928 years old. This Bible was presented to Dr. Duffield by Lewis Cass, Jr., our minister resident at Rome. He procured it of a Greek monk, who brought it from the Greek Convent of St. Catharine, at the foot of Mount Sinai. When it became known that Mr. Cass was going to send the Bible to this country, three thousand dollars were offered him for the book by the monks of the city of Rome.

From Rev. D. N. Smith.

Bro. Grant :—I was in at the Morning Meeting to-day, and it was somewhat amusing to listen to the manner in which some of those who are accustomed to attend there, mangle the prophecies relating to this age of the world. On the morning after news was received of the laying of the Atlantic cable, there was an incident of some interest occurred. The four quarters of the earth were represented. A minister, an American spoke of the cable; a brother from Scotland, representing Europe, followed; a son of Abraham, a converted Jew, followed, representing Asia; a colored brother followed, representing Africa.

This morning a number of passages were read, supposing to relate to this time. "As the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun," &c., was supposed to refer to the increase of light in the time of the end. The passage was referred to—"There shall be no more sea." This was made to mean that the facility for transmitting news by means of the cable, annihilates the sea. The passage in Daniel was quoted by a believer in the Second Advent: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Remarks were made and followed up by some of the brethren respecting the fulfillment of this prophecy in these days.

There appears to be an open door for the reception of the truth; and let every one who has a correct understanding of it, see to it that he does not hide it. A word in due season may and will find its way to the understanding and heart of some who may not have had the advantages many others have enjoyed for years past, in listening to the exposition of many of the important truths of the Bible.

Yours, &c., D. N. Smith.
Boston, Aug. 7th.

From Bro. W. R. W.

Bro Grant :—Although I spend much of my time in Boston, I did not know till within a few days that there was such a paper as the Crisis in existence, or a church that without fear of man or satan's persecution, dare to preach the whole Truth. God often brings much good out of a trivial event. So it was with me. An apparently trifling event placed in my hand Bro. Blain's book—"Death Not Life." I wrote to him at Buffalo, N. Y., for more information. That letter was published in your paper, a few days since, without my knowledge, although I am glad if I can bear witness to the truths of God's word in any way, or share the persecution of his people. It is a glory—an honor! My prayer, with the Psalmist is, "O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but establish the just."

I heard our Bro. Blain preach for the first time, at Pawtucket, R. I., Sunday and Monday. It appeared to arouse and wake them up—some to scoff and others to reject—although many believe. Truths are stubborn things; let us have more of them to arouse the world, and let every follower of Jesus Christ awake to new activity in the cause of his Master, knowing that our time here is short. Let us not sleep as do others, but trim our lamps and fulfill the declaration—"Ye are the light of the world." W. R. W.

Obituary.

Died, in Derry, N. H., June 13, 1858, of consumption, Lucinda Sheldon, wife of Jacob Sheldon, aged 37 years.

Sister S. was converted to God when about seventeen years old; united with the Methodists, and lived a christian life, and enjoyed "good religion."

In 1843, she heard the glorious, yet solemn sound of Jesus' coming, and took the lamp and with the church went forth to meet the bridegroom. She with others who expected to see the King in his beauty in 1844, was disappointed; still her faith in the soon coming of the Savior did not waver. Our dear sister was engaged, also, in the movement of 1854, and fell asleep with her lamp trimmed and burning. The unconscious sleep of the saints till the resurrection,—life and immortality only through Christ, at the last trump,—destruction of the wicked, &c, she fully believed. She died as she lived, a christian.

She leaves a husband, three children, parents, brothers, sisters, and many other relatives, beside the church of God, to mourn her loss. The funeral was at her father's house, in Auburn. A large circle of friends were in attendance, and listened with interest, while the writer endeavored to comfort the afflicted in presenting the hope of the Gospel.
John G. Hook.

Summary of News.

The Atlantic Cable Successfully Laid!

Telegraph Office of Associated Press, Boston, August 5th.

We have a dispatch from Trinity Bay announcing the arrival of the Niagara at that place, and a dispatch confirming the successful laying of the Cable, and that messages are now being received.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Trinity Bay, Aug. 5. The Atlantic telegraph fleet sailed from Queenstown on Saturday, July 17th, and arrived at mid ocean on Wednesday, the 28th. Made the splice at 1 P. M. on Thursday, the 29th, and the fleet separated—the Agamemnon and Valorous bound to Valentia, Ireland—the Niagara and Gorgon for this place, where they arrived yesterday, and this morning the end of the cable will be landed.

It is 1698 nautical or 1950 statute miles from the Telegraph House, at the head of Valentia harbor, to the Telegraph House, Bay of Bulls' Arm, Trinity Bay, and for more than two-thirds of this distance the water is more than two miles in depth.

The cable has been payed out from the Agamemnon at about the same speed as from the Niagara.

The electric signals sent and received through the whole cable are perfect.

The machinery for paying out the cable worked in the most satisfactory manner, and was not stopped for a single moment from the time the splice was made until we arrived here.

Captain Hudson, Messrs. Everett and Woodhouse, the Engineers, the Electricians, and officers of the ships, and in fact every man on board the Telegraph Fleet has exerted himself to the utmost to make the expedition successful, and, by the blessings of Divine Providence, IT HAS SUCCEEDED!

After the end of the cable is landed, and connected with the Land Line of Telegraph, and the Niagara has discharged some cargo belonging to the Atlantic Telegraph Company, she will go to St. Johns, N. F., for coals, and then proceed at once to New York.

Cyrus W. Field.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE PRESIDENT.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5. The President, who is at Bedford, received the first intimation of the successful laying of the Atlantic Cable through the agency of the Associated Press. The following is a copy of Mr. Field's message to the President:

"Trinity Bay, Aug. 5.

To the President of the U. S., Washington:

Dear Sir: The Atlantic Telegraph Cable on board the United States frigate Niagara and H. B. M. steamer Agamemnon, was joined in mid-ocean July 29th, and has been successfully laid; and as soon as the two ends are connected with the land lines, Queen Victoria will send a message to you, and the cable will be kept free until after your reply has been transmitted.

With great respect,
Your obedient servant,
Cyrus W. Field.

Trinity Bay, Aug. 6.

The Atlantic Telegraph cable was successfully landed here yesterday morning, AND IS IN PERFECT ORDER.

The Agamemnon has landed her end of the cable, and we are now receiving signals from the Telegraph House at Valentia.

Foreign News.

TURKEY.

A Marseilles dispatch says: A serious revolutionary movement has broken out against the Christian population in Syria. It is said that Tripoli and Latkia are in a state of insurrection.

In Candia the Christians have either barricaded themselves or taken flight.

NEWS BY THE PRINCE ALBERT.

Halifax, Aug. 6. Advices are to the 1st of June, and confirm the report of the capture of the forts at Peiho.

Negotiations having failed, the Chinese were attacked on the 19th of May by the English and French, and the forts captured, with much loss. The Chinese fought well. Ninety-eight guns were captured. The loss of the enemy is supposed to be very heavy.

INDIA.

Dates of Calcutta are of June 19th.

Oude was still very unsettled.

The heat was terrific, and the British troops suffered greatly. The sun has been more deadly than the enemy. The troops were being housed until the fierce heat was over. The season is said to be the hottest known for twenty-five years.

The colony which the Free Love disciples propose to establish on one of the South Sea Islands, is named "The Equitable Emigration Association." The chief objects proposed to be attained under their platform are these: Indididuality, and the sovereignty of the individual; crime to be treated as insanity; industrial products to be exchanged for their equivalents; labor for labor; a circulating medium, based on labor; all property to be individual; freedom of relations with the free and equal sovereignty of woman; all national wealth, lands, mines, &c., to be inalienable; education to be joined to art. Vessels will be purchased for the colonists, to be paid for by them, the shares at $50 each, to give the owner a right to a passage and rations to the colony. A fair treaty shall be made with the natives for their land. The first vessel is expected to leave about the 16th of October next.

NOTICES.

Fare Reduced.

The fare on the Western R. R. to the Wilbraham campmeeting, is reduced to half price, which is $2 50 from Boston, for both ways. We hope to make similar arrangements with other roads, which will be noticed in due time.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is expected to be at Lake Village, to be holden in the early part of October. Particulars hereafter.

T. M. Preble,
Clerk of the Conference.
East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro. D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. Preble.
East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, a Tent or Campmeeting will be holden in Lanesville, Ct., on the line of the Housatonic Railroad, 30 miles north of Bridgeport, on the old ground, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

An invitation is extended to all, hoping all of God's children, who can, will attend and feel free to act as he may direct. Ministering brethren are invited to come as the way may open, and preach the word as the Lord may direct. All, who can conveniently, will please bring their tents and blankets. Arrangements will be made to accommodate those who may choose to board on the ground. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductors they wish to stop at Lanesville Station.

The 10.30 AM, and 6.35 PM trains from Bridgeport arrive at Lanesville at 12 M. and 8.45 PM. The 9.25 AM train from Pittsfield arrives at 1.10 PM.

L. Mills, for the Brethren.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept. 6th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, in a beautiful grove on land of Bro. Johnson. Our brethren and sisters coming from Hartford or New Haven will buy their tickets for Barnes' Station. But the cars will stop at the ground about one mile before reaching the station, so there will be no expense in getting yourselves or baggage from the cars to the ground. There will be a boarding tent on the ground, so that all those who wish to hire their board can be accommodated. Preachers and the worthy poor boarded free. Those who come with their own teams will find provision made for pasturing, hay and grain on reasonable terms. Those who come with their own teams, wishing to avoid the cars, will take notice that the cars leave Collinsville at 8 o'clock, A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., and returning, arrive at 1 o'clock, P. M. and 6 P. M. We hope there will be a general gathering at this meeting, and we will do all we can to make you comfortable; and we trust we shall have a profitable meeting.

S. Johnson,
E. B. Gilbert,
S. Tatro,
L. Pond,
S. G. Mathewson, } Committee.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, Aug. 23d, and continue one week. Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 50 cts. per day; or one shilling per meal for breakfast and supper, and 25 cents for dinner. The fare is reduced to half price on the Western R. R., which will be $2.50 from Boston, for both ways. Half fare also on the Connecticut Railroad. We hope to make similar arrangements with other roads, which will be noticed in the Crisis.

This meeting is pleasantly located in a neighborhood noted for sustaining good order, and for acts of kindness towards those who assemble there from year to year to worship the God of our fathers. We anticipate a large gathering of the Lord's dear children, and that much good will be accomplished. Those who were present last year will remember that the great object of the meeting was for the salvation of sinners, and that the effort was greatly blessed. We hope that our Brn. and Srs. will come again this year, strong in the Lord, and bring their unconverted children and neighbors for the purpose of persuading them to be christians.

All who believe in Christ as our Savior, and are willing to labor for the salvation of sinners, are invited to take part in the meetings. We would earnestly request all to make this meeting a subject of special prayer, that many wanderers may be reclaimed, the saints greatly strengthened, and the name of the Lord magnified among the people.

R. E. Ladd,
Hiram Munger,
Geo. T. Adams, } Committee of Arrangements.

Notice is hereby given to all our friends who wish to avail themselves of the privilege of being at the shore, and enjoying a salt water bath in the beautiful Narraganset Bay; that our Brn. Spencer and Bowen, who keep a respectable stand at the Old Button Woods in Warwick, will make special preparations for the accommodation of all that wish to come, on Thursday, Aug. 12th. If stormy, the next day. A carriage will run from the Appanug Depot to the ground. Religious services will be held on the ground. Price of dinner 37 cts. E. Bellows.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co., Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

Moses Chandler, Evangelist.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.
I. Damman.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets. WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.
Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at Pine Creek, Indiana, to commence on the 13th day of August, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over the Lord's day. The above named meeting will be holden on the farm of Wm. P. Martin, 3 miles north of Goshen, 6 miles south of Bristol, 8 miles south-east of Elkhart.

Brethren coming on the Air Line R. R., will stop at Goshen. Those coming from the east on the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan R. R., will stop at Bristol. Those coming from the west, on R. R., will stop at Elkhart. Brethren leaving the cars at either of the above named stations, on Thursday, will find free conveyance to the meeting.

We hope to see a general gathering of ministers and lay brethren.

By order of the Church,
D. R. Mansfield.
Elijah Beck.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,
Elbridge Chisam.
John A. Kennedy.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us, and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber. P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

Campmeeting.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept 6, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, on land of Bro. Johnson. Arrangements have been made for the cars to stop at the ground. Particulars hereafter.

S. G. Mathewson,
For the Brethren.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Grove Meeting at Southington, Conn., on Sunday, Aug. 15th. The above named meeting will be holden in a grove about half a mile directly west of the Congregationalist Church. We hope to see a general gathering of those that love the truth.

For the Brethren,
R. W. Neale.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.
N. F. Nason.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I expect to preach at Lake Village, Sunday, Aug. 22. T. M. Preble.

Providence permitting, I will preach in—

Augusta, Me.,	- - - -	Aug.	13th.
Portland,	- - - Sunday,	"	15th.
Yarmouth,	- Monday evening,	"	16th.
Biddeford,	- Tuesday "	"	17th.
Kennebunk Port,	Wednes'y "	"	18th.

Will some one meet me at the depot, to take me to Kennebunk Port?

Dover, N. H.,	Thursday evening,	Aug.	19th.
Exeter, "	Friday "	"	20th.
Lowell, Mass.,	- - Sunday,	"	22d.

Israel Damman.

Eld. Thos. Smith appoints to preach as follows:—

Augusta, Me., - - - -	Aug.	15th.
Gardiner, "	"	18th.
Richmond, " (Reed Meetinghouse,)	"	19th.
Litchfield, "	"	20th.
Richmond, " (Reed Meetinghouse,)	"	22d.
So. Hope, " (Schoolhouse,) -	"	27th.
Lincolnville, Me., "	"	29th.
No. Searsport, "	"	31st.

I will preach in Goshen, Mass., Wednesday evening, August 18th, and every evening through the week, and over the following Sunday. S. W. Bishop.

If Providence permit, I will hold meetings as follows:—

Arnold's Bridge, R. I., Tuesday eve'g, Aug 17th.
River Point, where Bro. Taylor may appoint, 18th.
New Britain, Ct., Thursday evening, 19th.
Bristol, Ct., Friday evening, 20th.
From Saturday until Monday, Plymouth Hollow and vicinity, where Bro. Humphreyville will appoint. George Baxter.

[I learn this young brother is worthy, and out of health. Will the brethren help him from place to place.] Hiram Munger.

Miles Grant appoints to preach at the Town Hall in Rutland, Vt., Aug 8th.

S. W. Bishop appoints to preach as follows:—

Brimfield, (if the brethren will meet me at Warren, middle train, Aug. 12th.
Palmer, (where Bro. A. M. Higgins may appoint,) - - " 13th.
Springfield, (where Eld. R. E. Ladd may appoint,) - - - " 15th.
S. W. Bishop.

P. S. I shall look for letters at all of the above-named places. Consequently, if any of the above appointments interfere with previous arrangements, please let me know at the earliest convenient opportunity. S. W. B.

Business.

To Correspondents.

M. Greenough—Money received.

Jas. Baker—All right.

Wm. Jackson—Money received.

Sr. Nancy J. Pribble—We have received your remittance from Windsor, but you have not named the State. You will please let us know, as we cannot see your name upon our books.

Cash Receipts.

☞ Our Canada subscribers, and all in the Provinces, will remember that we have to pre pay the postage on their papers, amounting to 26 cents a year; hence they should send $2.26 for a year's subscription.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

M J Barton 163, 50 cents; C W Bemis 153, $1.50; A C Haley 175, $3.00.

Mrs. I L Oakley, Wm Jackson 208, J C Pease 156, J Hammond 176, A P Hyde 182, R Willard 194, Mrs L Davis 178, C Perry 182, J A Cole 161, A Libby 178, R S Griffin 166, J Griffin 179, T D Bailey 182, A Anthony 182, F P Smith 178, R L Johnson 179,—$1.00 each.

M Holden 208, L P Russel 208, H H Northey 169, W F Harding 202, $2 00 each.

A friend, for the poor $1.00.

For Books and Tracts.—J B Waite $2.00; J W Hazen $6.00; L Hanson $6 00, E D Searle $1.00; R S Griffin $1.00; C Fleming $1.18.

Subscribers to the Camp Ground fund are requested to forward their subscription to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., at as early a date as possible. Arrangements are now being made to make the contemplated improvements, and it is desirable to have the means at hand to meet all bills as they are made. All our brethren and sisters are invited to contribute to the fund, whether they are subscribers or not.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment [illegible]

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. [illegible] a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genneseo, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. [illegible] cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.–The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—* Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—† Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks, separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 100 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by [illegible]

† The Olive Leaves [illegible] that can be separated for [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another [illegible] Resting Place; three, My Friend [illegible] the thing to [illegible] and sinners.

☞ The following books [illegible] of I. R. Wales [illegible] Harp, by Elder Himes [illegible] Children [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

TO BRO. AND SR. JAMES MORRISON.

We met you but one transient hour,
In this life's dubious day;
We welcomed you into this bower,
Where oft we kneel to pray.

But duties you could not withstand,
Greeted your anxious ear,
And bade you clasp the parting hand,
And drop the parting tear.

And O! perchance we meet no more,
To join our songs of praise,
Till on the everlasting shore
We join the seraph's lays.

Yet shall our name be borne on high,
While breathing oft your cares
To Him who hears the contrite's cry,
And answereth our prayers?

And till we moulder in the grave,
Or there your home shall be,
While gently there the grasses wave,
Will you remember me?

We will not entertain despair,
Though numerous our woes,
For soon the King descends the air,
To bid our warfare close.

Then let us wait and watch and pray,
Nor count the moments long
Ere dawns the long-expected day,
And sound redemption's song.

Soon friends may meet to part no more,
Nor shed the pearly tear;
Soon we may sing, "our sufferings o'er,"—
Then let us cease to fear.

Your Sr. in Christ, M. MATHEWS.

Danville, C. E.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Coming—A Subject of Hope.—No. 2.

But why so much discrepancy upon a subject which we find so extensively and explicitly treated of in the Scriptures? The only answer to this inquiry is, because of the different manner in which different persons read and understand the same truths. Not because the Scriptures do not always read in precisely the same manner,—nor because the Spirit which taketh of the things of God and showeth them unto us, does not always accord to the same teaching; but it is because of a perverted principle of interpretation. The importance of a correct system of scriptural interpretation can scarcely be less felt now than by the early reformers, when, for want of it, almost the entire Bible was hid from the understanding of the mass for whose benefit it was expressly given. "Twenty Doctors make one text read twenty different ways, as children make discord upon plain song," said William Tyndale; and so it is now. The hermeneutics of these times allows an advent of our Lord to occur at the destruction of Jerusalem, in the visits of pestilence, in the scourge of war, and in the approach of death. And then, so long as this is a fact—and a fact IT IS—sanctioned by the learned and pious teachers of Israel, how can we expect of the church at large any thing but darkness on this otherwise glorious hope? And why should we marvel that some, like the learned and pious Bro. G. W. B——, should question the doctrine of Christ's personal advent to earth again? But to us this is saying no less than "the resurrection is past already." See 2 Tim. 2: 18. When doctrines so vastly important and so glorious as these are forgotten or questioned, may we not, like the prophet of God, lament and cry out, "How the gold is become dim! the stones of the sanctuary are poured out in the top of every street." Lam 4: 1.

Yet the coming of our Lord remains to the faithful—who presume so much as to read the Scriptures for themselves—the subject of joyful anticipation. And now that the event is shortly to be realized, the Church may well arouse to attend to the practical importance that justly attaches itself to this subject. After fifteen years investigation of this subject, the accumulative evidence of the nearness of this event never appeared so immense as now.

1. We are now at the extreme point of every consecutive prophecy, or in other words, are where we may expect the last event included in those passages, when the day of the Lord comes.

2. Signs indicating the nearness of that event are rapidly increasing. Among these may be mentioned—Signs in the celestial world. See Joel 2: 30, 31; Matt. 24: 29; Luke 21: 25; Rev. 6: 12, 13. The increase of knowledge. Dan. 12: 4. Turmoil and perplexity among the nations. [illegible] Jer. 25: 32; Luke 21: [illegible] On which account there is now being made almost universal and unheard of preparations for war. The stupid indifference and infidelity of the church. Ezek. 13: 10; Matt. 24: 48; 25: 1-5; 1 Thess. 5: 3; 2 Tim. 3. The appearance of Spiritualism. Isa. 8: 19; 1 Tim. 4: 1; 2 Tim. 3: 8; Rev. 16: 13, 14.

3. And to all this may be added the almost universal expectation of some great event. With such evidence, how can we but expect the event so long desired will shortly be realized!

P. B. MORGAN.

From Sr. M. V. Cady.

TO ALL THE BELOVED IN CHRIST JESUS:—For the first time I now intrude myself upon your notice, through the medium of the Crisis; a paper I have often seen, but never felt so much to sympathize in the views its contributors advance, as now. It is rather with feelings of diffidence and unworthiness that I introduce myself to you; yet we are all heirs of the self-same heritage, co-workers with the self same Jesus,—all of one family, bought with the same precious price—the blood of Christ: and why need we be distant or formal one toward another? We may cheer and encourage each other much by relating the different phases of our journey, as we are passing along this vale of tears.

I feel to thank and praise my kind, heavenly Father, that he has enabled me to espouse the truth, as I believe it is, in Christ Jesus. How long I groped my way in darkness, hoping to see the glory and beauty lying along the pathway to heaven, but still keeping my eyes shut! How long I might have remained so I know not, had not the Lord sent us Elder Grant to labor in this part of his moral vineyard. The Lord seemed pleased to bless this means to the enlightening of my mind, and I will always give thanks. Never have I had such glimpses of heaven and the future; never have I known such peace and comfort in believing; never have I had such strong manifestations that I am indeed a child of God, and have passed "from death unto life," and am "living the life that now is, by faith in Jesus;" and shall live that which is to come, in the light of his glory, and sing the song of redeeming grace and dying love; never have I so much loved to search the Scriptures; and never have they appeared so comforting and consoling, and the promises so bright and precious.

I love God, his word and all his people—the meek and lowly followers of Christ. "God is love." How much he has done for us! He so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die that we may live. His love is infinitely boundless, incomprehensibly holy and pure! and with what great care ought we alway to watch and guard ourselves, even with unceasing prayer, that we may be fit temples for an indwelling of his Holy Spirit.

My daily prayer to God is, "Make me humble and meek. Let me not, for an instant, rest in my own strength, but ever look to Thee, 'the Author and finisher of our faith.' 'Be merciful unto me, O God be merciful unto me, for my soul trusteth in Thee, yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I take my refuge.'"

Pray for me, brethren and sisters. Pray that I may endure unto the end, while I will present my own case at the mercy seat. Let us all be good and love God. Though it be twilight to us here, for a little season, yet the dawning will appear, more bright, more glorious, than even our utmost conceptions.

When the first tint of daylight streaks
The mountain top and tower,
To sleeping Nature morning speaks,
And wakes the dewy flower.
How glad the traveler hies him out,
And happy wends his way,—
He hears all waking Nature shout—
"'Tis dawning of the day!"

The twilight has a dreamy charm,
And red-capped cloudlets lie
On mountains tall, and mists becalm
The traveler's wandering eye.
Yet, some may love to sit and muse
In evening twilight grey,
But happier, brighter, are the hues
Just at the dawn of day.

The Christians on life's journey here
Find many a twilight hour;
But yet they know dawn will appear
With still more radiant power.
Then let us here with patience wait,
And watch the earliest ray,
For happy is the Christian's state
When dawns the glorious day!

MINNIE V. CADY.

Sutherland Falls, Vt.

Never chase a lie, for if you keep quiet, truth will eventually overtake and destroy it.

For the Crisis.

Be Gentle.

Speak gently to the erring,
They must have toiled in vain:
Perhaps unkindness made them so—
O win them back again!

I have seen a kind, indulgent mother, heavily burdened with the care and responsibility of a large family; some of her children were trying to serve God faithfully, yet from want of experience they have never considered that the trials and cares with which she was overcharged was a great hindrance to her in the divine life. Because she has not the charms and allurements of earth to contend with as they have, they don't seem to consider her weakness. When asked if their mother enjoys religion, they say no; but she once did. Perhaps these children have not spoken unkindly to mother, and perhaps they did the other day when mother was so hurried and spoke hastily to them.

But there are more who treat their mothers neglectfully. Perhaps they neglect to watch the little family concerns, and have the care of them rest upon them, which would lighten very much the cares which weigh so heavily upon your mother. Perhaps when your mother can leave to go to prayer meeting, (for she cannot always leave,) you have offered merely to stay at home, but in such a way that she couldn't help seeing that you had rather have her stay. But urge her to go; tell her you can see to the children as well as she can for so short a time, and when you have helped all you can about getting her things for her to put on, and she is gone and the children put to bed; then sit down and think of some of her cares, crosses, denials, perplexities, &c. I think by this time you will feel like kneeling down and praying God to bless and strengthen poor dear mother, that she may fill the place assigned her here. But I will say no more to the children, only let us be good in this respect; let us take all the care of father and mother that we can,—there will be enough left them. No matter if we do get tired, I presume we shall get rested; but I will tell you I believe we are responsible in a good measure, if we are children, for our parents' enjoyment.

I have noticed, upon the other hand, some parents seem to treat their children almost indifferently about spiritual things, although they are striving to be holy. If they are overcome, instead of reasoning with and talking kindly to them, they will reprove sharply; they don't seem to sympathize with them at all when the attractions of the world are magnified to their view. They don't seem to consider but that the temptations of youth must be the same as the temptations of those more advanced in years. Who can a child with greater propriety confide in when tempted, tried, and perhaps overcome of temptations, than a parent? But how can he confide in them when they show no sympathy, but reprove by saying, 'You ought not to have done it." True, they should tell them they had done wrong, but at the same time offer them the consolations of the gospel and teach them that they should be more watchful in the future amid these last day perils. I know parents love their children well enough to do any thing for them, but they need a great deal of religion to do for them aright.

Again, I have noticed in the church, if a brother or sister is overtaken in a fault, there is a disposition to avoid meeting or conversing with them; instead of speaking kindly to them, they had rather not say any thing to them at all, they are so tried with them. They seem to forget for the time being the command of Paul for the spiritual ones to restore such an one in the spirit of meekness.

I pray that we may always have a disposition to speak gently—have so much of the spirit of Jesus as never to speak harshly or hastily, but to have our whole deportment Christ like.

Yours in Christian affection,

JENNIE D. ROBERTS.

Danielsonville, Ct.

HOW TO SECURE A SMALL CONGREGATION.—1. Scold at the church until its members become discouraged.

2. Preach long, dry, disconnected sermons—poorly studied, and carelessly delivered.

3. Tell little anecdotes every Sabbath, until the people become perfectly disgusted, and can endure it no longer.

Do not fail to tell anecdotes, because they help lengthen out the sermon.

Secure the approbation of the aged, and you will enjoy the confidence, if not the love, of the young.

Ambition travels on a road too narrow for friendship and too steep for safety.

Choice Selections.

Idle.

What a faint idea many persons have of their duty to be known as the followers of Christ. No man lighteth a candle and putteth it under a bushel, but many cherish an interest in Christ and fail to let it be known. Jesus says to them, "Ye are the light of the world," but they do not allow the world to enjoy the advantage of that light. There is an imperative necessity that all who love Christ should declare it. Their own moral nature demands it. They can attain to no vigor of religious life without openly defending their faith. Where liberty of speech is prohibited, the ability to think is soon enervated, and nearly lost. Freedom to write and speak stimulates to mental vigor. Compare the mental condition of countries where freedom to speak and write is prohibited, with that of countries where it is secured and encouraged, and this statement will be verified.

Now christians who put their light under a bushel, and do not openly, habitually speak for Christ, voluntarily impose upon themselves the evils of proscription. Their moral natures wither, or never attain to any vigorous development. They remain as babes, weak, unstable, joyless. If they would act they would grow. But their indolence and cowardice is their ruin. The church suffers too; for every christian needs the encouragement of active life from every other christian. Especially do the weak suffer loss. The activity of that brother who has hid his light, is just the thing that his weak brethren need to give them strength. But he stands there a spectator, a critic, watching their failings; does nothing to aid them, but much to discourage. He is guilty of withholding sympathy and the assistance of example, and flings obstacles in their path, and censures them for falling over them. Why stand ye here idle? Why does he rob those poor brethren who struggle with foes without and with weakness and feeble faith, of his example for good? What excuse has he for turning judge, when there is work for him to do?

Suppose that all persons who believe in Christ should do just as some are inclined to, where would be the church? Where the Sabbath School? Where the preaching of the gospel? The light of the gospel would vanish from the earth. They take no responsibility; bestow no thought upon the best plan to do good, and spend no time to build up the Redeemer's kingdom. The most they do, is to find fault with what others do. If the church was dependent upon them for its existence, it would not survive a month.—Morning Star.

Never ask God "Why."

In the absence of the principal of a grammar school, his pupils formed two societies for mutual improvement. Their meetings were held in the only commodious vacant house in the village. A letter informed the teacher of what had been done. He immediately wrote, positively forbidding all further meetings. His order was strictly, though with pain, obeyed. It required all his good standing among his devoted young friends to restrain them from believing this act tyrannical. So painful was the state of their minds, that on his return, all preferred a respectful request for explanation of this mysterious conduct. Reminding them of his former and known kindness, he inquired if that, united with his declaration that he had good reasons, was not sufficient. They promptly expressed their confidence both in his kindness and his veracity, but said it would relieve their minds to know his reasons. "Then," said he, "I have several. One is that a few days before I left you, three men, having been secretly lodged in the house where the meetings were held, had died of the small pox. Are you satisfied?" All assented.

So, child of sorrow, God is trying you. He spoils your plans, he crosses your wishes, he takes away your delights, but he has good reasons for all he does. Yet he frequently conceals the cause of all these trials. He says, "What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter."—Chris. Coun.

PRIDE.—Dr. Franklin says, Pride is as cruel a beggar as want, and a great deal more saucy. When you have bought one fine thing you must buy ten more, that your appearance may be all of a piece.

Night is the time to pray;
Our Savior oft withdrew
To desert mountains far away;
So will his followers do;
Steal from the throng to haunts untrod,
And hold communion there with God.

Many a true heart that would have come back like a dove to the ark after the first transgression, has been frightened beyond recall by the angry look and menace, the taunt, the savage charity of an unforgiving world.

There is usually the most assurance where there is the most ignorance; those feel certain of safety who have not light enough to discover their danger.

THE NECESSITY OF STRUGGLE.—If there be no enemy, no fight; if no fight, no victory; if no victory, no crown.—Savanar.

HUMILITY.—The sufficiency of my merit is to know that my merit is not sufficient.—S. August.

SONGS OF THE KINGDOM.

BY THE REV. JOHN EDMOND.

Isaiah xxxv.

Desert plains shall blossom fair,
All with flowery verdure clad;
Lonely wastes shall harvest bear,
Echoing through the odorous air
Voices of the glad.

Regions drear, whose burning sands
Nursed afar the fell simoon,
Rich as Sharon's cultured lands—
Beautiful as Carmel stands
Robed in vines, shall bloom.

Horeb's heights, where horrors frown—
Naked wilderness of stone!—
Oaks shall shade and cedars crown;
Like the mountains of renown,
Glorious Lebanon.

Where the robber made his den,
Gloomy haunt of blood and fear,
Happy homes of holy men
Meet the lingering pilgrim's ken,
Hymns of praise his ear.

Where the venomed asp had crept,
Where the fiery scorpion lay,
Where the gorged hyæna slept,
Childhood fair, that never wept,
Fearlessly shall play.

For the glory of the Lord,
Even our own God's excellency,
When the Spirit forth is poured,
Second Comforter adored!
All the earth shall see.

Strengthen, then, the trembling knee;
Bid the fainting heart be strong;
Fear not, meek ones, fear not ye!
God shall come, and foes shall flee;
Wake, O lands, to song!

Lame men, leaping as the fawn,
Hail the promised Healer come;
Blindness, with its veil withdrawn,
Gazes, raptured, on the dawn;
Shout for joy the dumb.

Fountains from the desert gushing
Cleave with grateful streams the sands;
Reeds by glassy pools are rushing,
Dragon-lairs are gardens flushing
In the parched lands.

There the King's highway is seen—
Way of holiness and light,
Never trod by steps unclean;
Simple wayfarers therein
Err not from the right.

There no lion fierce shall stalk,
There no ravening beast may roam;
God's redeemed alone there walk;
"Of the city still their talk,"
Whither go they home.

Lo, at length, with voice of songs,
Crowned with gladness fading never,
Heaven receives the ransomed throngs;
Tears and sighings, woes and wrongs,
Flee away forever.

—Juv. Miss. Mag.

A Description of Christ.

The following is said to have been sent to the senate at Rome, by Publius Sentatus, a governor of Judea.

"There appeared in these our days, a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who is yet living amongst us, and of the Gentiles is accepted as a Prophet of Truth, but by his own disciples called the Son of God. He raiseth the dead, and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature, somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear; his hair is of the color of a filbert, full ripe, and plain almost down to his ears, but from his ears downward somewhat curled, more orient of color and waving about his shoulders. In the midst of his head goeth a seam or partition of hair, after the manner of the Nazarites; his forehead very plain and smooth; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautified with comely red; his nose and mouth so formed as nothing can be reprehended; his beard somewhat thick, agreeable in color to the hair of his head, not of any great length, but forked in the midst; of an innocent mature look; his eyes grey, clear and quick. In reproving he is terrible; in admonishing courteous and fair spoken, pleasant in speech mixed with gravity. It cannot be remembered that any have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep. In proportion of body well shaped and straight; his hands and arms right delectable to behold; in speaking, very temperate, modest and wise. A man of singular beauty surpassing the children of men."

THE LOVE OF THE WORLD.—Behold, the world is withered in itself, yet flourisheth in our hearts, everywhere death, everywhere grief, everywhere desolation. On every side we are smitten; on every side filled with bitterness, and yet with the blind mind of carnal desire, we love her bitterness. It flieth, and we follow it; it falleth, yet we stick to it: and because we cannot enjoy it falling, we fall with it, and enjoy it fallen.—S. Gregory in Hom.

THE DAILY LIFE.—For my part, I am not so much troubled about my future state, as about my present character in the sight of a holy and heart-searching God. To live a holy, self-denying life, I conceive to be of the first importance. It is by the daily lives of christians that Christ is either honored or dishonored.—Martha Whiting.

If a good act benefits no one else, it benefits the doer.

"I Don't Feel Like Praying."

"I don't feel like singing, praying, or talking—excuse me."

Indeed! So your religion, it seems, is a religion of feeling merely—not of faith, love and action. What is your example? How does your gloomy silence appear? Is God well pleased? Is he honored? Is your own soul benefitted? What says God? "Be instant in season and out of season." Go forward. Open your mouth and God will fill it—open it, open it wide in prayer and praise. Suppose a minister should say, "I don't feel like preaching," or an editor, "I don't feel like writing; I feel, dull, stupid, unprepared." So, forsooth, we have no preaching, no editorials. Suppose the head of a family should omit family prayer, morning and evening, merely because he did not always feel like it, or was not in a good frame, how soon would every domestic altar be abandoned? How frequently is it when professors of religion are called upon to engage in prayer, singing or to speak for God, that they reply, "I don't feel like it," while on other subjects the tongues of these same persons will go like a mill clapper.—Golden Rule.

Scraps.

He that will often put this world and the next before him, and look steadfastly at both, will find the latter growing greater, and the former less.

What maintains one vice, would bring up two children.

"Some men grow mad by studying much to know,
But who grows mad by studying good to grow?"

Some men will wrangle for religion, write for it, fight for it, die for it—everything but live for it.

An Eastern caliph being sorely afflicted with ennui, was advised that an exchange of shirts with a man who was perfectly happy, would cure him. After a long search he found such a man, but was informed that the happy fellow had no shirt.

For the Children.

[Selected for the Crisis by MARION A. COTTON.]

Extract from a letter written by John Todd, D.D., to his little son, John Edwards Todd, in 1839.

"My Dear Boy:—

You know how busy I am, and how seldom I have even half an hour to be with my children, because my duties are so many and so pressing. Should you live to grow up to be a man, and live—as I hope you will—to do good long after my head rests in the grave, you will wonder why your father, with all his professional duties, should ever write books. Let me tell you. Far away from our house, lives an aged widow. She has no children near her. She has no home. She has no money. She has been deprived of reason ever since I can remember. She does not even know her own children. That aged woman is your father's mother! For the last twelve years I have had the honor to provide for this afflicted woman, and to do it, I have been obliged to use my pen. For this I have written books, and every cent of the proceeds have been thus devoted. Nothing else would ever have made me become an author—nothing else could ever keep me one. Have I not done right? I charge you then, my dear child, and I charge every child who reads this book, that if ever you live, and as long as you live, never fail to be kind, affectionate and grateful to your mother. And if in her age she needs your aid, give it to her, though you work in a brick yard or in a coal mine, to earn the money. Never let a sorrow dwell in her heart which you can remove, or a grief which you can soften. Next to your God, let your mother have your love."

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1858. | WHOLE NO. 155. VOL. VII. NO. 25.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE HYPOCRITE'S HOPE

"The hypocrite's hope shall perish."—Job 8: 13.

I've brought the dark cloud in mercy around thee,
Oft bade the stern voice of death make thee shrink;
While hope's pure star has long lingered to aid thee,
Madly thou'st pressed on sin's dangerous brink.

The star that cheer'd thee has gone down forever,
Its light expir'd 'neath goads' shadowy wing;
No more to beam on thy darkness,—no never—
(Sweet ray so precious) its aid to thee bring.

Vain thy regret for the spoil of thy treasures;
The spider's frail web is dashed with a breath;
Such was thy hope, 'mid the world and its pleasures,
Wedding thy soul to the shadows of death.

List to the echo! past accents of mercy,
Dying away borne on time's ruthless blast;
Ah! it enhances their value and beauty,
To see them retreating like friends of the past.

Stretch forth thy hands! but the past will not greet thee,
Strain thy dim vision! the last glow is gone;
Goodness abused comes no more to meet thee;
Linger no longer,—the sweet dove has flown.

No more thy lips, with the world's fitful fever
Burning and parched, shall be quench'd at life's stream;
One boon is left thee, to sleep on forever;
Lethe's dark flood, where the lost never dream.

Hope of the lost, press it close to thy bosom!
Dearly thou'st purchased the wages of sin;
He will repay thee, and death is thy portion,
No friend can save thee; no power can redeem.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Seven Last Plagues.

Rev. 15th and 16th Chapters.

As the subject indicated by the above heading is one which has engaged a large share of the attention of the Bible student, and perhaps caused him as much perplexity as almost any other portion of the inspired word; and as I trust the Lord has enabled me, by the light of his truth, to perceive its import and application in harmonious connection with the other portions of the prophetic chart, I have felt it duty to give to the church, through the medium of the Crisis, such an exposition of the subject as I trust may, by the blessing of God, clear up the difficulties from the unbiassed mind, and bring light out of darkness, and order out of seeming confusion.

I wish to remark, however, first, that if we would understand the "things of God," and the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, we must lay aside our own and all human wisdom, and seek light only in God's light, and drink from that fountain which he himself has supplied.

Our attention, in the examination of this subject, will be directed mainly to the solution of two questions, as comprising the principal matters of doubt and difficulty to be encountered in the endeavor to understand the whole subject. These questions then are:

First.—When, or at what epoch, are those plagues to be visited upon the world, or the obnoxious objects?

Second.—In what sense, whether symbolically or literally, is the imagery here brought to view, i. e. the agents by whom, and the objects on which, the various vials of wrath are to be poured forth, to be taken or understood?

In answer to these questions, then, I would say—

1. The position to which I have been brought, by a prayerful examination of the subject, is that none of the vials are poured out or fulfilled until subsequent to the close of the present or gospel dispensation, and the deliverance or redemption of God's waiting people.

2. That the agents and the objects of the wrath are to be taken in their literal signification, at least so far as the propriety of the language used will permit. I am well aware, however, that in taking this position, I must do so in opposition to the teachings of nearly all the expositors who have attempted the explication of the subject; but as truth, the truth of God, is word, I can only accord to any or all the opinions of men, that weight or influence to which, as I view it, that word will justly entitle them. We now come to the reasons for the above named position.

1st. I believe the vials are not poured out until the close of the gospel dispensation, because they are "the seven last plagues," or, to express it more correctly, the last seven, as it should have been rendered, which implies that there had been a previous or foregoing series, of a character somewhat analogous, and, by consequence, that this 'last' entire series is subsequent to all those of the preceding; otherwise they would not be the 'seven last,' or last seven. But we fail to find such a series, except as presented under the symbol of the seven seals, or of the seven trumpets; and as the seals are mainly occupied with a prophetic history of the church, we can only look for them under the sounding of the seven trumpets. Here, however, we find the case fully met, though not with identity of name, yet so much so in character as to establish their relationship; the last three, being by way of eminence, termed "woes," or "wo trumpets." But the seventh trumpet brings us to the end of time, and the day or age of the judgment; hence the last seven plagues, being subsequent, must be in that judgment age. But another reason for the position taken is—

2d. They are the vials of God's wrath, which in fulfillment of the threatenings of chap. 14: 10, are poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation, and therefore cannot be poured out until the "Day of wrath" has come, which we find (chap. 11: 18) is after the seventh trumpet has sounded, which is inconsistent with the character of his visitations during the gospel dispensation; I mean the being "without mixture." Hence we find the plagues or woes under the sounding of the trumpets, previous to the seventh, restricted or limited as to "the third part," or to a certain period of time, &c., while the action of the vials is left absolute and unrestrained. Therefore, I conclude these plagues cannot fall on the world until those who, like Noah and Lot, shall "be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man" shall have been taken away; or, as Isaiah has it, "Enter thou into thy chambers and shut thy doors about thee; Until all the indignation be overpast," for then the Lord shall come forth out of his place "to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity," while the earth shall disclose her blood and shall no more cover her slain. Or, as declared by the victors on the sea of glass, pending the effusion of the vials, "Thy judgments are made manifest." Compare, also, the second and third vials, and Paul's reference in Rom. 2: 5, with the day of wrath and REVELATION of the righteous judgment of God.

3d. Because we find that previous to their outpouring, "the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven is opened," (chap. 15: 5.) But we also find that this is done under the sounding of the seventh trumpet, (Rev. 11: 19,) indicating the close of the dispensation, or the ending of the mystery of God in the preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles, as the rending of the vail of the Jewish temple, when Jesus, the Lamb of God, expired on Calvary's cross, indicated the closing of the Mosaic dispensation, and (so far as their efficacy was concerned) the end of Jewish rites and sacrifices.

4th. Because that in immediate connection with these plagues, but before they are poured forth, those who had gotten the victory over the beast, and his image, &c., are seen standing (redeemed) on the sea of glass, having the harps of God—evidently the same company as in the 14th chap. 1st verse, and onward. But as the redemption or deliverance of God's people does not come until Christ the deliverer appears the second time, it appears to me the position in reference to the time of the "Seven last Plagues" is sufficiently established.

In hope and love.

For the Crisis.

Fools.

"The fool hath said in his heart there is no God."—Psalm 53: 1.

Every reasoning faculty of the human mind, unless wilfully blind or perverted, subscribes to the doctrine of a Great First cause, in the person of an Almighty, immutable and eternal God; and he who advocates that there exists such an overruling power merely as a principle, sets up his doctrine in opposition to the Word of Truth and sound philosophy; and is therefore, emphatically, a fool in every sense of the word.

The natural taste for food in time becomes vitiated by the frequent use of substances foreign and injurious to the body, till all alimental diet is eschewed, and the appetite craves only that which heats and corrupts the blood, and brings on premature disease, decay and death. So it is with those who, "wise in their own conceit," cater to the depraved appetites of the multitudes who run to do evil, reckless of consequence, so that they keep alive that novelty which the spirit of the present generation demands. Isolating and wresting texts of scripture with unnatural and sophistical meaning, to their own destruction; and, as it were, disjointing and dislocating the whole body of the Bible, and in raising in its stead the monstrous hydra of rampant infidelity. With what satanic ingenuity do those who pride themselves on their knowledge, twist and warp passages of Holy Writ, impeaching the veracity of Jehovah, and raising their puny voices in vulgar blasphemy and rude jest, seeking to break down the defences which surround the virtuous and the good, and lay waste all that our nobler natures deem sacred to the ravages of the destroyer. And because the sword of justice does not cut them off, they shake their fist in the face of heaven, gnash their teeth, and say in their heart "There is no God!"

Fools are they even in that dreadful sense, for which those wrongfully using it to a brother were in danger of the fires of Ghi hinom. Moreh—"Thou fool," Dr. Clark says is from the Hebrew word Marah to rebel, and signifies an apostate from all good, and was only used by the Jews as implying the greatest enormity and aggravated guilt. May the term not therefore be applied with fearful aptitude to those who, in the acme of their blasphemy and insolent daring, give the lie to divine revelation, when everything in heaven and on the earth combine and cry aloud against a dreadful heresy, engendered in hell, and brought forth in the hearts of the children of the devil.

Napoleon, whose mighty intellect and power held nations prostrate at his feet, once effectually silenced a sophist whose miserable logic sought to prove the nonexistence of a Deity. Pointing calmly to the myriads of stars which sparkled in the deep blue firmament, the Emperor inquired, "And who made those?" The shallow-pated reasoner could find no answer to that direct question, which would be likely to satisfy the man who put it, and he was not honest enough to own up that his doctrine was erroneous.

The plan of free salvation, as taught by Christ and his apostles, was too simple to suit the elaborate formalities of Judaism, and became a stumbling block to the exclusive Jews, and with the polished Greek it was counted foolishness. Simple, yet of surpassing dignity, it made itself clear to the poor and illiterate, while it soared above the intellect of the mightiest intelligences, who in vain desired to look into it. The wisdom of man devised means to crush it in its infancy, and were caught in their own craftiness, becoming in the hands of God the unwilling instruments of disseminating and spreading that which they would have uprooted and annihilated. The roar of the tempests of persecution which swept over the early christians, called the attention of the heathen to the martyrs, and many became converts who witnessed the unfaltering steadfastness of those who first sealed the testimony with their blood.

The thunder of the Vatican, which rolled its vollies at the head of the intrepid Luther, awoke the nations of Europe to examine the startling truths which a German monk dared to affirm, despite the cajoleries, promises, or anathemas of a colossal and bloated impurity, which had audaciously arrogated to itself the right to enslave the body and soul of lord and peasant, king and subject, to its debasing thrall. Princes and potentates took up the song of liberty, and there is not a crowned head, out of all who once owned her sway, but now laughs to scorn the pretensions of the bloody incubus.

Bible christians, at one time, looked for and experienced the greatest opposition from Popery and her myrmidons; but now that power is the least with which the church of Christ has to contend. Her abominations and inventions, however cunning, were solely wielded by human agents. Now the deceitful hearts of men have called to their aid the subtlety of demons to overturn and utterly destroy everything friendly to the cause of God. And all the while they express unbounded love to man! What! Love to man and hatred to Christ? Monstrous paradox! unless it be a love such as the fierce eagle feels while swooping on his quarry, or the famishing wolf as he bounds into the sheep fold and tears the bleating lamb from its mother.

Spiritualism! thou reeking sink of pestilence, whose insatiate maw engulfs so many heedless and unwary mortals, and sends forth thy deadly and soul-infecting malaria through this fair and beautiful land, the time shall come when He, the long-suffering and the just, who holds the winds in his fist and the oceans in the hollow of his hand; who weighs the hills in a balance, and laughs to scorn the rage of man and devils, shall crush thee in his might, with all who have been partakers in thy folly! Take heed, O self-wise and self-sufficient man, who hast built for thyself a rampart round about thee, and daubed with untempered mortar the fortress which is to stand against the arm of the Most High—who has laid up store for many years of comfort and bids thy soul take rest, for suddenly His wrath like a hurricane shall sweep away thy defences, and the voice of doom shall ring in thine ears,—"Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee."

And ye who have found the truth, hold fast, and let no man snatch it from you. It is the only thing which affords true comfort in this world, and in death gives a blessed hope of a happy, never-ending existence beyond the grave. Let our motto be "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible;" and our watch cry, to encourage the faithful, waken the drowsy, and alarm the careless and unconverted, "Stand up for Jesus!" The great battle which decides the fate of man will ere long shake the earth with its reverberating thunders. Spiritualism, with its countless hoards and grim allies on the one side, and the small band of mail-clad warriors, the children of the Advent on the other. Many shall fall, but not one who trusts in the Lord shall perish.

JNO. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

Jesus.

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear."

How beautiful the name of Jesus sounds! Has not the poet expressed it beautifully? Is it not beautiful in the reality? My answer will be in the affirmative. Dear brethren and sisters, does it not give you great encouragement to think of his name only? and how much greater to think of what he has promised; and when we stand to realize it, what will it then be? Ah! brethren and sisters, that we could realize it now! but we cannot; all that we can say is, Come, Jesus, and come quickly!

C. H. COLLIER.

No Compromise.—God does not allow us to part with an inch of his ground, though we might thereby gain the peaceful possession of all the rest.—T. Hardaugh.

That man will one day find it but poor gain who hits upon truth with the [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Union.

My heart has been grieved when I have seen some making efforts to unite with those who would contemptuously sneer at a union on a basis that would give Christ's second personal coming even a fifth rate place.

Shall we get tired of giving prominence to the advent of Christ, and yield our identity, when, with it we must let go the truths which we hold? Is there not virtue enough in the Lord's coming to separate its adherents from its opponents? those who love his appearing from those who despise it? Have the "churches," which we left fifteen years ago, become changed, that we should now find ourselves so nearly alike, that we should welcome a re-union? or have we become more conformed to the world? They would then open their doors, and welcome preaching on the Lord's coming, much more frequently than now. They will open their houses to Universalists, Spiritualists, political meetings, concerts, and lectures on any subject, however foreign to religion it may be; but if in want of a house to preach in, our brethren should seek the privilege, to occupy an hour, while the house is lying idle, in preaching the Lord's coming, they are contemptuously refused. Neither will they preach on the subject themselves, unless it is to "darken counsel" by "putting far off the evil day," assuring their hearers that it will come as a thief, upon the church and the world alike, when it does come.

What is there in "the churches" that is meat to one who would be ready every hour for the Lord's coming? Do they "hold the truth as it is in Jesus?" If they did, they would not sneer at his coming. Do they worship God "in spirit and in truth?" The spirit of God seeks the things of God, and will never lead men to sneer at the Lord's coming, nor become despisers of those that are good.

It is very evident that there will be two classes of religious teachers in the last days: one class will be "despisers of those that are good—lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having" but "a form of godliness"—from such turn away; because "lukewarm, neither cold nor hot," says God, "therefore I will spue thee out of my mouth." Being unwilling or unable (from pride, probably,) to endure sound doctrine, which has ever been unpopular, still choosing to be religious, they seek to get along a little short of the straight and narrow way, and select teachers who will preach a doctrine suited to their itching ears. Thus shall they turn away their ears from the truth, but not from religion; for they shall be turned unto fables—a religion of fables, instead of the truth.

We are told also in another place, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved; for this cause, God shall send them stong delusion, that they, choosing some other, easier plan of salvation, should believe a lie and be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. Because they harden their necks against the truth, God sends them strong delusion, that shall lead them still further in their evil way, and damn them at last.

"There shall come in the last days, scoffers walking after their own lusts, and saying: 'where is the promise of his coming?'" &c. If these scoffers should claim to be unbelievers—mere worldly men—it would not be worthy of remark. But claiming the authority of teachers of the plan of salvation, they demand of those who are preaching the Lord's coming: "Where is the promise of his coming," giving a show of argument from the Bible that we cannot tell anything about that event.

The cry of peace and safety, also, comes from religious teachers; for it is given as a prediction or assurance of what awaits the world, when men's hearts are failing them for fears and [illegible] of such character would have no weight [illegible] coming from religious teachers. But they prove to be false [illegible] instead of peace and safety [illegible] they shall not escape. While true teachers—Paul's brethren—are not in darkness, that that day should overtake them as a thief.

From these scriptures, we may expect that in the "latter times some shall depart from the faith." We see it now. They will not give up religion, but "give heed to seducing spirits." We can see this also. In the last days religious teachers, yet "scoffers," shall ask, where is the promise of his coming? We hear it on every hand. They shall encourage a hope of "peace and safety," when "sudden destruction" awaits the world. They shall not receive the love of the truth, but shall accept of a strong delusion, and believe a lie, which will damn them. Every inquiry assures us that they have not the love of the truth; and our observation teaches us that hundreds are accepting of the "strong delusion" daily. They shall not endure sound doctrine, but shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, whose preaching shall be after their own lusts. This they have done, and are now doing, all around us. They shall turn away their ears from the truth, and be turned unto fables.

When tested by God's word, (and we are allowed none other,) the popular religion (or plan of salvation) is a religion of fables. Their idea that "God is without body or parts," existing only in a "spiritual presence," is a fable. Their idea that the "Son of God is very God" is a fable. Their doctrine that men got immortality through Adam; that the inheritance of the righteous is in some distant part of the universe, or beyond it, far from the earth; that they enter immediately upon their inheritance at death; that the dead know more than the living; that the wicked go at death into a place of misery, and that eternal; that the inheritance and future existence of the saints, is to be something indefinite, mystical, incomprehensible to finite minds; that Christ's second coming is not to be real and personal, but spiritual, (mystical) indefinite; that God's words should not be understood to mean literally just what they say, but they have a hidden meaning, not expressly conveyed by the language used, but some other language would convey the meaning better—these, all these, are fables, dangerous to the believer and disgraceful to God. Who is there, holding the truth, that can join this class? None, who have the truth at heart. May God forbid that any should thus abuse the truth.

There shall be in the last days another class of religious teachers, who wait for their Lord from heaven, and pray "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." They shall look for and love the appearing of Christ. They will not be in darkness concerning the signs of the times, but giving heed to the sure word of prophecy as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, they will watch for the signs of Christ's coming, and lift up their heads and rejoice when they see these things begin to come to pass, knowing that their redemption draweth nigh. They will not put far off the evil day, but will watch and pray always, that they may be accounted worthy to escape those things that are coming on the earth, and stand before the Son of Man when he shall appear. They will have their loins girt about, and their lamps burning, and they themselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he shall return. They shall then be "found giving meat in due season," and not saying in their hearts, "My Lord delayeth his coming." They will be careful about "making void the word of God through their traditions." They will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, and will [illegible] make ready a people prepared for the Lord. While [illegible] make known the evidences of the Lord's near approach, they will be met by another class of religious teachers, with the [illegible] inquiry, "Where is the promise of his coming?" When they [illegible]

the cry—"Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him."

Thus you have the other class of religious teachers. Both were to exist, according to the word, in the last days. We behold them scattered around us—the former very profusely. Which will you choose? May God give us that "eye salve" which shall so anoint our eyes that we may see, lest we "be overtaken by the snare of the devil, and so fall from our own steadfastness."

I. K. LOMBARD.

Cordova, Ill., June 12th, 1858.

From Sr. S. Mix.

BRO. GRANT:—This afternoon, while reading a quotation from Paul to Timothy, 2d epistle, 3d chapter, I came to the resolve that I would write a few thoughts for the Crisis, based upon this one expression: "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." My mind has been dwelling upon this subject of late, and as I find it written in the word of life that man is to live by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," I have been led to give heed to that word, in the passage now under consideration. The apostle, after having enumerated a great variety of characters, who should mark the last days as days of peril to the true church, sums them up in this important passage, "Having a form," &c.

Brn. and Sisters, mark it; the apostle does not say, the form, and I greatly rejoice that he does not, for it might then be more difficult for the saints to ascertain from whom they were to "turn away" than it is now. We have a "sure word of prophecy," Brn., whereunto we do well to take good heed, because its light shines upon our path in the darkest hour, and in the most intricate maze. Remember that a form is not "the form." Well, says one, tell us what is "the form of godliness." I will give you my light, and that is all the Scripture requires. Let us go directly to the 6th chapter of Romans. There we find Paul thanking God that the brethren had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered them. Upon what subject had he been treating, previous to this expression? The baptism of believers, surely. What "form" do they there assume? The death, burial and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is the "form" then.

Now let us go to the 15th chapter of 1st Cor., and we shall there find "the doctrine" itself, that which Paul delivered to the saints at Rome, as well as at Corinth. He says: "I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand, by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." What did Paul deliver, and what did they receive? "Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." Here, then, is the true doctrine of the gospel; and thank God that "the form of the doctrine" has been delivered unto the saints, so that from the heart they may with thanksgiving become obedient thereunto. Paul could say, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." The power" is not in the gospel, but "the gospel is the power of God." Now what is said of those who have "a form of godliness?" They deny "the power;" that is, they deny "the gospel," that gospel which Paul preached, and that "form of the doctrine" unto which the saints became obedient. They have "a form," but it is not like the pattern; and there are almost as many forms as there are sects and parties in the land; but every one of them denying "the power," the true gospel, if not in word, in deed. In their acts of obedience, they assume a variety of forms from those to whom Paul wrote, and gave thanks to God on their behalf. What then remains, but to still be obedient unto the word, which commands us, by divine authority, "from such turn away."

Brn. and sisters, are you in association with such as deny the word of God, the gospel of God, of which Paul says "he is not ashamed?" I beseech you to obey the command immediately; better to stand alone on the side of truth, [illegible] be with the multitude whose ears are turned away from it, and are "turned unto fables." Watch in all things; be sure you get cast [illegible] you may have [illegible] you not see, brethren and sisters, that it becomes of vast importance to us, whether we have the "real" form "of the doctrine," the definite form, and the definite doctrine, or whether we merely assume any of the forms of godliness that are now passing for current doctrine among professors of godliness? I believe with all my heart, that the Lord is soon coming, and none but such as have borne the image of Jesus here will be like him in the resurrection. Let us "look well to ourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward." 2d John, 8th verse.

May the Lord incline us all to become "obedient unto the faith," that we may be found in fashion, in "form," like unto the second Adam, at his glorious revelation from heaven, to renew and restore all things, according to the word of God, "spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Amen.

"Savior, hasten thine appearing,
Bring, oh, bring the joyful day."

SARAH MIX.

Prospect, Ct.

For the Crisis.

Can the Soul Raise the Body?

BRO. GRANT:—With your leave I wish to make a few remarks on the above question, and expose a "false logic." The Universalists claim that the soul is a part of God, and upon this principle or logic they claim the salvation of all men; for, say they, God will not damn a part of himself, which all must admit. Then I ask, must not all those that believe that all men have immortal souls, be compelled to admit that all men will be saved upon this false logic? for immortality is a part of God. See I Tim. 1: 17. "Now unto the king eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen."

We find a large portion of professed christians are taught to believe that the soul is immortal, and with this belief, they tell us the soul of man cannot die. Are such aware that they contradict the word of the Lord? for he positively declares twice in the 18th chapter of Ezekiel, that "the soul that sinneth it shall die." Paul does not deny this, but confirms it, by saying, "The wages of sin is death."

Those that believe that "the dead know not anything," as the wise man declares, are charged with destroying the resurrection. They say, if the soul dies or is asleep, there can be no resurrection of the body, but there must be a new creation. Not long since the same idea was put forth by a popular controversialist, in Boston. It was a number of years after I heard this charged upon those that believe in the sleep of the dead, that I was kept in suspense, and could not obtain a reason why such a charge should be made; but finally I attended a funeral where the minister took for his text the account given in Luke, 7th chapter, of the Lord Jesus Christ raising a young man from the dead. When he read the account he read it as it was there recorded; but when he came to rehearse the 14th and 15th verses, he said that Christ touched the bier, and they that carried him stood still; then added, "And his immortal soul came from the realms of glory and entered into his body, and it caused his breath to flow, and it caused his blood to circulate in his veins, and it loosened his tongue, and he sat up and began to speak. Then Jesus took him and delivered him to his mother." Then I found the mystery was solved, and I was no longer ignorant why the charge was made. Therefore all the honor and glory of raising that young man was taken from the Lord Jesus Christ, and given to his immortal soul; which, it is said, did the work of animating and raising the body; and the teacher of this false logic would answer the question at the head of this article in the affirmative, and set at naught the power of Jesus Christ, and his word also; for he says, "I am the resurrection and the life." Therefore all those that wish to "render unto Cesar the things that are Cesar's, and unto God the things which are God's," will answer the question in the negative, and ask another: "If the soul does not die, can it have a resurrection?" See 1 Cor. 15: 36.

JOHN GIBSON.

Houghtonville, Vt.

RESURRECTION.—As for the resurrection of the dead, I do not conceive it so very contrary to the analogy of nature, when I behold a vegetable left to rot in the earth rise up again with new life and vigor; or a worm, to all appearance dead, change its nature, and that, which in its first being crawled on the earth, become a new spe[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 18, 1858.

A Wish.

Those who preach the gospel are desired to write more for our paper. Come, brethren, let us all make an effort to make it the best paper in the world. Do not aim to write something great, but good.

☞ Those going to the Wilbraham Campmeeting from Boston, will take the 7 o'clock, A. M., or 1.30 P. M. train. The Express trains do not stop at the camp ground.

We understand campmeeting tickets may be had at all stations on the Western and Connecticut River Railroads.

We purpose to have an assortment of our books and tracts at the Campmeeting.

Tents.

Those who wish, can put up their tents on Saturday, Aug. 21st, and they will be taken care of till they come on Monday. We hope all will come at the beginning of the meeting and remain till its close; and we are confident that they will find it better for their physical and spiritual health than all the watering places in the land; and the theological student will learn more of the Bible and practical religion at such a meeting, in one week, than in a whole year at the Seminary. Leave for a season your Greek and Hebrew, and come and study the plain English of christianity. Come and bathe yourself in the fountain that cleanseth from all sin.

☞ No Paper Week After Next.—Our help in the office have had no respite for the last year; and besides, several of us wish to attend the Wilbraham Campmeeting, and give our minds up wholly to this feast of tabernacles, that we may be refreshed, and be better prepared to resume our duties again at the office. For these reasons, and others that might be named, we ask our kind readers to grant us this favor.

It is proposed to give but twenty-five numbers for the next volume, instead of twenty-six, and that the money that would be necessary to print the number to be omitted week after next, be applied on the poor list. We think every paying subscriber will be willing to give four cents, the price of one paper, for this object. We feel unwilling to cut off the poor, if we can possibly avoid it. In these "hard times" we must bear "one another's burdens," and so fulfill the law of Christ." Let all who can, give something to send the paper to the poor. A religion that overlooks the poor, is not the religion of Jesus. A few have asked if we could not afford our paper for less than two dollars a year? We might, if all were paying subscribers; but as it is, we cannot, without running in debt, which we know would be contrary to the wishes of all our friends

One has suggested, that we let all have the paper for barely what it costs, and then raise money by subscription, or donation, to pay for what the poor receive, but we think that such an arrangement would not be as practicable and satisfactory as the present mode.

All other weekly papers, so far as we know, have paid advertisements, which take up considerable room, besides affording much profit to the publishers, and for this reason, a few, who have none but paying subscribers, can afford to furnish as large a paper for a less subscription price, but they give much less reading matter than ours, which is encumbered with no advertisements. We purpose that, in real worth, the reading of our paper shall be second to none. We should be glad if we could afford to print it upon better paper, as many of our readers lend the Crisis to their neighbors, and it gets worn out too soon. Let all of our readers endeavor to m ke our paper the best in the world, and try to give it the widest circulation possible.

Fast.

We would recommend to those interested in our general Campmeeting at Wilbraham, that they observe Friday, Aug. 20th, as a day of fasting and special prayer, in behalf of this important meeting. It will be in vain for us to assemble in the tented grove unless the Lord be with us. "Ask and receive."

Let all come up to this meeting leaning on the arm of the Lord, ready to work earnestly for the salvation of sinners, and we shall have a rich feast, and be instrumental in causing "joy in the presence of the angels."

☞ We can now supply our readers with Man's Destiny, and The Discussion between Mattison and Stowe. See Book [illegible]

Campmeeting Items.

1. The Committee of Arrangements purpose to spare no pains on their part to make our general meeting at Wilbraham pleasant and profitable to all who may attend.

2. We hope all will make this meeting a subject of special prayer, as it will be one of great importance to the cause of truth. We desire that our great annual gathering to be such as every true disciple of Jesus will enjoy.

3. Let each divest himself of all sectarian or party feeling, and labor earnestly for Christ, and the blessing of the Most High will rest upon us in the encampment, like the pillar of cloud upon the children of Israel, making the place to us like the mount of transfiguration. The angel of the Lord will encamp round about us, and we shall feel abundance of peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, and return to our homes armed anew for the conflict, and better prepared to show to the world the true christian character.

4. Get your business matters so arranged before you come to the meeting, that they will not choke you while there. Dismiss all thoughts of the world, and come up as heartily as the Jews ever went to their feast of tabernacles. Set the week apart to the Lord for self-examination, self-consecration, and earnest labor for the good of others.

5. If you have had any difficulties with your neighbors, have them settled before you come, or they will be to you like cannon balls attached to a prisoner's feet. Such a person not unfrequently makes earnest efforts to be free, with much ado and great noise, but nothing moves; nobody feels; sinners mock, and saints listen with sadness to his hollow sounds, till he is ready to confess his faults, and forsake them; then how changed. When the Holy Spirit again returns to dwell in him, how altered the tone of voice, the countenance—his entire being. There is music now in the word glory, as it bursts forth from his full soul, and it goes like a dagger to the heart of sinners, and every christian is cheered by the sound of this heaven-born word.

6. In case you have not religion enough to go and be reconciled to your brother or neighbor before you come to the campground, do not empty out your slop pail of difficulties there, and thus destroy the peace of many, and the sweet harmony of the meeting; but, like a noble hearted being, suffer it alone, till you can do as the good Master has directed. See Matt. 18: 15. We are too near the judgment, and have too little time left us, to try to dodge the plain word of the Lord. Let us conform to it in all things.

For the Crisis.

The Time.

Some readers of the Crisis have heard of the diagram drawn by Bro. John Stevenson, an abstract of which I had the happiness to bear with me, throughout my last tour East; also of some points difficult of solution, embraced in it. And as the whole subject is one of public interest, I feel bound to say that my examination, thus far, has proved most satisfactory. My joy is as profound as it is enduring. "Being in the way," said one of old, "the Lord led me." "The truth" is not buried, but living and spreading. Blessed be his great name, forever and ever. Amen.

The grand subject—the premises and the conclusion—will be brought before the brethren and the public, I trust, as soon as practicable. But to those who now feel opposed, without examination—to those who feel wise enough and believing enough already, it may have no attractions. Yet to all who are "watching" in the light of Holy Scripture, I believe it will seem worth "more than gold, yea, than much fine gold."

THIS GREAT WORK is every way great. It is great in its conception, and in its execution, as well as in its simplicity, and comprehensiveness, and conclusiveness.—Yet no timist, in the technical sense, can imagine how our brother has performed his undertaking. The matter and manner are quite out of the range of those efforts which have all failed for the last twelve years. The basis is "the Word of God" and facts fairly compared and applied.

J. B. C.

☞ In our note on the Atlantic Telegraph, in the last number, it should read afternoon instead of "forenoon."

☞ It is not conviction of truth which does men good; it is moral consciousness [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Preachers of Endless Misery Tormentors of the Church.

This, I am sensible, is a serious and bold accusation, seeing it is written, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people," and thousands who preach the above doctrine, I believe, sincerely desire to obey this injunction. But did not Peter desire to obey God, and yet so err, that Paul said "he was to be blamed?" Gal. 2: 11 Is it not possible for real disciples to err, in our day, as did those who wished to call down fire from heaven to consume the Samaritans, and thus give occasion for Christ to say, were he now to speak, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of?" Luke 9: 54, 55. It may yet be said, and it deeply affects me,—"I have seen an end of all perfection: thy commandment is exceeding broad." Ps 119: 96 Calling for "fire" to produce temporary woe and death, of a few, was a small matter compared with that of building an eternal world of fire and brimstone, for an endless dwelling place of the greater share of our fallen race. With a Bible warrant, then, for preferring charges against the ministers of Christ, let us try the indictment of my caption. I will first call as witness Rev. Albert Barnes, of Philadelphia, the most noted commentator of our day. He says,

"That the immortal mind should be allowed to jeopard its infinite welfare, and that trifles should be allowed to draw it away from God, and virtue and heaven; that any should suffer forever, lingering on in hopeless despair, and rolling amidst infinite torments without the possibility of alleviation, and without end; that, since God can save men, and will save a part, he has not purposed to save all; that in a word, God, who claims to be worthy of the confidence of the universe, and to be a Being of infinite benevolence, should make such a world as this—full of sinners and sufferers—and that when an atonement had been made, he did not save all the race, and put an end to sin and woe forever. . . . I have read to some extent what wise and good men have written. I have looked at their theories and explanations. I have endeavored to weigh their arguments, for my whole soul pants for light and relief on these questions. But I get neither; and in the distress and anguish of my own spirit, I confess that I see no light whatever. I see not one ray to disclose to me the reason why sin came into the world; why the earth is strewed with the dead and dying; and why man must suffer to all eternity. I have never seen a particle of light thrown on these subjects that has given a moment's ease to my tortured mind, nor have I an explanation to offer, a thought to suggest, which would be of relief to you. I trust others, as they profess to do, understand this better than I do, and that they have not the anguish of spirit which I have. But I confess, when I look upon a world of woe, filled with hosts to suffer forever—when I look upon friends and upon a whole race, all involved in this sin and danger, and when I see the great mass of them wholly unconcerned, and when I feel that God can only save them, and yet he does not do it —I am struck dumb—it is all dark, dark, dark to my soul, and I cannot disguise it."—Practical Sermons, pp. 123–125.

Here we see Barnes begins with the false theory of "immortal minds," and then recoils and shudders at the results of his theory. His reason, his humanity, his sense both of justice and mercy, all revolt at the dreadful consequences of his theory. Strange that the "dark, dark" picture and the "anguish of his spirit" did not drive him back to examine his premises, and so learn that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die."

Barnes was taught from infancy these errors, and the divines who taught him were tormentors to him, and he, in turn, has tormented thousands. Paul was not thus overwhelmed with anguish and "panting for light," when he said, "What if God, willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-suffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction." Rom. 9: 22. Nor was Peter, when he said the wicked "shall utterly perish as natural brute beasts." 2 Pet. 2: 12. Nor was David thus in the dark and in anguish, when he said, "Yet a little while and the wicked shall not be: yea thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." Ps. 37: 10. Paul said, "rejoice always." When Barnes said, "I have no explanation to give you light and relief," he failed to "write the vision and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it." Hab. 2: 2.

Let us next hear the testimony of the learned Professor Stuart, found in an article on Future Punishment, in the Biblical Repository, July, 1840. He says,

"The social sympathies, too, of some men, are often deeply concerned with the formation of their religious opinions. They have lost a near and dear friend, one who never made a profession of religion. What shall they think of his case? Can they [illegible] come eternally wretched,—an outcast forever from God? Can heaven itself be a place of happiness for them, while they are conscious that a husband or wife, a son or daughter, a brother or sister, is plunged into a lake of fire from which there is no escape? It is impossible, they aver, to overcome such sympathies as these. It would be unnatural and even monstrous to suppress them. They are, therefore, as they view the case, constrained to doubt whether the miseries of a future world can be endless.

If there are any whose breasts are strangers to such difficulties as these, they are to be congratulated on having made attainments almost beyond the reach of humanity in the present world; or else to be pitied for ignorance, or the want of a sympathy which seems to be among the first elements of our social nature. With the great mass of thinking christians, I am sure, such thoughts as these must, unhappily for them, be acquaintances too familiar. That they agitate our breasts, as storms do the mighty deep, will be testified by every man of a tender heart, and who has a deep concern in the present and future welfare of those whom he loves."

Such reflections and emotions as these led Stuart to further "torment the church," though he aimed at comfort, by the astounding remark, "Perhaps God may, in mercy, extinguish our social susceptibilities in heaven." Make us hermits forever!—and for what?—so that he can keep alive, and wreak his vengeance on the helpless creatures he has voluntarily made, and we look on with stoic indifference and an unpitying soul!!

The godly Lauren said the belief in endless misery "made life a bitter."

But I only quote authors to illustrate what is being done, and not for authority; for unthinking or unfeeling must that christian be, who does not know, by sad experience, as Stuart says, that this soul-chilling and God-dishonoring doctrine of an endless hell, is spreading gloom over christendom; and, as a consequence, turning off thoughts from the future—from God and religion; and, as the mind must be employed, the world is loved and duty neglected. Yet we who believe that "God only hath immortality," and that the being and woes of the wicked will end at judgment, are often told that this belief would lull christians to sleep. In the first place, I deny that facts show it, but show the reverse. Next I ask, What is the main spring of christian activity? Is it horror, "being struck dumb by the "darkness of God's government"—"confusion worse confounded?" Or is it light and love and joy in prospect of a heaven, undisturbed by the eternal despair of friends, or the curses and wailing of the damned? All ought to know that hope, love and gratitude are the most soul-stirring principles of our natures, and that, as Barnes and Stuart show, the preaching of endless woe freezes up their fountain of action. Such preaching, then, not only "torments the church," but also paralyzes its energies. The "terror" Paul preached, was the utter destruction even of "the last enemy"—the loss of "eternal life" and "a crown of glory," and this terror does not make God's providence look "dark, dark, dark"!!—nor "agitate our breasts as storms do the mighty deep"!!

Let none suppose we thus tell of sympathy and reason to prove our doctrine. No, that is proved by the Bible more plainly than any other doctrine next to the being and attributes of God, and the promise of "eternal life" to the righteous. We do it to show that the popular belief outrages the principles God has planted in our natures, while ours does not; and to "provoke," if possible, to a re-examination of a belief, thus horrifying in one of its bearings, and which is still more pernicious in other respects. I mean, it is more pernicious, in being the main cause of all the infidelity and universalism in christendom; and in its being a vile slanderer of our Father in heaven and the Lord Jesus Christ, the "Judge of all."

JACOB BLAIN.

UTAH AFFAIRS.—A force of 2500 men will be kept in Utah. One of the Peace Commissioners, in a private letter, represents the affairs of the Territory in a good condition. The arrival of the Peace Commissioners here is daily expected.

The correspondent of the New York Herald, at Salt Lake, writes as follows:

"The Saints bear themselves very quietly towards the Gentiles. They have to do so, for the feeling is such that unless they did, there would be war in less than twenty-four hours. Brigham is very much afraid of war; he tells his people to bear insult and every thing else, rather than get into a quarrel. The Gentiles will take no sauce, but sometimes give it. The Mormons, however, have their cunning, their watching and their spies.

The weather is intensely hot; it is almost impossible to remain out-doors in the sun during mid-day. People are making hay, but have not begun to harvest grain yet.

The army is quietly encamped in Cedar Valley. Its position, militarily, is a very fine one. The settlements along the valley form an arc of a circle. The army, while it is sufficiently remote from the settlements, occupies the center of the chord of said arc; so [illegible] detachments to any [illegible]

From Eld. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I see by the last "Crisis" the notice of our Yearly Second Advent Campmeeting at Wilbraham, (which is to be held till Jesus comes,) is to commence Aug. 23d. This is to be a yearly festival for the toil-worn, reproach-bearing pilgrims, who have been, and still are, looking with expectation for the coming of their Lord; a meeting for those who are identified from other religionists, because they believe they have not followed cunningly devised fables in moving out in harmony with the signs which Jesus declared should precede and point with certainty to his coming and the end of the world.

We surely are among the last perils. Spiritualism, in its variety of forms, has come upon us like a flood; and our business, as men commissioned of God for the times, is to lift the standard against this floodgate of ruin; and God has truth adapted to the crisis; to believe and practically teach it will save from "strong delusions and damnation," and give life in the world to come. "He that gathereth not with Christ scattereth abroad."

I hope the good old steadfast veteran, who has been longest in the battle field; and all who, by the fulfillment of sacred prophecy, have got their heads uplifted; the "odds and ends," and those who are not so odd; the good children, yea and all others who will, may come together with strong confidence in God and his precious, faithful, life-giving word, and preach it faithfully, hoping for glorious results. Amen.

Let good religion, that loves one's neighbor as himself, be manifest there in every act. I look with deep interest to the result of this meeting. Our responsibilities as a body of believers are very great. Our gatherings will tell on the human family for weal or for woe. I hope we shall all be guided by Infinite Wisdom, and have one of the Lord's free, liberal, yet truth-spoken campmeetings.

Come from the city, from the country; come one, come all—come with the spirit of self-devotion to Jesus Christ and his truth, that will abide the day of his coming.

As ever, thy Bro. full of hope,
L. BOUTELL.

Groton, Mass.

Obituary.

Died, in Portsmouth, N. H., July 25th, 1858, Brother CYRUS ROGERS, aged 64.

For a few months previous to the death of our brother, he became interested in the subject of the soon coming of the Savior, and believing that the day of judgment was nigh at hand, he was led to examine himself and see if he was ready. He found that he was not, but went to the fountain which is always open for sin and uncleanness, and was washed and made whole in the blood of the Lamb. From that moment up to the time of his death, he enjoyed the smiles of his heavenly Father. He loved the house of prayer, and loved to pray. He erected a family altar, and morning and evening offered his sacrifices to God. He died as the christian dieth, with the hope of the resurrection from the dead.

Only about three months has elapsed since I was called to the same house to stand by the bedside of his dying mother-in-law, our much loved sister Holman; and now another of the family is gone to the land of silence, to rest until the voice of Jesus is heard, and then they shall come forth to life. May this glorious hope sustain the lonely widow, and buoy her up under her double affliction, the loss of her mother and now her companion. May she be ready to meet them in the world to come where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never come.

I endeavored to comfort the mourning friends from 1 Thess. 4: 13.

E. WHITNEY.

Died, in Auburn, N. H., July 9, 1858, of canker, SIDNEY S. BREWER, only child of Orlando and Hannah Welch, aged 1 year 7 months and 20 days.

Our beloved Bro. and Sr., who have been bereft of this their only offspring, are numbered among the tried ones indeed. They have been associated with the Advent people for many years, shared with them in joys, many sorrows and disappointments. When looking for and expecting Jesus to be revealed from heaven in 1854, they cheerfully, with many other whole hearted ones, disposed of their earthly treasure in the way they believed would be acceptable to their heavenly Father; yea, "they took joyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing in Heaven they have a better and enduring substance;" and we trust they will not even now cast away their confidence, though they have been called to lay their only child in the silent tomb—believing that soon he will awake, and with them inherit the new Heaven and Earth. Glorious hope! Praise God for such consolation.

The funeral was attended by many friends and neighbors, who deeply sympathize with our Br. and Sr. The writer, assisted by Br. J. B. Paine, conducted the services. God's Spirit was present with the word to comfort [illegible]

Summary of News.

Foreign News.

By the arrival of the steamship Niagara, we have news from Liverpool to July 31st. News unimportant.

FRANCE.

The approaching Cherbourg fetes engross attention.

There were rumors of conspiracy against the Emperor discovered at St. Etienne, but they want confirmation.

The Prefect of the department, and the Sub-Prefect of Cherbourg had been called to Paris to concert with the authorities measures of police for the safety of the Emperor.

INDIA.

The Bombay mail of July 3d had reached Suez the 23d. The recapture of Gwalior is confirmed. The rebels lost twenty-seven guns, besides elephants and treasure to a large amount. The fugitives from Gwalior are said to be hemmed in on all sides by British troops.

On the 13th Sir Hope Grant gained a brilliant victory at Newa Gunga, near Lucknow, capturing a large number of guns, and driving the enemy across the Cagra.

Details of Sir Hope Grant's victory near Lucknow, state that the rebels were nearly 20,000 strong, and their loss was 600 men and six guns. The British had six killed and thirty wounded. The fight lasted three hours, and the rebels were utterly routed. A good effect was anticipated.

Friendship for India.—We are not writing nonsense about liberty, rights, and the privileges of freemen. It is only doctrinaires and idiots who ignore the facts of the hour. For some time to come and in some parts of India we must rule despotically—rule with the stern vigilance of a Czar or a St. Just. The future welfare of India demands that at all hazards, and at all cost, we must remain its rulers. If for that great end we are driven to rule as the Convention ruled—if our sole penalty must be death, and our sole law the guillotine, we shall accept even that frightful alternative.—Friend of India, June 17.

Domestic News.

THE OCEAN TELEGRAPH.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 13.—To the repeated inquiries which are made every hour through the day as to the condition of the Cable, and the probabilities about the reception of the Queen's message, we are unable to return any other answer than that the Cable remains all right. The electrical signals pass through its whole length satisfactorily, but the electricians have not yet concluded their arrangements for putting their recording instruments into operation.

THE LATEST EXPLANATION OF THE DELAY.

TRINITY BAY, Aug. 14.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, New York.

The cause of our not transmitting and receiving intelligence through the Cable is, that the instruments require a great deal of care and adjusting in getting them ready. I am doing this as fast as possible. You should not look upon the Cable as an ordinary short telegraph line that can be worked through directly. The Cable has been successfully laid, and telegraphic signals are passed through it at our pleasure; but we have encountered many little difficulties, which it requires time and many experiments to entirely overcome. But we see no reason to doubt that we shall be able, within a few days, to surmount all difficulties. I will send you the earliest information of the probable time when the Queen's message may be expected.

DE SAUTY.
—Boston Journal.

NOTICES.

Fare Reduced—Wilbraham Campmeeting.

The fare on the Connecticut River Railroad and on the Worcester and Nashua Road, is reduced to half price.

N. B. On the Worcester and Nashua Road, half price tickets can be obtained only at Nashua and Groton Junction.

Campmeeting.

There will be a Campmeeting in Savoy, Mass., on land owned by Noah Mirick, about three miles north of Savoy Hollow, commencing Aug. 30th, to continue over the following Sabbath. We invite all the lovers of Jesus, and those who wish to become his followers, to come in the name of the Lord, with their tents, to the feast of tabernacles, for we expect the Lord will meet with his people and convert sinners.

Board and horse keeping will be furnished on reasonable terms. Those coming by railroad will stop at South Adams, where they will find teams in readiness to convey them to the camp ground.

Brethren H. Pratt, J. Hemenway and M. Batchelor are expected; and we wish all to come who can, and break unto us the bread of life.

E. McCULLOCK,
For the Brethren.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Tent Meeting held in Brown County, Ill., some four miles South of Mt Sterling, near Brn. C. A. Twombly and Joseph Bush, to commence Tuesday, 21st September, and continue over the following Lord's day. There will be a Conference held in connection with the meeting. Elder M. Chandler will be present with the preaching tent, which will make us a commodious house of worship.

We hope all the friends in that region will come without fail, and spend one week in God's worship. Let nothing hinder you from coming. We want to see you—worship with you—confer with you—devise means by which the destitute fields may be supplied with preaching—concentrate our force—bring together the scattered flock—set things in gospel order; yea, arouse ourselves, wake up zeal that we may put forth an effort in harmony with the great enterprise in which we are engaged, and work while the day lasts, for the sun is fast going down.

I will bring Books and Tracts to supply the demand.

WALTER PRATT.

NOTICE.—Providence permitting, there will be a conference in North Searsport, Me., commencing Thursday, Sept. 9th, and continuing as long as thought proper. The Conference will be free for all who love our Lord and wish to be acquainted with him by his word. It is expected Brn. L. L. Howard, B. S. Emery and D. M. Hanscomb will attend.

In behalf of the Church,
I. DAMMAN.

NOTICE.—There will be a Conference in Hermon, Me., commencing Tuesday evening, September 2d, and continuing over the Sabbath.

DANIEL CHURCHILL,
For the brethren.

I am requested also to say that the brethren are somewhat poor as to the things of this world, and wish the brethren that may come from abroad to come prepared to do good and get good.

D. CHURCHILL.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove Meeting in the south west part of Hoosac, N. Y., one mile from Potter Hill P. O., four miles from the Falls, and six miles from Buskirk's Bridge depot.

Bro. Miles Grant and others are expected to preach. Meeting to commence Thursday, Sept. 2d, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday.

The brethren abroad are invited to attend. The people desire the word of the Lord in that region, and to give it to them is the object of this meeting.

For the people,
M. BACHELOR.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is expected to be at Lake Village, to be holden in the early part of October. Particulars hereafter.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,
ELDRIDGE CHISAM.
JOHN A. KENNEDY.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, a Tent or Campmeeting will be holden in Lanesville, Ct., on the line of the Housatonic Railroad, 30 miles north of Bridgeport, on the old ground, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

An invitation is extended to all, hoping all of God's children, who can, will attend and feel free to act as he may direct. Ministering brethren are invited to come as the way may open, and preach the word as the Lord may direct. All, who can conveniently, will please bring their tents and blankets. Arrangements will be made to accommodate those who may choose to board on the ground. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductors they wish to stop at Lanesville Station.

The 10.30 AM, and 6.35 PM trains from Bridgeport arrive at Lanesville at 12 M and 8.45 PM. The 9.25 AM train from Pittsfield arrives at 1.10 PM.

L. MILLS, for the Brethren.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept. 6th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, in a beautiful grove on land of Bro. Johnson. Our brethren and sisters coming from Hartford or New Haven will buy their tickets for Barnes' Station. But the cars will stop at the ground about one mile before reaching the station, so there will be no expense in getting yourselves or baggage from the cars to the ground. There will be a boarding tent on the ground, so that all those who wish to hire their board can be accommodated. Preachers and the worthy poor boarded free. Those who come with their own teams will find provision made for pasturing; hay and grain on reasonable terms. Those who come with their own teams, wishing to avoid the cars, will take notice that the cars leave Collinsville at 8 o'clock, A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., and returning, arrive at 1 o'clock, P. M. and 6 P. M. We hope there will be a general gathering at this meeting, and we will do all we can to make you comfortable; and we trust we shall have a profitable meeting.

S. JOHNSON,
E. B. GILBERT,
S. TATRO,
L. POND,
S. G. MATHEWSON, } Committee.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, Aug. 23d, and continue one week. Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 50 cts. per day; or one shilling per meal for breakfast and supper, and 25 cents for dinner. The fare is reduced to half price on the Western R. R., which will be $2.50 from Boston, for both ways. Half fare also on the Connecticut River Railroad. We hope to make similar arrangements with other roads, which will be noticed in the Crisis.

This meeting is pleasantly located in a neighborhood noted for sustaining good order, and for acts of kindness towards those who assemble there from year to year to worship the God of our fathers. We anticipate a large gathering of the Lord's dear children, and that much good will be accomplished. Those who were present last year will remember that the great object of the meeting was for the salvation of sinners, and that the effort was greatly blessed. We hope that our Brn. and Srs. will come again this year, strong in the Lord, and bring their unconverted children and neighbors for the purpose of persuading them to be christians.

All who believe in Christ as our Savior, and are willing to labor for the salvation of sinners, are invited to take part in the meetings. We would earnestly request all to make this meeting a subject of special prayer, that many wanderers may be reclaimed, the saints greatly strengthened, and the name of the Lord magnified among the people.

R. E. LADD,
HIRAM MUNGER, } Committee of [illegible]

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

NOTICE.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.
N. F. NASON.

Campmeeting.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept 6, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, on land of Bro. Johnson. Arrangements have been made for the cars to stop at the ground. Particulars hereafter.

S. G. MATHEWSON,
For the Brethren.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co.; Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

MOSES CHANDLER, Evangelist.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets.

WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.

Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. DRYO.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Jawbuck, or where the brethren appoint, in the vicinity, Sunday, Aug. 22; at River Point, R. I., the first Sunday in Sept.; Providence, R. I., last Sabbath in August, (29th). Farther appointments next week. Address till Aug. 23d, Thompsonville, Ct; till 27th, Collins' Depot, Wilbraham, Mass.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Bradford, N. H., at the Christian Chapel, the last Sabbath in this month.

B. P. MANNING.

Bro. M. BATCHELOR appoints to preach in
Rutland, Vt. - - - Sept. 8th.
Chateaugay, N. Y., as Bro. Stuart may appoint, - - - " 9th.
Massena, N. Y. - - - " 10th.
And continue over second and third Sundays in Sept.

I expect to preach at Lake Village, Sunday, Aug. 22.

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach in—
Dover, N. H., Thursday evening, Aug. 19th.
Exeter, " Friday " " 20th.
Lowell, Mass., - - Sunday, " 22d.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

Eld. THOS. SMITH appoints to preach as follows:—
Richmond, Me. (Reed Meetinghouse,) Aug 19th
Litchfield, " - - - " 20th.
Richmond, " (Reed Meetinghouse,) " 22d.
So. Hope, " (Schoolhouse,) - " 27th.
Lincolnville, Me., " " 29th.
No. Searsport, " " " 31st.

If Providence permit, I will hold meetings as follows:—
New Britain, Ct., Thursday evening, August 19th.
Bristol, Ct., Friday evening, 20th.
From Saturday until Monday, Plymouth Hollow and vicinity, where Bro. Humphreyville will appoint.

GEORGE BAXTER.

[I learn this young brother is worthy, and out of health. Will the brethren help him from place to place.]

HIRAM MUNGER.

Business.

To Correspondents.

J. G. Smith, Meredith, N. H.—All right.

Jas. Hammond—Should be credited $2.00 instead of $1.00; pays to 202.

Cash Receipts.

☞ Our Canada subscribers, and all in the Provinces, will remember that we have to pre pay the postage on their papers, amounting to 26 cents a year; hence they should send $2.26 for a year's subscription.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Mrs. M Norton 156, $2.50; J Damon 162, 25 cts; J G Smith 176, 75 cts; M Webber 161, G W Bailey 160, 50 cts. each.

W. Brown 179, T Leavitt 166, M Fogg 169, C G Rodman 162, P C Rodman 169, L J Beach 143, C Balch 104, D Hastings 166, H Moses 179, Mrs. S Applebee 179, W L Parsons 173, B F Wilkins 182, G W Turner 156, J Morse 156, $1 each.

J Kimball 182, A B Thayer 234, R Bush 213, $2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts.—G Moyer $1.24, A C Thorp 38 cts.

☞ WANTED, 10,000 orders for "The Great Controversy between God and Man," by H. L. Hastings. Price, post paid, 60 cts., neatly bound in cloth gilt. Send in your orders with the cash. Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y. For sale at this office. Also by Smith, English & Co., No. 40 North 6th St., Philadelphia. G. W. Young, 109 Nassau St., New York. N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois. Moses Cumings, Irvington, N. J. R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 20 cents single; postage [illegible] bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ [illegible] as it was, as it is, and as it will be. By T. M. [illegible]

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrange- ments so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Com- ing and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Deal- ings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 13 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.–The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and or- ders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassua street N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

MAN'S DESTINY. Immortality: The Ar- guments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, [illegible] cents; bound, [illegible] cts. Postage, 3 cts.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison and Geo. Storrs. Question:—"Does the Bible teach that this creature Man, which the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground, [illegible] Entity called the soul?" [illegible] covers; bound, [illegible] Postage [illegible]

☞ The following [illegible] had of J. H. [illegible] Harp, by [illegible]

From Eld. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—I see by the last "Crisis" the notice of our Yearly Second Advent Campmeeting at Wilbraham, (which is to be held till Jesus comes,) is to commence Aug. 23d. This is to be a yearly festival for the toil-worn, reproach-bearing pilgrims, who have been, and still are, looking with expectation for the coming of their Lord; a meeting for those who are identified from other religionists, because they believe they have not followed cunningly devised fables in moving out in harmony with the signs which Jesus declared should precede and point with certainty to his coming and the end of the world.

We surely are among the last perils. Spiritualism, in its variety of forms, has come upon us like a flood; and our business, as men commissioned of God for the times, is to lift the standard against this floodgate of ruin; and God has truth adapted to the crisis; to believe and practically teach it will save from "strong delusions and damnation," and give life in the world to come. "He that gathereth not with Christ scattereth abroad."

I hope the good old steadfast veteran, who has been longest in the battle field; and all who, by the fulfillment of sacred prophecy, have got their heads uplifted; the "odds and ends," and those who are not so odd; the good children, yea and all others who will, may come together with strong confidence in God and his precious, faithful, life-giving word, and preach it faithfully, hoping for glorious results. Amen.

Let good religion, that loves one's neighbor as himself, be manifest there in every act. I look with deep interest to the result of this meeting. Our responsibilities as a body of believers are very great. Our gatherings will tell on the human family for weal or for woe. I hope we shall all be guided by Infinite Wisdom, and have one of the Lord's free, liberal, yet truth-spoken campmeetings.

Come from the city, from the country; come one, come all—come with the spirit of self-devotion to Jesus Christ and his truth, that will abide the day of his coming.

As ever, thy Bro. full of hope,
L. Boutell.

Groton, Mass.

Obituary.

Died, in Portsmouth, N. H., July 25th, 1858, Brother Cyrus Rogers, aged 64.

For a few months previous to the death of our brother, he became interested in the subject of the soon coming of the Savior, and believing that the day of judgment was nigh at hand, he was led to examine himself and see if he was ready. He found that he was not, but went to the fountain which is always open for sin and uncleanness, and was washed and made whole in the blood of the Lamb. From that moment up to the time of his death, he enjoyed the smiles of his heavenly Father. He loved the house of prayer, and loved to pray. He erected a family altar, and morning and evening offered his sacrifices to God. He died as the christian dieth, with the hope of the resurrection from the dead.

Only about three months has elapsed since I was called to the same house to stand by the bedside of his dying mother-in-law, our much loved sister Holman; and now another of the family is gone to the land of silence, to rest until the voice of Jesus is heard, and then they shall come forth to life. May this glorious hope sustain the lonely widow, and buoy her up under her double affliction, the loss of her mother and now her companion. May she be ready to meet them in the world to come where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never come.

I endeavored to comfort the mourning friends from 1 Thess. 4: 13.

E. Whitney.

Died, in Auburn, N. H., July 9, 1858, of canker, Sidney S. Brewer, only child of Orlando and Hannah Welch, aged 1 year 7 months and 20 days.

Our beloved Bro. and Sr., who have been bereft of this their only offspring, are numbered among the tried ones indeed. They have been associated with the Advent people for many years, shared with them in joys, many sorrows and disappointments. When looking for and expecting Jesus to be revealed from heaven in 1854, they cheerfully, with many other whole hearted ones, disposed of their earthly treasure in the way they believed would be acceptable to their heavenly Father; yea, "they took joyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing in Heaven they have a better and enduring substance;" and we trust they will not even now cast away their confidence, though they have been called to lay their only child in the silent tomb—believing that soon he will awake, and with them inherit the new Heaven and Earth. Glorious hope! Praise God for such consolation.

The funeral was attended by many friends and neighbors, who deeply sympathise with our Br. and Sr. The writer, assisted by Br. J. B. Paine, conducted the services. God's Spirit was present with the word to comfort [illegible]

Summary of News.

Foreign News.

By the arrival of the steamship Niagara, we have news from Liverpool to July 31st. News unimportant.

FRANCE.

The approaching Cherbourg fetes engross attention.

There were rumors of conspiracy against the Emperor discovered at St. Etienne, but they want confirmation.

The Prefect of the department, and the Sub-Prefect of Cherbourg had been called to Paris to concert with the authorities measures of police for the safety of the Emperor.

INDIA.

The Bombay mail of July 3d had reached Suez the 23d. The recapture of Gwalior is confirmed. The rebels lost twenty-seven guns, besides elephants and treasure to a large amount. The fugitives from Gwalior are said to be hemmed in on all sides by British troops.

On the 13th Sir Hope Grant gained a brilliant victory at Newa Gunga, near Lucknow, capturing a large number of guns, and driving the enemy across the Cagra.

Details of Sir Hope Grant's victory near Lucknow, state that the rebels were nearly 20,000 strong, and their loss was 600 men and six guns. The British had six killed and thirty wounded. The fight lasted three hours, and the rebels were utterly routed. A good effect was anticipated.

Friendship for India.—We are not writing nonsense about liberty, rights, and the privileges of freemen. It is only doctrinaires and idiots who ignore the facts of the hour. For some time to come and in some parts of India we must rule despotically—rule with the stern vigilance of a Czar or a St. Just. The future welfare of India demands that at all hazards, and at all cost, we must remain its rulers. If for that great end we are driven to rule as the Convention ruled—if our sole penalty must be death, and our sole law the guillotine, we shall accept even that frightful alternative.—Friend of India, June 17.

Domestic News.

THE OCEAN TELEGRAPH.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 13.—To the repeated inquiries which are made every hour through the day as to the condition of the Cable, and the probabilities about the reception of the Queen's message, we are unable to return any other answer than that the Cable remains all right. The electrical signals pass through its whole length satisfactorily, but the electricians have not yet concluded their arrangements for putting their recording instruments into operation.

THE LATEST EXPLANATION OF THE DELAY.

Trinity Bay, Aug. 14.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, New York.

The cause of our not transmitting and receiving intelligence through the Cable is, that the instruments require a great deal of care and adjusting in getting them ready. I am doing this as fast as possible. You should not look upon the Cable as an ordinary short telegraph line that can be worked through directly. The Cable has been successfully laid, and telegraphic signals are passed through it at our pleasure; but we have encountered many little difficulties, which it requires time and many experiments to entirely overcome. But we see no reason to doubt that we shall be able, within a few days, to surmount all difficulties. I will send you the earliest information of the probable time when the Queen's message may be expected.

De Sauty.
—Boston Journal.

NOTICES.

Fare Reduced—Wilbraham Campmeeting.

The fare on the Connecticut River Railroad and on the Worcester and Nashua Road, is reduced to half price.

N. B. On the Worcester and Nashua Road, half price tickets can be obtained only at Nashua and Groton Junction.

Campmeeting.

There will be a Campmeeting in Savoy, Mass., on land owned by Noah Mirick, about three miles north of Savoy Hollow, commencing Aug. 30th, to continue over the following Sabbath. We invite all the lovers of Jesus, and those who wish to become his followers, to come in the name of the Lord, with their tents, to the feast of tabernacles, for we expect the Lord will meet with his people and convert sinners.

Board and horse keeping will be furnished on reasonable terms. Those coming by railroad will stop at South Adams, where they will find teams in readiness to convey them to the camp ground.

Brethren H. Pratt, J. Hemenway and M. Batchelor are expected; and we wish all to come who can, and break unto us the bread of life.

E. McCULLOCK,
For the Brethren.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Tent Meeting held in Brown County, Ill., some four miles South of Mt Sterling, near Brn. C. A. Twombly and Joseph Bush, to commence Tuesday, 21st September, and continue over the following Lord's day. There will be a Conference held in connection with the meeting. Elder M. Chandler will be present with the preaching tent, which will make us a commodious house of worship.

We hope all the friends in that region will come without fail, and spend one week in God's worship. Let nothing hinder you from coming. We want to see you—worship with you—confer with you—devise means by which the destitute fields may be supplied with preaching—concentrate our force—bring together the scattered flock—set things in gospel order; yea, arouse ourselves, wake up zeal that we may put forth an effort in harmony with the great enterprise in which we are engaged, and work while the day lasts, for the sun is fast going down.

I will bring Books and Tracts to supply the demand.

WALTER PRATT.

NOTICE.—Providence permitting, there will be a conference in North Searsport, Me., commencing Thursday, Sept. 9th, and continuing as long as thought proper. The Conference will be free for all who love our Lord and wish to be acquainted with him by his word. It is expected Brn. L. L. Howard, B. S. Emery and D. M. Hanscomb will attend.

In behalf of the Church,
I. DAMMAN.

Notice.—There will be a Conference in Hermon, Me., commencing Tuesday evening, September 2d, and continuing over the Sabbath.

DANIEL CHURCHILL,
For the brethren.

I am requested also to say that the brethren are somewhat poor as to the things of this world, and wish the brethren that may come from abroad to come prepared to do good and get good.

D. Churchill.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove Meeting in the south west part of Hoosac, N. Y., one mile from Potter Hill P. O., four miles from the Falls, and six miles from Buskirk's Bridge depot.

Bro. Miles Grant and others are expected to preach. Meeting to commence Thursday, Sept. 2d, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday.

The brethren abroad are invited to attend. The people desire the word of the Lord in that region, and to give it to them is the object of this meeting.

For the people,
M. BACHELOR.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is expected to be at Lake Village, to be holden in the early part of October. Particulars hereafter.

T. M. Preble,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

NOTICE.

The brethren and sisters in Somerville, Me., have established a conference the first Saturday in every month, at Bro. Elbridge Chisam's, and will have preaching as often as possible. Preaching brethren, give us a call. Our correspondents will address us at Somerville, Me.

In behalf of the church,
Elbridge Chisam.
John A. Kennedy.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, a Tent or Campmeeting will be holden in Lanesville, Ct., on the line of the Housatonic Railroad, 30 miles north of Bridgeport, on the old ground, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

An invitation is extended to all, hoping all of God's children, who can, will attend and feel free to act as he may direct. Ministering brethren are invited to come as the way may open, and preach the word as the Lord may direct. All, who can conveniently, will please bring their tents and blankets. Arrangements will be made to accommodate those who may choose to board on the ground. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductors they wish to stop at Lanesville Station.

The 10.30 AM, and 6.35 PM trains from Bridgeport arrive at Lanesville at 12 M and 8.45 PM. The 9.25 AM train from Pittsfield arrives at 1.10 PM.

L. Mills, for the Brethren.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept. 6th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, in a beautiful grove on land of Bro. Johnson. Our brethren and sisters coming from Hartford or New Haven will buy their tickets for Barnes' Station. But the cars will stop at the ground about one mile before reaching the station, so there will be no expense in getting yourselves or baggage from the cars to the ground. There will be a boarding tent on the ground, so that all those who wish to hire their board can be accommodated. Preachers and the worthy poor boarded free. Those who come with their own teams will find provision made for pasturing; hay and grain on reasonable terms. Those who come with their own teams, wishing to avoid the cars, will take notice that the cars leave Collinsville at 8 o'clock, A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., and returning, arrive at 1 o'clock, P. M. and 6 P. M. We hope there will be a general gathering at this meeting, and we will do all we can to make you comfortable; and we trust we shall have a profitable meeting.

S. Johnson,
E. B. Gilbert,
S. Tatro,
L. Pond,
S. G. Mathewson,
} Committee.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, Aug. 23d, and continue one week. Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 50 cts. per day; or one shilling per meal for breakfast and supper, and 25 cents for dinner. The fare is reduced to half price on the Western R. R., which will be $2.50 from Boston, for both ways. Half fare also on the Connecticut River Railroad. We hope to make similar arrangements with other roads, which will be noticed in the Crisis.

This meeting is pleasantly located in a neighborhood noted for sustaining good order, and for acts of kindness towards those who assemble there from year to year to worship the God of our fathers. We anticipate a large gathering of the Lord's dear children, and that much good will be accomplished. Those who were present last year will remember that the great object of the meeting was for the salvation of sinners, and that the effort was greatly blessed. We hope that our Brn. and Srs. will come again this year, strong in the Lord, and bring their unconverted children and neighbors for the purpose of persuading them to be christians.

All who believe in Christ as our Savior, and are willing to labor for the salvation of sinners, are invited to take part in the meetings. We would earnestly request all to make this meeting a subject of special prayer, that many wanderers may be reclaimed, the saints greatly strengthened, and the name of the Lord magnified among the people.

E. E. Ladd, } Committee of Hiram Munger, } [illegible]

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. Damman.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.
N. F. Nason.

Campmeeting.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept 6, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, on land of Bro. Johnson. Arrangements have been made for the cars to stop at the ground. Particulars hereafter.

S. G. Mathewson,
For the Brethren.

Conference in Illinois.

The first quarterly meeting of the Fox River District will be held at Earlvill, Lasalle Co., Ill., commencing Aug. 25th. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the friends in that district. We wish to see delegates from Harvard Church, McHenry Co; Dekalb, Shabbona Grove and Samenock in Dekalb Co., and all other churches in that region. It is expected that we shall have our tent pitched there to hold our meeting in.

I would give further notice, that the quarterly conference to be held in connection with the quarterly meetings will always be held on Saturday afternoon, and the meetings all commence on Thursday and continue over Sunday.

Moses Chandler, Evangelist.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. Preble.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets.

WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.

Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the first Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Gaddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. Dyer.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Jawbuck, or where the brethren appoint, in the vicinity, Sunday, Aug. 22; at River Point, R. I., the first Sunday in Sept.; Providence, R. I., last Sabbath in August, (29th). Farther appointments next week. Address till Aug. 23d, Thompsonville, Ct; till 27th, Collins' Depot, Wilbraham, Mass.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Bradford, N. H., at the Christian Chapel, the last Sabbath in this month.

B. P. MANNING.

Bro. M. Batchelor appoints to preach in Rutland, Vt. - - - - Sept. 8th.
Chateaugay, N. Y., as Bro. Stuart may appoint, - - - " 9th.
Massena, N. Y. - - - - - " 10th.
And continue over second and third Sundays in Sept.

I expect to preach at Lake Village, Sunday, Aug. 22.

T. M. Preble.

Providence permitting, I will preach in—
Dover, N. H., Thursday evening, Aug. 19th.
Exeter, " Friday, " " 20th.
Lowell, Mass., - - Sunday, " 22d.
Israel Damman.

Eld. Thos. Smith appoints to preach as follows:—
Richmond, Me. (Reed Meetinghouse,) Aug 19th
Litchfield, " - - - " 20th.
Richmond, " (Reed Meetinghouse,) " 22d.
So. Hope, " (Schoolhouse,) - " 27th.
Lincolnville, Me., " " 29th.
No. Searsport, " " " 31st.

If Providence permit, I will hold meetings as follows:—
New Britain, Ct., Thursday evening, August 19th.
Bristol, Ct., Friday evening, 20th.
From Saturday until Monday, Plymouth Hollow and vicinity, where Bro. Humphreyville will appoint.

George Baxter.

[I learn this young brother is worthy, and out of health. Will the brethren help him from place to place.] Hiram Munger.

Business.

To Correspondents.

J. G. Smith, Meredith, N. H.—All right.

Jas. Hammond—Should be credited $2.00 instead of $1.00; pays to 202.

Cash Receipts.

☞ Our Canada subscribers, and all in the Provinces, will remember that we have to pre pay the postage on their papers, amounting to 26 cents a year; hence they should send $2.26 for a year's subscription.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Mrs. M Norton 156, $2.50; J Damon 162, 25 cts; J G Smith 176, 75 cts; M Webber 161, G W Bailey 160, 50 cts. each.

W. Brown 179, T Leavitt 166, M Fogg 169, C G Rodman 162, P C Rodman 169, L J Beach 143, C Balch 104, D Hastings 166, H Moses 179, Mrs. S Applebee 179, W L Parsons 173, B F Wilkins 182, G W Turner 156, J Morse 156, $1 each.

J Kimball 182, A B Thayer 234, R Bush 213, $2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts.—G Moyer $1.24, A C Thorp 38 cts.

☞ Wanted, 10,000 orders for "The Great Controversy between God and Man," by H. L. Hastings. Price, post paid, 60 cts., neatly bound in cloth gilt. Send in your orders with the cash. Address H. L Hastings, Rochester, N. Y. For sale at this office. Also by Smith, English & Co., No. 40 North 6th St., Philadelphia. G. W. Young, 109 Nassau St., New York. N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois. Moses Cumings, Irvington, N. J. R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked [illegible] Baptist minister. Price, unbound, [illegible] hundred; 25 cents single [illegible] 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ [illegible] as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By [illegible]

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson, Professor of Languages in N. Y. Central College. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

9.—The Unity of Man: or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.; $10 per hundred—postage 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassua street N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Man's Destiny. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, [illegible] cts. Postage, 3 cts.

The Discussion: Between Prof. [illegible] [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

PILGRIM'S SONG.

Air—"Bride is my home."

O, I have roamed o'er earth's drear waste
Three many, many years;
The pilgrim's lot my lot has been,
My rest, this vale of tears!
But I'll confess my home's not here,
No more desire to roam,—
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

If India's boasted wealth were mine,
With Ophir's golden store,—
With all the wisdom of the past,
Its learning and its lore;
Yet still insatiate, I should cry—
No more I wish to roam,
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

As strangers in a stranger's land,
As foreigners unknown,
The Fathers wandered here below,—
My feet the way they've shown;
Their hope, then blest, is now my hope,
I thirst for joys to come,—
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

A wilderness, a joyless scene,
Is earth, long cursed of heav'n;
With groanings now expectant waits
For glory to be given,—
When all the saints, from bondage freed,
Shall here no longer roam;—
Then steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

I find no earthly joy that's pure,
No unmixed pleasure here;
'Tis all a scene of trembling hope,
Love, sorrow, trust and fear.
Toils mark my pilgrim progress still—
When shall I cease to roam?
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

Soon will the pilgrimage be o'er,
My wandering ever cease,
With God the "Source of life" to dwell,
With Christ the Prince of peace;
All conflict o'er,—the vict'ry gained,
No more I'll wish to roam,
But moor my bark on Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

For the Crisis.

SONG FOR THE TIMES.

BY T. S. SCOVILLE.

How strangely the world's rolling on by the way,
How strange are the scenes that transpire in our day!
The wonder of wonders is in it;
The wicked are wilder and fiercer just now,
They are bolder and reckless, and careless of how
They accomplish, if so they begin it.

The doctor draws blood and money together,
(The more of the one makes the more of the other,)
Make money, though 't may be a sin;
He never will take the best way for a cure,
But let the unfortunate patient endure,
'Tis in this way that we doctors win.

See, too, the sleek priest who watches with care
The fleece of the flock and the mutton that's rare,
While the lame and the poor are forgotten;
Who preaches a gospel for policy's sake,
Or preaches because of the gold he can make,
While at heart he is decay and rotten.

The business man says the lot is all prime,
While he knows there is ruin within all the time,
'Tis cheaper for others to lose;
The farmer says good, and the dealer says good,
More deception and cheating than since the world stood,
Only catch, by whatever noose.

The lawyers are watching their clients to get,
Like spiders for flies, in a fine silken net,
And grab when a chance comes around;
And the way they suck blood is a shame and a sin,
They cling to their man till they get all his tin,
Then let him go—into the ground.

The great college D. D. have wonderful schools
For doctors and lawyers and priests, the more fools,
They bind up the souls of their catch;
Tie him to books, forbid freedom of thought,
His forefather's straight jacket wear, he is taught,
He's turned out a skeleton wretch.

All lands are held fast for the price to enhance,
While the poor for a stay, have not even a chance
To get them a nice little home.
Soon the grasp of the rich will e'en loose from the lands,
And the poor will rise up, and the world will change hands,
For Jesus our Master will come.

But few there are watching the signs and the [illegible],
For the coming of Christ and return of the Jews,
And the good time so often we sing.
These, Bro. Grant, are the signs, though in rhymes,
For Jesus comes soon, he will come in our times,
Then the world with Hosannah's will ring.
Buffalo, July 27, 1858.

HASTE NOT,—REST NOT.

[illegible]

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Gleanings.

BY M. D. W.

In reading Spurgeon's Sermons, third series, I was pleased to find a notice of what I have for several years considered a great mistake in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, but had never seen nor heard any allusion made to it before. I will give the incident as he records it.

"By the way, let me tell you a little story about that matter of John Bunyan. I am a great lover of John Bunyan, but I do not believe him infallible; for I met with a story the other day which I think a very good one. There was a young man in Edinburgh who wished to be a missionary. He was a wise young man; he thought—'Well, if I am to be a missionary, there is no need for me to transport myself far away from home; I may as well be a missionary in Edinburgh.' There's a hint to some of you, ladies, who give away tracts in your district, and never give your servant Mary one. Well, this young man started, and determined to speak to the first person he met. He met one of those old fishwives; those of us who have seen them, can never forget them; they are extraordinary women indeed. So stepping up to her, he said: 'Here you are, coming with your burden on your back; let me ask you if you have got another burden, a spiritual burden?' 'What!' she said; 'do you mean that burden in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress? Because if you do, young man, I have got rid of that many years ago, before you were born. But I went a better way to work than the Pilgrim did. The Evangelist that John Bunyan talks about, was one of your parsons that do not preach the gospel; for he said: 'Keep that light in thine eye, and run to the wicket-gate.' Why, man alive! that was not the place for him to run to. He should have said, 'Do you see that cross? Run there at once! But instead of that, he sent the poor Pilgrim to the wicket-gate first; and much good he got by going there! He got tumbling into the slough, and was like to have been killed by it.' 'But did you not,' he asked, 'go through any Slough of Despond?' 'Yes, young man, I did; but I found it a great deal easier going through with my burden off, than with it on my back.'

The old woman was quite right. John Bunyan put the getting rid of the burden quite too far off from the commencement of the pilgrimage. If he meant to show what usually happens, he was right; but if he meant to show what ought to have happened, he is wrong. We must not say to the sinner, 'Now, sinner, if thou wilt be saved, go to the baptismal pool; go to the wicket-gate; go to the church; do this, or do that.' No, the cross should be right in front of the wicket-gate; and we should say to the sinner, 'Throw thyself there, and thou art safe; but thou art not safe until thou canst cast off thy burden, and lie at the foot of the cross, and find peace in Jesus. Well, that is a time when we can sing."

I agree with Spurgeon that the "old woman was quite right" in regard to the cross, but I don't understand how she should pass through the Slough of Despond after having lost the burden at the cross! I thought such sloughs usually preceded deliverance from the burden of sin, and that after deliverance comes, as did Bunyan's Pilgrim, we can go on our way singing rather than desponding.

I like Spurgeon's writings very much. There is so much of the life-principle, so much earnestness and plain-heartedness, they commend themselves very much to my understanding and favor. Let me give an extract from his sermon from the text, "O Lord, revive thy work."

"But there are others of you who are frequently prone to cry, 'The church wants reviving.' Let me bid you, instead of grumbling at your minister, instead of finding fault with the different parts of the church, to cry, 'O Lord, revive thy work.' 'O,' says one, 'if we had another minister. O, if we had another kind of worship. O, if we had a different sort of preaching.' Just as if that were all! It is, 'O! if the Lord would come into the hearts of [illegible] ... O! if he would [illegible]

[illegible] and get the steam up, that is what you want; not fresh engines. We do not want fresh ministers, or fresh plans, or fresh ways, though many might be invented, to make the church better; we only want the life in what we have got.

It is not a new man that is wanted, it is the life of God in him. Do not be crying out for something new; it will no more succeed of itself, than what you have. Cry, 'O Lord, revive thy work.'"

For the Crisis.

"Behold, What a Weariness is it!"

My brother, my sister, is this the feeling of thy soul when the hour for prayer and conference rolls round—or the class-meeting? What a weariness is it! And thou dost take no pleasure in this precious service for its own sake, only for its attending circumstances? Only when some favorite preacher is to please thy fancy, or something new has come along. What a weariness is it! except there is something to attend the meeting more interesting than the pure heart worship of God! Thou mayest not intend to think lightly of God, or to "snuff at it," but, beloved, "take heed to thy spirit!" for thou mayest not know of what spirit thou art. Remember that on one occasion it was said, "In as much as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me," and that the talent was taken from the servant who had buried it, and was given to him who had ten.

What wouldst thou think of a friendship which ever shunned all close intercourse with yourself, or in company with your most select friends; but the farther they were from you, the better they seemed pleased; and their interest was only shown when surrounding circumstances caused a general interest in your affairs. Would you not rightly conclude that their regard was not so much for yourself as for your surroundings? How could you ever become acquainted with such friends? and if asked about them, would you not have to acknowledge, I do not know them? Ah! how this brings to my mind those solemn words of our Lord—"I never knew you." Never knew them! And why? Because they did not cultivate his acquaintance. They followed him at too great a distance. O! how solemn the thought! I feel like crying out for myself, O Lord, have mercy upon me, and help me to quicken my pace; to come near to thee, even into thine outer chamber, where thou canst know me, even by my name, and where I can pour out my soul into thine ever open ear.

Come, ye halting ones! Come, ye weary! here are sweets that can be found no where else. Why will ye perish in view of such a feast! The nearer we keep to our Lord, the easier it is for us. Just as it is easier in a drove of animals, for the foremost ones; they can even loiter and feed, while the hindermost are under whip and spur all the time. Then let us, for our own sakes, strive to be in the foremost ranks in the narrow way of life. By this means we shall secure all the blessings of the way, and shun many of its direst ills.

O my friends, what a journey are we on! a journey to the New Jerusalem—a journey that will end in life and glory in the Kingdom of God upon the earth. Shall we tire? Shall we faint? Nay, rather let us, as the weary and benumbed traveler who knows that to stop is death, hasten on; so let us hasten. He does it for a few lingering days here; but we for a crown incorruptible—for glory, honor and immortality. O how I long to greet you all where imperfection will be no more!

Bro. Grant:—I am pleased with your little paper, and wish it continued for the year. Its great aim seems to be to honor Jesus, and to do good to his brethren that are in the world. I would here present my christian salutation to every dear child of God who reads these pages, with a humble desire of an interest in your prayers.

E. S. Willard.

Warsaw, Kos. Co., Ia., Aug. 1, 1858.

Be Firm.—Whatever you think proper to grant a child, let it be granted at the first word, without entreaty or prayer, and above all, without making any conditions. [illegible]

Choice Selections.

Obsolete Scripture Words.

Few persons are aware of the number of words in our common English Bibles which have now become obsolete, and are usually unintelligible to those who read them. While the great body of King James's Version is plain and perspicuous, the following words might be displaced by others which all may understand.

"God did tempt Abraham." Gen. 22: 1.

The usual meaning of tempt is to solicit to evil. But God does not solicit any one to do evil. The meaning is, God tried Abraham.

"The lean kine." Gen. 41: 2.

This is the old plural for the word cow, "cowen," as swine in the old plural for sow, "sowen."

Not one in a thousand would understand kine as meaning cows.

"Joseph died and is chested." Gen. 50.

Who would suppose that this means that Joseph dying, was put in his coffin? The word chest was, by some of the old writers, used for coffin. But, in any sense, chest, as a verb, is becoming obsolete.

"In earing time and harvest." Ex. 34: 21.

Earing means ploughing, or tilling. Though much used by old English writers, it is now entirely obsolete.

"They shall amerce him in a hundred shekels." Deut. 22: 19.

The word here rendered amerce, means to punish by a fine, pecuniary or otherwise, taking from him a portion of his goods. Amerce is entirely obsolete.

"Asher continued on the seashore, and abode in his breaches." Judges 5: 17.

Yes, so it reads, and what is its meaning? One at first pictures to himself a person unaccustomed to change his wearing apparel, a slovenly individual. But the word here signifies the openings in the sea coast, the little creeks running from the seashore into the country. And the dwelling place of Asher was on the seashore, among the creeks.

"And Gideon smote the host; for it was secure." Judges 8: 11.

One is at a loss to see the connection here. How could the host be routed if it was secure? The old sense of the word secure appears to have been without care, or careless. The present meaning is safe, as needing no care, according to which the passage should evidently read: "Gideon smote the host, because it was careless.

"And a certain woman cast a piece of millstone upon Abimelech's head, and all to break his skull." Judges 9: 53.

Some editions of the Bible read, "all to break his skull." This is still more corrupt. This obsolete expression, all to, was formerly used as an adverb, for entirely. This explanation gives to the passage a meaning clear to every reader. The millstone entirely broke his skull. The effect is stated, instead of the design of the act in casting the stone upon the head.

"And that year they vexed and oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years." Judges 10: 8.

How an oppression could be visited for eighteen years in one year, passes all ordinary understanding. The phrase that year obviously is synonymous with at that time.

The word sodden occurs in the Bible repeatedly in different forms. It is the old word for boil. Thus in 1 Sam. 2: 15: "He will not have sodden flesh of thee," should read "boiled flesh."

"David feigned himself mad, and scrabbled on the doors of the gate."

In the margin of the larger Bibles this word is explained by "he made marks," as by writing. Johnson's definition of scrabble is to paw with the hands, which is quite a different thing from making marks as by writing.

"It was at every year's end that he polled his head."

The old word pole, from the French polle, signifies to lop or cut off the hair. This use of the word is obsolete.

Jezebel tired her head." 2 Kings 10: 30. Isa. 3: 18.

The word attire would suggest the true meaning. She dressed her hair.

"He dwelt in several houses," i. e., separate house. 2 Kings 15: 5.

But the word several is not now used for separate, except in rare cases in some legal documents.

"So will we render the calves of our lips." Hosea 14: 2.

Calves literally were offered as sacrifices. Hence calves of the lips was used for sacrifices of the lips; that is, the offerings of confession of sin, of praise and thanksgiving, which are made by the lips.

"All that hear the bruit of thee." Nahum 3: 19.

Bruit is an entirely obsolete expression for report, or fame.

The above are selected from a list of nearly one hundred different words in the Old Testament, which greatly mar the usefulness of that volume.—N. Y. Chronicle.

An Hour a Day.—"No time to read!" How often do clerks and apprentices say this; and I suppose they think so. "Could you not read one hour a day?" "Oh, no."—"Perhaps not one hour at a time; [illegible]

Health Department.

Mr. Finney on Ventilation.

Notwithstanding all that has been written of late years upon the principles and methods of Ventilation, this important point in the structure of public buildings is still sadly neglected. Upon this subject some architects are quite ignorant, and others are quite impracticable—willing to sacrifice the health and comfort of an assembly to some fancied artistic effect. Persons charged with the responsibility of erecting public buildings, seldom give so much attention to details as to comprehend and apply the principles of ventilation. Some confound ventilation with a draft, and suppose that the way to ventilate a building is to open windows at opposite sides. But the true art of ventilation consists in gradually and continually changing the body of air in the room without subjecting any one to the inconvenience and the dangers of a direct draft of air.

Others connect the idea of ventilation with the temperature of the room, and suppose that ventilation is required only when there is excess of heat. But the necessity for ventilation arises from the fact that the air is vitiated by breathing, whatever may be its temperature; and therefore, unless the volume of air in a room is continually changed, it will soon become impure and unhealthy alike in winter and in summer.

The following remarks of Rev. C. G. Finney, in his Lectures on Revivals, deserve the careful attention of all concerned:

"Of all houses a church should be the most perfectly ventilated. If there is no change of the air, it passes through so many lungs it becomes bad, and its vitality is exhausted, and the people pant, they know not why, and feel an almost irresistible desire to sleep, and the minister preaches in vain. The sermon is lost, and more than lost. I have often wondered that this matter should be so little the subject of thought. The elders and trustees will sit and hear a whole sermon, while the people are all but ready to die for the want of air, and the minister is wasting his strength in preaching where the room is just like an exhausted receiver; and there they sit, and never think to do anything to help the matter. They should take it upon themselves to see that this is regulated right, that the house is just warm enough, and the air kept pure. How important is it that the church should be awake to this subject, that the minister may labor to the best advantage, and the people give their undivided attention to the truth which is to save their souls.

It is very common when things are wrong to have it all laid to the sexton. This is not so. Often the sexton is not to blame. If the house is cold and uncomfortable, very often it is because the fuel is not good, or the stoves not suitable, or the house is so open it cannot be warmed. If it is too warm, perhaps somebody has intermeddled when he was out, and heaped on fuel without discretion. Or if the sexton is in fault, perhaps it is because the church do not pay him enough for his services, and he cannot afford to give the attention necessary to keep the church in order. Churches sometimes screw down the sexton's salary to the lowest point, so that he is obliged to slight his work. Or they will select one who is incompetent, for the sake of getting him cheap, and then the thing is not done. The fault is in the church. Let them give an adequate compensation for the work, and it can be done, and done faithfully."

To Cure the Appetite for Tobacco.—A clergyman who for many years was addicted to the chewing and smoking of tobacco, but who has entirely abstained from the weed for over thirty years, communicates to the Independent the method of cure which he adopted. We copy it, hoping it will prove effectual in many other cases:

"I had a deep well of very cool water, and whenever the evil appetite craved indulgence, I resorted immediately to fresh-drawn water. Of this I drank what I desired, and then continued to hold water in my mouth, throwing out and taking in successive mouthfuls, until the craving ceased. By a faithful adherence to this practice for about a month, I was cured; and from that time to this have been as free from any appetite for tobacco as a nursing infant. I loathe the use of the weed in every form, far more than I did before I contracted habits of indulgence."

Effects of Excessive Tea Drinking.—A friend has furnished us with the following account of the result of an excess in tea drinking:

"Being under an unusual stress of work, which demanded great activity of brain, I had recourse, as usual, to tea for excitement. For several days successively I took a basin of very strong tea four or five times a day. One night, as I was sitting alone with my mother and writing, I felt a sudden dizziness overcome me immediately after a draught of tea stronger than any I had taken yet, and requested my mother to get me a glass of sherry from the sideboard. Consciousness of surrounding objects left into a dream, which I can [illegible]

"STAND UP FOR JESUS."

Soldiers of the Eternal King,
Speed the watchword! give it wing!
Let it through the churches ring!

Write it on the temples spire,
Utter it with tongues of fire,
Sire to son and son to sire!

Label it on every door!
Place it high the pulpit o'er—
Let it stand for evermore!

Blazon it in mansion-halls—
Pencil it on prison walls—
Bear and dare as duty calls!

Place it on the chisel'd stone,
Where the mourner weeps alone;
Grave it on the monarch's throne!

Let the press, whose wheels of might
Roll for reason and for right,
Flash it on the nation's sight!

Let the world and martyrs frown!
Ye shall conquer, though cast down;
Bear the cross and take the crown!

Friends of right and foes of wrong,
Though iniquity be strong,
Stand the battle fierce and long!

What though on the field of strife,
With disasters darkly rife,
Ye may fall in midst of life!

Bear the watchword! give it wing,
Till we with the sainted Tyng
Heaven's eternal triumph sing! J. H.

—Independent.

For the Children.

A Child's Influence.

An English lady resided with her little son in one of the cities in Canada. The child had been carefully taught "those things which a Christian ought to know and believe to his soul's health." He was about four years of age, very lovely and promising, and a general favorite.

One day, an old gentleman named Brown, who was exceedingly fond of him, took him on his knee after dinner. There were only gentlemen in the room; the ladies had gone into another room. Mr. Brown, although his hair was white with age, did not fear God. He several times during the conversation used an oath.

Presently some one looked at the little boy, who was still upon Mr. Brown's knee, and said, "Well, Tommy, what do you think of Mr. Brown?"

The child hesitated for a moment, and then replied, "I think he did not have a good mother, for if he had he would not use such naughty words."

The old gentleman was a Scotchman. Home and a pious mother rose in all their freshness to his mind. The effect was overpowering; he rose from the table without speaking, retired, and was never afterward known to make use of similar expressions.—(London) S. S. Mag.

Boys, be Prompt.

Never say, when told to do any thing, "In a minute," or "By and by." This leads to a bad habit, which, if not overcome, will prevent all confidence in you, as you grow up. You will then put off the duties you owe to your parents and your neighbor in the same way, and lose their confidence. Many men lose the respect of their neighbors, not so much because they mean to do wrong, as through mere carelessness. "By and by," and "to morrow," have ruined thousands, have robbed them of their character, and made them anything but blessings in the neighborhood. Little confidence can be placed in their word, and that because of their carelessness.

Let none of our young readers lose the confidence of their parents or their school-fellows, by such carelessness. But fulfil every promise and every obligation promptly, and you will succeed in every laudable undertaking, and be respected by all good men.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

PILGRIM SONG.

Air—"Zion is my home."

O, I have roamed o'er earth's drear waste
These many, many years;
The pilgrim's lot my lot has been,
My rest, this vale of tears!
But I'll confess my home's not here,
No more desire to roam,—
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

If India's boasted wealth were mine,
With Ophir's golden store,—
With all the wisdom of the past,
Its learning and its lore;
Yet, still insatiate, I should cry—
No more I wish to roam,
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

As strangers in a stranger's land,
As foreigners unknown,
The Fathers wandered here below,—
My feet the way they've shown;
Their hope, then blest, is now my hope,
I thirst for joys to come,—
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

A wilderness, a joyless scene,
Is earth, long cursed of heav'n;
With groanings now expectant waits
For glory to be given,
When all the saints, from bondage freed,
Shall here no longer roam;—
Then steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

I find no earthly joy that's pure,
No unmixed pleasure here;
'Tis all a scene of trembling hope,
Love, sorrow, trust and fear.
Toils mark my pilgrim progress still—
When shall I cease to roam?
O, steer my bark to Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

Soon will the pilgrimage be o'er,
My wandering ever cease,
With God the "Source of life" to dwell,
With Christ the Prince of peace;
All conflict o'er,—the vict'ry gained,
No more I'll wish to roam,
But moor my bark on Canaan's shore,
For Canaan is my home!

For the Crisis.

SONG FOR THE TIMES.

BY T. S. SCOVILLE.

How strangely the world's rolling on by the way,
How strange are the scenes that transpire in our day!
The wonder of wonders is in it;
The wicked are wilder and fiercer just now,
They are bolder and reckless, and careless of how
They accomplish, if so they begin it.

The doctor draws blood and money together,
(The more of the one makes the more of the other,)
Make money, though 't may be a sin;
He never will take the best way for a cure,
But let the unfortunate patient endure,
'Tis in this way that we doctors win.

See, too, the sleek priest who watches with care
The fleece of the flock and the mutton that's rare,
While the lame and the poor are forgotten;
Who preaches a gospel for policy's sake,
Or preaches because of the gold he can make,
While at heart he is [illegible] and rotten.

The business man says the lot is all prime,
While he knows there is ruin within all the time,
'Tis cheaper for others to lose;
The farmer says good, and the dealer says good,
More deception and cheating than since the world stood,
Only catch, by whatever noose.

The lawyers are watching their clients to get,
Like spiders for flies, in a fine silken net,
And grab when a chance comes around;
And the way they suck blood is a shame and a sin,
They glue to their man till they get all his tin,
Then let him go—into the ground.

The great college D. D. have wonderful schools
For doctors and lawyers and priests, the more fools,
They bind up the souls of their catch;
Tie him to books, forbid freedom of thought,
His forefather's straight jacket wear, he is taught,
He's turned out a skeleton wretch.

All lands are held fast for the price to enhance,
While the poor for a stay, have not even a chance
To get them a nice little home.
Soon the grasp of the rich will e'en loose from the lands,
And the poor will rise up, and the world will change hands,
For Jesus our Master will come.

But few there are watching the signs and the news,
For the coming of Christ and return of the Jews,
And the good time so often we sing.
These, Bro. Grant, are the signs, though in ryhmes,
For Jesus comes soon, he will come in our times,
Then the world with Hosannah's will ring.
Buffalo, July 27, 1858.

HASTE NOT,—REST NOT.

[illegible]

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Gleanings.

BY M. D. W.

In reading Spurgeon's Sermons, third series, I was pleased to find a notice of what I have for several years considered a great mistake in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, but had never seen nor heard any allusion made to it before. I will give the incident as he records it.

"By the way, let me tell you a little story about that matter of John Bunyan. I am a great lover of John Bunyan, but I do not believe him infallible; for I met with a story the other day which I think a very good one. There was a young man in Edinburgh who wished to be a missionary. He was a wise young man; he thought—'Well, if I am to be a missionary, there is no need for me to transport myself far away from home; I may as well be a missionary in Edinburgh.' There's a hint to some of you, ladies, who give away tracts in your district, and never give your servant Mary one. Well, this young man started, and determined to speak to the first person he met. He met one of those old fishwives; those of us who have seen them, can never forget them; they are extraordinary women indeed. So stepping up to her, he said: 'Here you are, coming with your burden on your back; let me ask you if you have got another burden, a spiritual burden?' 'What!' she said; 'do you mean that burden in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress? Because if you do, young man, I have got rid of that many years ago, before you were born. But I went a better way to work than the Pilgrim did. The Evangelist that John Bunyan talks about, was one of your parsons that do not preach the gospel; for he said: 'Keep that light in thine eye, and run to the wicket-gate.' Why, man alive! that was not the place for him to run to. He should have said, 'Do you see that cross? Run there at once! But instead of that, he sent the poor Pilgrim to the wicket-gate first; and much good he got by going there! He got tumbling into the slough, and was like to have been killed by it.' 'But did you not,' he asked, 'go through any Slough of Despond?' 'Yes, young man, I did; but I found it a great deal easier going through with my burden off, than with it on my back.'

The old woman was quite right. John Bunyan put the getting rid of the burden quite too far off from the commencement of the pilgrimage. If he meant to show what usually happens, he was right; but if he meant to show what ought to have happened, he is wrong. We must not say to the sinner, 'Now, sinner, if thou wilt be saved, go to the baptismal pool; go to the wicket-gate; go to the church; do this, or do that.' No, the cross should be right in front of the wicket-gate; and we should say to the sinner, 'Throw thyself there, and thou art safe; but thou art not safe until thou canst cast off thy burden, and lie at the foot of the cross, and find peace in Jesus. Well, that is a time when we can sing."

I agree with Spurgeon that the "old woman was quite right" in regard to the cross, but I don't understand how she should pass through the Slough of Despond after having lost the burden at the cross! I thought such sloughs usually preceded deliverance from the burden of sin, and that after deliverance comes, as did Bunyan's Pilgrim, we can go on our way singing rather than desponding.

I like Spurgeon's writings very much. There is so much of the life-principle, so much earnestness and plain-heartedness, they commend themselves very much to my understanding and favor. Let me give an extract from his sermon from the text, "O Lord, revive thy work."

"But there are others of you who are frequently prone to cry, 'The church wants reviving.' Let me bid you, instead of grumbling at your minister, instead of finding fault with the different parts of the church, to cry, 'O Lord, revive thy work.' 'O,' says one, 'if we had another minister. O, if we had another kind of worship. O, if we had a different sort of preaching.' Just as if that were all! It is, 'O! if the Lord would come into the hearts of the men you have got. O! if he would make the forms you do use full of power!' You do not want fresh ways or fresh machinery; you want the life in what you have. There is an engine on a railway; a train has to be moved. 'Bring another engine,' says one, 'and another, and another.' [illegible] and get the steam up, that is what you want; not fresh engines. We do not want fresh ministers, or fresh plans, or fresh ways, though many might be invented, to make the church better; we only want the life in what we have got.

It is not a new man that is wanted, it is the life of God in him. Do not be crying out for something new; it will no more succeed of itself, than what you have. Cry, 'O Lord, revive thy work.'"

For the Crisis.

"Behold, What a Weariness is it!"

My brother, my sister, is this the feeling of thy soul when the hour for prayer and conference rolls round—or the class-meeting? What a weariness is it! And thou dost take no pleasure in this precious service for its own sake, only for its attending circumstances? Only when some favorite preacher is to please thy fancy, or something new has come along. What a weariness is it! except there is something to attend the meeting more interesting than the pure heart worship of God! Thou mayest not intend to think lightly of God, or to "snuff at it," but, beloved, "take heed to thy spirit!" for thou mayest not know of what spirit thou art. Remember that on one occasion it was said, "In as much as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me," and that the talent was taken from the servant who had buried it, and was given to him who had ten.

What wouldst thou think of a friendship which ever shunned all close intercourse with yourself, or in company with your most select friends; but the farther they were from you, the better they seemed pleased; and their interest was only shown when surrounding circumstances caused a general interest in your affairs. Would you not rightly conclude that their regard was not so much for yourself as for your surroundings? How could you ever become acquainted with such friends? and if asked about them, would you not have to acknowledge, I do not know them? Ah! how this brings to my mind those solemn words of our Lord—"I never knew you." Never knew them! And why? Because they did not cultivate his acquaintance. They followed him at too great a distance. O! how solemn the thought! I feel like crying out for myself, O Lord, have mercy upon me, and help me to quicken my pace; to come near to thee, even into thine outer chamber, where thou canst know me, even by my name, and where I can pour out my soul into thine ever open ear.

Come, ye halting ones! Come, ye weary! here are sweets that can be found no where else. Why will ye perish in view of such a feast! The nearer we keep to our Lord, the easier it is for us. Just as it is easier in a drove of animals, for the foremost ones; they can even loiter and feed, while the hindermost are under whip and spur all the time. Then let us, for our own sakes, strive to be in the foremost ranks in the narrow way of life. By this means we shall secure all the blessings of the way, and shun many of its direst ills.

O my friends, what a journey are we on! a journey to the New Jerusalem—a journey that will end in life and glory in the Kingdom of God upon the earth. Shall we tire? Shall we faint? Nay, rather let us, as the weary and benumbed traveler who knows that to stop is death, hasten on; so let us hasten. He does it for a few lingering days here; but we for a crown incorruptible—for glory, honor and immortality. O how I long to greet you all where imperfection will be no more!

Bro. Grant:—I am pleased with your little paper, and wish it continued for the year. Its great aim seems to be to honor Jesus, and to do good to his brethren that are in the world. I would here present my christian salutation to every dear child of God who reads these pages, with a humble desire of an interest in your prayers.

E. S. Willard.

Warsaw, Kos. Co., Ia., Aug. 1, 1858.

Be Firm.—Whatever you think proper to grant a child, let it be granted at the first word, without entreaty or prayer, and above all, without making any conditions. Grant with pleasure, refuse with reluctance; but let your refusal be irrevocable—let no importunity shake your resolution; let the positive "No," when once pronounced, be a wall of brass, which a child, when he has tried his strength against it half a dozen times, shall never more [illegible]

Choice Selections.

Obsolete Scripture Words.

Few persons are aware of the number of words in our common English Bibles which have now become obsolete, and are usually unintelligible to those who read them. While the great body of King James's Version is plain and perspicuous, the following words might be displaced by others which all may understand.

"God did tempt Abraham." Gen. 22: 1.

The usual meaning of tempt is to solicit to evil. But God does not solicit any one to do evil. The meaning is, God tried Abraham.

"The lean kine." Gen. 41: 2.

This is the old plural for the word cow, "cowen," as swine in the old plural for sow, "sowen."

Not one in a thousand would understand kine as meaning cows.

"Joseph died and is chested." Gen. 50.

Who would suppose that this means that Joseph dying, was put in his coffin? The word chest was, by some of the old writers, used for coffin. But, in any sense, chest, as a verb, is becoming obsolete.

"In earing time and harvest." Ex. 34: 21.

Earing means ploughing, or tilling. Though much used by old English writers, it is now entirely obsolete.

"They shall amerce him in a hundred shekels." Deut. 22: 19.

The word here rendered amerce, means to punish by a fine, pecuniary or otherwise, taking from him a portion of his goods. Amerce is entirely obsolete.

"Asher continued on the seashore, and abode in his breaches." Judges 5: 17.

Yes, so it reads, and what is its meaning? One at first pictures to himself a person unaccustomed to change his wearing apparel, a slovenly individual. But the word here signifies the openings in the sea coast, the little creeks running from the seashore into the country. And the dwelling place of Asher was on the seashore, among the creeks.

"And Gideon smote the host; for it was secure." Judges 8: 11.

One is at a loss to see the connection here. How could the host be routed if it was secure? The old sense of the word secure appears to have been without care, or careless. The present meaning is safe, as needing no care, according to which the passage should evidently read: "Gideon smote the host, because it was careless.

"And a certain woman cast a piece of millstone upon Abimelech's head, and all to break his skull." Judges 9: 53.

Some editions of the Bible read, "all to break his skull." This is still more corrupt. This obsolete expression, all to, was formerly used as an adverb, for entirely. This explanation gives to the passage a meaning clear to every reader. The millstone entirely broke his skull. The effect is stated, instead of the design of the act in casting the stone upon the head.

"And that year they vexed and oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years." Judges 10: 8.

How an oppression could be visited for eighteen years in one year, passes all ordinary understanding. The phrase that year obviously is synonymous with at that time.

The word sodden occurs in the Bible repeatedly in different forms. It is the old word for boil. Thus in 1 Sam. 2: 15: "He will not have sodden flesh of thee," should read "boiled flesh."

"David feigned himself mad, and scrabbled on the doors of the gate."

In the margin of the larger Bibles this word is explained by "he made marks," as by writing. Johnson's definition of scrabble is to paw with the hands, which is quite a different thing from making marks as by writing.

"It was at every year's end that he polled his head."

The old word pole, from the French polle, signifies to lop or cut off the hair. This use of the word is obsolete.

Jezebel tired her head." 2 Kings 10: 30. Isa. 3: 18.

The word attire would suggest the true meaning. She dressed her hair.

"He dwelt in several houses," i. e., separate house. 2 Kings 15: 5.

But the word several is not now used for separate, except in rare cases in some legal documents.

"So will we render the calves of our lips." Hosea 14: 2.

Calves literally were offered as sacrifices. Hence calves of the lips was used for sacrifices of the lips; that is, the offerings of confession of sin, of praise and thanksgiving, which are made by the lips.

"All that bear the bruit of thee." Nahum 3: 19.

Bruit is an entirely obsolete expression for report, or fame.

The above are selected from a list of nearly one hundred different words in the Old Testament, which greatly mar the usefulness of that volume.—N. Y. Chronicle.

An Hour a Day.—"No time to read?" How often do clerks and apprentices say this; and I suppose they think so. "Could you not read one hour a day?" "Oh, no." "Perhaps not one hour at a time; but can you not pick up two half hours, or four quarters, somewhere in the day? Don't you lose as many as four quarters of an hour?" They think they do not.—Child's Paper.

Innocence is a flower which withers when [illegible]

Health Department.

Mr. Finney on Ventilation.

Notwithstanding all that has been written of late years upon the principles and methods of Ventilation, this important point in the structure of public buildings is still sadly neglected. Upon this subject some architects are quite ignorant, and others are quite impracticable—willing to sacrifice the health and comfort of an assembly to some fancied artistic effect. Persons charged with the responsibility of erecting public buildings, seldom give so much attention to details as to comprehend and apply the principles of ventilation. Some confound ventilation with a draft, and suppose that the way to ventilate a building is to open windows at opposite sides. But the true art of ventilation consists in gradually and continually changing the body of air in the room without subjecting any one to the inconvenience and the dangers of a direct draft of air.

Others connect the idea of ventilation with the temperature of the room, and suppose that ventilation is required only when there is excess of heat. But the necessity for ventilation arises from the fact that the air is vitiated by breathing, whatever may be its temperature; and therefore, unless the volume of air in a room is continually changed, it will soon become impure and unhealthy alike in winter and in summer.

The following remarks of Rev. C. G. Finney, in his Lectures on Revivals, deserve the careful attention of all concerned:

"Of all houses a church should be the most perfectly ventilated. If there is no change of the air, it passes through so many lungs it becomes bad, and its vitality is exhausted, and the people pant, they know not why, and feel an almost irresistible desire to sleep, and the minister preaches in vain. The sermon is lost, and more than lost. I have often wondered that this matter should be so little the subject of thought. The elders and trustees will sit and hear a whole sermon, while the people are all but ready to die for the want of air, and the minister is wasting his strength in preaching where the room is just like an exhausted receiver; and there they sit, and never think to do anything to help the matter. They should take it upon themselves to see that this is regulated right, that the house is just warm enough, and the air kept pure. How important is it that the church should be awake to this subject, that the minister may labor to the best advantage, and the people give their undivided attention to the truth which is to save their souls.

It is very common when things are wrong to have it all laid to the sexton. This is not so. Often the sexton is not to blame. If the house is cold and uncomfortable, very often it is because the fuel is not good, or the stoves not suitable, or the house is so open it cannot be warmed. If it is too warm, perhaps somebody has intermeddled when he was out, and heaped on fuel without discretion. Or if the sexton is in fault, perhaps it is because the church do not pay him enough for his services, and he cannot afford to give the attention necessary to keep the church in order. Churches sometimes screw down the sexton's salary to the lowest point, so that he is obliged to slight his work. Or they will select one who is incompetent, for the sake of getting him cheap, and then the thing is not done. The fault is in the church. Let them give an adequate compensation for the work, and it can be done, and done faithfully."

To Cure the Appetite for Tobacco.—A clergyman who for many years was addicted to the chewing and smoking of tobacco, but who has entirely abstained from the weed for over thirty years, communicates to the Independent the method of cure which he adopted. We copy it, hoping it will prove effectual in many other cases:

"I had a deep well of very cool water, and whenever the evil appetite craved indulgence, I resorted immediately to fresh-drawn water. Of this I drank what I desired, and then continued to hold water in my mouth, throwing out and taking in successive mouthfuls, until the craving ceased. By a faithful adherence to this practice for about a month, I was cured; and from that time to this have been as free from any appetite for tobacco as a nursing infant. I loathe the use of the weed in every form, far more than I did before I contracted habits of indulgence."

Effects of Excessive Tea Drinking.—A friend has furnished us with the following account of the result of an excess in tea drinking:

"Being under an unusual stress of work, which demanded great activity of brain, I had recourse, as usual, to tea for excitement. For several days successively I took a basin of very strong tea four or five times a day. One night, as I was sitting alone with my mother and writing, I felt a sudden dizziness overcome me immediately after a draught of tea stronger than any I had taken yet, and requested my mother to get me a glass of sherry from the sideboard. Consciousness of surrounding objects left into a dream, which I can only describe by saying that it was indescribably terrific. It seemed to last for ages, and I awoke with the horror of a soul which had been for an eternity in hell. My mother was standing before me with the sherry. I asked her how long I had been insensible. She asked me what I meant; she had just returned with the sherry, not having been absent half a minute."—[illegible]

"STAND UP FOR JESUS."

Soldiers of the Eternal King,
Speed the watchword! give it wing!
Let it through the churches ring!

Write it on the temples spire,
Utter it with tongues of fire,
Sire to son and son to sire!

Label it on every door!
Place it high the pulpit o'er—
Let it stand for evermore!

Blazon it in mansion-halls—
Pencil it on prison walls—
Bear and dare as duty calls!

Place it on the chisel'd stone,
Where the mourner weeps alone;
Grave it on the monarch's throne!

Let the press, whose wheels of might
Roll for reason and for right,
Flash it on the nation's sight!

Let the world and martyrs frown!
Ye shall conquer, though cast down;
Bear the cross and take the crown!

Friends of right and foes of wrong,
Though iniquity be strong,
Stand the battle fierce and long!

What though on the field of strife,
With disasters darkly rife,
Ye may fall in midst of life!

Bear the watchword! give it wing,
Till we with the sainted Tyng
Heaven's eternal triumph sing! J. H.

—Independent.

For the Children.

A Child's Influence.

An English lady resided with her little son in one of the cities in Canada. The child had been carefully taught "those things which a Christian ought to know and believe to his soul's health." He was about four years of age, very lovely and promising, and a general favorite.

One day, an old gentleman named Brown, who was exceedingly fond of him, took him on his knee after dinner. There were only gentlemen in the room; the ladies had gone into another room. Mr. Brown, although his hair was white with age, did not fear God. He several times during the conversation used an oath.

Presently some one looked at the little boy, who was still upon Mr. Brown's knee, and said, "Well, Tommy, what do you think of Mr. Brown?"

The child hesitated for a moment, and then replied, "I think he did not have a good mother, for if he had he would not use such naughty words."

The old gentleman was a Scotchman. Home and a pious mother rose in all their freshness to his mind. The effect was overpowering; he rose from the table without speaking, retired, and was never afterward known to make use of similar expressions.—(London) S. S. Mag.

Boys, be Prompt.

Never say, when told to do any thing, "In a minute," or "By and by." This leads to a bad habit, which, if not overcome, will prevent all confidence in you, as you grow up. You will then put off the duties you owe to your parents and your neighbor in the same way, and lose their confidence. Many men lose the respect of their neighbors, not so much because they mean to do wrong, as through mere carelessness. "By and by," and "to morrow," have ruined thousands, have robbed them of their character, and made them anything but blessings in the neighborhood. Little confidence can be placed in their word, and that because of their carelessness.

Let none of our young readers lose the confidence of their parents or their schoolfellows, by such carelessness. But fulfil every promise and every obligation promptly, and you will succeed in every laudable undertaking, and be respected by all good men.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$1.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

[illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NO. 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

BOSTON, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1858.

WHOLE NO. 156. VOL. VII. NO. 26.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE HOMES OF THE PROMISED LAND.

AIR.—Carrier Dove.

Farewell, old earth, I am going home,
And though bright thy scenes may be,
There is nothing here in this world of strife,
That can cast its spell o'er me.
While a pilgrim here I in sadness roam,
I will think of the shining band,
And the many joys I shall share with them
In the homes of the promised land.

I shall count the days till my Lord return,
And shall take his people home
To the long sought rest of the pilgrim band,
Whence they never more shall roam.
O, what joy shall burst on my raptured sight
As I see the glorious band,
Who shall greet the saints on the hills of light,
In the homes of the promised land!

I will bear the toils of this weary life,
While a stranger here I stray;
I will bear its scoffs, its tears and strife,
In the hope of that joyful day,
When my raptured heart with delight shall thrill,
As the Lord's own gentle hand
Shall wipe away the last lingering tear,
In the homes of the promised land.

R. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Reminiscences of the Past.

NUMBER V.

Death! What an innumerable host of sighs, and groans, and shrieks, which pierce the ear and rend the breast, are embodied in that dreadful word! What noble forms, what gentle bosoms, what blasted hopes and broken hearts lie at thy feet, thou first born of sin, begotten of the devil and launched upon the world, a fearful punishment for the broken law of God! Grim tyrant, fell destroyer, though seated high upon thy ghastly throne, built on Golgotha's field of human bones, from those of gentle Abel to the last which fell thy prey, and cemented with oceans of human blood, the tread of the coming Conqueror will shake the horrid pyramid to pieces, burst asunder the shackles with which thou hast bound thy countless millions, and He shall cast thee and thy sire, and all who fought against Him, into the fiery Phlegathon of his wrath, which shall consume them all! And war no more shall desolate the land, or mar the strains of triumph with the shrill cries of widows, the childless and the fatherless. All shall be peace, peace.

The sorely tried heart of my beloved mother was just recovering from the blow which had prostrated her fifth son, when the roar of war from the Crimean fields of slaughter bore to her ear the death cry of her youngest child—her Benjamin. Strong had been her trust in God, and steady was it to the end. Though bleeding at every pore, her heart humbled itself to the correction, her quivering lips meekly kissed the rod of chastisement, and she exclaimed: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." And the kind Father at length seemed to say, "it is enough," for she rapidly sank, and ere three months, she fell asleep in Jesus.

O how my heart melts and mine eyes o'erflow at the remembrance of that triumphant death! She lived the life of the righteous, and her last end was like his. So far as she understood the word of God, she closely lived it. Although the light which now is breaking on the minds of men, and chasing away the dark chimeras which clouded the word of truth, had not been manifested to her, who shall dare to say that to such as she the hope of a first resurrection shall never be realized? The bare assumption savors too much of the arrogant intolerance of Popery to meet with the views of charitable and reasonable minds. But enough. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

For the last three years, since the accident which disabled me forever from going to sea, I had lived at home with my mother. I was very happy, for she was all the world to me; and when the greedy grave closed over her, I felt as if I had no friend upon the earth. Everything in the house and about it reminded me of what I had lost; and unable to bear sight of her vacant place, I determined to travel, and consequently made preparations to visit the Western world. I took ship for Quebec, intending to proceed thence to New York, in hopes of finding a half-brother, although we had not heard from him for some years. On arriving at the American Gibralter, I spent more than a week in examining the wonderous strength of that almost unpregnable fortress. I visited the spot where fell the immortal Wolfe, and the unfortunate and chivalrous Montgomery. I gazed with rapture on the noble falls of Montmorenci, and thought how puny is man's greatest effort, when compared with the grand and stupendous works of God. I stood upon the platform which commanded a view of bay, and river, and shipping, at their different places of lading, at Indian Cove, Point Levi and other places for several miles above the town. Far down, on the left, Montmorenci threw over its restless torrent, while the beautiful island of Orleans seemed to float upon the glassy bosom of the mighty river. Ships, laden and returning to their distant homes, and others coming up, crowded with emigrants, rejoicing that their perilous voyage was over, and they near the Eldorado of their fond anticipation. Thus it was, doubtless, with the passengers of the ship "John McHenry." They were nearly all Scotch passengers; and, as a whole, were more respectable than usually come out in transient vessels; many comparatively wealthy, and going far West. For the most part, these emigrants did not land in Quebec, but were put on board the steamer "Montreal," with their baggage, bound up the river to Montreal, thence by railway to their several destinations. I took my passage in the same steamer, and watched with interest, bright, hopeful, joyous faces, as they bustled among chests, trunks, bandboxes and beds. Anxious mothers keeping their wondering children around them, their eyes being fully taken up with watching over the safety of their little ones that none of them might be lost amid the surrounding confusion. Some gazed with awe upon the huge rock which rose high and overshadowed the Lower Town, and to the forests of masts on every side, whilst high and shrill over every other sound shrieked the steam whistle, as if impatient at being delayed, while the rival steamer, the "Napoleon" was under way. At length "all on board" was heard, and the "Montreal" started on her last trip!

Never did a brighter morning dawn upon happier hearts—never did the sun set upon a more dreadful scene of death! Were I to live a thousand years, never should the remembrance of that fearful hour be banished from my mind. Yet how shall I speak of it! The tongue of man would fail to give an adequate description of all the horrors of that conflagration.

I had gone into the cabin, where I might have remained half an hour, when hearing a noise on deck, I hurried out to ascertain the cause. The confusion was great. Thick smoke was bursting out abaft the smoke-stack. I went forward, and heard the captain giving orders to some one to see where the smoke came from. A door was opened, or partition broken away, I can't say which, but the air got at the fire, and in an instant the steamer was wrapped in flames. The engineer had presence of mind to stop the engines, as many leaping overboard would have been drawn under and killed by the paddles, when he and the pilot were driven from their stations. Then follows such a scene as I never witnessed before, and hope shall not again. Groups of women and children, stupefied by terror or the suffocating smoke, sank into the flames and perished. Others, with their long hair and garments in a blaze, leaping overboard, anticipating death by a less intolerable agony, whilst cries for mercy and shrieks of fear and pain arose in awful discord to the very heavens. I have looked upon shipwreck in most dreadful form—a lee shore and a dark night, where the doomed ship was ground to pieces in a sea of foam; where

"Shrieked the timid and stood still the brave,"

But all was nothing when compared to this! It was as if one lived an age of horror in the vibration of a pendulum! I went over the bows of the burning steamer, where, submerged, all but my scorched face, I remained till taken off by the "Napoleon," which put about as fast as she could, and rendered all the assistance in her power. Although I lost everything but my life, I thank God that his arm preserved me, when others more deserving, doubtless, were hurried from this world, or left to mourn over the dead and mutilated bodies of their dearest friends.

I must hasten on. I found myself in New York, a stranger, knowing no one, and nearly penniless. I could find no trace of my brother. Some, of whom I inquired, said, likely he had gone West; others, that probably he had removed to Boston. In Chatham street, N. Y., I negotiated a change of garments, receiving one dollar in money by the transaction, and with that amount and two York shillings, I started for the Athens of America. I will not dwell upon my hardships upon the road—how penuriously I meted out my cents till even the last had gone; how I slept in barns or in the fields, tottering on, not knowing when I threw myself down at night, often by the way side, but that the early traveler would discover the lifeless remains of an unknown wanderer. On, on I went, directed by the unerring hand of an unerring and merciful Providence, for we have naught to do with chance, sometimes despairing, sometimes praying and hoping. Hunger now was setting his tooth in me, for I had been two entire days and I had eaten nothing. To beg was terrible, yet I must do so or I must drop. I did beg but once, and I was refused! 'Tis even so, and in this country too.

I do not know the lady who denied me the crust I craved; but I should know the house if ever I came to it again. I wish she was hungry for once, and could come to me, I'd give her as good a dinner as I could afford, and say that she was welcome too, as it was from the Lord and Father of us all. It was some distance this side of Springfield, Mass., near forked roads, and on the left side of the way. The house betokened plenty, and a lady stood on the piazza, with gold spectacles on. With trembling steps I approached her, and huskily craved something to eat. She replied: "Go away, I've nothing to give; we've too many such as you about." "Not many like me, madam," I said, "and for the honor of this country, I hope there are not many like you either." I turned away and resolved I should die ere I begged another morsel. And I did not! I was unconsciously approaching those who, like their blessed Master, rejoiced in doing good. I saw the snowy tents glimmering through the trees, and inquired what they were. "A Campmeeting." "Thank God!" I exclaimed in my heart, "here are Methodists, and I shall be refreshed in soul and body." They were not Methodists, however, but the dear, praying, expectant, faithful waiters on the second coming of their King, holding their yearly feast of tabernacles. Here I was literally clothed, and fed, and comforted. Bro. Hastings gave me clean garments, which I much needed, and dear Sr. Mathewson, if she did not wipe my tears, gave me a handkerchief, when I was too poor to have one of my own. And here my wanderings ended. Our beloved pastor, Bro. Grant, brother in deed and in truth, took me in tow, and to the present has remained my steady friend. Being so closely connected with him and Bro. Adams in my every day transactions, my heart is naturally more especially grateful for their sympathy and kindness; but I love many whom I need not and cannot name, for I have met friendship upon every hand; and I trust to meet many this year upon the camp ground whom I met last year under such different circumstances. Then, I had no home, no earthly friend near; now, I have a happy home, a beloved wife, good and true friends, more light from God, more love for man, for which eternal praise be to Him who liveth and reigneth for ever and ever. Amen.

JNO. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

Thou, God, Seest Me.

What different feelings different people have in contemplating this truth, and it may be well for us to examine our hearts, to see whether or no we are willing God should know their inmost recesses. There have been times in our experience, perhaps, when we would rather hide our thoughts from the Omniscient Eye, for they may be tinctured strongly with the popular opinion. The thought may arise, what will the world say if I do this? Those I love may be offended, and perhaps I may serve God and please them too. But we know that we are commanded in that Book of books, that "whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God;" and, "Be ye separate from the world." Now if we neglect duty because we fear man, we certainly dishonor God—we make ourselves slaves to the world. God will not look with pleasure upon such a gift; those that keep back part of the price, like the deceivers of old—Ananias and Sapphira—will surely not go unpunished. Let us make a thorough examination of our hearts, for if we deceive ourselves, it is impossible to deceive God. He knoweth all the secret avenues of the heart, whether it is entirely given to him; whether we are willing to be, or do all, if it be but his will. God is not a God to be worshiped at a distance, as one afar off, for he seeth in secret—our actions, our words, our thoughts; and when we pray, whether it be the upwellings of a sincere heart, or a mere form, or lip-service. He marks, too, the cup of cold water given to the child of charity. It is all recorded in that book of records, out of which we shall be judged.

To the weary, way-worn, foot-sore pilgrim, who has struggled long and hard against the ills in the battle of life, this is a comforting, a blessed truth—Thou, God, seest me. Thou wilt mark each trial, each effort to triumph over temptations, and "easily besetting sins," and one day he shall hear the welcome plaudit: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Thus the faithful christian has the blessed hope of reigning with the palm-bearing victors; with the sanctified harpists, singing redeeming grace and dying love. He knows the great Judge will see the heavy cross he bears, and will open the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem to him, and he will enter therein, and walk the golden streets. He would hardly be willing to bear the cross, endure the reproach and shame, but for the glorious reward. Ah, no! the vail of gloom would close around the fountain where bloom the sweet and grateful flowers of Love and Faith, and happiness would be but a saturated melancholy, impenetrable, undefined. No joy then, no life, no light. This hope, which now blunts the acute edge of bitterness, making even this life seem like a gliding stream, causing the mind to think less of earthly joys, but to stretch forth and grasp the more celestial, throwing itself at the foot of the cross, teaching each tendril as it shoots forth to twine around this hope, would be but a hope of despair, but that—Thou, God, seest us. Let us, therefore, perform all our acts, whether public or private, ever thinking, Thou, God, seest us.

MINNIE V. CADY.

Sutherland Falls, Vt.

☞ A Spanish proverb says that the Jews ruin themselves at the passovers, the Moors at their marriages, and the Christians at their lawsuits.

☞ Were but human beings always that which they are in their best moments, then should we know here already on earth a kingdom of heaven, of beauty and goodness.

☞ This happiness does Christ vouchsafe to all his: that, as a Savior, he once suffered for them, and that, as a friend, he always suffers with them.

☞ The good heart, the tender feeling, and the pleasant disposition, make smiles, love and sunshine everywhere.

For the Crisis.

A Note of Warning.

SWEDENBORG ON THE SPIRITS, WITH REMARKS.

Emanuel Swedenborg, who died in 1772, was the prince of spiritualists. He was for more than thirty years under the influence of the demons. His natural condition became constantly abnormal. He wrote twenty or thirty huge volumes in this clairvoyant state, mostly sublime nonsense, but in relation to the spirits themselves and their character says some good things. Hear him.

"It is believed by many that man may be taught of the Lord by spirits speaking with him; but they who believe this, and are willing to believe it, do not know that it is connected with danger to their souls. As soon as spirits begin to speak with man, they come out of their spiritual state into the natural state of man; and, in this case, they know that they are with man, and conjoin themselves with the thoughts of his affection, and from thoughts speak with him. They cannot enter into anything else; for similar affections and consequent thought conjoin, and dissimilar separate. It is owing to this circumstance that the speaking spirit is in the same principles with the man to whom he speaks, whether they be true or false. And, likewise, he excites them, and by his affection conjoined to the man's affection, strongly confirms them.

"From these considerations it is evident to what danger man is exposed who speaks with spirits, or who manifestly feels their operation. Man is ignorant of the quality of his own affection, whether it be good or evil, and with what other beings it is conjoined; and if he is in the conceit of his own intelligence, his attendant spirits favor every thought which is thence derived; in like manner if any one is disposed to favor particular principles enkindled by a certain fire, which hath place with those who are not in truths from genuine affection, when a spirit from similar affection favors man's thoughts, or principles, then one leads the other, as the blind the blind, until both fall into the pit."—Apocalypse Explained, 1182.

Again he informs us,—"That spirits may be brought in who represent another person; and the spirit, as also he who was known to the spirit, cannot know otherwise than that he was the same. . . . To-day some one known to me in life was represented by one who was so like him in all things which belonged to him, so far as they were known to me, that nothing was more like: wherefore, let those who speak with spirits beware lest they be deceived when they say they are those whom they know and that they are dead."—Sp. Diary, 2860.

"When spirits begin to speak with man, he must beware lest he believe them in anything; for they say almost anything. Things are fabricated by them and they lie; for, if they were permitted to relate what heaven is, and how things are in the heavens, they would tell so many lies, and indeed with such solemn affirmation, that man would be astonished; wherefore, when spirits were speaking, I was not permitted to have faith in the things which they related. . . . If man listens and believes, they press on and deceive and seduce in divers ways; for example, if they were permitted to tell about things to come, about things unknown in the universal heaven, about all things whatsoever man desires, yet they would tell all the things falsely; wherefore, let men beware lest they believe them. On this account the state of speaking with spirits on this earth is most perilous, unless one is in true faith."—Sp. Diary, 1622.

Swedenborg avers also, "That evil spirits can, at times, not only assume the appearance of angels of light, (2 Cor. 11: 14; A. R. 839,) but are able to discourse so wisely, that an angel could scarcely discourse more wisely."—Ath. Creed, 65.

He furthermore affirms that,—"Nearly the whole world of spirits is fanatical, and seeks nothing else but to teach and lead. Striving even to possess the bodies of men, and loosen all the bonds of conscience, especially in relation to marriage."—Book of Human Nature, p. 299.

Thus writes the celebrated Swedenborg on the nature of the demons. From this valuable testimony we learn that spirits will seduce, deceive, lie, practice fraud in assuming to be other spirits, evil spirits will personate good spirits, even assuming to be angels of light; that if the medium be untrue or false, the spirit will communicate evil things through him; that spirits are fanatical, strive to loosen all the bonds of conscience, destroy and corrupt the marriage relation, and that communication with them is corrupting, perilous, and most dangerous to the soul.

And what are the facts in the case? In 1853 a spiritual medium was foully murdered in or near Chicago by her paramour. The case was revolting. In 1856 a Universalist clergyman, named Joshua Upson, living in Dayton, Ohio, starved himself to death under the direction of the spirits. In the same year a young woman was married to the spirit of her deceased lover, in a shocking state of delusion. This occurred in Bordentown, N. J. The fanaticism and evils of Spiritism would fill volumes. There is no lie it has not told, no blasphemy it has not uttered. Spiritism defies God and defies man. It has put bitter for sweet, error for truth, right for wrong. It is turning christian lands back to barbaric and pagan times. It is tainting with the poison of the abyss the whole religious world. It is the pestilent heresy, the insidious black scourge of the nineteenth century. It is a curse,—the outpouring of a vial of divine wrath. Rev. 16: 12–14. It is most shocking to common sense, most revolting to a pure christianity, and most dishonoring to God. It is arrogant as it is getting weighty. Its votaries (Spiritual Telegraph) affirm that its "advance will be irresistible!" It is now wide as the world. It was practiced in China in 1844. It is common in Russia, Europe, Asia, Africa, South and North America. I have full proof of this statement. Not content with perverting religious things and putting the ploughshare of ruin through the ecclesiastical world, it is aiming at the prerogative of civil power. It has invaded the courts of France, Russia, Persia, &c. It invades Congress. In 1854, 15,000 deluded Americans demanded that the American Congress investigate and assent to its claims. Two years ago, H. Gray, Esq., editor of the Cleveland "Plaindealer," and postmaster of that city, testified that one half the members of Congress were believers in modern Spiritualism. In a recent number of the Philadelphia "Enquirer," we are informed that "N. P. Talmadge, formerly U. S. Senator and Governor of Wisconsin, in a letter defending Spiritualism from a recent attack upon it by Gen. Shields, intimates that a number of our present Senators are believers in the doctrine, and that the political history of 1860 will be greatly affected if not controlled by it." What are we as a nation coming to?

And yet hear the testimony of its own votaries and victims in relation to it. Rev. Allen Putnam, defending it in the New Era of Oct. 7th, 1855, says,—"The doctrine that the oracles, soothsaying, and witchcraft of past ages were kindred to these manifestations of our day, I, for one, fully believe." Judge Edmonds in his book admits that "the history of Salem witchcraft is but a history of Spirit manifestations and of man's inability to comprehend them;" and in a public lecture in the Broadway Tabernacle, N. Y., Feb. 16th, 1855, he uttered these remarkable words, viz.,—"We have to contend against our own fanaticism; for I assure you, from my own experience and observation, that the fascination of this intercourse is so great that its tendency is to lead men away from their proper judgment, and instill a spirit of fanaticism most revolting to the calm and natural mind."

Such are its fruits. And yet two or three millions of the people of this country are claimed as believers in Spiritualism. Unhappy America! so bewitching is this demoniac influence, so wicked is the human heart, that no amount of startling evidence can persuade them away from this snare of the devil. Prof. Grimes said in a public lecture in 1858, that up to the month of May in that year, 17 suicides had been committed, and 571 lunatics made from this source, as the fruits of Spiritualism. Not twenty miles from where I write, only two weeks ago a poor victim, named Martin, shot dead in the field two respectable married men in Calais in this State. He was under the influence of a female medium, and when questioned as to his reasons for the terrible act, he replied that the spirits told him to kill them and also to shoot two others. The murderer is now in Burlington jail. His victims were buried amidst great excitement, two thousand people attending the funeral, drawn in six hundred carriages. At this rate who is safe in our streets?

The half is not told, yet I cannot pursue this subject. As an offset to this vast and growing evil it is supposed that 250,000 souls have been converted to God during the past year. And yet the United States increase in population a million annually. So that it would require a revival of four times greater extent and magnitude every year in order to keep pace with the increase of our population. Our only hope is in Christ's coming.

D. T. TAYLOR.

Waterbury, Vt., Aug., 1858.

For the Crisis.

Buy the Truth and Sell it not.

PROVERBS 23 : 23.

Almost all things have a limited price; they may be purchased too dearly; "cost more than they come to." Even good things are not always worth what they cost. Peace, for instance, is very desirable, highly valuable, and no one in his sober senses would lightly esteem it. "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men;" "seek peace, and pursue it." And yet, even this is not always worth what it costs; many give more for it than it is worth. If we sacrifice honor, honesty, conscience, or truth, for the sake of peace, we make a foolish, if not a wicked bargain, which, if persisted in, will prove ruinous in the end. Here is a man who believes an unpopular truth; who is convinced in his mind that it is valuable and highly conducive to his present and future happiness; and yet, because the public acknowledgment of it would probably disturb his peace in the world, or in the church, he is afraid or ashamed to confess it. He hides his treasure in the earth, or covers it up in a napkin; and what will he say when the Master comes, and reckons with his unprofitable servants? Will it be a good excuse to my Lord, I was afraid that if I confessed the truth, I should have to fight for it; and so I tried to think that "discretion was the best part of valor," and that my own ease was of more value than thy truth? Would not such a soldier of the cross deserve to lose all the advantages others might attain, who had "been valiant for the truth upon the earth?" Is not such an one too near of kin to Esau, who sold his birthright for a mess of pottage? and to Judas, who sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver? And should not their example be a warning to those who, in our day, too closely follow in their footsteps?

It is to be feared that there are many professors of religion, members of our churches, and intelligent members of society, who secretly believe that eternal life is the gift of God through Christ promised only to the righteous; and that all the wicked God will finally destroy, and thus bring sin and woe to an end; and yet they hold their peace, lest they should lose their peace. Is there not some danger that this false peace may, after all, be too dearly purchased, even at the price of that immortality which is promised only to the faithful and diligent seeker? "To whom much is given, of them will be the more required." It would have been better for them never to have known the truth, than after having known it refuse to confess it before men, lest they should be turned out of the synagogue.

Bible truth is beyond all price; there is no limitation to it; "buy the truth," though many have paid their lives for it, and may have to do it again. [illegible] never risk as [illegible] the truth, who dare not even risk his popularity or worldly goods for it; [illegible] "Sell it not." There is nothing in the market [illegible] can exchange for it without infinite loss; honor, riches, pleasures, all perish with the using; but the truth, like love or charity, never fails; it is eternal as the throne of God himself. Christ is the way, the truth, and the life; and those who do not love the truth, are not willing to buy it, and are willing to sell it, are none of his; whatever may be their profession, or their good name in this world, when they come before the judgment seat of Christ, at the great and final day of account, they may expect to hear that astounding sentence—I never knew you; depart from me all ye workers of iniquity!!

J. P.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 25, 1858.

Close of the Volume.

This is the last number of Vol. VII., and the close of the subscription year. The past twelve months have been replete with events of deep interest. The great financial panic, followed by the most remarkable religious revival during the whole christian dispensation; succeeded, during the present month, by a telegraphic union of the two continents—the most wonderful scientific achievement of the age—prompt us to exclaim: we "know not what shall be on the morrow." All nature, morals, political organizations and social institutions are rapidly converging to a grand focal point, beyond which they cannot pass without a complete revolution, succeeded by a new order of things. All classes are clamorous for a reform, and the groaning creation cries, Amen. As we draw near the event that will eclipse all others—the coming of the Son of Man—the impression seems to be deepened upon all minds, that something momentous is at hand. The feeling is similar to that experienced before the hurricane, or earthquake shock, when preceded by that solemn, gloomy silence, so unearthly and foreboding, that even the animals tremble with fear, and attempt to hide away from the warring elements. How faithfully has the Savior foretold this state of feeling that would characterize the people just before he returns:—"Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Everything is combining to prove that we are in "the time of the end," that the last days have fully come. What we do for a guilty world must be done quickly.

In relation to our family paper, we may confidently say, never was it needed to cheer and comfort its readers, more than at the present time. We must hear from each other. The storm cloud is fast gathering, the enemy is mustering all his forces for the final struggle, and concert of action on our part is absolutely essential for successful resistance. Let us rally to a man, and do all we can to fortify every point against the attacks of our common foe. Gird on the armor anew, and "fight the good fight of faith."

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.—We hope our readers will try to get new subscribers for the Crisis. Now is the time at the beginning of the volume. If you think the paper is calculated to do good, take pains to extend its circulation. Our preaching brethren are requested to act as agents; and will they not make extra effort at this time? The enemies of the Lord and his truth are doing what they can to spread their infidel doctrines; and shall we not do what we can to counteract their poisonous effect? It is time to be awake. The battle is an earnest one. Let us arouse to a man. The Lord has opened his truth to our minds, and it is our duty to help scatter it among our fellow men. Now is the time for action.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE is successfully laid! The Queen has spoken through the ocean wire, and the President has answered. See news.

Thank the Lord, there is a telegraph from every christian to the throne of the "King of Kings," and communications are continually passing. Man's work is puny when compared with this wonderful arrangement for transmitting telegrams to the great Jehovah. There is a battery in every christian heart, and no storm or tempest prevents successful communication. On land or sea, hill-top or valley, by night or day, rich or poor, bond or free, learned or ignorant, noble or ignoble, few or many —the great operator is ever ready to attend to all the messages, without confusion, and send each "an answer of peace."

No paper next week.

TICKETS! TICKETS!

Those going from Boston to the Wilbraham Campmeeting, will get their tickets of Bro. Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street.

Hints for those at Campmeeting

Those who attend the Campmeeting, must not expect that every thing will go just as they would have it. Some will pray too loud and long; some will sing too often, too slow, or make discord; others will advance sentiments that you do not believe; your favorite preacher or doctrine may not be made so prominent as you desire; and many other things may be out of joint, according to your views; but for your own sake, and for the sake of all that is good, do not murmur at these things, and thus introduce discord into the encampment; but select the good with a thankful heart, and pass the bad in silence. Like the faithful bee, take the honey from the flower, and let the thorns alone. If you would enjoy the Campmeeting, begin to work for the Lord as soon as possible after you get upon the encampment. Improve the first opportunity to confess Jesus. Do not wait for any special feeling before you commence, but act from principle—from a sense of duty. Do the work before you look for your pay. If you would have joy and peace in the Holy Spirit, bear the cross of Christ. Go and talk with that stranger, perhaps he is seeking the way to the kingdom, but has not the courage to ask any one for instruction. Tell him how precious is the friendship of Jesus. Remember, "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

There is your neighbor passing,—ask him into your tent, and tell him of the joys and hopes of the christian. Be faithful with him, for you may never have another opportunity, and if this one be neglected, his blood may be required at your hands. Entreat him with all kindness to associate himself with Jesus. Persuade him to stay to the prayer meeting. It may be his last opportunity, and you may be the means of his salvation, if yo do your duty faithfully. Do not mind the sneer of some cold-hearted backslider, or dead formalist, who thinks we should not make so much ado about religion, but should let people do as they like, instead of urging them to become christians; but be in earnest, as you would to save a drowning man, or to get a deaf man from the railroad track when the engine is rushing upon him; as Jude says, "pulling them out of the fire." It is too late in the day to save people by lukewarm effort.

Sister, go and sit down with that young lady, and tell her the way to life. Relate to her your own experience. Tell her about the coming of Christ and his kingdom. Show by your kindness that you are really her friend. Tell her of Gethsemane and the cross, and earnestly entreat her to renounce this vain world that she may become an heir of glory. Try by all means to get her away from the embrace of the destroyer. If you succeed, then another voice will be added to the triumphant song of the redeemed, when the earth shall be full of the glory of the Lord. And, besides, "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." Be one of this class.

If the weather is pleasant, you notice that the unconverted and backslidden will be inclined to stay out of the prayer and class meetings. Do what you can to get them into the tents where these meetings are held. Show the practical missionary spirit. It may be the last campmeeting you or they will ever attend. Be faithful. The Lord is beholding you.

Those professors of religion who go to campmeeting as spectators, generally go away barren in their feelings, wondering why some people take so much delight, while they take so little. Strange they should expect a reward for doing nothing! They must have some peculiar views of our heavenly Father and his Son, to suppose that they are pleased with those who sit all day idle in the vineyard, when there is so much to be done. A campmeeting affords a wide field for doing good. Every christian can and should do something. Let no one be satisfied with anything less than being instrumental in bringing one sinner to Christ. If you have been lukewarm, arouse! No time to slumber now. The last days are flitting rapidly. Our opportunities for doing good will soon be over. Work while the day lasts.

Demons and Demoniacs.

The Greek words daimon and daimonion which are rendered devil and devils in the New Testament, are used as synonymous by both profane and sacred writers. These words are more properly rendered demon and demons, and are thus rendered in the new translation by the American Bible Union, also by Wakefield, Whiting, Campbell, Mace, Dick, Sharp and others. Diabolus, when referring to an existence, is always in the singular number, hence there is but one Devil or Satan, but many demons.

The heathen had different opinions in relation to demons. Some thought they were the souls of men. We find such an intimation in the writings of Homer and Hesiod, two Greek poets who lived about nine hundred years before Christ. Hesiod says, in his "Works and Days," that, "In the golden age, when Saturn reigned in heaven, men lived like gods, free from evils, and died just as if they had fallen asleep; they became demons by the will of Jupiter, the great, powerful, dwelling upon the earth—guards of mortal men."

If we are prepared to believe that "Saturn," a heathen god, reigned in heaven, then we may believe that Jupiter, his son—another heathen god, makes men into demons after they are dead.

Other distinguished Greek writers taught that demons were not men, or the sons of men, but an order of beings between God and men. Thales, a distinguished Grecian philosopher, who died B. C. 548, taught that demons are spiritual beings, who never had been embodied as men. Plato, another noted Grecian philosopher, who died B. C. 348, says, "The demons hold a middle place between God and men."

Justin Martyr, one of the christian fathers, who died A. D. 165, says, "the gods of the heathen are demons." He calls Satan, who deceived our first parents, the "man-hating demon." But who are these demons, "the gods of the heathen?" Tatian, a christian writer of the second century, says expressly, that "the demons who govern man, are not the souls of men." "They were ejected from the heavenly life." This we find in perfect harmony with the Bible, in which they are called also, "unclean spirits" and "evil angels." Peter says in his second letter, chap. 2: 4, "God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, (tartarus) and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." It may be clearly shown that tartarus, the word rendered "hell" in Peter, means "the bounds or verge of this material creation." Empedocles, a Pythagorean philosopher, in speaking of the place where the fallen demons were cast, says, "Our dull lack lustre globe is the doomed haunt and dungeon of evil angels, envious and malignant demons." Plato calls our earth itself tartarus. Plutarch says our air is called tartarus. So says Lucian—"The great depth of the air is called tartarus." If any wish for further evidence on this point, we would refer them to the articles on Tartarus, published in the Crisis a few months since by Bro. H. L. Hastings.

In answering further the question, who are demons? Plutarch says, "it is a very ancient opinion that there are certain wicked and malignant demons, who envy good men, and endeavor to hinder them in the pursuit of virtue, lest they should be partakers of greater happiness than they enjoy." (Plut. Dion., p. 958, tom. 1., edit. Paris, 1624.) Bishop Newton remarks on this passage: "This was the opinion of all the later philosophers, and Plutarch undeniably affirms it of the very ancient ones." Pythagoras held that certain demons sent diseases to men and cattle. If they cause certain diseases, may they not heal them, and thereby affirm, as they do at the present day, that they can work miracles in healing, as well as Christ, and by these means deceive the people?

"Josephus uses the word demon always in a bad sense, as do the writers of the New Testament."—Kitto.

The writings of the Fathers show that they understood demons to be fallen angels, cast out of heaven, and confined to this planet.

Who are demoniacs? Says Kitto, in his Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature, under the head of "demoniacs," "Demonized persons, in the New Testament, are those who are supposed to have a demon or demons occupying them, suspending the faculties of their minds, and governing the members of their bodies, so that what was said and done by the demoniacs was ascribed to the in-dwelling demon. Plato affirms that 'demoniacs do not use their own dialect or tongue, but that of the demons who have entered into them.' Lucian says, 'the patient is silent; the demon returns the answer to the question asked.' Appollonius thus addresses a youth supposed to be possessed: 'I am treated contumeliously by the demon and not by thee.'"

The above is a complete description of their works through mediums at the present time. Beware of the delusion called Spiritualism, for it is DEMONISM.

Summary of News.

FIRST MESSAGES OVER THE

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

MESSAGES OF THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND, AND OF THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

As transmitted over the Atlantic Telegraph Cable.

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.

To the Hon. the President of the United States:

The Queen desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of the Great International Work, in which the Queen has taken the deepest interest. The Queen is convinced that the President will join with her in fervently hoping that the Electric Cable, which now connects Great Britain with the United States, will prove an additional link between the Nations whose friendship is founded upon their common interest and reciprocal esteem.

The Queen has much pleasure in thus communicating with the President, and renewing to him her wishes for the prosperity of the United States.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 16, 1858.

To Her Majesty, Victoria—Queen of Great Britain:

The President cordially reciprocates the congratulations of Her Majesty the Queen, on the success of the great international enterprise, accomplished by the science, skill, and indomitable energy of the two countries. It is a triumph more glorious because far more useful to mankind than was ever won by conqueror on the field of battle. May the Atlantic Telegraph, under the blessing of Heaven, prove to be a bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations, and an instrument destined by Divine Providence to diffuse Religion, Civilization, Liberty and Law throughout the world. In this view will not all the Nations of Christendom spontaneously unite in the declaration that it shall be forever neutral, and that its communications shall be held sacred in passing to the places of their destination, even in the midst of hostilities?

JAMES BUCHANAN.

CONGRATULATORY MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTORS IN ENGLAND TO THE DIRECTORS IN AMERICA.

CYRUS STATION, N. F., Aug. 16.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, New York:

Europe and America are united by Telegraph.

"Glory to God in the Highest, and on Earth Peace, Good Will towards Men."

[Signed]

DIRECTORS ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY, GREAT BRITAIN.

MESSAGE OF SIR EDMUND HEAD TO THE QUEEN.

TORONTO, C. W., Aug. 16—11 P. M.

The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, London, England:

The Governor General of British North America presents his humble duty to the Queen, and respectfully congratulates Her Majesty on the completion of the Telegraphic communication between Great Britain and these colonies.

EDMUND HEAD.

MR. FIELD HAS PERFECT CONFIDENCE IN THE CABLE—ANOTHER WIRE ORDERED.

Mr. Cyrus W. Field states that there is not the slightest doubt that the Cable is an entire success, as great or greater than its most sanguine friends anticipated. By the Persia to-day he wrote to the Directors to prepare another cable at once, as it is evident that the present one will, in a short time, transmit messages as rapidly as an air line, but will not be sufficient for the business. Until the first of September the line will be closed to all messages excepting those from the Governments of Great Britain and the United States.

Mr. Field's official report to the Directors of the Company is published this afternoon. He says messages passed both ways through the cable with entire success before he left Newfoundland, otherwise he would have remained longer.

FIRE IN NEW YORK.—City Hall Partially Destroyed.—The New York City Hall was partially destroyed by fire at about midnight of Tuesday, Aug. 17th.

The Bell ringer tried hard from his stand in the Hall to ring the bell, but after a few feeble strokes was obliged to flee from his post.

In a few minutes the east face of the clock cracked, and with a considerable explosion the flames burst out.

At one o'clock the statue of Justice stood surrounded and wrapt like a martyr.

The basement of the City Hall is the office of the Fire Telegraph, to which the telegraph wires from all the station houses lead. The operator continued at his post until the room was full of water and then deserted it. The fire was extinguished at an early hour this morning and was, through the exertions of the firemen, confined to the upper ornamentation. So far as could be ascertained, the records have not been injured.

GREAT FIRE AT ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Rochester Union of Wednesday gives the annexed particulars of a fire in that city which destroyed $175,000 worth of property:

"Our city has been visited by a dreadful calamity, and a large district in one of our business centres has been laid in ruins by fire. From 11 o'clock last night until daylight this morning, the devouring element held sway.

The well known Minerva Block and the Third Presbyterian Church are among the buildings totally destroyed.

The fire was one of the grandest spectacles we have ever beheld—it carried terror as well as awe to the mind of every beholder. The city and country about was lighted up by the flames, and the cinders and burning flakes floated away for a mile to the eastward, jeopardizing buildings far from the scene of disaster.

INDEX FOR VOL. VII.

POETRY.

A Prayer for Israel ... 8
A Present Help ... 5
A Hymn ... 9
A calm succeeds the storm ... 12
All Hail ... 13
Abide with me ... 59
A word to the sluggish ... 76
Beauty of light ... 82
Bringing our sheaves with us ... 97
Christian, be earnest! ... 92
Come out of her ... 20
Drawing water ... [illegible]
Death ... [illegible]
Expectation ... 31
Earnest words ... 12
Farewell ... [illegible]
God of glory ... 11
God never made, &c. ... 4
Hath not where, &c. ... [illegible]
Hymn ... [illegible]
Hymn in the garden of Eden ... 67
He careth for thee ... [illegible]
Heavenly Treasure ... 75
Home Reminiscences ... 54
Haste not—Rest not ... 59
"I will speak," &c. ... 100
I shall rest ... 18
Invocation ... 23
I ask not ... 37
Jesus will come ... 32
Light and Shadows ... 5
Lines ... 4
Life's Teachings ... 16
Lines ... 18
Let the poor love me ... 27
Lines ... 38
Lazarus ... 36
Lines for a friend's album ... 40
Morning ... 65
Naaman the leper ... 77
On the death of H. B. Smith ... 23
Our Eden Home ... 28
On the death of S. Wyman ... 36
O love the Lord ... 44
Old Epitaph ... 48
Olivet's Star ... 71
One Reward ... 84
Oh! I long to go ... 13
O haste with me ... 104
Praise God ... 8
Pilgrims and Strangers ... 96
Past, Present and Future ... 60
Pilgrim Song ... 100
Remember me ... 29
Raised in Glory ... 61
Spring ... 21
Speak no ill ... 50
Springtime ... 45
Sabbath Eve ... 79
Summer saints ... [illegible]
She sleeps ... 94
Stand up for Jesus ... 82
Songs of the Kingdom ... 98
Song for the Times ... 100
The city of God ... 4
Truth ... 14
The dawn of day ... 16
The Guiding Hand ... 24
The crucifixion ... 33
They'll rise again ... 36
Trust in God ... 44
The church's call ... 45
To B. C. ... 48
The Crocus ... 48
The day of Christ ... [illegible]
The light of home ... 49
The changed cross ... 52
To the sinner ... 56
The emerald bow ... 58
The revival ... 59
To a backslider ... 62
The lone widow's soliloquy ... 64
Trust in God ... 64
The cup of salvation ... 67
Thy will be done ... 72
The sinner's Friend ... 76
Trip lightly ... 76
The Foundations ... 81
The early taken ... 84
The city of unfading glory ... 88
That afflicted one ... 93
To Bro. and Sr. Jas. Morrison ... 94
The Hypocrite's Hope ... 97
The Eden of Love ... 104
The Homes of the Promised Land ... 101
Visions ... 32
What's the news? ... 20
Would ye chide? ... 33
Whom will our Father beautify? ... 37
What's the news? ... 40
Wisdom's ways ... 52
Whom the Lord loveth, &c. ... 100
What shall I wish thee? ... 72

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

A child's faith ... 86
" " influence ... 16
Boys, be prompt ... 100
Child's prayer ... 71
Don't tell father ... 88
Do not scold the child ... 88
Extract from John Todd, D. D. ... 96
George and his sister ... 40
Jesus loves idiots ... 12
Philip Henry ... 84
Read ... 4
Safe ship to sail in ... 88
Thoughts of God ... 55
Thrilling Incident ... 12
The polite boy ... 36
That's enough for me ... 88
The winds of Spring ... 56
Who is a gentleman? ... 56

OBITUARIES.

F T Johnson 3, Mrs. B Parker 3, L A Robinson 7, S W Hale 7, Dr. Wm. Ramsey 15, E R Cleveland 19, A E Currier 19, L J Morgan 23, H E Morgan 23, J A Morgan 23, L B Dudley 21, A Carver 27, Uriel J Osgood 27, H H Carr 35, M L Slater 39, M A Bronson 39, S Brayton 39, S F Freeman 43, M S Rice 43, O Carpenter 47, S Bickford 47, B Haines 47, A P Wells 51, J N Payson 51, G F Parker 55, E McDonald 55, S Bellows 63, M W Peck 75, B Pease 75, J W Gould 75, S Holmap 79, M Davis 87, W Webber 87, H L Howard 87, G W Howard 87, L Sheldon 95, C Rogers 99, S S R Wolen 99.

MARRIAGES.

B R Lord—M A Tibbets 3, W W Willard—L A Johnston 15, Geo. T Adams—F M Cudworth 23, E Rust—O A Paige 23, G A Tatro—M A Dailey 31, Jno. F Cotton—M Umiah 63, W C Clark—M E Bodge 75.

BOOK NOTICES.

Apollos ... 26
Debt and Grace ... 7, 42, 46, 94
Messiah's Reign ... [illegible]
Repository of Biblical Knowledge ... 19
Three Kingdoms ... [illegible]
The Great Controversy ... 6, 42, 79
Voice of the Church ... 46, 71, 74
200 Stories for Children ... 86

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Air, light and dress ... 27
Animal poisons ... 39
Bedbugs and roaches ... 47
Benton on tobacco ... 59
Bathing ... [illegible]
Bites and stings ... 104
Can cancers be cured? ... 39
Caution to wine drinkers ... 47
Care for mad dog bite ... [illegible]
Chalk for warts ... 88
Effects of excessive tea drinking ... 100
Eye film ... 71
Finney on Ventilation ... 19
Good bread ... [illegible]
How to choose a Barrel of flour ... 47
How to consume coal ... [illegible]
Influence of mind on circulation ... 31
[illegible]
Out-door exercises ... [illegible]
Peppers ... [illegible]
Position in sleeping ... 88
Quick to eat, &c. ... [illegible]
The habitual use of ardent spirit ... [illegible]
Tobacco ... [illegible]

evidence can persuade them away from this snare of the devil. Prof. Grimes said in a public lecture in 1858, that up to the month of May in that year, 17 suicides had been committed, and 571 lunatics made from this source, as the fruits of Spiritualism. Not twenty miles from where I write, only two weeks ago a poor victim, named Martin, shot dead in the field two respectable married men in Calais in this State. He was under the influence of a female medium, and when questioned as to his reasons for the terrible act, he replied that the spirits told him to kill them and also to shoot two others. The murderer is now in Burlington jail. His victims were buried amidst great excitement, two thousand people attending the funeral, drawn in six hundred carriages. At this rate who is safe in our streets?

The half is not told, yet I cannot pursue this subject. As an offset to this vast and growing evil it is supposed that 250,000 souls have been converted to God during the past year. And yet the United States increase in population a million annually. So that it would require a revival of four times greater extent and magnitude every year in order to keep pace with the increase of our population. Our only hope is in Christ's coming.

D. T. TAYLOR.

Waterbury, Vt., Aug., 1858.

For the Crisis.

Buy the Truth and Sell it not.

PROVERBS 23 : 23.

Almost all things have a limited price; they may be purchased too dearly; "cost more than they come to." Even good things are not always worth what they cost. Peace, for instance, is very desirable, highly valuable, and no one in his sober senses would lightly esteem it. "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men;" "seek peace, and pursue it." And yet, even this is not always worth what it costs; many give more for it than it is worth. If we sacrifice honor, honesty, conscience, or truth, for the sake of peace, we make a foolish, if not a wicked bargain, which, if persisted in, will prove ruinous in the end. Here is a man who believes an unpopular truth; who is convinced in his mind that it is valuable and highly conducive to his present and future happiness; and yet, because the public acknowledgment of it would probably disturb his peace in the world, or in the church, he is afraid or ashamed to confess it. He hides his treasure in the earth, or covers it up in a napkin; and what will he say when the Master comes, and reckons with his unprofitable servants? Will it be a good excuse to say Lord, I was afraid that if I confessed the truth, I should have to fight for it; and so I tried to think that "discretion was the best part of valor," and that my own ease was of more value than thy truth? Would not such a soldier of the cross deserve to lose all the advantages others might attain, who had "been valiant for the truth upon the earth?" Is not such an one too near of kin to Esau, who sold his birthright for a mess of pottage? and to Judas, who sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver? And should not their example be a warning to those who, in our day, too closely follow in their footsteps?

It is to be feared that there are many professors of religion, members of our churches, and intelligent members of society, who secretly believe that eternal life is the gift of God through Christ promised only to the righteous; and that all the wicked God will finally destroy, and thus bring sin and woe to an end; and yet they hold their peace, lest they should lose their peace. Is there not some danger that this false peace may, after all, be too dearly purchased, even at the price of that immortality which is promised only to the faithful and diligent seeker? "To whom much is given, of them will be the more required." It would have been better for them never to have known the truth, than after having known it refuse to confess it before men, lest they should be turned out of the synagogue.

Bible truth is beyond all price; there is no limitation to it; "buy the truth." Never garble about the price; no man ever yet bought it too dear, though many have paid their lives for it, and may have to do it again. That man, however, will never risk his life for the truth, who dare not even risk his popularity or worldly peace for it; though he may, unintentionally, risk his title to immortality; for "he who saveth his life shall lose it." If a man has once obtained possession of the truth, what is he to do with it? "Sell it not." There is nothing in the market you can exchange for it without infinite loss; honors, riches, pleasures, all perish with the using; but the truth, like love or charity, never fails; it is eternal as the throne of God himself. Christ is the way, the truth, and the life; and those who do not love the truth, are not willing to buy it, and are willing to sell it, are none of his; whatever may be their profession, or their good name in this world, when they come before the judgment seat of Christ, at the great and final day of account, they may expect to hear that astounding sentence—I never knew you; depart from me all ye workers of iniquity!!

J. P.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, AUGUST 25, 1858.

Close of the Volume.

This is the last number of Vol. VII., and the close of the subscription year. The past twelve months have been replete with events of deep interest. The great financial panic, followed by the most remarkable religious revival during the whole christian dispensation; succeeded, during the present month, by a telegraphic union of the two continents—the most wonderful scientific achievement of the age—prompt us to exclaim: we "know not what shall be on the morrow." All nature, morals, political organizations and social institutions are rapidly converging to a grand focal point, beyond which they cannot pass without a complete revolution, succeeded by a new order of things. All classes are clamorous for a reform, and the groaning creation cries, Amen. As we draw near the event that will eclipse all others—the coming of the Son of Man—the impression seems to be deepened upon all minds, that something momentous is at hand. The feeling is similar to that experienced before the hurricane, or earthquake shock, when preceded by that solemn, gloomy silence, so unearthly and foreboding, that even the animals tremble with fear, and attempt to hide away from the warring elements. How faithfully has the Savior foretold this state of feeling that would characterize the people just before he returns:—"Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Everything is combining to prove that we are in "the time of the end," that the last days have fully come. What we do for a guilty world must be done quickly.

In relation to our family paper, we may confidently say, never was it needed to cheer and comfort its readers, more than at the present time. We must hear from each other. The storm cloud is fast gathering, the enemy is mustering all his forces for the final struggle, and concert of action on our part is absolutely essential for successful resistance. Let us rally to a man, and do all we can to fortify every point against the attacks of our common foe. Gird on the armor anew, and "fight the good fight of faith."

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.—We hope our readers will try to get new subscribers for the Crisis. Now is the time at the beginning of the volume. If you think the paper is calculated to do good, take pains to extend its circulation. Our preaching brethren are requested to act as agents; and will they not make extra effort at this time? The enemies of the Lord and his truth are doing what they can to spread their infidel doctrines; and shall we not do what we can to counteract their poisonous effect? It is time to be awake. The battle is an earnest one. Let us arouse to a man. The Lord has opened his truth to our minds, and it is our duty to help scatter it among our fellow men. Now is the time for action.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE is successfully laid! The Queen has spoken through the ocean wire, and the President has answered. See news.

Thank the Lord, there is a telegraph from every christian to the throne of the "King of Kings," and communications are continually passing. Man's work is puny when compared with this wonderful arrangement for transmitting telegrams to the great Jehovah. There is a battery in every christian heart, and no storm or tempest prevents successful communication. On land or sea, hill-top or valley, by night or day, rich or poor, bond or free, learned or ignorant, noble or ignoble, few or many—the great operator is ever ready to attend to all the messages, without confusion, and send each "an answer of peace."

No paper next week.

TICKETS! TICKETS!

Those going from Boston to the Wilbraham Campmeeting, will get their tickets of Bro. Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street.

Hints for those at Campmeeting.

Those who attend the Campmeeting, must not expect that every thing will go just as they would have it. Some will pray too loud and long; some will sing too often, too slow, or make discord; others will advance sentiments that you do not believe; your favorite preacher or doctrine may not be made so prominent as you desire; and many other things may be out of joint, according to your views; but for your own sake, and for the sake of all that is good, do not murmur at these things, and thus introduce discord into the encampment; but select the good with a thankful heart, and pass the bad in silence. Like the faithful bee, take the honey from the flower, and let the thorns alone. If you would enjoy the Campmeeting, begin to work for the Lord as soon as possible after you get upon the encampment. Improve the first opportunity to confess Jesus. Do not wait for any special feeling before you commence, but act from principle—from a sense of duty. Do the work before you look for your pay. If you would have joy and peace in the Holy Spirit, bear the cross of Christ. Go and talk with that stranger, perhaps he is seeking the way to the kingdom, but has not the courage to ask any one for instruction. Tell him how precious is the friendship of Jesus. Remember, "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

There is your neighbor passing,—ask him into your tent, and tell him of the joys and hopes of the christian. Be faithful with him, for you may never have another opportunity, and if this one be neglected, his blood may be required at your hands. Entreat him with all kindness to associate himself with Jesus. Persuade him to stay to the prayer meeting. It may be his last opportunity, and you may be the means of his salvation, if yo do your duty faithfully. Do not mind the sneer of some cold-hearted backslider, or dead formalist, who thinks we should not make so much ado about religion, but should let people do as they like, instead of urging them to become christians; but be in earnest, as you would to save a drowning man, or to get a deaf man from the railroad track when the engine is rushing upon him; as Jude says, "pulling them out of the fire." It is too late in the day to save people by lukewarm effort.

Sister, go and sit down with that young lady, and tell her the way to life. Relate to her your own experience. Tell her about the coming of Christ and his kingdom. Show by your kindness that you are really her friend. Tell her of Gethsemane and the cross, and earnestly entreat her to renounce this vain world that she may become an heir of glory. Try by all means to get her away from the embrace of the destroyer. If you succeed, then another voice will be added to the triumphant song of the redeemed, when the earth shall be full of the glory of the Lord. And, besides, "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." Be one of this class.

If the weather is pleasant, you notice that the unconverted and backslidden will be inclined to stay out of the prayer and class meetings. Do what you can to get them into the tents where these meetings are held. Show the practical missionary spirit. It may be the last campmeeting you or they will ever attend. Be faithful. The Lord is beholding you.

Those professors of religion who go to campmeeting as spectators, generally go away barren in their feelings, wondering why some people take so much delight, while they take so little. Strange they should expect a reward for doing nothing! They must have some peculiar views of our heavenly Father and his Son, to suppose that they are pleased with those who sit all day idle in the vineyard, when there is so much to be done. A campmeeting affords a wide field for doing good. Every christian can and should do something. Let no one be satisfied with anything less than being instrumental in bringing one sinner to Christ. If you have been lukewarm, arouse! No time to slumber now. The last days are flitting rapidly. Our opportunities for doing good will soon be over. Work while the day lasts.

Demons and Demoniacs.

The Greek words daimon and daimonion which are rendered devil and devils in the New Testament, are used as synonymous by both profane and sacred writers. These words are more properly rendered demon and demons, and are thus rendered in the new translation by the American Bible Union, also by Wakefield, Whiting, Campbell, Mace, Dick, Sharp and others. Diabolus, when referring to an existence, is always in the singular number, hence there is but one Devil or Satan, but many demons.

The heathen had different opinions in relation to demons. Some thought they were the souls of men. We find such an intimation in the writings of Homer and Hesiod, two Greek poets who lived about nine hundred years before Christ. Hesiod says, in his "Works and Days," that, "In the golden age, when Saturn reigned in heaven, men lived like gods, free from evils, and died just as if they had fallen asleep; they became demons by the will of Jupiter, the great, powerful, dwelling upon the earth—guards of mortal men."

If we are prepared to believe that "Saturn," a heathen god, reigned in heaven, then we may believe that Jupiter, his son—another heathen god, makes men into demons after they are dead.

Other distinguished Greek writers taught that demons were not men, or the sons of men, but an order of beings between God and men. Thales, a distinguished Grecian philosopher, who died B. C. 548, taught that demons are spiritual beings, who never had been embodied as men. Plato, another noted Grecian philosopher, who died B. C. 348, says, "The demons hold a middle place between God and men."

Justin Martyr, one of the christian fathers, who died A. D. 165, says, "the gods of the heathen are demons." He calls Satan, who deceived our first parents, the "man-hating demon." But who are these demons, "the gods of the heathen?" Tatian, a christian writer of the second century, says expressly, that "the demons who govern man, are not the souls of men." "They were ejected from the heavenly life." This we find in perfect harmony with the Bible, in which they are called also, "unclean spirits" and "evil angels." Peter says in his second letter, chap. 2: 4, "God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, (tartarus) and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." It may be clearly shown that tartarus, the word rendered "hell" in Peter, means "the bounds or verge of this material creation." Empedocles, a Pythagorean philosopher, in speaking of the place where the fallen demons were cast, says, "Our dull lack lustre globe is the doomed haunt and dungeon of evil angels, envious and malignant demons." Plato calls our earth itself tartarus. Plutarch says our air is called tartarus. So says Lucian—"The great depth of the air is called tartarus." If any wish for further evidence on this point, we would refer them to the articles on Tartarus, published in the Crisis a few months since by Bro. H. L. Hastings.

In answering further the question, who are demons? Plutarch says, "it is a very ancient opinion that there are certain wicked and malignant demons, who envy good men, and endeavor to hinder them in the pursuit of virtue, lest they should be partakers of greater happiness than they enjoy." (Plut. Dion., p. 958, tom. 1., edit. Paris, 1624.) Bishop Newton remarks on this passage: "This was the opinion of all the later philosophers, and Plutarch undeniably affirms it of the very ancient ones." Pythagoras held that certain demons sent diseases to men and cattle. If they cause certain diseases, may they not heal them, and thereby affirm, as they do at the present day, that they can work miracles in healing, as well as Christ, and by these means deceive the people?

"Josephus uses the word demon always in a bad sense, as do the writers of the New Testament."—Kitto.

The writings of the Fathers show that they understood demons to be fallen angels, cast out of heaven, and confined to this planet.

Who are demoniacs? Says Kitto, in his Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature, under the head of "demoniacs," "Demonized persons, in the New Testament, are those who are supposed to have a demon or demons occupying them, suspending the faculties of their minds, and governing the members of their bodies, so that what was said and done by the demoniacs was ascribed to the in-dwelling demon. Plato affirms that demoniacs do not use their own dialect or tongue, but that of the demons who have entered into them." Lucian says, the patient is silent; the demon returns the answer to the question asked. Appollonius thus addresses a youth supposed to be possessed: 'I am treated contumeliously by the demon, and not by thee.'"

The above is a complete description of their works through mediums at the present time. Beware of the delusion called Spiritualism, for it is DEMONISM.

Summary of News.

FIRST MESSAGES OVER THE

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

MESSAGES OF THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND, AND OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

As transmitted over the Atlantic Telegraph Cable.

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.

To the Hon. the President of the United States:

The Queen desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of the Great International Work, in which the Queen has taken the deepest interest. The Queen is convinced that the President will join with her in fervently hoping that the Electric Cable, which now connects Great Britain with the United States, will prove an additional link between the Nations whose friendship is founded upon their common interest and reciprocal esteem.

The Queen has much pleasure in thus communicating with the President, and renewing to him her wishes for the prosperity of the United States.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 16, 1858.

To Her Majesty, Victoria—Queen of Great Britain:

The President cordially reciprocates the congratulations of Her Majesty the Queen, on the success of the great international enterprise, accomplished by the science, skill, and indomitable energy of the two countries. It is a triumph more glorious because far more useful to mankind than was ever won by conqueror on the field of battle. May the Atlantic Telegraph, under the blessing of Heaven, prove to be a bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations, and an instrument destined by Divine Providence to diffuse Religion, Civilization, Liberty and Law throughout the world. In this view will not all the Nations of Christendom spontaneously unite in the declaration that it shall be forever neutral, and that its communications shall be held sacred in passing to the places of their destination, even in the midst of hostilities?

JAMES BUCHANAN.

CONGRATULATORY MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTORS IN ENGLAND TO THE DIRECTORS IN AMERICA.

CYRUS STATION, N. F., Aug. 16.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, New York:

Europe and America are united by Telegraph.

"Glory to God in the Highest, and on Earth Peace, Good Will towards Men."

[Signed]

DIRECTORS ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY, GREAT BRITAIN.

MESSAGE OF SIR EDMUND HEAD TO THE QUEEN.

TORONTO, C. W., Aug. 16—11 P. M.

The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, London, England:

The Governor General of British North America presents his humble duty to the Queen, and respectfully congratulates Her Majesty on the completion of the Telegraphic communication between Great Britain and these colonies.

EDMUND HEAD.

MR. FIELD HAS PERFECT CONFIDENCE IN THE CABLE—ANOTHER WIRE ORDERED.

Mr. Cyrus W. Field states that there is not the slightest doubt that the Cable is an entire success, as great or greater than its most sanguine friends anticipated. By the Persia to-day he wrote to the Directors to prepare another cable at once, as it is evident that the present one will, in a short time, transmit messages as rapidly as an air line, but will not be sufficient for the business. Until the first of September the line will be closed to all messages excepting those from the Governments of Great Britain and the United States.

Mr. Field's official report to the Directors of the Company is published this afternoon. He says messages passed both ways through the cable with entire success before he left Newfoundland, otherwise he would have remained longer.

FIRE IN NEW YORK—City Hall Partially Destroyed.—The New York City Hall was partially destroyed by fire at about midnight of Tuesday, Aug. 17th.

The Bell ringer tried hard from his stand in the Hall to ring the bell, but after a few feeble strokes was obliged to flee from his post.

In a few minutes the east face of the clock cracked, and with a considerable explosion the flames burst out.

At one o'clock the statue of Justice stood surrounded and wrapt like a martyr.

The basement of the City Hall is the office of the Fire Telegraph, to which the telegraph wires from all the station houses lead. The operator continued at his post until the room was full of water and then deserted it. The fire was extinguished at an early hour this morning and was, through the exertions of the firemen, confined to the upper ornamentation. So far as could be ascertained, the records have not been injured.

GREAT FIRE AT ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Rochester Union of Wednesday gives the annexed particulars of a fire in that city which destroyed $175,000 worth of property:

"Our city has been visited by a dreadful calamity, and a large district in one of our business centres has been laid in ruins by fire. From 11 o'clock last night until daylight this morning, the devouring element held sway.

The well known Minerva Block and the Third Presbyterian Church are among the buildings totally destroyed.

The fire was one of the grandest spectacles we have ever beheld—it carried terror as well as awe to the mind of every beholder. The city and country about was lighted up by the flames, and the cinders and burning flakes floated away for a mile to the eastward, jeopardizing buildings far from the scene of disaster.

INDEX FOR VOL. VII.

POETRY.

A Prayer for Israel ... 8
A Present Help ... 9
A Hymn ... 12
A calm succeeds the storm ... 19
All Hail ... 69
Abide with us ... 78
A word to the sluggish ... 84
Beauty of light ... 92
Bringing our sheaves with us ... 92
Christian, be earnest! ... 20
Come out of her ... 56
Drawing water ... 29
Death ... 31
Expectation ... 12
Earnest words ... 80
Farewell ... 12
God of glory ... 4
God never made, &c ... 92
Hath not where, &c ... 40
Hymn ... 67
Hymn in the garden of Eden ... 68
He careth for thee ... 76
Heavenly Treasure ... 84
Home Reminiscences ... 89
Haste not—Rest not ... 100
"I will speak," &c ... 28
I shall rest ... 53
Invocation ... 57
I ask not ... 88
Jesus will come ... 32
Light and Shadows ... 5
Lines ... 8
Life's Teachings ... 16
Lines ... 24
Let the poor love me ... 27
Lines ... 36
Lazarus ... 41
Lines for a friend's album ... 85
Morning ... 65
Naaman the leper ... 77
On the death of H. B. Smith ... 23
Our Eden Home ... 28
On the death of S. Wyman ... 39
O love the Lord ... 44
Old Epitaph ... 68
Olivet's Star ... 73
One Reward ... 84
Oh! I long to go ... 21
O haste with me ... 104
Praise God ... 17
Pilgrims and Strangers ... 5
Past, Present and Future ... 60
Pilgrim Song ... 100
Remember me ... 13
Raised in Glory ... 61
Spring ... 25
Speak no ill ... 45
Springtime ... 79
Sabbath Eve ... 79
Summer saints ... 14
She sleeps ... 92
Stand up for Jesus ... 100
Songs of the Kingdom ... 98
Song for the Times ... 100
The city of God ... 4
Truth ... 16
The dawn of day ... 16
The Guiding Hand ... 24
The crucifixion ... 33
They'll rise again ... 36
Trust in God ... 44
The church's call ... 48
To B. C ... 48
The Crocus ... 48
The day of Christ ... 48
The light of home ... 49
The changed cross ... 52
To the sinner ... 54
The emerald Bow ... 56
The revival ... 59
To a backslider ... 64
The lone widow's soliloquy ... 64
Trust in God ... 64
The cup of salvation ... 67
Thy will be done ... 72
The sinner's Friend ... 73
Trip lightly ... 76
The Foundations ... 81
The early taken ... 84
The city of unfading glory ... 88
That afflicted one ... 93
To Bro. and Sr. Jas. Morrison ... 96
The Hypocrite's Hope ... 97
The Eden of Love ... 104
The Homes of the Promised Land ... 101
Visions ... 32
What's the news? ... 20
Would ye chide? ... 33
Whom will our Father beautify? ... 37
What's the news? ... 40
Wisdom's ways ... 52
Whom the Lord loveth, &c ... 60
What shall I wish thee? ... 72

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

A child's faith ... 36
" " influence ... 100
Boys, be prompt ... 100
Child's prayer ... 72
Don't tell father ... 88
Do not scold the child ... 88
Extract from John Todd, D. D ... 96
George and his sister ... 36
Jesus loves idiots ... 88
Philip Henry ... 84
Read ... 56
Safe ship to sail in ... 84
Thoughts of God ... 88
Thrilling incident ... 12
The polite boy ... 36
That's enough for me ... 56
The winds of Spring ... 59
Who is a gentleman? ... 56

OBITUARIES.

F T Johnson 3, Mrs. B Parker 3, L A Robinson 7, S W Hale 7, Dr. Wm. Ramsey 15, E R Cleveland 19, A E Currier 19, L J Morgan 23, H E Morgan 23, J A Morgan 23, L B Dudley 91, A Carver 27, Eld. J Osgood 27, H H Carr 36, M E Slater 39, M A Bronson 39, S Brayton 39, S F Freeman 43, M S Rice 43, O Carpenter 47, S Bickford 47, B Haines 47, A P Wells 51, J N Payson 51, G F Parker 55, E McDonald 55, S Bellows 52, M W Peck 75, B Pease 75, J W Gould 75, S Holman 79, M Davis 87, W Webber 87, H L Howard 87, G W Howard 87, L Sheldon 95, C Rogers 99, S S B Welch 99.

MARRIAGES.

B H Lord—M A Tibbets 3, W W Willard—L A Johnston 15, Geo. T Adams—F M Cudworth 23, E Rust—O A Paige 23, G A Tatro—M A Dailey 91, Jno. F Cotton—M Umiah 63, W C Clark—M E Bodge 75.

BOOK NOTICES.

Apollos ... 26
Debt and Grace ... 7, 42, 46, 94
Messiah's Reign ... 18
Repository of Biblical Knowledge ... 54
Three Kingdoms ... 26
The Great Controversy ... 6, 42, 70
Voice of the Church ... 46, 71, 74
200 Stories for Children ... 54

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Air, light and dress ... 27
Animal poisons ... 39
Bedbugs and roaches ... 47
Benton on tobacco ... 59
Bathing ... 71
Bites and stings ... 104
Can cancers be cured? ... 39
Caution to wine drinkers ... 47
Cure for mad dog bite ... 88
Chalk for warts ... 88
Effects of excessive tea drinking ... 100
Eye film ... 71
Finney on Ventilation ... 100
Good bread ... 19
How to choose a barrel of flour ... 47
How to consume coal ... 47
Influence of mind on circulation ... 31
" of the passions on circulation ... 56
Neuralgia ... 19
Out-door exercises ... 104
Peppers ... 19
Position in sleeping ... 88
Quick to eat, &c ... [illegible]
The habitual use of ardent spirit ... [illegible]
Tobacco ... [illegible]

To cure hoarseness ... 19
Tobacco, tea and coffee ... 23
The teeth ... 89
To clean glass ... 68
To parents ... 79
To cure a appetite for tobacco ... 100
Working and thinking ... 88

EDITORIAL.

As it should be ... 26
Atlantic telegraph ... 94
A worthy example ... 78
Boston ... 2
Business ... 78
Coming events ... 22
Campmeetings ... 64
Christian character ... 80
Coming of Christ ... 89
Campmeeting Items ... 98
Close of the Volume ... 102
Dantelsonville ... 60
Daily prayer meetings ... 78
Demoniacal prophecy ... 90
Demons and Demoniacs ... 102
Forbidding to marry ... 82
Hard Times ... 46, 90
Hints for those at Campmeeting ... 102
Inquiries ... 3
Inquiry ... 90
Jesting ... 46
Ministering angels ... 70
Our Conference ... 14, 18
Our Visit ... 62, 66
Perplexity ... 42
Palestine ... 78
Popular theology ... 90
Question ... 2
Query ... 30
Question ... 48
Queries ... 54, 58
Revival in Boston ... 10
Rutland ... 10
Revival in California ... 66
River Point ... 90
Rutland ... 54
Spiritualism ... 6, 10, 14
Signs of the times ... 26
Spiritualism ... 54, 82
The Revival ... 42, 46
"To-day" ... 50
The Reform Convention ... 74
The Emphatic Diaglott ... 86
What is man? ... 2
Winsted ... 84

LETTERS.

E R Converse 3, D N Smith 3, V N Cudworth 5, W Sheldon 6, M H Thayer 6, W M Ingham 6, E Dexter 6, F Converse 6, A A Tupper 6, C C Brown 7, R B Miller 10, L Boutell 11, H B Sevey 12, E S Fenn 14, G W Denney 15, D N K 16, A Mussey 18, H Wheeler 18, R J Landreth 18, S Mix 18, P B Morgan 20, M A Cotton 20, G L Hart 20, H Grew 20, A N Seymour 22, J B Walls 24, G D Emerson 26, G W Gillespie 26, A P Merrill 26, A K Morse 27, A C J 28, C B Turner 28, I Damman 28, H Morton 28, W H Connell 30, J Blain 30, G A Strester 31, E B Southwick 33, M M Evans 33, J W Ireland 33, I C Wellcome 35, P S W Deyo 35, M Chandler 38, P Tandy 38, L Boutell 38, M H Morrison 40, A E and M Babcock 40, L M Collins 42, H L Hastings 43, M C Hart 43, C E Cole 43, B Smith 43, M D Wellcome 44, I C Wellcome 44, L Bliss 44, B Newton 46, T S Canfield 47, L P Hastings 47, H Grew 48, N Bennett 48, L Hill 50, J P Babcock 50, G L Hart 52, S H Young 52, S W 54, S P Green 54, A M S B 54, J T Dixon 56, G L Teeple 56, "Carrie" 58, P B Morgan 58, C F Churchill 58, Z Growler 58, E H Cotton 58, S S Brewer 62, R E Ladd 62, B L Clark 62, A H Bolton 67, Jona. Wilson 67, B P Manning 67, S C 67, H L H 67, J Blain 71, S E Teeple 74, J D Roberts 82, D B and M S Mansfield 82, H Munger 86, L C Johnson 92, J T Ongley 94, D N Smith 95, W R W 95, M V Cady 98, S Mix 98, L Boutell 99.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Ask ... 8
A child's truthfulness ... 8
A little while ... 13
Appeal to the church ... 15
A mere excuse ... 15
A triumph of infidelity ... 16
An explanation ... 17
A lie of the devil ... 17
A letter about matters and things ... 90
At Jesus' feet ... 25
A wounded spirit ... 29
Ans. to Inquirer ... 41
"Apollos" ... 44
A short sermon ... 48
A Leaf from Whitefield ... 48
A child's logic ... 50
A bath in the dead sea ... 51
A short sermon ... 52
"Apollos" ... 52
Are we a people? ... 53, 57, 65, 73, 81, 94
A solemn fact ... 53
A child's testimony ... 54
A christian ... 54
A definition of baptism ... 59
A lay revivalist in Scotland ... 60
A tribute to Bro. A P Wells ... 64
Anonymous signatures ... 66
A question ... 67
A change of heart ... 78
Access to God ... 79
A few thoughts ... 80
Abstract of Illinois Conference ... 87
Adventures of a book ... 93
An exposition of the 2d Psalm ... 93
Ancient copy of the Scriptures ... 94
A description of Christ ... 96
An hour a day ... 100
A lovely sight ... 104
A note of warning ... 101
Book of Jasher ... 12
Birth of the Spirit ... 22, 25, 29
Brethren beloved ... 40
Beecher's Thoughts ... 40
Born of God ... 41, 45
Be cheerful ... 52
Bad temper ... 68
Benevolence ... 84
Be gentle ... 96
Behold, what a weariness is it! ... 100
Be firm ... 100
Buy the truth and sell it not ... 102
Comments on the extreme ... 1
Christian union ... 9
Church order ... 8
Consider this ... 10
Companions, &c ... 10
Charity ... 16
Cheerfulness ... 16
Covetousness ... 16
Come ... 20
Campmeeting ... 22
Changes in Jerusalem ... 24
Coming of Christ ... 89
Christian union ... 26
" fellowship ... 32
Charity ... 30
Church order ... 46
Christian union ... 50, 53
Class meetings ... 58
Contentment ... 59
Cheerfulness ... 60
Christ found within ... 62
Campmeeting ... 70, 73
Christianity ... 81
Christian love ... 82
Case of longevity ... 44
Christ the hope of the church ... 36
Can the soul raise the body? ... 98
Christ and adornments ... 104
Doubting castle ... 1
Divine testimony ... 6
Death ... 5
Divine testimony ... 9
Devouring fire ... 12
Death ... 22
Divine relationship ... 25
Directions, &c., from "Apollos" ... 36
Don't ... 37
Death and Judgment ... 38
Doctrine ... 40
Deep things ... 41
Don't be afraid ... 56
Difference in wives ... 58
Dividing the child ... 78
Death and life ... 80
Discipline of the young ... 79
Extract from Hastings ... 2
Extracts ... 4
Extravagance in dress ... 36
Exposition of Isa. 65; 20 ... 50
Extract from Saurin ... 53
Eloquent prayer ... 83
Eternal life ... 79
Familiar letters ... 1, 5, 13, 17, 34, 40, 45, 49, 53, 60, 64, 80, 84, 104
Fretting ... 89
From Danville ... 92
Forever with the Lord ... 48
Family prayer ... 48
Faith ... 52
Freedom ... 57
Fool's proverbs ... 72, 74, 84
Fourth Me. Annual Conference ... 70, 75, 78, 86
Future punishment ... 85
Fourth of July ... 88
Frost on the pavement ... 26
Fools ... 97
Gleanings ... 24, 25, 45, 56, 68, 100
Goodness ... 82
Good news ... 84
He will come ... 11
He runs, &c ... 12
Handel the composer ... 16
Harvest hands ... 90
How to be a christian ... 32
How shall I become a christian? ... 44
How rain is formed ... 44
How long was Christ's ministry? ... 45
How to do good ... 56
Home ... 58
Hope unto the end ... 60
How to secure a small congregation ... 96
Humility ... 96
Heb. 2: 16 ... 82
In due season, &c ... 5
I don't know ... 24
Imagination ... 92
Is the Antichrist yet to come? ... 33
I shall be satisfied ... 40
Individual responsibility ... 48
Information obtained ... 49
Interrogatory ... 54
Influence of a holy life ... 56
I know that my Redeemer liveth ... 57
Inconsistences ... 58
If children, then heirs ... 68
Iowa and Minnesota Conference ... 76
Idle ... 95
"I don't feel like praying" ... 96
If hasteth greatly ... 16
Jesus is coming ... 4
Jesus ... 97
John Newton ... 104
Luke 16: 3 ... 3
Lazy christians ... 12
Letters to my friends ... 16, 22, 28, 30
Luther's method ... 28
Look ahead ... 37
Luther on music ... 40
Long for conversion of others ... 47
Lord, remember me ... 60
Longing for Christ ... 73
Luther on the new earth ... 83
Letter from S. S. Brewer ... 85
Life thoughts ... 92
Musings of an Evangelist ... 1, 5, 19, 29
Morning prayer meeting ... 91
Motive ... 92
Man's intermediate nature ... 28
Mediums ... 84
Man shall live, &c ... 49
Man ... 49
My religious belief ... 60, 66
My opinion on 1 Cor. 14: 34-28 ... 81
Notes and Queries ... 65, 69, 75
Nettles and duties ... 78
Never ask God why ... 96
No compromise ... 97
Our common foe ... 17
Our position ... 89
Obedience in children ... 64
Out door exercise ... 68
On the Son of God ... 74
Ordination ... 54
Obsolete Scripture words ... 100
Plain truth ... 7
Private prayer ... 90
Public opinion ... 92
Power of temptation ... 92
Pencillings by the way ... 29
Practical faith ... 36
Presumption ... 49
Prayer ... 50, 84
Pride ... 96
Palestine ... 26
Preachers of endless misery, &c ... 98
Reminiscence ... 6, 9
Relationship to God ... 13
Rest ... 20
Report ... 30
Revival incident ... 37
" incidents ... 56
Right and wrong ... 65
Reply to S. C ... 76
"Right hand" ... 82
Reason and sense ... 86
Resurrection ... 98
Reminiscences of the past ... 101
Stray sheep ... 8
Short sermons ... 28
Stand fast ... 92
Short sermons ... 29
Situation of Europe ... 32
Spiritual problem ... 34
Source of comfort ... 34
Shall this work stop? ... 37
Short sermons ... 41
S. Allen's pocket piece ... 44
Sit upright ... 55
Self-denial ... 56
Something new under the sun ... 60
Seek riches ... 60
Sanctification ... 71
Stand up ... 81
Strong in the Lord ... 85
Scraps ... 96
Sectarianism ... 74
Social meetings ... 104
The Holy Spirit ... 3
" earth burned ... 4
" future ... 4
" Scriptures and Fathers ... 4
" Lord at work ... 7
" truth in Erie ... 8
" seventh day Sabbath ... 8, 12
To disputants ... 8
The world ... 12
" shadows we cast ... 12
" seventh day ... 13
Two immutable things ... 14
Thoughts on Matt. 25th ... 16
The true road to happiness ... 16
" discipline of sorrow ... 16
" work and the way ... 16
" pilgrim's faith and hope ... 17
" Jewish high priesthood ... 17
" Conference ... 18
" inheritance ... 20
" Time ... 21
" Revival ... 23
" light of life ... 24
" Western Mission ... 89
"Then cometh the end" ... 89
The Time appointed ... 89
Temptation ... 92
The saint's home ... 92
" new Hymn Book ... 25
" Passover ... 29
To Patrons of W. Mission ... 30
The present outpouring ... 31
" Illinois Conference ... 32
" aspect ... 33
" Son of God ... 34
" Revival interest ... 37
" Christian's future ... 38
To make bad children ... 38
The thief ... 42
" last call of mercy ... 43
" great desert ... 44
" Devil mistaken ... 46
Take heed how ye hear ... 46
To Carrie ... 48
The religious awakening ... 48
Temperance pledge ... 49
The Cause in the West ... 49
" Church in Bristol, Ct ... 50
" Cause in River Point ... 50
They don't pray to God ... 52
The effects of one book ... 54
" worship of God ... 55
" Lord's coming ... 57
This same Jesus ... 58
The paper ... 58
" teacher's first prayer ... 58
" Birth of the Spirit ... 61, 65, 69, 73
To Bro. I. C Wellcome ... 62
The great clock ... 62
" Quaker's corn crib ... 62
" Vast Army ... 64, 68, 72, 76, 80, 84, 88
The way of life ... 65
" Cross and the Crown ... 68
" baptism of fire ... 68
Treasures ... 69
The Bread of Life ... 69
" Conference in Worcester ... 72
" impassable gulf ... 74
" Bread of Life ... 77, 81
" Cross ... 81
To whom shall we look? ... 85
Thoughts on Prophecy ... 85
The cause at the West ... 93
Thankfulness ... 94
The Lord's coming ... 96
" necessity of struggle ... 96
" daily life ... 96
" love of the world ... 96
" seven last plagues ... 97
" Time ... 98
Truth spreading ... 104
Thou, God, seest me ... 101
Union ... 97
Value of prayer ... 7
Voltaire ... 16
Who will go to Joppa? ... 1
" " be saved? ... 10
Wisdom ... 10
Watch ... 14, 41, 50
Watch and pray ... 20
Words fitly spoken ... 20
What of the night? ... 26
Who is the good servant? ... 26
What a contrast! ... 27
Way to cut a long story short ... 28
Who ought to preach the gospel? ... 29
Why am I not a christian? ... 52
Working christians ... 52
What is coming ... 53
What is the sanctuary ... 61
Wages of sin ... 81
Way of life ... 83
Working christians ... 93
Who is a christian? ... 104
1 Sam. 15th chap ... 56
1 Cor. 15: 24-28 ... 77

Editorial Notices.

☞ In compliance with the request of several, we purpose to give a series of articles on the Soul and Spirit in the next volume of the Crisis.

☞ The Conference at Strawberry Point, Iowa, commences Wednesday before the fourth Sabbath in Oct., instead of the first. See notice.

☞ The editor purposes to attend the Campmeeting near Collinsville, Ct.

NOTICES.

Fare Reduced—Wilbraham Campmeeting

The fare on the Connecticut River Railroad, and on the Worcester, Nashua, and Western Railroad, is reduced to half price.

N. B. On the Worcester and Nashua Road, half price tickets can be obtained only at Nashua and Groton Junction.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

The general campmeeting, a notice of which has appeared in the Crisis for several weeks past, commenced at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, Aug. 23d, and will continue one week. Ample accommodations have been provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 50 cts. per day; or one shilling per meal for breakfast and supper, and 25 cents for dinner.

☞ Eld. D. T. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouses' Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Notice.

The second Quarterly Meeting of the Rock Island District will be held at Sweetland, Iowa, eight miles from Muscatine, near Bro. Covills. It is to be a Tent Meeting, to commence Sept. 8th, at half past 7 o'clock in the evening. It is hoped there will be a general gathering of the saints. There will be provision made for all that come.

MOSES CHANDLER, Evangelist.

P. S. Those that come by steamboat or railroad will stop at Muscatine, and call for Esq. Washburn. A team will leave there on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings to take the friends to the meeting.

Campmeeting.

There will be a Campmeeting in Savoy, Mass., on land owned by Noah Mirick, about three miles north of Savoy Hollow, commencing Aug. 30th, to continue over the following Sabbath. We invite all the lovers of Jesus, and those who wish to become his followers, to come in the name of the Lord, with their tents, to the feast of tabernacles, for we expect the Lord will meet with his people and convert sinners.

Board and horse keeping will be furnished on reasonable terms. Those coming by railroad will stop at South Adams, where they will find teams in readiness to convey them to the camp ground.

Brethren H. Pratt, J. Hemenway and M. Batchelor are expected; and we wish all to come who can, and break unto us the bread of life.

E. McCULLOCK,
For the Brethren.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Tent Meeting held in Brown County, Ill., some four miles South of Mt Sterling, near Brn. C. A. Twombly and Joseph Bush, to commence Tuesday, 21st September, and continue over the following Lord's day. There will be a Conference held in connection with the meeting. Elder M. Chandler will be present with the preaching tent, which will make us a commodious house of worship.

We hope all the friends in that region will come without fail, and spend one week in God's worship. Let nothing hinder you from coming. We want to see you—worship with you—confer with you—devise means by which the destitute fields may be supplied with preaching—concentrate our force—bring together the scattered flock—set things in gospel order; yea, arouse ourselves, wake up zeal that we may put forth an effort in harmony with the great enterprise in which we are engaged, and work while the day lasts, for the sun is fast going down.

I will bring Books and Tracts to supply the demand.

WALTER PRATT.
Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill.

NOTICE.—There will be a Conference in Hermon, Me., commencing Tuesday evening, September 2d, and continuing over the Sabbath.

DANIEL CHURCHILL,
For the brethren.

I am requested also to say that the brethren are somewhat poor as to the things of this world, and wish the brethren that may come from abroad to come prepared to do good and get good.

D. CHURCHILL.

NOTICE.—Providence permitting, there will be a conference in North Searsport, Me., commencing Thursday, Sept. 9th, and continuing as long as thought proper. The Conference will be free for all who love our Lord and wish to be acquainted with him by his word. It is expected Brn. L. L. Howard, B. S. Emery and D. M. Hanscomb will attend.

In behalf of the Church,
I. DAMMAN.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro. D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. PREBLE.
East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is expected to be at Lake Village, to be holden in the early part of October. Particulars hereafter.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.
East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

NOTICE.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.
N. F. NASON.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove Meeting in the south west part of Hoosac, N. Y., one mile from Potter Hill P. O., four miles from the Falls, and six miles from Buskirk's Bridge depot.

Bro. Miles Grant and others are expected to preach. Meeting to commence Thursday, Sept. 2d, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue over Sunday.

The brethren abroad are invited to attend. The people desire the word of the Lord in that region, and to give it to them is the object of this meeting.

For the people,
M. BACHELOR.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, a Tent or Campmeeting will be holden in Lanesville, Ct., on the line of the Housatonic Railroad, 30 miles north of Bridgeport, on the old ground, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

An invitation is extended to all, hoping all of God's children, who can, will attend and feel free to act as he may direct. Ministering brethren are invited to come as the way may open, and preach the word as the Lord may direct. All, who can conveniently, will please bring their tents and blankets. Arrangements will be made to accommodate those who may choose to board on the ground. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductors they wish to stop at Lanesville Station.

The 10.30 AM, and 6.35 PM trains from Bridgeport arrive at Lanesville at 12 M and 8.45 PM. The 9.25 AM train from Pittsfield arrives at 1.10 PM.

L. MILLS, for the Brethren.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Campmeeting in Connecticut, commencing Sept. 6th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Its location is about three miles below Collinsville, in a beautiful grove on land of Bro. Johnson. Our brethren and sisters coming from Hartford or New Haven will buy their tickets for Barnes' Station. But the cars will stop at the ground about one mile before reaching the station, so there will be no expense in getting yourselves or baggage from the cars to the ground. There will be a boarding tent on the ground, so that all those who wish to hire their board can be accommodated. Preachers and the worthy poor boarded free. Those who come with their own teams will find provision made for pasturing; hay and grain on reasonable terms. Those who come with their own teams, wishing to avoid the cars, will take notice that the cars leave Collinsville at 8 o'clock, A. M. and 2 o'clock, P. M., and returning, arrive at 1 o'clock, P. M. and 6 P. M. We hope there will be a general gathering at this meeting, and we will do all we can to make you comfortable; and we trust we shall have a profitable meeting.

S. JOHNSON,
E. B. GILBERT,
S. TATRO,
L. POND,
S. G. MATHEWSON,
Committee.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Megregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. E. Lyons.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. DEYO,
Conference Clerk.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming Kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets.

WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.
Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Jawbuck, or where the brethren appoint, in the vicinity, Sunday, Aug. 22; at River Point, R. I., the first Sunday in Sept.; Providence, R. I., last Sabbath in August, (29th). Farther appointments next week. Address till Aug. 23d, Thompsonville, Ct; till 27th, Collins' Depot, Wilbraham, Mass.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Bradford, N. H., at the Christian Chapel, the last Sabbath in this month.

B. P. MANNING.

Bro. M. BATCHELOR appoints to preach in Rutland, Vt. - - - Sept. 8th.
Chateaugay, N. Y., as Bro. Stuart may appoint, " 9th.
Massena, N. Y. - - - " 10th.
And continue over second and third Sundays in Sept.

Eld. THOS. SMITH appoints to preach as follows:—
So. Hope, " (Schoolhouse,) - Aug. 27th.
Lincolnville, Me., " " 29th.
No. Searsport, " " " 31st.

Business.

To Correspondents.

J. G. Smith, Meredith, N. H.—All right.

Jas. Hammond—Should be credited $2.00 instead of $1,00; pays to 202.

Cash Receipts.

N R Fowler 168, 50 cts; J F Rice 156, $1.56; W M Ingham 42 cts; H Raymond 13 cts; S F Matthews 182, $1.13.

W P Wentworth 158, M Christenson 164, L Bristol 156, H Way 156, O K Gibbs 182, L A Woodstock 182, H G Smiley 182, Mrs. B Collen 182, A H Liswell 161, Mrs. J Pribble 156, J C Lambert 157, J Frost 173, J Gregory 273, A Cole 177, H Babcock 173, A Cudworth 182,—$1.00 each.

J Parry 207, S C Berry 208,—$2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts.—J B Waite $5.00; I Cutting $1.18.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition; Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco, gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 80 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life; or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally considered. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $24.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—post 8 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 5 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1,postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, (edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 8 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels, together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument, in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 12 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State, by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them, free, by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; Two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

MAN'S DESTINY. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 25 cents: bound, 40 cts. Postage, 3 cts.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison and Geo. Storrs. Question—"Does the Bible teach that the creature Man, which the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground, has a Superadded Entity called the soul?" Price 25 cents in paper covers: bound, 50 cts. Postage, 3 cts.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.: The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

O HASTE WITH ME.

[Composed for a favorite Quartette.]

BY S. S. BREWER.

O haste with me to seek those happy scenes,
The land, the land of endless light;
And rove with me through fadeless green,
Where skies are ever bright.
And as we view each brilliant ray
That shines from every star,
We'll live and sing in endless day,
In praise that sounds, that sounds afar.

O then we'll sing the depth of matchless love,
Why Christ, why Christ our King was slain;
As onward ages ceaseless move,
Eternally we'll reign.
Come, Savior, let thy reign begin;
Come, still each note of war;
We sigh to sing an end of sin,
In praise that sounds, that sounds afar.

We pray and long to see the morning dawn,
The bright, the bright eternal day,
When tears are wiped and sorrows gone,
And darkness fled away.
May glowing love inspire our hearts,
And praise our tongues employ;
We'll watch and pray till time departs,
Then strike the harp, the harp of joy.

Fairhaven, Mass., Aug., 1858.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Familiar Letters.—No. 10.

Dear Uncle Fred:—You are familiar with the parable of the tares and the wheat, spoken of on one occasion by our Savior. Does not that most emphatically teach that there will be a mixture of the vile and the precious, until the harvest, at the end of the world?

Turn with me to 2d Tim., 3: 1-13, and read Paul's description of the "last days." "Perilous times" are foretold, and the reason why they will be thus is because "men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away," &c. Such, dear Uncle, are the characters which will make the last days days of peril, and not days of millennial glory, safety and rest. In the same connection, the apostle affirms that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution," and that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

In the "good time coming," that is so confidently spoken of and expected, it is affirmed that all will know the Lord, from the least to the greatest, and none will have occasion to teach his brother, or his neighbor, the right way, for the law of God shall be written on every heart. If this is so, how will the godly suffer persecution? Hear James rebuking the "rich men" who "have heaped treasures together for the last days," while "the hire of the laborers who have reaped down" their "fields, is kept back by fraud." Methinks this is not indicative of a millennial state. And what are the words of comfort addressed to the oppressed? "Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." "Be ye also patient; establish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Now turn over to 2d Peter, 3: 3, and you will find that apostle in harmony with Paul, when speaking of the "last days." "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." In the Revelation you will find as in Daniel, that beastly governments exist even unto the end of the world and coming and reign of Christ. The ten horns upon the beast, which "are ten kings," these "make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them, for he is Lord of Lords, and King of Kings." This is when he takes to himself his great power, and reigns over the nations, ruling them with a rod of iron, and dashing them in pieces as a potter's vessel. Read the 19th chapter, and you will find a description of the coronation day and the marriage festival. Then for the first time, Christ wears the inscription, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. He is now manifesting, as Paul in his letter to Timothy predicted, who is the only true Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of Lords. "Which in his time shall shew." That time is when he rides forth a mighty Conqueror at the head of his glorious army of saints, clothed in white raiment. Then the great voices are heard in heaven, saying: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever." The beast and the false prophet are consigned to the lake of fire, while their armies are destroyed, and the fowls of the air feast upon their flesh. Who would covet a millennium that has embraced in it such vile elements as are connected with these anti-christian governments?

Would you hear another argument against the fallacy of the commonly received opinion of a temporal millennium? Then read the description of the seven trumpets that were to sound. The events symbolized are all indicative of war and bloodshed; but the three last are woe trumpets, thereby showing that there would be increasing suffering and woe connected with the era thus shadowed forth, and, mark this, that these extend to, and embrace the final consummation at the revelation of Jesus Christ, so that no time is herein embraced in which that expected temporal millennium can exist.

When the harvest takes place, tares grow among the wheat; when the net is drawn ashore, good and bad fishes are intermingled; when the Bridegroom comes, foolish virgins are found as well as wise; when the Lord comes, servants are surprised asleep and unwatchful at their posts; when the sixth seal is opened, rich men, and mighty men, kings and captains, bondmen and free men, are afraid, and, fleeing to the mountains and caves of the earth for refuge, call vainly upon them for protection from the wrath of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. And yet there will be a millennium; it is no delusive dream, or airy night vision. The Bible teaches that a millennium will come—when and how, I leave for a future letter.

Yours, as ever,

Kate.

For the Crisis.

Who is a Christian?

What a question to ask in these days of light and revivals! and yet it is a question far from being settled. Various answers would be given by different religionists, if asked what are the necessary qualities a person must possess, to constitute him a Christian in the sense of the New Testament.

The dictionary would say: A Christian is one that follows Christ, or believes and practices the doctrines and precepts of Christianity—the teachings of Christ. If this is right, then he is one that loves God, Christ, his brother, and his neighbor as himself. He loves and prays for his enemies even, and tries to do them good as Christ did. He will not do his neighbor or brother wrong, in person, property, or reputation. He will not backbite or speak evil of his neighbor. He will never lay up old grudges, and ever forgives or overlooks them. If his brother trespass against him, he will never speak of the trespass or wrong till he has first taken the brother alone, and tried to gain him to the right.

I think Christ never gave a superfluous command, and his commands and precepts are, at least, as binding as the ten commandments. If this be so, who is a christian? We are soon to be judged by his word, and what shall we think of those professors who are continually harping upon the glorious truths they believe, while they live in the habitual disregard of the commands of Christ? Is there not too much tithing of herbs, and omitting these weightier matters of the law? O, who is a christian? Let him not be ashamed.

E. C.

John Newton.

Two or three years before the death of this eminent servant of Christ, when his sight was becoming so dim that he was no longer able to read, an aged friend and brother in the ministry called on him to breakfast. Family prayer succeeding, the portion of Scripture for the day was read to him. It was taken out of Bogatsky's Golden Treasury: "By the grace of God I am what I am." It was the pious man's custom, on these occasions, to make a short family exposition of the passage read. After the reading of this text, he paused for some moments, and then uttered the following affecting soliloquy:

"I am not what I ought to be! Ah, how imperfect and deficient! I am not what I wish to be! I abhor what is evil, and I would cleave to what is good. I am not what I hope to be! Soon shall I put off mortality; and with mortality, all sin and imperfection. Yet, though I am not what I ought to be, nor what I wish to be, nor what I hope to be, I can truly say I am not what I once was—a slave to sin and satan, and I can heartily join with the apostle, and acknowledge, By the grace of God, I am what I am! Let us pray!"

Choice Selections.

THE EDEN OF LOVE.

We're bound for the land of the pure and the holy,
The home of the happy, the kingdom of love,
Ye wanderers from God in the broad road of folly,
O say, will you go to the Eden of love.
Will you go, Will you go, Will you go, Will you go,
O say, will you go to the Eden of love.

In that blessed land neither sighing nor anguish
Can breathe in the fields where the glorified rove,
Ye heart-burdened ones who in misery languish,
O say, will you go to the Eden of love.
Will you go, &c.

Nor fraud, nor deceit, nor the hand of oppression,
Can injure the dwellers in that holy grove;
No wickedness there, not a shade of transgression,
O say, will you go to the Eden of love.
Will you go, &c.

No poverty there—no, the saints are all wealthy,
The heirs of his glory whose nature is love;
Nor sickness can reach them, that country is healthy,
O say, will you go to the Eden of love.
Will you go, &c.

March on, happy pilgrims, that land is before you,
And soon its ten thousand delights we shall prove;
Yes, soon we shall walk o'er the hills of bright glory,
And drink the pure joys of the Eden of love.
We will go, we will go;
O yes, we will go to the Eden of love.

And yet, guilty sinner, we would not forsake thee,
We halt yet a moment as onward we move;
O come to thy Lord, in his arms he will take thee,
And bear thee along to the Eden of love.
Will you go, Will you go,
O say, will you go to the Eden of love.

Methinks thou art now in thy wretchedness saying,
O, who can this guilt from my conscience remove?
No other but Jesus; then come to him praying,
Prepare me, O Lord, for the Eden of love.
Will you go, Will you go
At last, will you go to the Eden of love.

"Christ and Adornments."

The above is the title of a very interesting and faithful work upon the following subject:—"What is the mind of Christ with respect to christians adorning their persons with jewelry and gay and costly attire? and what is the effect of such adorning on the individual, the church and the world?"

A premium of one hundred dollars was offered for the best work on this subject; some twenty were written, and the prize was awarded to S. N. Platt, a classmate of ours, now preaching the gospel. Every christian mother and daughter should have a copy.

The following is an extract from its pages:—

"Now with respect to the subject before us, its lawfulness can be determined only by a careful scrutiny of its bearings upon the mental and moral nature. In itself, it is an admiration of jewelry and costly attire, and a desire to enjoy them. Desire always impels toward its object, and if there be no opposing principle, self-love unites in the effort. For the sake of the illustration, we will suppose a colloquy representing the action which each of the mental powers and moral virtues (which are directly interested) may have in the proposed gratification.

Taste.—Those adornments are beautiful!

Desire.—I must have them.

Self Love.—O! they will make me so happy!

Acquisitiveness.—But they are very expensive.

Desire.—No matter; I must have them; money may as well go in that way as in any other.

Benevolence.—The same amount charitably bestowed would do great good.

Pride.—Every body else has them, and I am as good as any one.

Sympathy.—Widow Needful's suffering babes might be relieved by that amount.

Love.—"To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

Self Esteem.—This is doing good. It is making one's self respectable.

Humility.—I would not "do evil that good may come."

Approbativeness.—Becoming respectable is not doing evil. How can I enjoy Mrs. Vanity's society unless I dress as she does?

Cautiousness.—I fear the influence upon others will prove injurious.

Selfishness.—Let others take care of themselves. Who's going to be a saint when all the world are sinners?

Love.—I would "do nothing whereby my brother should offend."

Destructiveness.—I don't care; I'll let Mrs. Flauntout know that I can appear as well as she can!

Veneration.—It would seriously interfere with my devotions.

Desire.—Give my wishes now—take your devotions afterward.

Reason.—It is too degrading to my nature to be tied down to such miserable trash! I scorn it!

Self Love.—Ah, I see. I should lose more than I would gain by it. No, it must not be.

Selfish Desire.—It shall be, let the consequences be as they may.

Conscientiousness.—Time misspent, money wasted, influence made destructive, devotion repressed, selfishness stimulated, reason degraded. No, no, it must not be!

Perverse Will.—It shall be!!"

Truth Spreading.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I was somewhat encouraged in reading the following article, coming as it does from a man of world-renowned celebrity, as a theologian. I concluded it might do some others a similar benefit; not that it is more a fact because Dr. Tyng believes it, but it shows that there are some, who are men of the loftiest intellect, defiant of the unpopularity of this truth, who are candid enough to declare it. If you think best, please publish it. Here, dear brethren, is a scriptural view of the past, and, in the opinion of the learned preacher, sufficient evidence in view of the condition of the world to lead him to testify that the time is at hand. God speed the hour is my fervent prayer.

Williamstown, Aug. 3, 1858.

Editors of Traveller:—The exercises Sabbath evening consisted of an address by Rev. Dr. Tyng of New York, before the Mills Theological Society. He selected Rev. 11 chap. 15th verse as his text. "The Kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord," &c. He said: This is a great event—the final triumph of Christ, and the introduction of his Kingdom. To a society organized on this plan, the relations of such an event to the destiny of man is an important subject, and I invite your attention to the consideration of the facts and relations concerning it. These Kingdoms are not Christ's now, but are separate and opposed to him; they are but organized forms of human apostasy: whether Pagan, Mohammedan, Romish or Infidel, they have ever been hostile to him, and are so to-day. The Christian religion is sometimes protected by law, but not one government is in accordance with his word. Three thousand years ago the first Kingdom was established, and the rebellion on the plains of Shinar has lived in all of them, and in every succeeding generation. Britain and America no more adopt the divine revelation as the rule of human government than did Babylon.

In all these years, God has had a family of his own, a line of grace which can be traced like a silver stream, springing from the gates of a Paradise lost; but it is still a little flock. Its subjects are the sons of God, the church; to them the promises were given, and by them communion with God has been maintained. This line of grace was in Jacob's family, and though all Israel was not the true Israel, it was a peculiar favored people, the only theocracy. Thus we have the two parts of the great contest before us, though parallel, yet perfectly distinct.

The text is the proclamation of the accomplishment of a prophecy long ago recorded by Daniel, in the emblem of the image, which was composed of four materials that once broken should never unite, but should be replaced by a fifth, the Kingdom of Christ. It was also symbolized by the four beasts destroying each other, in turn, and finally destroyed by a kingdom whose dominion should not pass. Four such kingdoms have existed.

He then proceeded to show that these four were the Babylonian, in Daniel's time, arising 1600 years before him, represented by the gold in the image; the Persian under Cyrus, by the silver; the Grecian under Alexander, by the brass; and the Roman under Augustus, by the iron and clay. To construct a fifth has been the ambition of men, but the record still remains incomplete; the universal monarchy of love under Jesus is yet to be revealed. Ptolemy follows this plan, unconsciously strengthening the evidence of the truth of the prophecy, 746 years after Daniel; and in later times also, Napoleon admitted that no one could construct a fifth to succeed them.

These are the kingdoms described in the text, so that Rome is properly called Babylon, as the heir of her empire; and John uses no mere figure, in calling Rome Babylon. It is a singular fact that the Pope alone of all monarchs, wears the exact royal dress of the ancient Kings of Babylon—the same costume as described by Strabo, the tiara,—the ancient diadem of the Persian Kings,—worn no where else; the white tunic; the slipper, with the toe uncovered to receive the salutations of prostrate Kings; the fillets, which it was death to wear for any one else; the attendants clothed in scarlet and wearing gold chains—are striking proofs of this identity.

He then went on to speak of the historic peculiarities of the different Kingdoms, displaying the correctness and fitness with which the different metals symbolized them, but to give which would occupy too much space, and showing that the Roman might be still said to survive, though broken into fragments, as the Kingdoms of the present day are the heirs of the old empire, and are governed by its laws. One principle has animated all the four Kingdoms; the absolute sovereignty of man over man has been their theory. They have been the symbols of man's hostility to God, animating the governments of Britain and America to-day, as shown in the opium war and the slave trade.

The moral aspects of human history have been equally remarkable: there have ever been two manner of men; a line of apostasy and a line of grace. The first to the present has been the strongest; in Daniel's time the second became captive to the first, and has ever remained so; nowhere has this captivity been overthrown. In Britain and America Christianity is only tolerated and protected, and this not from love to God, but from an acknowledgment of the rights of men. We are constrained to ask, shall this last forever? and if not, how long, and with what results? If we ask the broken kingdoms of iron, we shall find that anarchy is the plan of the popular will; if we ask the monarchs, we shall find that the subjection of human rights is the plan of the throne; if we ask the hierarchy, the subjugation of the consciences of men is the answer of the clay; but if we ask the word of God, we have a distinct answer—"In the days of these kingdoms shall a kingdom be set up which shall destroy them all." The image of human power is the idol of man's adoration, but prophecy assures us that this idol shall be overthrown, and that the Kingdom of Christ shall finally triumph. He concluded with declaring his belief that this would be as personal as any of the preceding; that as Christ rules in the hearts of men, so he is to rule over all a personal King; and that this time was near at hand! and he urged the members to "stand up for Jesus," though Jews despise and infidels blaspheme, assuring them that they should come out more than conquerors.

The sermon was long, but was very interesting, and held the audience to the close.—Selected by S. S. Brewer.

Social Meetings.

Our social meetings for prayer, praise, conference, holiness, are good, excellent, interestingly so—but might they not be vastly more interesting, profitable, edifying, electrifying, were concentration of thought adhered to definitely; point, pith, the bringing every subject to a definite, positive, earnest, burning focus, without dwelling on mere circumstantials, things common-place, of small moment, the mere scaffoldings—repeating and re-repeating? How frequently and painfully do some persons occupy the floor with continued and protracted pauses, prefaces, circumlocutious, stale, threadbare recitals, monopolizing the time justly due to the meeting! And this same prolongation of common-place recitals go on from day to day, from week to week, till the bones and sinews of every one present fairly ache! cry out for deliverance! How many precious souls might be refreshed during this monopoly? Suppose the time occupied by one good brother, is occupied by some four or six individuals on fire, energized by the Holy Spirit—opening their lips wide for God, giving merely the outlines in a condensed, graphic form, the cream, the essence of a gospel experience: and suppose, moreover, this same brevity and hallowed fire go on and on, till all present shall have witnessed for Christ, pointedly, condensedly, soul-kindlingly—what now? Would not every brother and sister say amen—go away refreshed, strengthened, joyful? Who can calculate the vast difference between ten and thirty testimonies in an hour? The one is life, the other death! Our social meetings wane, dribble, ofttimes expire from prolixity, dwelling on minutias, without the fire, the flint, the hammer. Short speeches and prayers grieve the Holy Spirit? Rather is not God's spirit grieved, and his little ones grieved deeply, at this interminable prolixity?

The wisest, the best, the holiest men congratulate heartily the three and five minute rule adopted in our Union meetings everywhere; in Boston, Hartford, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati. President Finney, in his recent protracted efforts in Boston, was among the first to approbate this arrangement in the conference room. Necessity was laid upon him. Suppose the floor had been given up, as formerly, to a few stereotyped formalists to speak and pray all over the world and back again, without let or hindrance—where now the holy fire, the streams of overflowing salvation? O where?—Golden Rule.

A Lovely Sight.

Angelically lovely!—loveliness on loveliness—superlatively beautiful! And not merely beautiful, but grand, sublime, heroic, to see a young woman rise superior to the world; its blandishments, its gaieties, superfluities, follies, flatteries, fashionable costumes—rise in the strength and wisdom of redeeming grace—in all that is pure, virtuous, amiable, God-fearing, God-serving! Adorning herself, as the Lord says, in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness,) "with good works"—"with the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

We speak of heroic deeds in the battle-field of the Alexanders, the Napoleons, the brave generals of the revolution—but what are these compared to a young woman abandoning forever every superfluity and fashionable expenditure, redeeming her time to do good, to glorify God in her body and her spirit, which are God's. Instances rare! in this day of exuberant folly and idolatry! This very rarity renders this God-like self-denial more admirable, praise-worthy, glorious! It's a martyr spirit, eminently so. Such a spectacle of the morally sublime is the admiration of angels. They stoop to gaze upon it with joy seraphic. God himself smiles complacently. Nothing but the hidden man of the heart will enable a young woman, in the beauty and influence of life, to take Jesus thus consecratedly and entire for her friend, her guide, her pattern, her life, her all and in all—to acknowledge Him in all her ways!

This conquest is not an army merely, but of the world, the whole world. In a word, it's daring to be singular—to face the enemy, the world, the flesh, the devil—saying joyfully, "get thee hence, Satan; it is written thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve." Sisters, will you do it? do it now?—Golden Rule.

Health Department.

Out-Door Exercises.

Rain or shine, cold or hot, hail or snow, whirlwind on whirlwind, all combined, are not so detrimental as a penned up, dense, impure, contagious atmosphere. The dark hole of Calcutta, or the hold of a slaver, are scarcely more fatal to health and life than the impure air of very many of our sitting rooms, sleeping rooms, houses of worship and seminaries of learning. Dr. Hall, in his Journal of Health, remarks that, "The fear of the weather has sent multitudes to the grave who otherwise might have lived in health many years longer. The fierce North wind and the furious snow storms kill comparatively few, while the winter rooms and crisping summer suns have countless hetacombs of human beings to attest their power. Except in localities where malignant miasms prevail, and only in warm weather, out-door life is the healthiest and happiest, from the tropics to the poles.

The general fact speaks for itself, that persons who are out of doors most take cold least. In some parts of our country nearly one-half of the adult deaths are from the diseases of the air passages. These ailments arise from taking cold in some way or another; and surely the reader will take some interest in a subject from which, by at least one chance out of four, his life may be lost.

All colds arise out of one or two causes.

1. By getting cold too quick after exercise, either of the whole body, or any part of it.

2. By being chilled, and remaining so for a long time, from want of exercise.—Golden Rule.

The Habitual Use of Spirits.

We are all of us more or less aware of the directly visible injurious effects produced by the habitual use of intoxicating drinks, in the follies and vices, the absorption of all the generous feelings, all the tender humanities and sweet charities of love, while the heart is held under its sway; but few of us know the full extent of the change produced by it, both in the mental and corporeal faculties.

The British and Foreign Medico-Chirurgical Review shows that the habitual use of spirits arrests that metamorphosis of tissue which is necessary for health, leaving the effete tissue as a useless burden in the body, to be converted into that least vitalized of all the organic constituents, oil and fat, till finally life itself is clogged at the fountain-head. Thousands of men, according to the Review, who have never been inebriated, annually perish, having shortened their lives by tippling a little every day. The dram arrests the metamorphosis of tissue, and another dram is taken before this arrest ceases; the reaction, thus postponed, becomes more intense; the depression is excessive; more drams are taken; and so, in the end, without ever having been intoxicated, the tippler sinks into the grave, presenting the strange anomaly of a reasonable being periodically applying a poison which is sure to impair and eventually destroy the vitality of the body, and divert the nobler impulses of the heart from that course which consecrates it to a heaven-born life. The effect of drinking spirits is different from that produced by wine, for wine is rarely used except at meals, so that the effects have time to pass away before a second dose becomes due, and hence no craving for an increased quantity is experienced. Men are now living, in consequence, in robust old age, who have taken the same identical number of glasses of wine daily for half a century, without feeling it necessary to increase the quantity.

To guard against the poisonous effects of bites and stings, take an ounce vial of spirits of hartshorn with you when you start for a summer tour in the country.

The World's Crisis

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Canada Subscribers have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 157. BOSTON, MASS., SEPTEMBER 8, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 1.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I WANT TO BE LIKE JESUS.

I want to be like Jesus,
Of meek and quiet heart;
Like him be ever seeking
In others' woes a part.

Like him be ever striving
Some word of cheer to speak,
Some fainting heart to strengthen,
And the good of others seek.

I want to be like Jesus,
Of kind and gentle speech,
His precepts and examples
By actions kind to teach.

Though sorrows round me gather,
While treading life's rough way,
I'll ask him still to guide me
In his own kind gentle way.

Oh! I want to see my Savior
Come back to earth again,
And make his saints immortal,
And take them home to reign.

SUSAN A. ISBELL.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Eld. S. S. Brower.

The sun is now casting his lengthened shadows o'er the face of nature, proclaiming the close of day. One more day of my pilgrimage is numbered. But thanks, praise and adoration to my Father in heaven, I am enabled to exclaim, in view of his goodness and mercy to me—

While in this body pent,
Absent from thee I roam,
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent,
A day's march nearer home.

On Saturday last I took leave of my family to strive for a short time to enjoy the same privilege that Paul and Barnabas speak of in Acts 15: 36. On my way I met Bro. E. Burnham and F. H. Berick; and truly the language of Prov. 27: 17, was verified in my heart. O how dear to me is the presence and friendship of those with whom I have been a feeble associate in the proclamation of the last glorious message to a sleepy church and a perishing world.

On Lord's day, August 8th, once more I endeavored to preach the word to the church in Salem, Mass., worshiping in Union street. Seldom, if ever, have I enjoyed more of the presence of the blessed Comforter than while I was recommending this Gospel of the Kingdom to those present on each occasion that day and evening. I yet feel the sweet, melting, moving power of the glorious gospel of the Son of God entwining around the tendrils of my poor heart, causing it to pulsate in anxious desire for a strict conformity to the divine will.

O what a power is embodied in the new covenant! He is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him; seeing he ever liveth to make intercession. Amen. He shall be called Jesus, for he shall save HIS PEOPLE FROM THEIR SINS. Not in them. There is much to be done, and much to be left undone, by his people. Think of that.

Said a person to me: Do you think God wants his people to see alike? To be sure I do. And for proof I cited him to the following passages: John 17: 11–24. There is unity in all essentials. There is oneness in the Spirit. 1 Cor. 6: 17; 12: 13; Phil. 1: 27; Eph. 4: 3, 4. One hope. Eph. 4: 4; Col. 1: 23. There is but one faith. Eph. 4: 5. That is the faith of God. Rom. 3: 3; Phil. 1: 27; Acts 14: 22. There should be one mind. 1 Cor. 1: 10; Phil. 2: 1, 2; 1 Peter 3: 8. Divisions are the fruit of a carnal heart. See 1 Cor. 3: 1–5. Lastly, how came divisions? Read it in Acts 20: 28–31.

Well, but I can't see how we can all be united. I can. How is it possible to be done? I will tell you. It could be very easily accomplished. Just gather up all the man-made creeds, confessions, disciplines and articles of human machinery, and do as those we read of in Acts 19: 19. I do think they would give more light in that way than in the manner they are used at the present time. And then the 20th Verse, in our day, would be fulfilled. Yes, let all that profess to love Jesus take his word, and make it their rule of faith and practice; that would bring all upon one common platform, and destroy the legion of nick-names for denominational pride and popularity. Most truly has the pen of inspiration graven it on the divine statute book. Hear it, ye sectarian bigots, ye narrow minded pharisees, laced so tight in corsets of your church-isms, that you can't draw a long breath in the presence of a Bibleite, for fear of being contaminated. Now let the martyred Apostle take the stand. "All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Well, dearly beloved friends of Jesus, we shall soon see him and be made like him; one great family; one kingdom; one great citadel of earth and sky; one king; and he shall sit on the throne of his glory, we to spend one eternal age. How often, in my moments of ecstasies, while I antedate the advent of our once injured and crucified King, I sigh and weep over his absence, and long and watch for his coming. O, how sad the earth appears! The object of my affections is hid from my sight. The true child of God weeps over the havoc made among the tender lambs of their Shepherd, by the legion of emissaries transformed into angels of light. Death, the gloomy king of terrors, sways his sceptre of indiscriminate ravages, and tears away our dearest friends. The widow moans in plaintive wail o'er the partner of her joys, and as she folds her tender offspring near to her heart, they mingle their scalding tears in one pulsation of woe. And from the four winds, goes up to God continually, by day and night, the cries of the oppressed. O, ye weepers, 'neath the tyrant's yoke, your long, long dark night is almost past! Though God has borne long, he will soon make inquisition for long forgotten wrongs. The pent up wrath of six thousand years is now about to unsheath the sword of vengeance. He is coming with his fan in his hand; he will thoroughly purge his floor; he will gather his wheat into his garner, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire; or, as the Syriac reads: Fire suffered to burn up and consume what is left. Who doubts that fire will consume chaff? No one. O, what an idea of preservation that would be—burn up chaff in order to preserve it! Solemn and awful as it may seem, yet it is fixed in the mind of God: all the wicked will God destroy. Then will be brought to pass the saying, as it is written: "Every creature which is in heaven and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing and honor, and glory and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever."

O, break, break, eternal morn! Part, ye intervening skies! Send immortality among the monumental beds! Let the dark, deep, unfathomable caves of old ocean give up thy saints! O, ye that desire life, hunger, thirst, watch, pray for it. There are many things to be left undone, and many things to be done, in order, through God's abounding grace, to obtain it. God bless you, dear children. O, live, live religion, every day, every hour, every moment. Then it will be like a well of water springing up unto eternal life. O, glory, glory, to God! I expect soon to be where the earth shall be filled with his glory as the waters cover the sea. Then it will be above us, beneath us, around us. O, praise the Lord, O my soul; and let everything that hath breath praise the Lord. Amen and Amen.

S. S. BREWER.

Fairhaven, Mass.

☞ Affectation in any part of our carriage is lighting up a candle to our defects, and never fails to make us be taken notice of, either as wanting sense or wanting sincerity.

☞ The church is out of temper when charity grows cold and zeal hot.

For the Crisis.

Answer to the Question of C. F., IN NUMBER XVII.

FRIEND GRANT:—Having seen the above named question in the Crisis addressed, as I supposed, to persons of like faith as myself, and taking it for granted that light with regard to the matter is desired, I would offer the following reply.

That the saints (or holy ones) are to be rulers, and not subjects, in the kingdom of God, is most plainly taught in the Bible. In Exodus, 19: 5, 6, we find that Jehovah, through Moses, taught the Israelites, if they would be obedient to his law, they should become "a kingdom of priests;" or, in other words, a priesthood possessing regal authority. They were disobedient, and finally rejected Messiah, who told them the kingdom of God should be taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.—Matt. 21: 43. And the apostle Peter informs us who that people are: "But ye," says he, writing to brethren of like precious faith with himself, "are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation," &c.—1 Pet. 2: 9. The mission of the gospel is not for the preparation of immortal souls for kingdoms beyond the skies; but a calling or invitation held out to gentiles for them to become members of this royal family, to be the future rulers and administrators of the government, throughout the habitable world. See Eph. 3: 4; Isa. 32: 1. Those who accept this one hope to which gentiles are invited, and are obedient to the one faith, become children, (or sons of God,) by faith in Jesus Messiah.—Gal. 3: 26. If they are children (or sons of God) then are they heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Messiah.—Rom. 8: 17. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3: 29. Now I think this fact is made sufficiently plain, that all faithful ones, or children by faith, are JOINT HEIRS with Jesus Christ, i. e. heirs to the same things Jesus is heir to. And what are they? Answer: By virtue of a covenant made by Jehovah with Abraham, and one with David, Jesus, Messiah, is heir to the kingdom and throne of David, in that land once promised to Abraham when possessed by certain idolatrous nations specified by name, the territory of which was bounded by the river of Egypt and the great river, the river Euphrates; the throne of which kingdom was acknowledged to be Jehovah's. See 1 Chron. 29: 23. Together with his kingdom he is heir to a dominion under the whole heaven, from the river to the ends of the earth, and all kings shall fall down before him, and all nations shall serve him. Upon the throne of David he is to sit, and upon his kingdom to order it and increase it with judgment and justice from henceforth even for the age. The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for the age; and his kingdom shall not end. See Gen. 13: 13–18; 15: 18–21; and 17: 7, 8. 2 Sam. 7: 11–17; Ps. 72; Ps. 2: 7, 8, 9; Isa. 9: 6, 7; Luke 1: 31–33. His faithful ones are heirs to the same things. "I appoint unto you a kingdom as my father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Luke 22: 29, 30. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."—2 Tim. 2: 12. "He that overcometh "will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron," &c.—Rev. 2: 26, 27. "And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."—Rev. 20: 4. "And we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. 5: 10.

WILL THIS, THE KINGDOM OF MESSIAH EVER END? No, but the forever, or aion, age, will end as other aions have ended before it, and there will be a change at the end of the aion in the constitution of the kingdom, which will not end, but be delivered up to God the Father. "For as all in Adam die, so likewise all in Christ shall be made alive; but every one in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterwards the Christ's at the coming of him. Afterward the end when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God even (the) Father; when he shall have abolished all rule and all authority and power; for it is necessary to reign until all enemies are put under his feet. The last enemy to be destroyed is DEATH." The above is a correct translation of 1 Cor. 15: 22–26 inclusive. Here we find two afterwards, as follows: Christ the first fruits, afterwards the Christ's at his coming. Messiah arose as the first over 1800 years ago, and we have not yet reached the end of the first "afterward," which is to be at his coming; then, there is another "afterward,"—afterward, the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom, &c. Now we have something to mark the length of this last period called "afterward." Commencing with the resurrection of all in Christ at his coming, it ends when the last enemy, death, is destroyed; and that is certainly not until a thousand years after the commencement of his reign with the resurrected saints, for the rest of the dead lived not again until the 1000 years were finished. Death, then, for a thousand years afterward, has dominion over the rest of the dead; after which, John saw all the dead, small and great, stand up to be judged. This certainly must comprehend the rest of the dead. The sea gave up the dead that was in it, and death and hades gave up the dead that were in them. And DEATH and hades were cast into the lake of fire. Here we have the destruction of death brought to view after the end of the 1000 years' reign.

Question II. "If Christ is to reign forever, and the nations of the wicked are to be destroyed, how is Christ to reign over them forever?"

The answer to this has been partially anticipated by the foregoing. The difficulty is in the misconception of the word forever, and likewise the confounding of the endless character of the kingdom, and the term forever, or the aion, as relating to the house of Jacob. The word does not say that he shall reign over mortal nations or the house of Jacob without end, but for the age. But with regard to the Kingdom it says, and His kingdom shall not end. But as shown before, it is to be delivered up to God the Father. Another cause of darkness is in not discriminating between the destruction of existing governments and nations, and the individual subjects, a residue of whom will escape from that destruction, and submit themselves to Messiah's righteous rule. In order that wicked nations and governments may be destroyed, it is not necessary that all the individual subjects of those governments should be destroyed likewise. The Scriptures teach that Messiah is now sitting on the right hand of power; that by and by Jehovah will send the sceptre of his (Messiah's) strength out of Zion; that he may rule in the midst of his enemies. That Jehovah, who is at his right hand, will strike through kings in the day of his wrath, that he will wound the HEAD OVER many countries, (not all the individual subjects.) See Ps. 110; Isa. 66: 15; Zech. 14: 16. Another class of subjects over whom Messiah is to reign with his holy ones for the "AION," is the house of Jacob.

III. Who are the House of Jacob? Evidently not those who have accepted of the calling or invitation held out to the gentiles, neither those who became children by faith under the Levitical order of things, for both these comprise one royal family in Messiah, where there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, but ONE in the anointed Jesus; these are not subjects of, but rulers in Messiah's kingdom. The only house of Jacob, of which I find any mention made in the Scriptures, is the twelve tribes of Jacob or Israel. It is this house of Jacob that is now scattered among the nations,—it is this house of Jacob to whom a part of Messiah's mission pertains—"To bring Jacob again to him," "To raise up the TRIBES OF JACOB," and become his salvation to the Gentiles unto the ends of the earth. See Isa. 49: 1–6. He is to be not only a light to lighten the gentiles, but the glory of God's people Israel; he is to be set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel.—Luke 2: 32–34. These people, the house of Jacob, are those who, gathered from among the nations, to the land of their fathers, the territory of the kingdom of God, will become the subjects or people of the saints of the most High, over whom Messiah and his holy ones will reign for the aion.

M. A.

For the Crisis.

Are We a People?—No. 8.

THE DANGER.

It appears to me that no sincere and conscientious brother can question the evil result of the loose and disconnected manner in which affairs have been conducted with us for the few years of our existence, beginning with the peculiar manner in which we became associated; with the elements which were brought together—and continuing in the carelessness of some; the love of liberty in others, and yet the wickedness of others. Are we not in danger, even with our best efforts to prevent it, of the continuance of the same state? And if it longer continues, we are in danger of going entirely to pieces. Prosperity seems to follow the effort to consolidate. But wisdom is requisite. The vaunts of some as to what might be effected, and what they should effect compared with what they have done, have only backened and hindered the desirable end. Brethren are willing to co-operate, but not willing to submit to dictation.

On the one hand there is danger, by neglect, of losing all we have done for years; on the other, of losing many good brethren by hasty and rash attempts to impose forms of existence and worship upon those who have supposed themselves just as well, if not better, without organization in form.

I will call your attention to a few facts: We have seen churches dwindle and die out, and the field has grown up to waste. It now appears that by a proper arrangement they might have lived, even if they had been less in numbers; and if they could not have supported the services of the house of the Lord alone, could have joined with others; there would at least have been a name left, and that name would have been a witness to the truth. One man anciently was accused of troubling a backslidden Israel; and one man in a place, or one woman, has often kept the light of truth afire. I have known a number of persons, yes, many whose backslidings should be referred to the want of order in the church, for by reason of the absence of order there was soon no church; these persons being too young, or inexperienced, or unstable, to live while the church, in her forms and services, was wanting.

I have known many good, pious brethren and sisters go away from us and join other churches, simply for the unfortunate manner of our being and procedure. I have known many good ministers leave us on the same account, and some have left the work who have not left us. The cry of "backsliding" and "giving up the faith," is absurd; it comes with an exceedingly ill grace; it is quite too late, as accounting for the course taken by brethren in leaving us. The danger is that other instances will occur in which a small church may become extinct, and a large one become much smaller; that other good, solid and responsible men and women, to say nothing of the lighter material, may leave—and all for want of order in the house of God.

If it is said that difficulties in given instances arose from the misconduct of individuals, it may be said that order would have cured the evil; and if in its operation it had taken the life of the church, it would have deceased at its post, and so have performed its mission. I speak of the prospect as showing danger—from what I know. I speak advisedly. The danger looms up in our onward pathway, for we move on. The same elemental energies, with the same relative action, must produce the same consequences, with intenser action, an intensified sequence.

Men and women, young persons and old ones, with ministers in good repute, and acceptable to all the churches, will, notwithstanding we have the truth upon immortality, and the coming of Christ, the kingdom of glory, spiritualism, &c., leave ere long! I hope not. It may be prevented. But you are warned. The danger increases by delay. Let every church throw itself into such a position, so much order, that it may exercise self-control. A simple covenant will do that; all after is optional. Do not hesitate through fear,

"For my single self,
I had as lief not be—
As be, and live in fear
Of such a thing as I myself."

Let us awake in earnest to duty. Then may our bark, escaping the shoals and rocks of a difficult bay, come proudly up at last.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Brother and Sister.

Whom should we address thus? Is it the Jew, the Roman, the Mormon? Is it all or any of the sects? Any who have merely "named the name of Christ?" Is it to the "blind leaders of the blind?" Say, is it to every one in general, and no one in particular? I've thought the matter over.

Says one, "I love any one that loves God." "If you love me, keep my commandments." What commandments? "Be ye separated" from the world and the advocates of error,—be baptized—not sprinkled. Observe the "all things" given by inspiration. Did Christ call unbelievers, or people who were not baptized, brethren? Are you so much more charitable—is your love so much purer that you love the enemies of God's word? Were I intending to join any of these parties, I'd choose one as soon as another. All have the self same "sandy" foundation. Ye who give the right hand of fellowship to many denominations, why do you exclude the Romanists? Have they not the same error, only it is magnified by tradition? Is one error worse than another? Such glaring error I cannot put along side of truth. It is not a fit companion.

And now what do you think of fellowshiping with Spiritualism? "This is ridiculous." Well, but it is only immortal soulism in a superlative degree. If you countenance error, you must expect to be friendly with all its connections. Spiritualism—a fruit of error—is of satan. If you exercise your "true charity" here, you are counted as lost to all that is holy. "O, I don't mean to have anything to do with this crazy party." Well, but you are doing with, or for them. You are helping to keep their foundation in good repair, if you don't stand upon it. You are so loving and kind that you will hold up the braces with your "right hand," so that they may exist, while you bid them "God speed."

Do not mistake; I don't want you to be cold and unkind to the people, but oh, do not for a moment countenance their doctrines. Utterly reject each sentiment contrary to the Bible. And even this must not be done in a harsh, inhuman mode. Be gentle and kind, but not too kind—not kind enough to turn from the "narrow path" of God's word. I don't care how much you may love an heathen, but take special care and not fall in with his views of God, nor worship his idols. Neither pat him on the shoulder, and tell him to "go on if he thinks he's right," just as though there could be two "right" ways.

Wherever I can go, whoever I can associate with, and still keep up the flag of Truth, and keep my lighted lamp out from "under a bushel," I'll go, but not to bend down and make obeisance to error.

MARIA MATTHEWS.

New Glasgow, C. E.

☞ With the same height of desire thou hast sinned, with the like depth of sorrow thou must repent; thou that hast sinned to-day, defer not thy repentance till to-morrow; he that hath promised pardon to thy repentance, hath not promised life till thou repent.—Quarles.

☞ True courage is the result of reasoning. A brave mind is always impregnable. Resolution lies more in the head than in the veins, and a just sense of honor and of infamy, of duty and of religion, will carry us further than all the force of mechanism.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 157. BOSTON, MASS., SEPTEMBER 8, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 1.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I WANT TO BE LIKE JESUS.

I want to be like Jesus,
Of meek and quiet heart;
Like him be ever seeking
In others' woes a part.

Like him be ever striving
Some word of cheer to speak,
Some fainting heart to strengthen,
And the good of others seek.

I want to be like Jesus,
Of kind and gentle speech,
His precepts and examples
By actions kind to teach.

Though sorrows round me gather,
While treading life's rough way,
I'll ask him still to guide me
In his own kind gentle way.

Oh! I want to see my Savior
Come back to earth again,
And make his saints immortal,
And take them home to reign.

SUSAN A. ISBELL.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Eld. S. S. Brewer.

The sun is now casting his lengthened shadows o'er the face of nature, proclaiming the close of day. One more day of my pilgrimage is numbered. But thanks, praise and adoration to my Father in heaven, I am enabled to exclaim, in view of his goodness and mercy to me—

While in this body pent,
Absent from thee I roam,
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent,
A day's march nearer home.

On Saturday last I took leave of my family to strive for a short time to enjoy the same privilege that Paul and Barnabas speak of in Acts 15: 36. On my way I met Bro. E. Burnham and F. H. Berick; and truly the language of Prov. 27: 17, was verified in my heart. O how dear to me is the presence and friendship of those with whom I have been a feeble associate in the proclamation of the last glorious message to a sleepy church and a perishing world.

On Lord's day, August 8th, once more I endeavored to preach the word to the church in Salem, Mass., worshiping in Union street. Seldom, if ever, have I enjoyed more of the presence of the blessed Comforter than while I was recommending this Gospel of the Kingdom to those present on each occasion that day and evening. I yet feel the sweet, melting, moving power of the glorious gospel of the Son of God entwining around the tendrils of my poor heart, causing it to pulsate in anxious desire for a strict conformity to the divine will.

O what a power is embodied in the new covenant! He is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him; seeing he ever liveth to make intercession. Amen. He shall be called Jesus, for he shall save HIS PEOPLE FROM THEIR SINS. Not in them. There is much to be done, and much to be left undone, by his people. Think of that.

Said a person to me: Do you think God wants his people to see alike? To be sure I do. And for proof I cited him to the following passages: John 17: 11–24. There is unity in all essentials. There is oneness in the Spirit. 1 Cor. 6: 17; 12: 13; Phil. 1: 27; Eph. 4: 3, 4. One hope. Eph. 4: 4; Col. 1: 23. There is but one faith. Eph. 4: 5. That is the faith of God. Rom. 3: 3; Phil. 1: 27; Acts 14: 22. There should be one mind. 1 Cor. 1: 10; Phil. 2: 1, 2; 1 Peter 3: 8. Divisions are the fruit of a carnal heart. See 1 Cor. 3: 1–5. Lastly, how came divisions? Read it in Acts 20: 28–31.

Well, but I can't see how we can all be united. I can. How is it possible to be done? I will tell you. It could be very easily accomplished. Just gather up all the men-made creeds, confessions, disciplines and articles of human machinery, and do as those we read of in Acts 19: 19. I do think they would give more light in that way than in the manner they are used at the present time. And then the 20th verse, in our day, would be fulfilled. Yes, let all that profess to love Jesus take his word, and make it their rule of faith and practice; that would bring all upon one common platform, and destroy the legion of nick-names for denominational pride and popularity. Most truly has the pen of inspiration graven it on the divine statute book. Hear it, ye sectarian bigots, ye narrow minded pharisees, laced so tight in corsets of your church-isms, that you can't draw a long breath in the presence of a Bibleite, for fear of being contaminated. Now let the martyred Apostle take the stand. "All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Well, dearly beloved friends of Jesus, we shall soon see him and be made like him; one great family; one kingdom; one great citadel of earth and sky; one king; and he shall sit on the throne of his glory, we to spend one eternal age. How often, in my moments of ecstasies, while I antedate the advent of our once injured and crucified King, I sigh and weep over his absence, and long and watch for his coming. O, how sad the earth appears! The object of my affections is hid from my sight. The true child of God weeps over the havoc made among the tender lambs of their Shepherd, by the legion of emissaries transformed into angels of light. Death, the gloomy king of terrors, sways his sceptre of indiscriminate ravages, and tears away our dearest friends. The widow moans in plaintive wail o'er the partner of her joys, and as she folds her tender offspring near to her heart, they mingle their scalding tears in one pulsation of woe. And from the four winds, goes up to God continually, by day and night, the cries of the oppressed. O, ye weepers, 'neath the tyrant's yoke, your long, long dark night is almost past! Though God has borne long, he will soon make inquisition for long forgotten wrongs. The pent up wrath of six thousand years is now about to unsheath the sword of vengeance. He is coming with his fan in his hand; he will thoroughly purge his floor; he will gather his wheat into his garner, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire; or, as the Syriac reads: Fire suffered to burn up and consume what is left. Who doubts that fire will consume chaff? No one. O, what an idea of preservation that would be—burn up chaff in order to preserve it! Solemn and awful as it may seem, yet it is fixed in the mind of God: all the wicked will God destroy. Then will be brought to pass the saying, as it is written: "Every creature which is in heaven and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing and honor, and glory and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever."

O, break, break, eternal morn! Part, ye intervening skies! Send immortality among the monumental beds! Let the dark, deep, unfathomable caves of old ocean give up thy saints! O, ye that desire life, hunger, thirst, watch, pray for it. There are many things to be left undone, and many things to be done, in order, through God's abounding grace, to obtain it. God bless you, dear children. O, live, live religion, every day, every hour, every moment. Then it will be like a well of water springing up unto eternal life. O, glory, glory, to God! I expect soon to be where the earth shall be filled with his glory as the waters cover the sea. Then it will be above us, beneath us, around us. O, praise the Lord, O my soul; and let everything that hath breath praise the Lord. Amen and Amen.

S. S. BREWER.

Fairhaven, Mass.

☞ Affectation in any part of our carriage is lighting up a candle to our defects, and never fails to make us be taken notice of, either as wanting sense or wanting sincerity.

☞ The church is out of temper when charity grows cold and zeal hot.

For the Crisis.

Answer to the Question of C. F., IN NUMBER XVII.

FRIEND GRANT:—Having seen the above named question in the Crisis addressed, as I supposed, to persons of like faith as myself, and taking it for granted that light with regard to the matter is desired, I would offer the following reply.

That the saints (or holy ones) are to be rulers, and not subjects, in the kingdom of God, is most plainly taught in the Bible. In Exodus, 19: 5, 6, we find that Jehovah, through Moses, taught the Israelites, if they would be obedient to his law, they should become "a kingdom of priests;" or, in other words, a priesthood possessing regal authority. They were disobedient, and finally rejected Messiah, who told them the kingdom of God should be taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.—Matt. 21: 43. And the apostle Peter informs us who that people are: "But ye," says he, writing to brethren of like precious faith with himself, "are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation," &c.—1 Pet. 2: 9. The mission of the gospel is not for the preparation of immortal souls for kingdoms beyond the skies; but a calling or invitation held out to gentiles for them to become members of this royal family, to be the future rulers and administrators of the government, throughout the habitable world. See Eph. 3: 4; Isa. 32: 1. Those who accept this one hope to which gentiles are invited, and are obedient to the one faith, become children, (or sons of God,) by faith in Jesus Messiah.—Gal. 3: 26. If they are children (or sons of God) then are they heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Messiah.—Rom. 8: 17. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3: 29. Now I think this fact is made sufficiently plain, that all faithful ones, or children by faith, are JOINT HEIRS with Jesus Christ, i. e. heirs to the same things Jesus is heir to. And what are they? Answer: By virtue of a covenant made by Jehovah with Abraham, and one with David, Jesus, Messiah, is heir to the kingdom and throne of David, in that land once promised to Abraham when possessed by certain idolatrous nations specified by name, the territory of which was bounded by the river of Egypt and the great river, the river Euphrates; the throne of which kingdom was acknowledged to be Jehovah's. See 1 Chron. 29: 23. Together with his kingdom he is heir to a dominion under the whole heaven, from the river to the ends of the earth, and all kings shall fall down before him, and all nations shall serve him. Upon the throne of David he is to sit, and upon his kingdom to order it and increase it with judgment and justice from henceforth even for the age. The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for the age; and his kingdom shall not end. See Gen. 13: 13–18; 15: 18–21; and 17: 7, 8. 2 Sam. 7: 11–17; Ps. 72; Ps. 2: 7, 8, 9; Isa. 9: 6, 7; Luke 1: 31–33. His faithful ones are heirs to the same things. "I appoint unto you a kingdom as my father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Luke 22: 29, 30. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."—2 Tim. 2: 12. "He that overcometh will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron," &c.—Rev. 2: 26, 27. "And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."—Rev. 20: 4. "And we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. 5: 10.

WILL THIS, THE KINGDOM OF MESSIAH, EVER END? No, but the forever, or aion, age, will end as other aions have ended before it, and there will be a change at the end of the aion in the constitution of the kingdom, which will not end, but be delivered up to God the Father. "For as all in Adam die, so likewise all in Christ shall be made alive; but every one in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterwards the Christ's at the coming of him. Afterward the end when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God even (the) Father; when he shall have abolished all rule and all authority and power; for it is necessary he reign until all enemies are put under his feet. The last enemy to be destroyed is DEATH." The above is a correct translation of 1 Cor. 15: 22–26 inclusive. Here we find two afterwards, as follows: Christ the first fruits, afterwards the Christ's at his coming. Messiah arose as the first over 1800 years ago, and we have not yet reached the end of the first "afterward," which is to be at his coming; then, there is another "afterward,"—afterward, the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom, &c. Now we have something to mark the length of this last period called "afterward." Commencing with the resurrection of all in Christ at his coming, it ends when the last enemy, death, is destroyed; and that is certainly not until a thousand years after the commencement of his reign with the resurrected saints, for the rest of the dead lived not again until the 1000 years were finished. Death, then, for a thousand years afterward, has dominion over the rest of the dead; after which, John saw all the dead, small and great, stand up to be judged. This certainly must comprehend the rest of the dead. The sea gave up the dead that was in it, and death and hades gave up the dead that were in them. And DEATH and hades were cast into the lake of fire. Here we have the destruction of death brought to view after the end of the 1000 years' reign.

Question II. "If Christ is to reign forever, and the nations of the wicked are to be destroyed, how is Christ to reign over them forever?"

The answer to this has been partially anticipated by the foregoing. The difficulty is in the misconception of the word forever, and likewise the confounding of the endless character of the kingdom, and the term forever, or the aion, as relating to the house of Jacob. The word does not say that he shall reign over mortal nations or the house of Jacob without end, but for the age. But with regard to the Kingdom it says, and His kingdom shall not end. But as shown before, it is to be delivered up to God the Father. Another cause of darkness is in not discriminating between the destruction of existing governments and nations, and the individual subjects, a residue of whom will escape from that destruction, and submit themselves to Messiah's righteous rule. In order that wicked nations and governments may be destroyed, it is not necessary that all the individual subjects of those governments should be destroyed likewise. The Scriptures teach that Messiah is now sitting on the right hand of power; that by and by Jehovah will send the sceptre of his (Messiah's) strength out of Zion; that he may rule in the midst of his enemies. That Jehovah, who is at his right hand, will strike through kings in the day of his wrath, that he will wound the HEAD OVER many countries, (not all the individual subjects.) See Ps. 110; Isa. 66: 15; Zech. 14: 16. Another class of subjects over whom Messiah is to reign with his holy ones for the "AION," is the house of Jacob.

III. Who are the House of Jacob? Evidently not those who have accepted of the calling or invitation held out to the gentiles, neither those who became children by faith under the Levitical order of things, for both these comprise one royal family in Messiah, where there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, but ONE in the anointed Jesus; these are not subjects of, but rulers in Messiah's kingdom. The only house of Jacob, of which I find any mention made in the Scriptures, is the twelve tribes of Jacob or Israel. It is this house of Jacob that is now scattered among the nations,—it is this house of Jacob to whom a part of Messiah's mission pertains—"To bring Jacob again to him," "To raise up the TRIBES OF JACOB," and become his salvation to the Gentiles unto the ends of the earth. See Isa. 49: 1–6. He is to be not only a light to lighten the gentiles, but the glory of God's people Israel; he is to be set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel.—Luke 2: 32–34. These people, the house of Jacob, are those who, gathered from among the nations, to the land of their fathers, the territory of the kingdom of God, will become the subjects or people of the saints of the most High, over whom Messiah and his holy ones will reign for the aion.

M. A.

For the Crisis.

Are We a People?—No. 8.

THE DANGER.

It appears to me that no sincere and conscientious brother can question the evil result of the loose and disconnected manner in which affairs have been conducted with us for the few years of our existence, beginning with the peculiar manner in which we became associated; with the elements which were brought together—and continuing in the carelessness of some; the love of liberty in others, and yet the wickedness of others. Are we not in danger, even with our best efforts to prevent it, of the continuance of the same state? And if it longer continues, we are in danger of going entirely to pieces. Prosperity seems to follow the effort to consolidate. But wisdom is requisite. The vaunts of some as to what might be effected, and what they should effect compared with what they have done, have only backened and hindered the desirable end. Brethren are willing to co-operate, but not willing to submit to dictation.

On the one hand there is danger, by neglect, of losing all we have done for years; on the other, of losing many good brethren by hasty and rash attempts to impose forms of existence and worship upon those who have supposed themselves just as well, if not better, without organization in form.

I will call your attention to a few facts: We have seen churches dwindle and die out, and the field has grown up to waste. It now appears that by a proper arrangement they might have lived, even if they had been less in numbers; and if they could not have supported the services of the house of the Lord alone, could have joined with others; there would at least have been a name left, and that name would have been a witness to the truth. One man anciently was accused of troubling a backslidden Israel; and one man in a place, or one woman, has often kept the light of truth afire. I have known a number of persons, yes, many whose backslidings should be referred to the want of order in the church, for by reason of the absence of order there was soon no church; these persons being too young, or inexperienced, or unstable, to live while the church, in her forms and services, was wanting.

I have known many good, pious brethren and sisters go away from us and join other churches, simply for the unfortunate manner of our being and procedure. I have known many good ministers leave us on the same account, and some have left the work who have not left us. The cry of "backsliding" and "giving up the faith," is absurd; it comes with an exceedingly ill grace; it is quite too late, as accounting for the course taken by brethren in leaving us. The danger is that other instances will occur in which a small church may become extinct, and a large one become much smaller; that other good, solid and responsible men and women, to say nothing of the lighter material, may leave—and all for want of order in the house of God.

If it is said that difficulties in given instances arose from the misconduct of individuals, it may be said that order would have cured the evil; and if in its operation it had taken the life of the church, it would have deceased at its post, and so have performed its mission. I speak of the prospect as showing danger—from what I know. I speak advisedly. The danger looms up in our onward pathway, for we move on. The same elemental energies, with the same relative action, must produce the same consequences, with intenser action, an intensified sequence.

Men and women, young persons and old ones, with ministers in good repute, and acceptable to all the churches, will, notwithstanding we have the truth upon immortality, and the coming of Christ, the kingdom of glory, spiritualism, &c., leave ere long! I hope not. It may be prevented. But you are warned. The danger increases by delay. Let every church throw itself into such a position, so much order, that it may exercise self-control. A simple covenant will do that; all after is optional. Do not hesitate through fear.

"For my single self,
I had as lief not be—
As be, and live in fear
Of such a thing as I myself!"

Let us awake in earnest to duty. Then may our bark, escaping the shoals and rocks of a difficult bay, come proudly up at last.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Brother and Sister.

Whom should we address thus? Is it the Jew, the Roman, the Mormon? Is it all or any of the sects? Any who have merely "named the name of Christ?" Is it to the "blind leaders of the blind?" Say, is it to every one in general, and no one in particular? I've thought the matter over.

Says one, "I love any one that loves God." "If you love me, keep my commandments." What commandments? "Be ye separated" from the world and the advocates of error,—be baptized—not sprinkled. Observe the "all things" given by inspiration. Did Christ call unbelievers, or people who were not baptized, brethren? Are you so much more charitable—is your love so much purer that you love the enemies of God's word? Were I intending to join any of these parties, I'd choose one as soon as another. All have the self same "sandy" foundation. Ye who give the right hand of fellowship to many denominations, why do you exclude the Romanists? Have they not the same error, only it is magnified by tradition? Is one error worse than another? Such glaring error I cannot put along side of truth. It is not a fit companion.

And now what do you think of fellowshiping with Spiritualism? "This is ridiculous." Well, but it is only immortal soulism in a superlative degree. If you countenance error, you must expect to be friendly with all its connections. Spiritualism—a fruit of error—is of satan. If you exercise your "true charity" here, you are counted as lost to all that is holy. "O, I don't mean to have anything to do with this crazy party." Well, but you are doing with, or for them. You are helping to keep their foundation in good repair, if you don't stand upon it. You are so loving and kind that you will hold up the braces with your "right hand," so that they may exist, while you bid them "God speed."

Do not mistake; I don't want you to be cold and unkind to the people, but oh, do not for a moment countenance their doctrines. Utterly reject each sentiment contrary to the Bible. And even this must not be done in a harsh, inhuman mode. Be gentle and kind, but not too kind—not kind enough to turn from the "narrow path" of God's word. I don't care how much you may love an heathen, but take special care and not fall in with his views of God, nor worship his idols. Neither pat him on the shoulder, and tell him to "go on if he thinks he's right," just as though there could be two "right" ways.

Wherever I can go, whoever I can associate with, and still keep up the flag of Truth, and keep my lighted lamp out from "under a bushel," I'll go, but not to bend down and make obeisance to error.

MARIA MATTHEWS.

New Glasgow, C. E.

☞ With the same height of desire thou hast sinned, with the like depth of sorrow thou must repent; thou that hast sinned to-day, defer not thy repentance till to-morrow; he that hath promised pardon to thy repentance, hath not promised [illegible] repent.—Quarles.

☞ True courage is the result of reasoning. A brave mind is always impregnable. Resolution lies more in the head than in the veins, and a just sense of honor and of infamy, of duty and of religion, will carry us further than all the force of mechanism.

From Bro. B. P. Manning.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I feel like writing a few lines for the encouragement of the wayfaring children of God in this time of trial, which is so severe upon the saints. But, praise the good Lord, he has promised to take good care of the children. God says, in Rev. 3: 10, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." Well, dear brethren and sisters, I do believe it has commenced. I believe the devil is doing up his last work. O, what a time we are living in! It does seem that Spiritualism will gain the day throughout the wide world; it is making rapid strides in this part of the world. It is the last snare of the devil to deceive the people; but he cannot deceive the elect of God. Peter says, in his second epistle, second chapter, first verse: "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of."

Again, in 2 Tim. 3: 13: "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Again, in 1 Tim. 4: 3—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron." This, to me, is truth, and I feel like fighting my way through to the kingdom of our God. Our weapons are not carnal, but mighty, through God, to the pulling down of the strong holds of satan.

I praise the Lord for what he has done for me. I do not fear what men can say or do. I am determined to go through to the kindom, let what will come; for they that put their trust in God shall be like Mount Sion, that cannot be removed. Bless the Lord, O my soul. Brethren, hold on a little longer, and the Lord will come and will not tarry. Now is the time to live by faith. If ever there was a time that the church was in danger, it is now. Pray for me, that my faith fail not.

B. P. Manning.

Goffstown, N. H.

From Sr. M. L. Pratt.

Bro. Grant:—We are yet striving to obtain the crown of glory when the Chief Shepherd shall appear.

"Lonely and weary, by sorrows oppressed,
Onward I hasten, with longings for rest;
Bidding adieu to the world and its pride,
Hoping to dwell by Emmanuel's side."

These are my feelings whilst traveling through this vale of tears. I have been called to leave friends and home, and come to this Western world; and while I feel it to be a great trial to part with friends, and the dear native spot I have so long called home, yet if it is the will of God so to be, I hope to ever maintain a calm and contented frame of mind, knowing that all things work for good to those who love God; and he can in all places give answer to prayer. I am often led to exclaim, O home, sweet home! when shall I sweetly rest at home? when shall friends meet to part no more? when will our tears be wiped away by the soft hand of Jesus? O, when will this longing, fainting, sorrowing, aching heart find repose? Here trials thick and deep abound; temptations and fiery billows threatening to engulf me forever. Never did I have such fierce temptations, such fiery trials, as now; it seems as if satan was trying his utmost to destroy me, and I often pray in the anguish of my soul, "Lord, save, or I perish." I feel more than ever like saying, with John in the isle of Patmos, "Come, Lord Jesus, and comequickly." I want to see an end to sorrow.

"When will the tedious night be gone?
When will our Lord appear?
Our fond desires would pray him down,
Our love embrace him here."

This is the language of every christian. I can say from experience, there is no true pleasure, no solid joy, no lasting peace, only in obeying God. Among all the other commands, we are exhorted to wait for his Son from heaven; to look for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior; and a crown is laid up for those who love his appearing; and to those who look for him, shall he appear the second time, without sin unto salvation. O, I wish every one could see the beauty of the gospel of Christ, in the plan of redemption. How noble! how glorious! how worthy of our attention and interest!

I am now deprived of meeting with those who proclaim the second coming of Christ and I prize the Crisis more highly than ever. I desire the prayers of all the dear saints, that I may be enabled to endure to the end, and have a home in that happy land where we no more shall take the parting hand or shed the farewell tear.

Yours in love,
Mary L. Pratt.

[illegible], Wis., Aug. [illegible], 1858.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—Through the manifold goodness of our heavenly Father, I, in company with my dear wife, have been blessed with the privilege of attending the Grove Meeting, at Pine Creek, Ind. This meeting was one of the best we ever enjoyed. Peace seemed to pervade every breast, and not a discordant note was thrown in to disturb our harmony and attachment for each other during the whole meeting, although there exist differences of opinion among the brethren on some points, yet no one had a disposition to make prominent any question that was calculated to stir up strife or produce discord. If any one conversed with another about their differences it was done with meekness and forbearance, considering their honesty of purpose—their real desire to know and understand the divine record as far as possible, and I could but render praise to God with my whole heart to see so much regard for each other's feelings; it was truly praiseworthy, and just as it should be. Bless the Lord.

The ministers present who preached the word of Life, were Brn. French, Andrews, Chaplin, Clark, Mansfield and wife, Seymour and wife. Each one of the ministers was ready to go forth—and at any time and preach to dying men; for their souls were full of truth and love; and I rejoice to say there was none of that spirit among us that desires to lord it over each other, or over God's heritage. If such an influence had been discovered, all present undoubtedly would have rebuked the disease at once. May the church ever be delivered from such turbulent spirits.

About sixty baptized believers were present from various parts of the country, who rejoiced in prospect of speedy deliverance, and in anticipation of soon participating in all the joys of the kingdom of God, by the return of Christ, the promised Messiah. In short, the singing was good, because it was elevating; the praying was good, because it brought answers of peace; the exhortations were good, because they warmed and cheered our hearts; the preaching was good, because it pointed us to the Son of God, the only source of redemption and glory in the kingdom of God; the communion was sweet, because it brought to fresh recollection the agony of Christ in the garden, his death upon the cross, his resurrection from the grave, his ascension to heaven, and the sure promise of his return to be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe. The good influence shed upon the congregations during the meeting, must and will accomplish some good; for many seemed to be affected by the truth which flowed so fervently from the embassadors of Christ. Oh, may God grant that the good seed soon may spring up and bear thirty, sixty, or even an hundred fold!

At the close of our meeting on Saturday afternoon, a Spiritualist introduced himself and his faith to the brethren, and some considerable conversation passed between them, which conversation opened the way for the banner of truth to be unfurled on that subject on Lord's day. Consequently, by request, Mrs. Seymour took the stand in the morning, and addressed a very large audience (among whom were many Spiritualists) from these words: "To the law and the testimony, if they (familiar spirits) speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." She gave a description of Spiritualism in its various aspects, from the days of king Saul to the present day, and so uncapped that hole of iniquity, that God dishonoring, heaven daring, Bible hating, soul benumbing influence, that all might see that it was literally the works of the devil and demoniacal spirits. In the afternoon, Sister Mansfield took the stand, and preached on the fulfillment of prophecy; and in closing up brought in the prophecies in relation to Spiritualism, as the last great sign and development previous to the judgment; and if the ardor of Spiritualism was not materially and effectually cooled, then I misjudge. Oh, may God preserve the church from that demoralizing and damnable influence.

Before concluding, I would say that many, many, thanks are due to the dear friends and brethren for their hospitality and kindness to us during our sojourn with them. May the great God, who sees and remembers all acts of benevolence, richly reward them all in the kingdom of God, is my prayer.

A. N. Seymour.

Aug. 17th, 1858.

☞ Harbinger please copy.

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT ..... EDITOR.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 8, 1858.

Office....167 Hanover street.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

The great feast of tabernacles is past, and, doubtless, our readers who were not present are anxious to know the results. Well, we have had a good meeting, and many of those who remained to its close could not find language to express their gratitude to our heavenly Father for the blessings they had received. We could say of a truth, that the Spirit of the Lord was in our midst. Sinners were converted and backsliders reclaimed, while saints and angels rejoiced at the sight.

The meeting was very pleasantly located on the banks of the Chickopee river, overlooking an extensive landscape of delightful scenery, interspersed with fine farms, beautiful groves, hills and vales, through which the chariots of Nahum "run like the lightnings," passing at the base of the Campmeeting hill, with their earthquake-like rumbling noise, causing the very earth to tremble at their presence. The ground has been much improved under the super vision of the committee of arrangements, so that it is now fitted up the best of any camp ground that we have seen. There were twenty-seven tents besides the boarding tent, but there were not enough to accommodate all that wished to stay on the ground.

Monday evening, we had a good prayer meeting, well calculated to strengthen the weary pilgrims.

Tuesday, A. M.—Bro. Salmon Cook, from Springfield, Vt., preached in the Boston tent, giving strong evidences that we are in the very last days of the history of this world. It was food adapted to the wants of the church at the present time. This Bro. was ordained during the Campmeeting and set apart to the ministry. We trust he will be a useful servant in the vineyard of the Lord. We hope the church will see that he is sustained.

Tuesday, P. M.—Bro. Ira Morgan, from Cheshire, Ct., preached the first sermon from the stand, showing that the Lord is now trying the righteous and preparing them for his coming and kingdom. The discourse was calculated to strengthen the saints and awaken the sinner to a sense of his danger.

Tuesday evening, we listened to an able discourse from Bro. Albert Fox, Cold Spring, Mass., on the power of the gospel. Infidel arguments were met and disposed of in a workman-like manner, while it was shown most plainly that the gospel does for man all that it proposes to do, in this life; and, hence, we may safely conclude that it will not fail to provide for us what it proposes for the world to come.

Wednesday morning, Bro. A. Ross, Lowell, Mass., preached a very instructive and practical sermon, showing the importance of having all our powers consecrated to the Lord, and the glorious results that will follow.

Wednesday, P. M.—Bro. W. S. Campbell, New Britain, Ct., preached a weighty sermon on the resurrection of the dead, showing from the Scriptures, that we can have no hope of a future existence if the dead rise not. It was a sermon for the times, and will probably be given to the readers of the Crisis.

Wednesday evening, we listened to a discourse from Bro. Geo. Burnham, showing the importance of taking heed how we hear, as well as what we hear. The sermon was seasonable, and profitable.

Thursday, A. M.—Bro. J. V. Himes, Boston, preached a soul-stirring sermon on Assurance, that was well calculated to strengthen the weak and comfort the feeble-minded. It was just what the saints needed for these times of trial.

Thursday, P. M.—Bro. H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y., preached a discourse showing how we should fish to catch men, pointing out in a lively manner, the errors of many who pretend to be "fishers of men," contrasting their course with that of Christ and the apostles. At the close of his discourse, Bro. S. Cook, Springfield, Vt.; C. B. Turner, Syracuse, N. Y.; M. W. Corliss, Lowell, Mass., and C. H. Perkins, Boston, were ordained for the work of the ministry. The exercises were solemn and interesting. The charge was given by Bro. Hastings. We are rejoiced to see these young men sanctifying themselves to the Lord for the purpose of trying to save perishing sinners. Let the churches do what they can to sustain them. They will need your sympathies, counsel and prayers. We know that the harvest is great and the laborers are few, and for this reason, we have been praying the Lord to send out more to preach the word. Let us be thankful, and receive them as his messengers. The young preacher labors under many discouragements, therefore let us do all we can to strengthen such in the great work in which they are engaged. Do not w tch them with a critic's eye, and look upon them with a cold frown, if they chance to make a mistake in doctrine or practice, but with a father's kindness, tell them alone, in the most gentle manner, of their misstep, and show them in every possible way, that you are interested in helping them forward in their arduous labors.

Thursday evening.—Bro. S. S. Brewer, Fairhaven, Mass., preached on the scattering "the power of the holy people," showing that it is the gospel which is to be scattered, and that we are near the end of this dispensation. Bro. Mathewson followed with an earnest and powerful exhortation.

Friday, A. M.—Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., spoke on the trials and sufferings in this life, as compared with the glory that is to be enjoyed in the world to come, showing that our "light afflictions" are not worth mentioning. The discourse was well calculated to encourage and strengthen the children of the Lord.

Friday, P. M.—Bro. F. H. Berick, Salem, Mass., preached on the importance of truth, and the plan of salvation, in connection with the mercy of God in the wonderful arrangement for saving men.

Friday evening.—Bro. H. Pratt, Wales, Mass., preached a discourse on the importance of believing the truth, and the consequences of rejecting it.

Saturday morning.—Bro. O. R. Fassett, Westboro, Mass., presented interesting facts in connection with the great revival that has been spreading over the world during the last few months, showing most clearly that it is the Lord's peculiar work, in fulfillment of prophecy, and that we are near the end of this dispensation.

Saturday, P. M. was somewhat rainy, and we had preaching in three tents, by Brn. J. Hemenway, L. Boutell and Bro. Nokake, a colored brother, from R. I. We listened to Bro. Hemenway, who showed us how easy it is to float downward to destruction, and the importance of coming out from the world and being separate, if we would be saved. We learned that all the sermons were very interesting and profitable.

Saturday evening Sr. Fenn preached in the Boston tent, which was crowded to its utmost capacity. We have seldom heard a discourse so deeply practical and more effective in its results. It was followed by one of the best social meetings we ever enjoyed. We learned in the morning that all the evening meetings were deeply interesting, and that numbers were set into gospel liberty.

Lord's day morning, at 8 o'clock, we met for a love feast in front of the stand. In about one hour and twenty minutes, one hundred and sixty-three testified to the reality of the christian religion. It was a feast indeed. It was thought to be the best we ever enjoyed. Some thirty or forty came forward for prayers, and many were blessed.

[Concluded next week.]

Gleanings.

The following extracts are from Dr. Lardner's great work on the credibility and harmony of the Scriptures.

He says the Pharisees believed "that there is an immortal power in souls, and that under the earth there are rewards and punishments. . . . They believe every soul immortal, but that the soul of the good only passes into another body."

We do not wonder the Savior said, "Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees," when referring to their doctrine.

Josephus believed that "the soul is immortal, being a portion of God, and housed in bodies."—Lard., vol. 1, p. 126–7.

If the soul is a part of God, then a part of God sins and will die; for the Bible declares, "The soul that sinneth, it shall DIE." Shall we adopt the philosophy of Josephus, a man who rejected our Savior? Yet many seem to think the theology of Josephus is very good, and will go to him for proof of their doctrines. As the soul is said to be "the real man," the accountable part, to be rewarded or punished, that which prompts all action; is it not a little strange, that "a portion of God" should get mad and fight with another "portion of God," and that these portions of God should get drunk and sleep in the ditch, and that God will finally burn up and destroy these portions of himself; or, if popular theology is true, as well as the teaching of Josephus, torment a portion of himself to all eternity?

In speaking of the deceiver and the deceived in the garden of Eden, Dr. Lardner says, "This Eve, because she was deceived by the serpent—the evil demon, who is called Satan, who then spoke to her BY the serpent, does not cease to accuse; this demon is also called the dragon."—Lard., vol. 2, p. 214.

This makes the serpent the first medium; but now, men and women consent to be his mediums, through whom he continues to deceive our race and propagate his great lie, spoken to our first parents, when he said, "ye shall not surely die;" or, in other words, you have an immortal soul that will never die, and this soul is a "portion of God," hence ye are Gods. The demons are teaching the same doctrine now that was taught to Eve in paradise, and the greater portion of the community are turning from the truth to the fables of these deceivers. God's word is rejected and the devil's lies believed.

For the Crisis.

Morning Meeting.

The meeting at the Old South Chapel is kept up with interest, and is generally crowded. It is very evident that much good has been done by its continuance so long. Many answers to prayers, here presented, have been confirmed from time to time.

This morning a stranger said he was there a few months since, and heard a few quotations from Scripture by Dr. Jenks, one of which was, "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault," &c. He said on going to his hotel he saw a man who was a member of a church but had some difficulty with a brother, and he was writing a letter of reconciliation to him. He had also been to the meeting and heard the word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword. I think the reading of the word of God, and quotations from it, is too much neglected in some meetings for prayer; not long chapters, but a few words from some of the prophets or apostles would often tell more in a meeting than many long speeches which we often hear and which serve rather to chill than to give life to it. I once attended a meeting where there was considerable backwardness in speaking. The pastor introduced a plan to get them into the work. It was, that every one should repeat a verse or more from the word of God. The result was that the interest of the meeting was increased, and a number of conversions followed; and one in particular dated his convictions from quotations he heard in the meeting.

If there ever was a time when the friends of Jesus and his word should stand up in their defence, it is in these days of mysticism and spiritualism, when men are casting off fear and restraining prayer. Oh! for the wisdom of Solomon, the faith of Elijah, the courage of Paul, the zeal of Peter, the meekness of Moses, the sympathy of Jeremiah; and above all, the spirit of our blessed Master, to equip us for the battle we must wage with this iniquity that is coming in like a flood, and threatening to overflow and drown the fruits of the laborers in the vineyard. Awake, ye servants of God, and put on the armor of righteousness and go forth in his strength, wielding the sword with power from on high, and the tall sons of Anak, which may appear terrible, shall quail and fly from the field a vanquished foe. The truth is mighty through God to the pulling down of the strong holds. Amen.

Yours, &c.

D. N. Smith.

Boston, Aug. 19.

P. S. Aug. 20. Dr. Jenks this morning made some explanation of the quotations of scripture. He said a few years since, Dr. Poor, a missionary to Ceylon, (now dead) left as a legacy to the meeting—three passages of scripture. One was,—"If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me." Another,—"Whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Another, the one referred to,—"If thy brother trespass against thee," &c. These have often been referred to in the meeting, and no doubt much good has been the result.

D. N. S.

Benefits of Adversity.—No man is more miserable than he that hath no adversity; that man is not tried whether he be good or bad; and God never crowns those virtues which are only faculties and dispositions; but every act of virtue is an ingredient into reward—God so dresses us for heaven.—Jeremy Taylor.

For the Crisis.

The Doctrine of a Future Life.

The Free-Will Baptist Quarterly for July speaks of "The Doctrine of a Future Life" as follows:

"The volume from the pen of Prof. Hudson is one to be studied rather than read. It indicates the widest research, a great power of classification, a keen analytical intellect, a comprehensiveness of survey, and a most vigorous and prompt logical faculty. As a history of religious opinions, their relations and influence, it is a thesaurus. It has more real argument in it than almost any other volume of less than 500 pages we have ever seen. It has almost no mere verbiage;—the compression of thought suggests Butler's Analogy. And though the references are legion, there is little opportunity to fix a charge of pedantry upon the author.

"He jumps no difficulties, though it would be too much to say that he always solves them. In his candor he seeks to do justice to every author to whom he refers, to every theory which he criticises, and to every opinion which he quotes. There is scarcely a point in Doctrinal Theology but he passes it under review. He has written a book, not for general readers, but for patient theological students. And however widely we may dissent from his conclusions, and however strongly we may object to some of his interpretations of Scripture, it is impossible not to respect his candor and acknowledge his ability. He is not to be answered by a paragraph, nor disposed of by a sneer.

"The theory of the book, in its central principle, is not new. It teaches that death, threatened as the ultimate penalty of sin, means cessation of conscious existence; and that eternal life, or immortality, is the gift of God through Christ, bestowed only on those who receive the spiritual and Divine vigor which Christ came to bring. The doctrine, as he defines and propounds it, is much less materialistic than it has usually appeared, and he argues for it on grounds far more lofty and philosophical than most of its advocates have ever reached. He is an independent and comprehensive thinker, entitled to a most respectful hearing; and we can thank him for the information and mental stimulus he has afforded in his book, while declining to endorse all his opinions or accept his theory."

Dear Bro. Grant:—You may think it worth while to publish the above, notwithstanding its implied censure of the materialism of many who hold that evil is not immortal. They should not take offence. Respecting and apologizing for their sincere opinions, as I do while I dissent from them, I have often thought they might think my honest error a very happy one. Every third one who takes my book does so because it is not materialistic. Its influence among the Orthodox is greatly due to its being free from what they regard as a wrong philosophy. If that be really a wrong philosophy, the friends will thank me for getting along without it. If it be the true philosophy of man's constitution, those who hold it will have no fear that in the long run it will not vindicate itself.

I am not at all sorry that the book requires close study. We need such books, especially in an age of diffuse writing and light literature—the true cause and philosophy of "itching ears." Solid books are a great saving of time and expense; and I may claim this as a merit of my own if the testimony of two certain witnesses is true;—a scholar who said that many writers would have expanded it into half a dozen volumes, and a lady who "read it with all the interest of a novel; but, when she had read a few pages, found she had enough to think about all day." And you know all reading and thinking Christians are "theological students,"—the very class for whom the book was written.

Some of the friends may wish to know what is said in reply to the book. There are already three reviews of it in the Quarterlies; the first appearing in Lord's Theological and Literary Journal for April, in right slashing style; another in the Bibliotheca Sacra for July, more critical but somewhat proscriptive; and another, more mild, in the Methodist Quarterly Review for July. A review was prepared for the January number of the Christian Examiner, (Unitarian), but the paper was miscarried and is not yet found. I have also just learned that a review is contemplated by a gentleman who has published a volume on the Resurrection (not Prof. Bush); but whether for a Quarterly or a book I did not learn.

About half the ministers I call on take a book, and more would do so if the times were easier, or they will do so ere long. To the friends who read my last letter I may suggest that a copy may sometimes be brought to the attention, if not to the library of a minister, by some and who would like to read a review of the book. I furnish it to all who wish to give it away, for $1.

I am under very great obligations to two or three friends for their exertions in behalf of my very forbearing creditors—all whose praises I shall speak more fully soon when the liquidating debt is paid.

Yours in Christ,
C. F. Hudson.

Foreign News.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 29. The Galway steamship Propeller, from Galway 21st inst., arrived at this port at noon to-day.

The political news is quite stagnant.

The tour of Napoleon through Brittany was nearly completed.

A project has been started in Paris to connect Europe with China by telegraph.

A slight boundary difficulty is said to have arisen between France and Switzerland.

Austria has resolved to increase its naval expenditure to the amount of 50 per cent.

The Madrid journals ridicule the idea, that has just been renewed in the United States, of the cession of Cuba by Spain to that country.

It is reported that the King of Prussia will probably abdicate the throne in October.

Jeddah, the scene of the late massacre of the Christians, has been bombarded by the British steamer Cyclops. The bombardment lasted five days, and resulted from delay by the authorities of the place in affording satisfaction for the outrages, in the absence of Ismal Pasha, who finally arrived, when eleven executions took place, and four prisoners were sent to Constantinople. Nothing definite is known as to the amount of damage by the bombardment, or the immediate reasons for the warlike proceeding.

A conspiracy has been discovered in Limburg, Austria, among some school boys from twelve to fifteen years old. Eleven were tried and sentenced, one to death, and the others to imprisonment. The investigation is said to have led to the discovery of a more formidable conspiracy, with ramifications in Russian Poland, having in view a general rising of all the Sclavonic population of Austria, to form a Republic.

The London Times states that the message of Queen Victoria to President Buchanan, which contained ninety-nine words, was sent over the cable in sixty-seven minutes. The message of the Directors in England to those in America, which contained thirty-one words, was sent in thirty-five minutes. The latter message was sent first, and both dispatches were repeated back to insure their accuracy.

The Queen's message had not been published in England. Mr. Field's first message to the Directors had been received in England, the last 38 words being transmitted in 22 minutes.

ARRIVAL OF THE PACIFIC AT ST. JOHNS, N. F.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 2. The fact that an inquiry could be sent from London and a reply of some length received from Newfoundland in two hours, had been demonstrated in the matter of the collision between the steamers Arabia and Europa, and was regarded with great satisfaction.

FRANCE.

The Emperor and Empress arrived at St. Cloud on the evening of the 21st, from their tour in Brittany.

It is announced that the Duke de Malakoff is soon to marry a Spanish relative of Empress Eugenie.

The bombardment of Jeddah by the English is said to have taken the French government by surprise, but satisfactory explanations in regard to the subject have been made in London to Pelissier.

PRUSSIA.

The rumor gained ground that a definite abdication of his throne by the King of Prussia would become necessary, in consequence of his disease getting worse. Some fears are expressed of the event bringing on a political crisis.

Some Italians had been arrested at Cherbourg and Paris, and the Paris police were exercising a marked surveillance at the station of the Great Western Railway. The government had been informed that Mazzini had left London.

CHINA.

The Times publishes the following dispatches:

Paris, Saturday, 9 30 A. M. The Moniteur announces that a treaty had been concluded with China. The ports are thrown open; the Christian religion is allowed to be freely practiced; foreign Consuls and diplomatic agents are to be admitted at Pekin; an indemnity is to be paid to England and France.

Domestic News.

BURNING OF NEW YORK QUARANTINE.

New York, Sept. 2. It is ascertained that the burning of the Quarantine buildings at Staten Island was decided upon at a meeting of the citizens held yesterday at Castleton. Ray Tompkins and Thomas Burns, hotel keepers, were active at this meeting. The Board of Health of Castleton also posted a handbill, signed by the chairman and secretary, in which the Quarantine establishment was denounced as a nuisance too intolerable to be borne, and recommended the citizens to protect themselves by abating it without delay.

The plan was to burn all the buildings, and, placing the sick in a barge, tow them to the city and leave them anchored off the Battery. The number of the sick is eighty-one, several of whom are near death. No disguise was attempted by the mob.

Sept. 3. The remainder of the quarantine buildings at Staten Island were burnt last night. The conflagration commenced soon after the adjournment of a meeting of the citizens of Richmond county. Among the buildings burnt were the six cottages occupied by the boatmen of the station, the large mansion occupied by Dr. Waller, deputy health officer, and the fine brick dwelling house of Dr. Bissel. Dr. B., though warned of the intended burning, refused to move an article. The mob, it is stated, was led by Ray Tompkins, Chief Engineer of the Staten Island Fire Department, who appeared in his fireman's uniform.

Three of the sick have died from the heat and exposure, and are yet lying under the trees where they died.

Soon after midnight the female hospital was set fire to and wholly consumed. It contained seventy-five patients, who were previously removed, and placed on the grass plat between the hospital and the resident physician's house, the latter being still on fire, where they remained during the night, covered with showers of sparks from the burning buildings.

Sept. 4. There was no further disturbance at Quarantine last night, although it had been rumored through the day that all the private dwellings in the infected district were to be burned. One hundred policemen, well armed with rifles, and having also a six-pounder, remained on the premises all night.

Many of the infected patients, who were driven from the hospitals, are said to be scattered about this city and Brooklyn. One small pox patient was lying in the City Hall Park all yesterday afternoon, the police refusing to touch him.

The whole number of buildings burned thus far is thirty-two.

The patients have been removed to a barn, where they are made comparatively comfortable. Eight new cases of yellow fever were added to them on Friday, by fresh arrivals. Three additional deaths were reported among the old patients, which were hastened by the prevailing excitement. The stevedore who was shot by the mob on the night of the first attack died at the Hospital on Saturday.

Obituary Notices.

Died in North Kingston, R. I., Bro. Wm. Arnold, aged 43 years.

Our brother professed faith in Christ some years ago, and joined the Freewill Baptist Church in Lafayette, and ever lived a consistent member until his death. About seven years since he changed his views on the nature of man and his destiny, and died in the faith that the dead know not anything. His sickness was long and distressing, but he bore it with great patience until he closed his eyes in death. He requested Eld. Reynolds to tell the people at his funeral that he died believing the dead to be unconscious.

A large circle of friends were gathered to the funeral, and listened to a discourse by the writer, from Eccl. 12 : 7.

E. Bellows.

Died in Pontiac, R. I. July 24th, our aged Bro. Height, aged 73 years.

His death was very sudden. He rose on Sabbath morning, to all appearance as well as usual. After being around the house a short time, he went up stairs. While sitting on the side of the bed a few moments, he gave a sudden spring, fell over, and died without a struggle. Our aged brother made no great show about his profession, but he had a glorious view of the kingdom. A large circle of friends were gathered to the funeral. The services were held at the Baptist meeting-house, which was filled. Sermon on the resurrection.

E. Bellows.

"Them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

Fell asleep in Jesus, on the morning of August 29, 1858, in Oakfield, Genesee Co., N. Y., Carrie A., wife of Irvin J. Stedman, in the 23d year of her age.

"That once loved form, now cold and dead,
Each mournful thought employs;
And nature weeps her comforts fled,
And withered all her joys.

Hope looks beyond this age of time,
When what we now deplore,
Shall rise in full immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more."

Self-Denial.

Self-denial is easy in proportion to the quality. It is much harder to be half truthful and half honest than it is to be truthful and honest throughout. There is nothing which pays you back so sweetly as duties which were difficult to be performed. Make your own way hard and God will make it easy. The only way in which you can have progress in the divine life, is by resolutely meeting evrey duty. It is hard when an engine begins with slow revolutions to move the ponderous train, but when momentum is gained, it clears the track and drives every thing before it. There are many Christians who have no head—no momentum, and when they have anything to do, it is always dead pulling and scream of steam and whistle. It is a shame for a Christian to be year after year overcoming the same obstacles. You ought to be fighting still, but it should be with enemies who camp far out of sight of those who began the fray. Victory behind the banner, and battle before it—that should be the way with a Christian.

—Beecher.

A Beautiful Paragraph.—Oh man! fear not for thy affections, and feel no dread lest time should efface them. There is neither to-day or yesterday in the powerful echoes of the memory: there is only always. He who no longer feels has hever felt. There are two memories—the memory of the senses which wears out with the senses, and in which perishable things decay; and the memory of the soul, for which time does not exist, and which lives over at the same instant, every moment of its past existence. Fear not ye who love. Time has power over hours, none over the soul.—Lamartine.

NOTICES.

Notice for Maine Brethren.

After a pretty general consultation with those interested in the arrangements proposed and recommended by our last Annual Conference in Maine, it is decided that the limits of the Eastern Quarterly Conference shall embrace all east of the Penobscot river, and west of it north of Belfast to the Kennebec river at Waterville, and from thence up north to Brighton and onward.

The Eastern Central Quarterly Conference to embrace all south of that, between Penobscot Bay and the Kennebec river. The Western Central Quarterly Conference to embrace all west of the above, as far as the Androscoggin river, and Livermore, Hartford and Canton, west of that river.

The Western Quarterly Conference to embrace all the remaining western portion of the State.

As some who are interested could not well be consulted in season, and others neglected to respond to their peers in this matter, they will be heard if they think they are not properly convened by the above named limits, and all due changes made.

L. C. WELLCOME, Scribe.
Richmond, Me., Aug. 20, 1858.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is to be holden at Lake Village, to commence Thursday, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

A general attendance of brethren, and especially brethren in the ministry, is desired.

The friends at Lake Village will make provision for all who may need.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.
East Weare, N. H., Aug. 23, 1858.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove Meeting at Chandler's Mills, Belgrade, Me., commencing Thursday, at 10 o'clock, A. M., September 16, and continue over the Lord's day.

H. B. SEVEY,
I. C. WELLCOME.

Western Central Quarterly Conference.

This Conference will be held in connection with the Grove Meeting at Chandler's Mills, Belgrade, Me., which commences Sept. 16th.

I. C. WELLCOME.
H. B. SEVEY.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, } Secretaries.
A. PEARCE, }

Grove Meeting.

A Religious Meeting will be held in a beautiful grove, near Pepperell Depot, to commence Wednesday, Sept. 8th, at 2 o'clock, and continue over the Sabbath. We invite all christians to join with us in this effort to do good. Provision will be made for those from abroad, on reasonable terms.

M. W. CORLISS.

Conference at North Raymond, Me.

The Maine Western Quarterly Conference will be held with the church at North Raymond, Me., to commence Thursday, Sept. 16th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Strangers coming into the place, can call on brethren Stephen Fogg, Stephen Thurlow, Isaac Adams, Bela Latham, Jonas Morrill, Wm. Morrill, Jr., Thomas Morrill, Robert Thurlow, John Tripp, Thomas Smith and John E. Strout.

The friends in Raymond will do all they can to make provision for all who may come. We hope to see a good gathering, both of ministers and membership, filled with the spirit and power of the gospel, to labor directly for the salvation of souls.

In behalf of the brethren,
JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Dedication Notice.

The brethren at Enfield, Ct. will dedicate their new house of worship, at Scittico Village, four miles east of Thompsonville, and four from Somers street, on Wednesday, Sept. 15th. Services to commence at 1 o'clock, P. M. A Protracted Meeting will follow, to continue over the Sabbath.

Bro. E. Burnham and the writer will attend.

For the brethren,
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Maine Eastern Central Quarterly Conference.

This Conference will be held in South Hope, commencing Thursday, 2 o'clock P. M., Sept. 30th, and continue over the Sabbath. Ministering brethren and others are invited to attend and labor for the salvation of sinners.

In behalf of the brethren,
THOMAS SMITH,
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Notice.

TO THE PREACHERS.

To prevent all further complaint that some monopolize the preaching and preachers; and that others will not help bear the burden, in this place, it is now the conclusion that the brethren will invite those preachers whom they desire, in addition to the stated Sabbath supply. ☞ And those inviting will provide. This is the plan until further arrangements. Meetings are held every Sunday at the Chapel on Arch street. Bro. Turner supplies.

W. S. CAMPBELL,
For the brethren.
New Britain, Aug. 23, 1858.

☞ NOTICE.—We would earnestly request those who are indebted to this office for Hymn Books, to remit us the amount due, as we, in all cases, have to pay cash for the same, and cannot afford to be out of the money. Probably some of our brethren have overlooked the fact that they are so long indebted for books. We would, therefore, in all love and earnestness, call their attention to the matter, as the funds of the paper are too contracted to afford lengthened credit.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.
N. F. Nason.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, a Tent or Campmeeting will be holden in Lanesville, Ct., on the line of the Housatonic Railroad, 30 miles north of Bridgeport, on the old ground, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 14th, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

An invitation is extended to all, hoping all of God's children, who can, will attend and feel free to act as he may direct. Ministering brethren are invited to come as the way may open, and preach the word as the Lord may direct. All, who can conveniently, will please bring their tents and blankets. Arrangements will be made to accommodate those who may choose to board on the ground. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductors they wish to stop at Lanesville Station.

The 10.30 AM, and 6.35 PM trains from Bridgeport arrive at Lanesville at 12 M and 8.45 PM. The 9.25 AM train from Pittsfield arrives at 1.10 PM.

L. Mills, for the Brethren.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro. D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. Preble.
East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Tent Meeting held in Brown County, Ill., some four miles South of Mt Sterling, near Brn. C. A. Twombly and Joseph Bush, to commence Tuesday, 21st September, and continue over the following Lord's day. There will be a Conference held in connection with the meeting. Elder M. Chandler will be present with the preaching tent, which will make us a commodious house of worship.

We hope all the friends in that region will come without fail, and spend one week in God's worship. Let nothing hinder you from coming. We want to see you—worship with you—confer with you—devise means by which the destitute fields may be supplied with preaching—concentrate our force—bring together the scattered flock—set things in gospel order; yea, arouse ourselves, wake up zeal that we may put forth an effort in harmony with the great enterprise in which we are engaged, and work while the day lasts, for the sun is fast going down.

I will bring Books and Tracts to supply the demand.

WALTER PRATT.
Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill.

NOTICE.—Providence permitting, there will be a conference in North Searsport, Me., commencing Thursday, Sept. 9th, and continuing as long as thought proper. The Conference will be free for all who love our Lord and wish to be acquainted with him by his word. It is expected Brn. L. L. Howard, B. S. Emery and D. M. Hanscomb will attend.

In behalf of the Church,
I. DAMMAN.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets.

WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.
Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

☞ Eld. D. T. Taylor's P. O. address is Rouses' Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach in—
Cavendish, Vt., Wednesday evening, Sept. 15
Plymouth, " - - - 16th and 17th.
Rutland, - - - Lord's day, 19th.
Chittendon, at the Wesleyan Methodist Church, - - - 20th and 21st.
MILES GRANT.

Bro. J. Partridge appoints to preach at Richmond (Reed meeting house) Sept. 11th, and will remain over the Sabbath.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.
Bro. J. Hemenway, Sept. 19th, 26th, and Oct. 3d.
Bro Ira Morgan, Oct. 10th and 17th.
Bro. S. S. Brewer, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.
Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.
Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

S. S. Mooney appoints to preach at Meredith Neck Sept. 12th.

Providence permitting, Bro. W. S. Campbell will preach in Boston on next Lord's day, Sept. 12th.

Providence permitting, Bro. I Damman will speak to the people in Exeter, N. H., on Friday, Sept. 10th, and in Dover, N, H., on Sunday, the 12th.

Bro. M. Batchelor appoints to preach in
Rutland, Vt. - - - Sept. 8th.
Chateaugay, N. Y., as Bro. Stuart may appoint, - - - " 9th.
Massena, N. Y. - - - - " 10th.
And continue over second and third Sundays in Sept.

Business.

To Correspondents.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.—Some of the brethren or sisters at this place sent us a dollar but did not sign their name. Please let us know who sent it.

J. B. Potter, E. Waters, D. Kinsman, E. A. Eggleston—All right.

E. G. Kingsbury—Not received.

Cash Receipts.

Bro. Williamson 123, 75 cts; E Watson 175, $1,10; E Hogan 208, $2,40; D Kinsman 165, $7,50; M L Clark 182, $22; E G Cooper 175, $2,50; S Webster 161, 20 cts; O Haynes 182, $1,40.

M H Steere 163, C N Barnard 169, A Pierce 169, E A Roberts 169, E Gridley 169, S F Hubbard 169, H M Bellows 169, S P Geehr 169, P Banta 169, Miss A Buchard 169, J Chapman 160,—50 cents each.

H Hey 172, G Berry 172, M S Grinnel 182, J T Howland 182, T Chambers 156, J C Libby 159, L Haskill, 182, J Woodward 172, P Pfiel 182, E Barnes 182, W Howard 182, S A Chaplin 182, E J Cook 208, T K Butler 169, S Boardman 182, T Chase 182, A Pinney 156, E Butterfield 182, W J Pierce 182, J C Gilman 161, I Clough 182, D C Tourtelot 182, S Timberlake 182, D M Hanscomb 182, M J Braley 182, H Chase 182, I D Way 182, L H Hill 117, A Morse 182, H Wilson 182, B Jennings 182, R J Whitehead 132, C G Miller 182, S Cooper 185, S W Bartlett 144, H Goodell 182, C Howell 182, A S Richards 182, T Pease 182, A Cutting 182, E D Bigelow 160, M A Howe 182, J A Bigelow 149, L Allen 182, H S Moore 156, A Avery 182, R Pendleton 172, Dr J Naramore 182, M A Perkins 182, R A Sherman 182, I T Neal 182, A Field 172, D D Chaffe 182, W Brown 182, J Canterbury 143, R A Morrill 182, D Wilson 182, D W Spear 182, S Goodell 182, P Howard 182, M C Kershaw 182, M J Robinson 182, R Avery 182, E Edson 186, L Burgess 182, A Hitchcock 156, A Smith 182, E G Scott 182, C Newell 182, O D Pease 179, R Randall 171, J R Brown 234, C H Smith 169, D Kendall 182, A Streeter 161, W Howard 182, J Stoddard 182, M Moorehouse 182, H E Wright 156, G W Turner 182, B C Mallory 178, B F McLean 182, J B Paine 182, Mrs N Malcom 182, M E Green 182, G L Rice 182, A Richardson 182, C Richardson 156, A Morton 182, H C Benton 182, S Aldon 159, H E Sambo 182, G W Bartlett 182, A Burnett 182, E P Robinson 182, E Ayres 182, W M Bennet 182, L Wade 178, F W Henry 182, J Cooper 205, E Swan 173, Dr H Wilson 173, N Swan 182, J Beddow 182, H T Miller 218, J H Sleeper 182, Mrs M. Needham 182,—$1,00 each.

W McCulloch 182, J Pinkham 210, J B Potter 182, G Wood 182, J M Stone 208, W B Rose 182, H O Page 208, E A Eggleston 239, E Hall 186, D N Stocking 182, M M Lyman 208, G Gillet 161, J Converse 182, E Wolcott 208, S Gilman 208, L F Newcomb 192, J Northup 208, E B Boynton 208, R Sevey 152, E S Walker 182, M Bogarus 182,—$2 each.

J Phillips 208, A Gage 160, O Raymond, 167, D W Johnson 234,—$3,00 each.

For Books and Tracts,—E Watson $1,35, J Pinkham 18 cts, E Bellows $2,00, P S Pekham $2,00, E C Stiles 28 cts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco, gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms; or, the kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is now, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $5.00 per hundred, [illegible] per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. [illegible] Baptist minister. Price, unbound, [illegible] per hundred; 25 cents single; [illegible] 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and [illegible] of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low, or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $4.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price 3 cts., postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by Mr. Branch Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 169 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in sets of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyrus [illegible] Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are [illegible] tracts, that can be separated for distribution. [illegible] Little Children, Love one another; [illegible] The One Resting Place, [illegible] the thing to distribute [illegible] and sinners.

Man's Destiny [illegible] Immortality. The Arguments [illegible] Post, D. D. [illegible] Storrs. Price [illegible] cts. Postage, 8 cts.

[illegible]

☞ [illegible] Harp, [illegible] Children, [illegible] Great [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

ON THIS DREARY EARTH.

AIR.—We are coming, Sister Mary.

On this dreary earth I wander, a pilgrim sad and lone;
I am looking for the Savior to come and take his throne.
Oh! the happy day is coming, I long to be away,
And in my contemplation, methinks I hear him say:
Chorus—
I am coming, lonely pilgrim, I am coming by and by,
Are you ready? lonely pilgrim, for the time is drawing nigh.

Then we'll be up and doing, and in the Lord be strong,
Be waiting, watching, praying, for the time will not be long,
When Christ shall come in glory, then we shall with him stay,
And reign with him forever, in bright, eternal day.
Chorus—
For he is coming, &c.

Oh! what a glorious meeting, when life's trials all are o'er;
Oh! what delightful greeting, with friends on Canaan's shore;
Then we'll strive, and pray, and struggle, till the victory is won;
We'll not lay down our armor till our labor is all done.
Chorus—
For he is, &c.

We have some loved ones sleeping beneath the cold, cold ground,
But we shall cease our weeping, when the last trump shall sound;
For in immortal beauty they'll soon arise and sing
In joyful strains of triumph to their exalted King.
Chorus—
For he is coming, &c.

In this dark world of sorrow, our hearts are often pained,
But nothing shall disturb us, when that bright world we've gained;
No deep heart-riven anguish, no pain or death to fear,
No parting there with dear ones, no silent farewell tear.
Chorus—
Oh! he is coming, &c.

When we've reached the blissful kingdom, and joined the blood-washed band,
And to all the dear beloved ones extend pure friendship's hand,
We'll wear the crown of glory, and the palm of victory bear,
While music most delightful shall fill the balmy air.
Chorus—
Oh! he is coming, &c.

MARY L. PRATT.

Vineland, Wis.

For the Crisis.

THE LESSON OF A DAY.

Bright rose the sun at morning,
With rosy, golden light;
All o'er the landscape smiling
With gladness and delight.
The morn, with all its freshness,
Foretold a day of joy,
Without a veil of darkness,
That might its light destroy.

Up stole the sun to zenith,
When from his car on high,
The burning sunbeams lighted
On earth all parched and dry.
All gone was morning's freshness—
Its dew, its song, its play;
Its flowers drooped with faintness,
And on earth's bosom lay.

Anon the sun stole westward,
And bathed his fiery car,
Among the clouds of sunset,
Behind the hills afar.
Then evening's misty shadows
Came gently stealing on,
And Sol went out in darkness—
The daylight sweet was gone.

Thus, too, a child with gladness,
'Mid flowers fair at play,
Began life's onward journey,
With heart all light and gay.
Beguiled with joyous Present,
He dreamed that future years
Would ever glow with sunshine,
Nor chill his heart with fears.

With cares around him thronging,
There stood a manly form,
Whose thoughtful brow told sadly
That hopes of youth were gone.
Still bent his footsteps onward,
Still high his noble aim,
But gone were dreams of boyhood,
That once to cheer him came.

A form, with locks all hoary,
Sat down beside the way,
To rest his footsteps weary,
At close of toiling day.
But soon an angel beckoned
That aged form away;
I looked—the old man slumbered—
The child in death now lay.

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

THE LOVE OF CHRIST.

Then why, O blessed Jesus Christ,
Should I not love thee well?
Not for the hope of winning heaven,
Or of escaping hell.

Not with the hope of gaining aught,
Or seeking a reward;
But as thyself hast loved me,
O everlasting Lord.

[illegible]
[illegible]
Solely because thou art my God,
And my eternal King.

—Francis Xavier, 16th century.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Some Reasons for not Practicing Feet Washing as a Religious Ordinance.

It will be recollected that some time since I wrote a little slip for the Crisis, giving a few reasons why we should use unleavened bread at the sacramental table, and come around that table as did the Savior and his disciples, when the ordinance was first introduced; intimating that we could not be too particular in imitating his example. I have since learned that some who favor feet washing as an ordinance, thought me somewhat unreasonable that I could see every particular requisite in this ordinance, and feel thus scrupulous in having it performed with punctillious exactness, and yet tacitly pass, as they say, the ordinance that follows, viz: feet washing.

Though the subject has recently appeared in the Crisis, I trust I shall be pardoned for attempting to deliver myself from the imputation of inconsistency. And

1. I do not believe feet washing ever was an ORDINANCE, but a mere act of hospitality; from the fact that it is spoken of throughout the Scriptures, from the first time it is mentioned to the last, as the latter, and not as an ordinance.

The manner the Orientals dressed their feet, and the fact that they performed most of their journeyings on foot through the burning sand, seems a very necessary reason for a host, who consulted the real comfort of his guest, to offer him a proper vessel of water in which he might bathe his burning feet. Thus did Abraham, when the angels visited him.—Gen. 18: 9. These visitors, who appeared like men, were treated by Abraham with every token of reverence, hospitality and kindness. Sitting in his tent door, he saw them approaching and immediately ran to meet them; bowed himself before them, then cordially invited them to stop and refresh themselves; and the first article he proffers them to invigorate and refresh themselves is water for their feet; then hastens to prepare proper viands for the table. This is the first time feet washing is mentioned in the Scriptures; and it must appear obvious to all, that here it is an act of hospitality. When we are in doubt relative to a phrase, or act, we expect to find relief by looking to see how it was first used.

We will now mention the last time it is spoken of in the sacred oracles, which occurs in 1 Tim. 5: 10, where the apostle enumerates a catalogue of good works the widow who was maintained by the church must have been in the habit of performing,—not a word about ordinances, but good works. She must have passed the age incident to youthful effervesence—she must at least be sixty. "Well reported for her good works, if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet;" and then concludes with—"if she have diligently followed every good WORK."

Now for any one to assert that the apostle here introduces ONE ordinance in this catalogue of good works, to the exclusion of the others, seems to me the very quintessence of inconsistency. To make the incongruity the more visible, let us place one of the other ordinances in the stead of feet washing. "If she have brought up children, lodged strangers, partaken of the Lord's supper, relieved the afflicted, and diligently followed every good work." The idea would be that if she had diligently followed every good work and one ordinance, she was a proper subject for the church to maintain. What an absurdity! I think it must appear obvious to all that the apostle did not single out one ordinance and place it in the catalogue of works, but that he recognized the whole list as acts of kindness and generosity instead of any ordinance.

Again, I do not believe feet washing to be an ordinance, because an ordinance always typifies something which is calculated to lead the mind to the great Author of our salvation, and to the atoning sacrifice by which the salvation had been effected. What a lively figure is the Lord's supper, to perpetuate the memory of his broken body and his blood which was so freely offered for our salvation! And not less significant is the ordinance of baptism, by which we show our faith in the burial and resurrection of our great Head, and consequently of his whole body.—1 Cor. 15: 12–23. But what does feet washing typify relative to the great plan of salvation? Says one, it was designed by our Savior to teach his disciples a lesson of humility. Granted. But was it his intention to have his church (including both sexes of course) perpetuate it as an ordinance? Was it not rather his design to inculcate the principle of equality among his disciples? I feel authorized by the Scriptures to adopt the latter position, because I never find an ordinance given to inculcate a moral precept or one of the christian graces; but as before mentioned, to point the mind to the grand plan of redemption.

And here seems to me another objection against practicing feet washing as an ordinance, that a sense of modest propriety would separate the sexes in performing the ordinance; whereas, I find no worship or ordinance under the christian dispensation that should ever separate the sexes. Indeed, the apostle plainly teaches there is nothing in Christ's religion that distinguishes the sexes. In Christ Jesus "there is neither male nor female;" hence, if feet washing be an ordinance of the church, there can be no impropriety for the sexes to engage in it as publicly and promiscuously as in the ordinance of the Lord's supper; and I think all must see this would have an appearance of evil. It must be a great source of scandal to the church. Where is one example where Christ ever separated the sexes for worship or the performance of an ordinance? But in acts of religious hospitality and benevolence, christian propriety makes a difference in the sexes.

In order to show the design of Christ in washing the disciples' feet, let us look at some incidents prior to this act, which bare a marked affinity to, and as I understand, set forth the same moral.

It will be recollected that Jesus had discovered a feeling of emulation existing at times among his disciples, and sought immediately to suppress the same by plain precept as well as illustratory acts. Fearing his disciples might be influenced by God's professed church, (the Jews) who sought honorary seats, and titles of distinction, he cautioned them against taking a title calculated to promote them above their brethren. "Be not ye called Rabbi, for one is your Master, and all ye are brethren." He also brought before their mind the manner of the Gentiles, to show them their government should be wholly unlike that of the Gentiles. Said he, "The princes and great ones exercise dominion and authority" upon them; but instead of that being the case with his church, the chief should be the greatest servant of all. There was a time when this spirit of arrogance had become so rife, that the twelve apostles had actually disputed who should be the greatest. Jesus immediately questions them respecting the matter, as they came into his presence, at which they appear disconcerted, for they all observe profound silence. Jesus had before taught them by precept that they were to consider themselves on a level; but now he makes use of an illustratory act, to fix the principle of equality upon them. He takes a little child and sets him in the midst of the twelve apostles, as a pattern of humility; showing them they should be as free from ambition and lust of power as was this little child, otherwise they forfeited their right and title to the kingdom of heaven.—Mark 9: 36.

I understand that in John 13, Christ makes use of another act to illustrate the same great principle, the observance of which was fraught with the deepest interest to the church; and as the latest words and acts of friends, prior to their decease, make the most indelible impression on the memory of living friends, the Master improves the solemn moment before his betrayal and death, to rivet this principle of condescension and equality, and suppress any appearance of aristocracy, ever so detrimental to the church of God.

He, their Lord and Master, condescends to take the place of the lowest servant, and washed his disciples' feet, as the last illustratory act to enforce the principle of love and equality; and it appeared to have the desired effect of forever quieting their spirit of emulation, for we never hear them after this disputing which should be the greatest; but, on the contrary, we hear them ever inculcating such sentiments as the following: "Let nothing be done through strife or vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than himself." "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another." "Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder; yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."

It is evident Peter regarded this as a servile act, instead of an ordinance, from the objection he offers. Think you he would have objected to his Lord administering an ordinance to himself or his brethren? No: it is quite evident this was regarded as an honor. John objected to baptizing Christ on the ground of his own inferiority. We do not find Peter objecting to his officiating in the ordinance of the supper.

I think it obvious from the 10th verse, that historians and commentators inform us rightly, when they tell us it was the custom to take a thorough bath just before partaking of the paschal meal. As soon as Jesus informs Peter of the necessity of submitting to have his Master wash his feet, he immediately desires him to do more—to wash his hands and head. "Jesus saith to him, he that is washed needeth not, save to wash his feet, for he is clean every whit," showing conclusively he had just bathed, consequently there was no need only to bathe his feet, which might have become soiled in walking from the bath.

After Christ had washed their feet, he inquired if they knew what he had done to them? They of course knew that he had washed their feet. But he would know, or rather take this opportunity to make them know, by questioning them, the gist of his teaching.—John 6: 6. Why does he not question them with regard to the import of the supper? Because that was an ordinance, pointing to the great atoning sacrifice; and that feet washing was to inculcate not a single duty but the whole class of religious hospitalities, involving the principle of benevolence and equality, is evident from his speaking in the plural—"If ye know these things happy are ye if do them."

His closing remarks on this subject show that his design was to enforce the spirit of condescension and equality among his disciples, in all the walks of life.—"Verily, verily, I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him." Christ's disciples must not be divided into separate casts; but do good to ALL the household of faith as they have opportunity; whatever disparity might exist in point of birth, talent, education or personal appearance, they should consider themselves as one family, as they will associate together while God exists.

The sequel of the apostles' history proves that they understood Christ to enforce the principle before mentioned, instead of instituting an ordinanc of feet washing, for they ever afterwards practiced and taught this principle, as I have before shown; but we never hear of their practicing feet washing as an ordinance, though often is the ordinance of the supper mentioned; often is express mention made of the disciples coming together to "break bread," but not a chapter, not a verse, in all the Acts of the Apostles, or their epistles, containing any intimation that any church, or any company of disciples, ever assembled to celebrate the washing of feet, or ever did celebrate such an ordinance when they were assembled for any other purpose. The ordinance of baptism is also frequently mentioned in their subsequent history, showing that all that gladly received the word were baptized, both men and women; but not a word through the entire writings of the disciples relative to feet washing as an ordinance; it is only mentioned but once, and then as an act of hospitality, as before shown.

These, as well as others which might be adduced, are cogent reasons, to my mind, against practicing feet washing as an ordinance. To offer to wash the feet of a saint when those feet do not need washing, is as if you gave a cup of cold water to a disciple who is not thirsty. It looks more like "voluntary humility" than exhibiting the principle Christ taught. We ought to recollect that Christ refused to wash the hands and head of Peter, because there was no need. He would show them it was necessary kindness and hospitality he would inculcate. Thus I feel a consciousness of having fulfilled the teaching of Christ, though never having engaged in feet washing as an ordinance.

B. MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct.

☞ We love those who endeavor to imitate us, better than those who strive to equal us; for imitation is a sign of esteem, but competition of envy.

☞ If we took as much pains to be what we ought, as we do to disguise what we are, we might appear like ourselves without being at the trouble of any disguise at all.

Choice Selections.

From the Christian Messenger.

Work, Work, Work!

Yes, be active, striving, laborious, energetic. Not droning life away. Not folding your hands to sleep. Awake to activity—awake to righteousness—awake to duty.

Well, but you don't believe in being too laborious. Why not? Not much danger of your laboring too much, I reckon.—Mean to take it easy, do you? Would like a 'cabin passage' to Kingdom Come, fine state room to yourself, and nothing to trouble you. Would like to sail on "flowery beds of ease" would you? Think perhaps that you deserve an easy time?

Can't accommodate you, my dear sir. Very sorry, indeed, but if you are determined on going easy you'll have to go to perdition. We don't have any idlers, free tickets, or "dead-heads" in this direction. Through much tribulation we must enter the Kingdom. You white livered heroes of pomatum and kid gloves will have to see hard fare in order to be saved. You genteel dandlers of canes and parasols—you snuffing, whining epicures, you exquisites with less brains than beauty and less religion than brains, will find it hard work to dance to the sound of the violin up "the hill difficulty" or down the "valley of humiliation."

What fellowship have you with the weary and struggling church of the first born? What have you, who care more for clean linen than you do for clean hearts, to do with those who wandered in sheepskins and goatskins? What fellowship have you who must have luxury and who ride to hell for the sake of going in a carriage, with those who dwell in dens and caves of the earth, and whose lion hearts feared only the wrath of God? What have you, dainty mortals, who fear the least sneer of the ungodly, in common with those who climbed with bare and bleeding feet the icy Alps? What have you, time serving wind watcher, in common with those men of stern resolve and iron will, who counted not their lives dear to them, who coveted the cross and clasped it mid the raging flames?

Well, but christians don't have to suffer so now. No, and you would'nt do it if they did have to. But if they had loved ease as well as you they would have escaped sorrow too. True you hav'nt "trials of cruel mockings and scourgings,—yea moreover of bonds and imprisonment"—true, you are not called to suffer in just the way that they suffered, but yet there are toils for you,—there are trials for you,—there are duties for you.

Do you want to share in the fellowship of Christ's sufferings? Do you desire to know something of Jesus' lifelong crucifixion, of which the gory cross of Calvary was only the culminating point? Do you desire to know a little of the weary path which the great Pilgrim trod while he marked salvation's way? Do you wish to catch the tide of sympathy with God's universal family which has flung its pulsations through every faithful heart from righteous Abel down? Do you wish to feel your unity with the family of God, sharing their toil that you may share their rest, tasting their woe that you may taste their bliss? Would you win a welcome to everlasting habitations when earthly houses are no more? Then you must labor. You may do this. All may do this. We can work the work of God. We can labor and suffer reproach. We can bear one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. We can endure hardness as good soldiers.

Go then to this work. Learn sympathy for suffering in the huts and hovels of poverty and adversity. Drop softly the balm of kindly feeling upon the bruised and stricken heart. Remember the outcast whose cup of misery is full, and while you thank God that brighter hopes are yours, strive to stretch out a hand of help to him. O work! There is work enough to do. Will you try to do it? Millions throng the paths of vice. Millions hurry towards perdition. Multitudes know nothing of religion but misanthropy, and nothing of the world but woe. Go to them; show them the love of Christ. Let them see that there are yet those who weep o'er mortal misery as did the sinless one.

Work, O work! Go, with mighty strength—cling to the everlasting arm.—Thy refuge is in God—he is thy helper. Go in his might. Baptize your soul in his love. Look unto Jesus with an unfaltering gaze. Make Christ thy pattern—follow him. The harvest is great, the rewards are worthy of thy toils. Cast away pleasure. Flee from the pollutions that are in the world—live for eternity. O work while the day lasts. Rescue the perishing, preach Jesus Christ in all your life: consecrate yourself to him with each returning day. Bear his yoke, possess his spirit, wear his armor, endure his cross, esteem his reproach, rejoice in his love, partake his suffering, embrace his truth, love his people, expect his appearing, pray for his kingdom, and do his work.

So when toils and troubles are over you may rest. When tears are wiped away you may rejoice. When death is swallowed up in victory you may sing the conqueror's song. But to do this you must work! work in God's vineyard, work while the day lasts.

ENVY.—Envy is the hatred of another's felicity: in respect of superiors, because they are not equal to them; in respect of inferiors, lest he should be equal to them; in respect of equals, because they are equal to them. Through envy proceeded the fall of the world, and the death of Christ.

☞ That which is to be loved long, is to be loved with reason, rather than passion.

Meditations.

If, then, there be any among you, brethren, who have received from the God of the Gospel, along with the life of faith, the seed and principle of joy, let them invoke their sovereign Benefactor in the frame Paul recommends, and let each one of them, bowing down before the Lord, say:

God of our salvation! train me to joy. Cause me to trace, every day anew, the list of thy benefits, that my soul may not forget even the least of them. May I delight to review the past, and treasure up in my memory all the tokens of thy solicitude for my soul, when as yet it took no care for itself. May I mark, with wonder and gratitude, those mysterious paths along which I walked blindfolded toward the ever-blessed destination, known to thee alone. Remind me of all thou didst to lighten me, all thou didst to cheer and support me, amidst temptations and doubts. Recall to my remembrance what peace, when the trial was over, I felt at the bottom of my soul, what harmonious action of all parts of my being! May I adore thee in the continuance of thy mercies, in the multitude of the means thou hast vouchsafed me for abiding in thee—in unexpected blessings—in holy friendships—in improving social intercourse—in an ever-open Gospel—in free access at all times to thy house—in those diversified dispensations of which the purpose is one and the same—in success and in disappointment—in grief and in gladness,—which are all meant to draw me to thee by ever-varied but harmonious cords of love! May I trace thee in the vicissitudes of sovereigns and empires, and in the history of man through all ages. In imagination may I discern thee on Golgotha, at the foot of that throne of ignominy, to which thy well-beloved was pleased to be lifted up, to draw all men unto him! Meditating on thee day and night, may I be able, with the new heart thou wilt have given me, to comprehend the depth of thy love! May my soul rejoice in my Savior! May it obtain a portion of that love which, dispensed to all, is reserved to each entire and infinite. May thy perfections, O God,—may the divine example of thy Son, be the subject on which my soul ever delights to dwell. May I never wander from that horizon of glory; may I live in that light. May all that is in me and about me be tinged with that glory; and illumined by its brightness, may I henceforth view nothing,—neither life nor death, neither enjoyment nor suffering—nothing, not even sin itself, but through thee, O thou holy and gladdening light, true noon-day sun of the soul, lighting the path to heaven. May I ever abide in that light, walking in joy, love, and holiness, which are all combined in the sanctified, as they are in thee, all holy and ever-blessed God, fountain of blessedness.—Vinet.

THE CULTURE OF THE AFFECTIONS.—The man without affections is at best but a reasoning machine. As you cherish your humanity, and wish to prepare it for everlasting communion with God, let your affections be cultivated with order and purity through all the successive periods of life. Let each blossom forth beautifully and appropriate in its own season. Let none be nipped by untimely care, or eaten out by the rust of selfishness, or dashed to the ground by the gust of wild passions and lawless appetite. Let there be time and place for all—each passing by imperceptible gradations into its successors; for youth's sweet loves and open-hearted friendship; for the firmer attachment of mature years; for the sacred joys of home; for the flow of kind and holy feeling, which gathers in the balmy memories of the past, and drops its freshening dew on the hours of life's decline.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Canada Subscribers have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e. $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 158. BOSTON, MASS., SEPTEMBER 15 1858. No issue Sept. 1 VOL. VIII. NO. 2.

Poetry.

HEAVENLY SONG.

This Hymn was originally written for local use; but we are happy now to be able to give it to our readers, knowing it will prove of interest to all who have known the former beloved Editor of the Crisis, the author of the hymn.

1. O come, brethren dear,
Who worship God here,
Let the bands of our union be strong;
In hallowed lays,
We'll chant our Lord's praise,
And join in a heavenly song.

2. Come, lay aside hate—
And angry debate,
And rectify every wrong;
From strife let us cease,
Then we'll worship in peace,
And we'll join in a heavenly song.

3. All evil surmisings,
And envy's uprisings,
And jealousy's poisonous tongue,
We'll henceforth endeavor,
To leave off forever,
And we'll join in a heavenly song.

4. Let the heaven-born Dove,
With her pinions of LOVE,
Encircle us under her wing;
Then in hallowed communion,
And sweet, blessed union,
We will join in harmonious song.

5. The time has now come,
For the army to form,
And show who to Jesus belong;
Moved forward by grace,
We'll quicken our pace,
And join in a heavenly song.

6. By order divine,
We'll WHEEL INTO LINE,
And valiantly marching along,
'Mid battle and storm,
We'll press our way on,
And we'll join in a heart-cheering song.

7. Through Jesus alone,
No might of our own,
The weakest may say, "I am strong;"
He gives to the faint,
The strength of a saint,
So we'll all join in heavenly song.

8. The soldier who's brave,
Our Captain will save,
And give him a conqueror's crown;
And in Canaan a LOT,
Where sorrows come not,
There we'll join in victorious song.

9. We're on the highway,
To the portals of day,
And the MORN is beginning to dawn;
In glory it streams,
And its life-giving beams
Rouse us up to a soul-thrilling song.

10. Those dear sainted frames,
That have long feasted worms,
Will arise when Jesus shall come;
And such glorious forms,
Bursting forth from the tombs,
Will inspire us with outgushing song.

11. We will mount then on high,
To view our Lord nigh,
And shouts to our Savior prolong;
While th' adorable grace,
That beams from his face,
Shall awaken enrapturing song.

12. The LAND will be ours,
When He breaks up the powers,
That have held its domain so long;
Then Jesus will reign,
And banish all pain,—
There we'll all sing the conqueror's song

13. Peace sits on those hills,
And spreads o'er the vales,
And joy is diffused all around;
Each brow with heaven beaming,
Each eye with love streaming,
And all join in melodious song.

14. Where'er the eye turns,
All sparkles and burns,
And the heavens all blaze with that [Sun
Of GLORY DIVINE,
Which makes the whole shine,
And arouses spontaneous song.

15. When we PARADISE gain,
We shall ever remain
A happy and glorified throng;
We'll sweep the gold lyre,
We'll strike our notes higher,
And we'll burst into rapturous song.

16. Vast ages move on,
But the song's scarce begun,
For the opening wonders of grace,
Keep stirring the fires,
That fill all the choirs,
With the ravishing spirit of song.

J. MERRIAM.

Read Nature; Nature is a friend to truth;
Nature is Christian; preaches to mankind;
And bids dead matter to aid us in our creed.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

All of Grace.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee."—Mark 5 : 19.

This language of our divine Master was addressed to one just relieved of a demoniacal possession, who expressed a desire to abide with Christ, and was replied to by the Lord in the language above quoted. But may not this injunction of our Savior involve a principle alike adapted to all who have passed from death unto life? Where is the child of God who cannot respond with the Psalmist, "Truly the Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." By nature we all have been the children of wrath even as others; entirely destitute of the first element of goodness upon which we could ground a hope of coming glory. Well might the apostle say, "When we were sinners and without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly,"—or, in other words, when we were so weak through sin as to be incapable of saving ourselves, Christ died for us. But it may be asked, is it true that man is thus helpless? Is there nothing in his nature yet bearing the divine impress, which will incline him to seek after God? Has he altogether become unprofitable? Have all gone out of the way? Are there none by nature righteous? Are all strangers to the way of peace? Yes,—all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.

How dark the picture thus drawn of fallen humanity, and how few are willing to endorse this as a correct representation of themselves. Philosophers talk of the light of nature, but Scripture represents nature as being dark. Man, aside from the divine influence, is incapable of knowing himself; hence his constant proneness to over estimate his own worth and misjudge of his moral standing. Ignorant of ourselves, we look upon the inebriate as being possessed of a worse nature than our own. Parents dote upon their children whose external character has been moulded by wholesome restraining influences, and almost think that christianity is incapable of improving them. But let parents teach their children, as they cross the threshold of moral accountability, that the heart is deceitful above all things, and who can know it,—that the sinful passions of a fallen nature exist in them, which have proved the ruin of millions when licensed, and will prove theirs also if unrestrained by the grace of God.—The fires of a volcano may be latent for a long while, until all the subterraneous cavities are full; then comes an eruption. So unconverted men may be ignorant of the corruption of their own hearts until circumstances may afford them an opportunity of acting themselves, and then the evil which is developed is only that which has long existed within.

If this be true, where is boasting? what right has one to exult over another, seeing all are in like circumstances as to our nature and character before God? When I hear a person say, "I never could have done thus and so under such and such circumstances," I come to the conclusion that such persons are unacquainted with themselves. The sweet psalmist of Israel, when a lovely, pious shepherd boy, would have shuddered at the thought of committing the sin he did in after years. One of the chosen apostles of the Lamb declared with great vehemence that he would never deny the Lord, and was the first who did deny him. These are but exhibitions of man's weakness when left to himself.—

Brother, Sister, hast thou been kept from snares, into which many have fallen? Attribute it not to a superior nature of yours, but to the merciful providences of Him who has watched over you to do you good; and let that thought lead you to deep humility of heart; let it also lead you to look with merciful eyes upon your fellow beings who may be slaves to sinful passion. If your nature has been renewed by the power of God's eternal Spirit, and you have become a partaker of Christ's divine nature, so that you can say, the things I once loved I now hate, and the things I once hated I now love, go and sound in the ears of your dying fellow men what God has done for you. Tell them there is hope in their case, for you have found a remedy, and have realized a practical demonstration of its saving efficacy.

The man who has been cured of lingering consumption will be recommending the means to all he sees or can hear of who are suffering in the same way.—The whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.—Now the whole progeny of Adam are sick.—The disease is sin. The end of the disorder is tribulation and wrath upon every soul of man that doeth evil. "A remedy has been provided,—that remedy is the blood of Christ." Some have had it applied and been cured—the great majority are dying and are being damned through ignorance or willfulness. Now what shall be done? Why, christian, go to your neighbors—go to your kindred, not to tell them that you have a superior nature to theirs,—not to tell them they are under condemnation, for they may be already apprised of that; but go as a brand plucked from the fire, and in the christian-like language of St. Paul, tell them, "it is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." When Jesus was on earth he declared "I came not to condemn the world but that the world through me might be saved." The reason was, they needed no one to condemn them; they were condemned already. The world needed one to seek and save the lost. Such an one came, full of grace and truth; extending the scepter of mercy to the vilest who would repent of their sins; mingling in the society of publicans and harlots—not to tolerate but to take away their transgressions. Thus the kingdom of God is to be peopled with pardoned sinners, while self righteous pharisees are in no case to enter therein.

A SINNER SAVED BY GRACE.

For the Crisis.

Savoy Campmeeting.

BRO. GRANT:—Our campmeeting at Savoy was one of deep interest. The congregation was larger than ever before on the Mountains.

The interest increased from the beginning. It was indeed an old-fashioned campmeeting, time and all. Though there was much indication of disturbance at first, the bad elements were overcome by divine influence, and peace and quietude reigned throughout. Not a note or word of discord among the brethren from beginning to end. It was a camp of the saints.—Some were converted and baptized. Some Methodists and Baptists who had become such during the past revival, saw their nakedness, and accepted the advent truths and received the real stamp of the living God. The common people heard us gladly. The multitude left, after listening to three discourses on Sunday, like returning from the funeral of some dear friend. I took the opportunity to speak to all with whom I came in contact in passing from the ground, and all, save one, were affected to tears. The same course was pursued by many of the brethren and sisters, with the same result without any exception.

Thus closed one of the most interesting meetings we have witnessed since that eventful period, 1854. But the parting scene among those scattered, lonely, blessed pilgrims, was trying. The trembling lip and falling tear told in words of living light the strength of those ties that bind in one the church of God.

H. PRATT.

P. S. I did not intend to convey the idea at the Wilbraham campmeeting that time was the gem of Adventists; but that it was the bridge, together with the signs prepared of God for the church, by which He could separate them from the world, teach them his truths, humble, prove, and try a people thus made ready for his coming. H. P.

ERROR.—A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.—Pope.

For the Crisis.

Are We a People?—No. 9.

Rally! Who is on the Lord's side? If the question were asked, shall we give up? shall we go back? the ready answer would be from many, how can I give up the truths I have received? To what shall we go? There are very many who do not flinch and will not, but continue to bear their testimony to the last. A noble position they occupy—the standard-bearers of the war! The question is now simply this: will all the different elements and interests subside and coalesce; and can we make a united body? There are ministers who are willing to labor as hard as they have done, and some perhaps in the same way; but most see that the labor, as now bestowed, does not effect what it ought; and hence move for a different manner.

There are willing brethren too—liberal in sentiment, and whole-hearted. Some with means, and ready to sacrifice still for the cause. Will we come up now to the "help of the Lord against the mighty"—to labor and live that the gospel may prevail? We cannot feel, as yet, that the gospel of the kingdom and immortality can be preached or will be, without our effort as a people, however far from a perfect existence as a church we may be. Let us, then, come up in order to the onset, and pray God that he will "strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to perish." Come up to the work, and take the initiatory steps where we have not; and where we have, go on to perfection. No more grumbling now, on the part of ministers or people. The people have borne heavy burdens in times past. It has been a great and worthy sacrifice. God bless you! Great is your reward in heaven. Come, one and all—old, faithful and tried—young, ardent and energetic—the pure, good, firm, weak, trembling, fearful. Come together; let us work for the salvation of this people—the advancement of those great principles of truth—the awakening of multitudes more, to come and bless the name of our God in the day of Jesus Christ. A work for all! A reward for all! A church and discipline for all; and a kingdom for all. Rally to the standard of truth, as it has been proclaimed by the "mighty angel, flying through the midst of heaven."

Our means may be husbanded—may be more judiciously applied, if we, as a people, act in gospel order. By the way, if Christ or his apostles have said, "The laborer is worthy of his hire," I question whether the churches need object to the term "pay." It certainly appears to suggest compensation. What, for the gospel? A free gospel! No, for his time. If a minister gives his time to the cause, and his children support themselves from the time they are a dozen years old, while his wife earns from fifty to a hundred dollars a year, with the needle, to meet the bills of the family, who is sacrificing most to support preaching? And the whole securing ill health, and an early grave, with loss of the best advantages for improvement. Who has got the cause at heart? Come, look facts in the face. Come, rally to the rescue of a good cause. Come, ministers, and help to place the work on a sure footing. Come, brethren, help to bear the burden. Is it any wonder that ministers leave? Yet some, with plenty of invitations to unite with other communions, are with you still. Is it any wonder that some of the best brethren have become discouraged? If we can now follow wise counsel, we shall have no more cause to complain that preaching is not half supported, or that good men, who are capable, do not half preach. Many ministers come to feel (it cannot be helped) "they dont pay anything"—if we have a good time it is all that can be expected. And we may have a good time if we work, peddle, or visit all the week. No study! No getting ready for the desk by a knowledge of the people, and a knowledge of the Bible, nature, philosophy, history, the arts and sciences, political institutions, prophecy mirrored in present facts, and news from all the world, to-day. Ah, no wonder we go to leeward. 'Twill not do. Any man may learn a lesson from others, and repeat it; but it takes time, money, labor, talent, sacrifice and research to build up a church, and bring in additions to the flock. Simply put a boy in the chimney corner with his book; tell him he must learn—'tis duty, 'tis necessary—give him no inspiration. You will make him more of a dolt than a scholar. Put men merely under the force of duty and necessity—without inspiration, an eye to happy results, the harmony of relations, the nature and bearings of the post occupied, the advancement of success, the sympathy of friends, the support of the noble and good, the conflict of opposition, the jealousy of rivalry, the emulation of successful example, the ambition of victory; bow him down, seclude him in a cave, place him in a desert, away from all these,—and you will blunt his energies, instead of sharpening and brightening his faculties. Preach to a man one thing over and over again, in the same general form, and nothing else, no matter how good, and you will stint him, dwarf him. His ideas must take range. His expansive thought should grasp new views. Give him knowledge. Learn him how to swim, to fly. Break that shell!

May God help ministers and people to create and perpetuate an enlightened Christian sentiment in respect to our church government. Rally, by prayer and counsel, and a new consecration. Leave no longer the sacred trust to the reckless, misinformed judgment of the careless, unsanctified or unlearned; and let us kindly labor with those who may honestly differ; who are intelligent and well meaning, that they may harmoniously join in that which appears so important.

I think the reader will now see why our caption was a question of this kind. The different questions discussed are agitating the minds of many. I have heard much said in my travels, since these articles were commenced. The surprise that such a question should be asked, has given place to inquiry. The answer is withheld; yet, practically, it is given. I must believe in the affirmative; but it may be owing to my predilection. Since we have said thus much, it is hoped that you see why we have said it. Adieu.

W. S. C.

Letter from Bro. Jonas Merriam.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—I have so long been deprived the privilege of enjoying a feast of tabernacles with the saints until the recent holy convocation on that sacred mount at Wilbraham, that I have felt to praise God every day since I left the encampment, for the blessings enjoyed there. O, there is something so sweet, so refreshing, in the salutations and congratulations of friends coming from the East, West, North and South, congregating in a general assembly, and sitting down to hold sweet converse together—something so exhilarating in their outgushing songs—so heavenly in their fervent prayers, and comforting in their exhortations, that one must experience before they can realize the privileges of such an occasion. The time had seemed so long since I had enjoyed the society of many endeared friends congregated there, that I knew not but they had partially forgotten one so unworthy of a fond remembrance; but must say that the cordial greetings received by myself and companion on that favored spot will be set down among the most pleasing reminiscences of our lives.

To say nothing of the excellent sermons delivered in that series of meetings, there were other scenes of surpassing interest, particularly the ordinations and the love feast. To see a hundred and sixty witnesses step forth upon the stand, in so short a time, all eager to testify for God and Truth, was one of the most instructive and profitable scenes I ever enjoyed. It seemed as though the sweetest singers of Israel were gathered there, and I was reminded of that time when the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. I could take home with me the words and the notes of their songs, but O, thought I, could I but carry as in a music box, those charming tones, I would be richly compensated for the expenditures of the meeting.

I doubt not friends have wondered that I have not more frequently communicated for the Crisis, but their wonder would cease if they were aware of my peculiar infirmities. Shall I not have the prayers of the household that I may be enabled to improve under the chastisements of my heavenly Father, and that, if agreeable to his will, the natural tone of the diseased organ of vision may be restored, so that I may once more enjoy the longed for and unspeakably blessed privilege of consulting the Oracles for myself, and perhaps, also, of communicating something occasionally for the comfort of the flock, without resorting to an amanuensis. With sincere love to the brethren and the cause, I remain yours, &c.,

J. MERRIAM.
By T. N. S.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 4, 1858.

From Eld. P. B. Morgan.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned from our first quarterly meeting of this (the Fox River) District of this year, and a refreshing time it was. The progress of our cause has been very slow in the West,—though perhaps not remarkably so for a new cause in an enemy's land,—yet whoever of our brethren could attend this meeting must have felt that the efforts of our preachers had not been altogether in vain in the West; and yet what makes this matter still more interesting is the fact that all this may, and probably will, appear as a precedent for future work. And, I may add, in a good degree demonstrates the practicability of the "plan of arrangements" now in operation amongst us. In this meeting there was a great lack in delegations, and completeness in reporting the number of members and standing of our churches, but I think I may state, that the interest represented in this quarterly conference was equal to the entire interest in the state, when four years ago I first came to Illinois. There were reckoned some seven churches in this quarterly District, (though one or two are not yet set in order.) The amount of soul-stirring interest manifest in this meeting really made me feel there were some live Adventists in the West. Our devotional exercises were deeply interesting, and all felt there was an encouraging prospect before us. The only hindrance apparently in the way of unprecedented progress, is the exceeding "hard times" in money matters. What our brethren have not and cannot give, is not expected. Otherwise instead of two circuit or itinerating preachers, Brn. Calkins and Spencer—we should have four or more. However, we feel we have much reason to hope for the cause of our soon-coming Jesus in the Fox River District. Bro. Chandler, our beloved and faithful Evangelist, was at his post, strong in the Lord; although I am sorry to add that as yet he is not receiving the stinted amount proposed at the Annual Conference as the least nameable amount thought of—but which now he greatly needs.

The acts of the Conference were mostly of a local interest, except a resolution suggesting that all our Churches be known only as "Churches of Christ," which, after considerable but pleasant debate, passed.

The cause in Ottawa is I think progressing. Bro. Chandler labors with us a few evenings this week, and we are hoping for a little reviving from the Lord. Have had some 8 o'clock A. M. prayer meetings, and hope to see the interest in our midst increase. Some of your readers will be interested to hear that Bro. I. E. Jones recently made us a visit, spending the Sabbath and preaching two as good sermons I think as I ever heard from his lips. His health is not very firm, but is able to preach twice on a Sabbath. He is laboring in Grundy Co. with I believe a very good prospect. We were also recently favored with a visit and an interesting talk from Bro. S. S. Bliss, who made it in his way to visit Ottawa, and very agreeably to our brethren.

Yours as ever,
P. B. MORGAN.

Ottawa, Ill., Sept. 1st, 1858.

For the Crisis.

The Church's Inquiry.

In ancient times, while the prophet Daniel was having portrayed before his vision the mighty overturn, and closing scenes of all earthly governments; the standing up of the Prince of Peace; the resurrection of those that sleep, and the deliverance of every one that shall be found written in the book, the inquiry was made: "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?"—Dan. 12: 6.

Again we look over the page of prophetic history, until we reach a period this side of Messiah's first advent; and we find living under the fifth seal some of his followers, who counted not their lives dear unto them; but "presented their bodies a living sacrifice" upon the altar of God. Consequently, they were slain for the word of God, and the testimony which they held. From them, we have the inquiry: "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?"—Rev. 6.: 10. We have now reached, emphatically, the last days. Here we find, amid the opposition of prejudice, bigotry, scepticism and infidelity; a remnant, humble, contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. They hear the scoffer deridingly ask,—"Where is the promise of his coming?" Pet. 3: 4. They grieve to see the vast majority turn their ears away from truth unto fables; lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof: 2. Tim. 3: 4, 5, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of demons. 1 .Tim. 4: 1. Truly, "Darkness covers the land, and gross darkness the people; and thicker and darker grows the gathering tempest, which is soon to seal the doom of all that love not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness.

The christian warrior, having discovered by the light of prophecy that his warfare will not always continue, anxiously inquires; How long? He beholds the work of iniquity fearfully abounding, the rapid increase of vice and crime, while to some extent cruelty and oppression reign; and again, he inquires: How long? We look back through the lapse of ages, and view man as he was in his primeval state, possessing health and vigor; and destined to an immortal existence, had he not disobeyed the laws of his maker. We take into consideration the present condition of the human family, and how great the contrast! Most sensibly do we realize the sad consequences of man's first, and continual transgression. Disease invades this mortal frame; while grief, distress, fear and anxiety, follow in its train. Then comes Death with his iron grasp. He enters the home-circle, divides and scatters the once happy family, and leaves behind him nothing but lamentation and mourning; and with anxious heart we inquire:

'How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just;
While the rich blood of martyrs slain
Lies mingled in the dust?'

But there is a brighter side to this picture: thank God. For fallen man He has found a ransom. Life and immortality has been brought to light through the gospel; and we may come into possession of it at the morn of the resurrection, 1. Cor. 15; 54. by virtue of the great atonement—Jesus Christ, who was sacrificed for us. This hope cheers our hearts amid the surrounding gloom, and gives us consolation in the hour of bereavement. With joyful anticipation we look forward to that event, and long for the day to dawn. But, hark! what sound is this that falls on the ear? 'Tis the voice of Gabriel's clarion resounding through the air! The morn of Jubilee has come at last. Descending, in brilliant clouds of glory, is He, who was once for sinners slain; by myriads of the angelic host attended. The command given: Gather ye, "bring my sons from afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth." The graves are been bursting—the bonds of death are riven—the sleeping saints of all ages come forth, in beauteous immortality. The living are changed in a moment, and together they mount up to meet their Lord in the air. Escorted by the seraphic choir, they enter the holy city—the palace of the great King; there to celebrate the marriage-supper of the Lamb.

Then weary, tempest-tossed and afflicted pilgrim! how comes the rest! Beyond the scenes of mortal strife and human woes, lies thine everlasting habitation. Thy home is located upon earth made new—Paradise restored; where nothing can enter to mar thy felicity! There is an unbroken circle, the family of redeemed ones are gathered; and from them the glad song arises, "as the voice of a great multitude, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

"How bright the vision! O, how long
Shall this glad hour delay?
Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day!"

East Jay, Me. J. W. Gilman.

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT ..... EDITOR.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 15, 1858.

Office....167 Hanover street.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

Lord's Day.—We have mentioned our excellent love feast in the morning, during which one hundred and sixty-three spoke of the love of Jesus. That morning will be long remembered by those who were present. But few such are enjoyed in one's life time. The weather was delightful, and every thing seemed to conspire to make the occasion one of the most heavenly that this earth affords. We think we knew something of the feelings of Peter and John upon the mount of transfiguration, when they said, "it is good for us to be here." It seemed as if heaven and earth had appeared in their most lovely dress, and that all the dear saints were in their happiest frame of mind, while the Holy Spirit was shedding its sweet comfort upon all the Zion-bound pilgrims, and prompting them to sing their most beautiful hymns of praise. The scene was perfectly enchanting.

It must have been a hard heart that was not made soft by those soul-stirring testimonies and the heart-cheering music. Would that all of the Lord's children could have partaken of this rich feast; but if faithful, we shall soon be at the marriage supper of the Lamb, when we shall meet without the sad thought of parting again from the loved ones.

"O hail, happy day."

Before the hour of preaching, people came pouring in from all directions, until thousands were assembled, who showed by their good behavior, that they came to learn the truth of the Bible. All seemed to participate in the good feeling of the meeting, and to manifest a desire to contribute to the happiness of all present. Every human passion appeared to be hushed except those which tend to elevate and inspire to noble deeds, and assimilate us to the pure and lovely. Those who declaim against camp meetings because so much wickedness is practiced, ought to have been present through the whole meeting, and we think they would be compelled to say, that they could not ask for better order than that which prevailed from the commencement to the close of this feast of tabernacles. We saw no disorderly conduct upon the ground during the entire week. We were satisfied that we enjoyed the protecting power of our Father in heaven, whose angels encamped round about us and delivered us from all harm.

Lords day, A. M.—Preaching by the editor. Subject,—Spiritualism.

At the close of the morning discourse, Bro. Fitch from St. Johns, New Brunswick, was ordained for the ministry. The charge was given by Bro. Brewer.

Lord's day, P M. Bro. H. L. Hastings preached an interesting discourse on the christian's hope, to which a large congregation listened with marked attention. We could truly say, that ours is a blessed hope.

Preaching in the evening by the editor. Subject—the thirteenth chapter of Revelation.

At the close of the evening meeting about two hundred and fifty sat down to the table of the Lord to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior. It was a solemn and heavenly season, that will not be soon forgotten by those present.

Thus closed our great feast of tabernacles. We felt sad as we were reminded that in a few hours we should be obliged to give the parting hand, and go out again to meet the frowns of a cold and wicked world, but we were cheered with the hope of meeting ere long, where the word farewell is never spoken.

Seven were baptized, and others found peace in believing. There were thirty-one preachers present besides the five that were ordained.

We ought not to close our report of this interesting meeting without saying, that much credit is due to the committee of arrangements, for their continued efforts to administer to the comfort of all upon the encampment. Those who have not had experience, have but a faint idea of the perplexities of such a situation, but we think few men would give better satisfaction. Should time last, and our lives be spared, we shall look forward with fond anticipation to the next great annual gathering of the saints in this consecrated grove. But the thought of meeting upon the plains of glory with saints and martyrs of all ages, eclipses every thing else, and fills the mind with joy unspeakable.

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

My Notes.

On Monday morning, Aug. 30th, we parted with the dear saints at the campground, and with reluctant step, and a lingering look upon the lovely, consecrated spot, we passed slowly down to the depot, to await the approach of the iron horse, that should hurry us far away to meet the frowns and sneers of the Lord's enemies, and to pass through another series of trials and temptations. It was hard parting from those loved ones, but we shall be joined in heart, and hope to meet soon at the marriage supper of the Lamb, in company with all the good that have ever lived. We feel the need of patience to wait for the glad day.

From Wilbraham, we went to the campmeeting at Savoy, stopping over night at Goshen, where a devoted church has been recently established by the faithful labors of Bro. H. Pratt.

Tuesday, in company with Bro. P., we passed through a romantic country, till we arrived at the encampment, located in a sequestered grove, near Bro. Myrick's. Brn. J. Hemenway and S. W. Bishop accompanied us. Preaching in the afternoon and evening by the writer. We attended only these two meetings, but judging from what we saw, heard, and felt, we came to the conclusion that those who remained through the meeting, would report that they had enjoyed a profitable season.

Wednesday morning we took leave of the children of the Lord, and started for Pownal, Vt. After a pleasant ride over the Hoosick mountain, through which they are now boring the railroad tunnel, one of the greatest enterprises of the age, we landed safely at South Adams, where we met Bro. Damman, on his way to the encampment. Leaving South Adams, we went to North Adams on the cars, thence to Williamstown, by stage, where we were met by Bro. M. Batchelor, who took us to his pilgrim home, where we enjoyed quiet rest in his happy family. In the evening, we met for worship in the church where Bro. B. preaches. Their church is a very neat and pleasant one, and indicates a high degree of religious prosperity. Bro. B. has been pastor over the congregation in Pownal for several years, and the people seem to appreciate his faithful watch-care.

Thursday morning, in company with Bro. B., we started for the grove meeting at Hoosick. We passed through a beautiful valley, watered by the Hoosick river, and when we arrived at the grove selected for the meeting, we found ourselves surrounded by the most handsome farming district we ever saw. Our meeting commenced Thursday A. M., and continued over the following Lord's day. The best of order was observed during the entire meeting, and much good was accomplished in scattering the truth and light, and in awakening a disposition in the hearts of the people to obey the commandments of the Lord. This is a field where Bro. Batchelor has bestowed his faithful labors, and seen the most happy results. We had a very large congregation on the Lord's day, characterized by deep interest in the truth, with an attentive ear while it was presented. At the close of the afternoon services, in the presence of a cloud of witnesses, Bro. Batchelor led seven down into the water, and buried them with Christ in baptism. It was a happy hour for the disciples of Jesus.

God's People Known to Him.

Tamar may disquiet herself, and walk in an unaccustomed path, so as Judah may not know her. Isaac, through the dimness of his sight, may bless Jacob and pass Esau. Tract of time may make Joseph to forget or be forgotten by his brethren.—Solomon may doubt to whom of right the child belongeth; and Christ may come to his own and not be received. But the Lord knoweth who are his, and his eye is always over them. Time, place, speech, or apparel, cannot obscure or darken his eye or ear. He can discern Daniel in the den—Job, though never so much changed, on the dung-hill; let Jonah be lodged in the whale's belly, Peter be put into a close prison, Lazarus be wrapped in rags, or Abel rolled in blood; yet can he call them by name, and send his angels to comfort them. Ignorance and forgetfulness may cause love and knowledge to be estranged in the creature, but the Lord is not incident to either; for his eye, as his essence, is everywhere; he knoweth all things. —John Barlow, 1616.

☞ We never knew a man disposed to scorn the humble, who was not himself a fair object of scorn to the humblest.

For the Crisis.

Inference.

To attempt to prove a doctrine of Scripture merely from inference, without any positive testimony, as is too often done in the effort to establish the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, by our orthodox divines, is contrary to all rules of sound exegesis, destitute of all authority, and a most unsafe way of arriving at the truth. First establish your doctrine on clear, literal and positive grounds, from the word of God, as a sure foundation; and then build up your superstructure with as many inferences as you please, making assurance doubly sure.

The positive testimony of scripture, with regard to the final destruction of the wicked, has been abundantly shown; and no doctrine in the whole Bible has clearer or more positive proof to substantiate it than this, that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," perish, be destroyed, as chaff is destroyed in the fire. I may therefore be permitted to add some inferences to these positive declarations, if possible to open the eyes of some, who are not willfully and obstinately blinded by custom and prejudice against the truth.

Moses, when pleading with God for the pardon of the people in worshiping the golden calf, made use of these words: "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin: and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written."—Ex. 32: 31, 32. If Moses intended by this, that he was willing to sacrifice his present and future life, that he might perish forever with his people, it was indeed a great sacrifice, the greatest he could offer. It would have been much to offer up his present life, and show that he preferred death with his people to life without them; but when he is willing to forget his title to immortality, if Israel could not enjoy it with him, this is indeed disinterested love, with scarcely a parallel in the whole range of human history. "Scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man, some would even dare to die." This applies only to the present life, and not to the life to come; and is yet considered a rare instance of friendship, for one to lay down his life for a friend. Here I cannot help remarking, though it is somewhat out of place, that if the popular theory be true, that "death," to the christian, "is the gate to endless joy," it would not surely be a very great sacrifice to be willing to enter that gate, either for, or with a friend, at any time.

If Moses understood that to be blotted out of the book of life was not to perish forever, but to live in torment, and in unceasing rebellion against God to all eternity, is it a supposable case that he could be willing to expose himself to this horrible fate, under any circumstances whatever? I draw this inference, then, from this passage: that Moses had no idea, when he uttered this prayer, that either he, or his people, could be exposed to an eternity of torment, sin and woe, as now taught in our theology. How could he, when not a word is said on the subject in the four books of Moses?

I draw the same inference too, from the language of the apostle Paul, in Rom. 9: 3—"For I could wish that myself were accused before Christ, for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." Could Paul be understood as here wishing, and willing, to endure endless torment, endless sin, and endless woe, even to save his brethren from the same calamity? He might be willing to endure the penalty of everlasting destruction, and have his name blotted out of the book of life, for his brethren, his kinsmen according to the flesh, that they might enjoy eternal life without him; but more than this, is neither reasonable, scriptural nor possible; and to believe an impossibility, is stretching faith a little too far; and, thanks be to God, he requires no such a sacrifice at our hands. It is enough for us to believe that the wages of sin is death, and the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. J. P.

☞ There are a great many men in the world with loose notions of the vast secrets which lie undeveloped in nature's bosom; but who, as soon as one practical man succeeds in extracting these secrets by dint of painful thought and labor, and elaborating them so that the world shall enjoy the advantages of the discovery, modestly appropriate to their own genius what is the clear property of another man's labor of brains and hand.

For the Crisis.

Patience and Peace.

Go together. You cannot separate them. God has married them for all time. Man's strength is to endure. Whatever man can inflict, I am overcomer if I can bear it all patiently. "What can your religion do for you now?" said a cruel master as he lifted the gory scourge from the bleeding back of a faithful slave. "It teaches me to love you, mass'r," was the victorious reply.—And the slave with love was stronger than the master with a scourge. Ah, this patient principle of love is mightier than rage and wrath. One is the billow—wind-lashed, angry, towering and foaming around; the other is the rock—serene in impregnable strength; unmoved in all the fury of the storm.

Peace gives patience, and patience gives peace. Both act and re-act upon each other. If you want peace, be patient.—Don't fret. Don't worry. Leave God to order all thy ways. Don't pick green apples from the tree of providence—they'll set your teeth on edge, besides making you sick. Let them get ripe—then they are better.

Be patient. There's nothing but sorrow gained by fretting. But for the patient there is peace. Peace like a river. Bear the little trials that surround you on every hand. Don't fret nor worry nor scold nor rage. Be patient. Let the world wag.—Let the devil bark. Smile at Satan's rage. There's nothing that makes him so mad as that. Hide in the rock of ages. Then let the storm howl. Have faith in God.

Be patient unto the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. Be patient toward all men, including your husband. Toward all women, your own wife included. Towards all children, not excepting your own. Have patience and you'll save a good deal of repenting, sighing, confessing and crying. Keep quiet. It will make the house quiet, the neighborhood quiet, the church quiet, and if all would be patient, the world would be much quieter than it is. Try it, my friend. Have patience, and you will have peace—peace like a river, and righteousness like the waves of the sea.

God bless thee, tried, troubled, perplexed pilgrim, and help thee to be patient to the end. So be it. H. L. H.

Edenboro, Pa., July 23d, 1858.

Blessedness in Sorrow.

There are times when some great sorrow has torn the mind from its familiar supports, and laid level those defenses which in prosperity seemed so stable—when the most rooted convictions of the reason seem rottenness, and the blossom of our heavenward imagination goes up before that blast as dust—when our works, and joys, and hopes, with all their multitude, and pomp, and glory, seem to go down together into the pit, and the soul is left as a garden that hath no water, and as a wandering bird cast out of the nest—in that day of trouble, and of treading down, and perplexity, the noise of viols, the mirth of the tabret, and the joy of the harp, are silent in the grave. Blessed is the man who, when cast into this utter wretchedness, far away from all creatures and from all comfort, can yet be willing, amidst all his tears and his anguish, there to remain as long as God shall please.—British Quar.

A Mother.

Around the idea of one's mother, the mind of man clings with fond affection. It is the first dear thought stamped upon our infant hearts, when yet soft and capable of receiving the most profound impressions, and all the after feelings are more or less light in comparison. Our passions and our willfulness may lead us far from the object of our filial love; but when death has stilled her monitory voice, and nothing but calm memory remains to recapitulate her virtues and good deeds, affection, like a flower beaten to the ground by rude storms, raises up her head and smiles amid her tears. Round that idea, as we have said, the mind clings with fond affection; and even when the earlier period of our loss forces memory to be silent, fancy takes the place of remembrance and twines the image of our departed parent with a garland of graces, and beauties, and virtues, which we doubt not she possessed.

☞ There is an ugly kind of forgiveness in this world—a kind of hedgehog forgiveness, shot out like quills. Men take one who has offended, and set him down before the blowpipe of their indignation, and scorch him, and burn his fault into him; and when they have kneaded him sufficiently with their fiery fists, then—they forgive him.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

Bro. Grant:—I think it time we spoke out more fully and freely on the great truth of life only in Christ; i. e. by telling our experiences, as converts from tradition, &c., whether it has produced more love for God, more of a spirit of non-conformity to this world, yea or nay; for I find a propensity (in certain quarters) to search for all the bad men, bad notions, &c., that can be found among professed Adventists, who believe the Bible teaches the unconscious state of the dead and destruction of the wicked, &c., and then hold up such before the world, as a proof that we are in a dreadful error which will eventually damn all who believe it.

When I professedly believed in an eternity of torment, I was not a better man than now; I did not love God as now. I dreaded a contest with Universalists, for I knew not how to vindicate God's character as a being of love and goodness. I became a wicked backslider in that time; but since this great and glorious truth has filled my soul, I have felt almost like being in a new world. I now see that God is love. I love Him now as never before. I fear Him as a good child fears to offend a good, kind parent. I drank rum then; now I am a temperance man, abstaining from intoxicating drinks, tobacco (that handmaid of intemperance,) tea, coffee, &c., believing, as I do, that I ought to present my body a living sacrifice to God, holy and acceptable, and not in a defiled state; for such as defile the temple of God, he will destroy; and I fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. I do not need the doctrine of the popular Orthodox hell torments preached to me to restrain me from drinking whiskey, keeping drinking and gambling saloons, siding with Kansas Border Ruffians, &c., &c., for I am satisfied that all such will finally be lost; for they certainly cannot love God, or his cause; if they did, they would voluntarily strive to do all his righteous will.

I think it a sure sign that men are hard pushed for arguments, when they begin to pick up hypocrites and world-loving professors of religion, to exhibit their many wrong doings, and never in charity show a little of the other side of the picture.

I find good devoted christians who believe in eternal torment: and what does it all argue? Let us not imitate the old Jews, who, instead of investigating Christ's doctrine, in a spirit of kindness, were constantly assailing his character; but rather prove all things, holding fast that which is good. To the law and the testimony; and may God defend the right.

I remain your Bro. in Christ, professing to have that hope which leads its possessor cheerfully and constantly to purify himself.

J. T. Dixon.

Peace Dale, R. I.

From Sr. L. P. Hastings.

Dearly beloved pilgrims and strangers, scattered abroad over this wilderness world, permit me to address you once more through the common medium. And first let me say that I am thankful that we have a medium, but not such as the professedly disembodied spirits use, but may it be in deed and in truth a Spiritual medium, and one through which kindred spirits may have a free interchange of pure thoughts, sentiments and feelings. It does appear to me that the point of time is near when, in prophetic imagery, John saw the "Beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him that sat on the horse, and against his army;" and his name is called "The Word of God." Surely against the word of God all the powers of earth are combining and arraying themselves for desperate conflict, and it does appear to me the time will soon come when all who will stand up boldly on the word of God alone, will know what it is to engage in this mighty but final struggle. Oh, who will stand? who will be well shod with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace?

May the Lord open our eyes to discern the signs of the times. We especially need the shield of faith. May the Lord help us to take it. I love to hear from the pilgrims scattered abroad, as we are quite alone. Although there are those of like faith in Michigan, we do not often see one. Our Eastern friends, and those who have lately left there, of our acquaintance, are still dear to us, and we often remember the precious interviews of former days, and long for their return.

May the Lord bless those who meet in the name of the Lord at the anticipated campmeetings, and remember that the lonely ones are with you in spirit. Adieu.

L. P. Hastings.

P. S. Should Bro. Hemenway or any other of the Lord's watchmen be passing through Galesburgh, Michigan, we should be glad to receive a call from them.

For the Crisis.

The Church's Inquiry.

In ancient times, while the prophet Daniel was having portrayed before his vision the mighty overturn, and closing scenes of all earthly governments; the standing up of the Prince of Peace; the resurrection of those that sleep, and the deliverance of every one that shall be found written in the book, the inquiry was made: "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?"—Dan. 12: 6.

Again we look over the page of prophetic history, until we reach a period this side of Messiah's first advent; and we find living under the fifth seal some of his followers, who counted not their lives dear unto them; but "presented their bodies a living sacrifice" upon the altar of God. Consequently, they were slain for the word of God, and the testimony which they held. From them, we have the inquiry: "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?"—Rev. 6.: 10. We have now reached, emphatically, the last days. Here we find, amid the opposition of prejudice, bigotry, scepticism and infidelity; a remnant, humble, contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. They hear the scoffer deridingly ask,—"Where is the promise of his coming?" Pet. 3: 4. They grieve to see the vast majority turn their ears away from truth unto fables; lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof: 2. Tim. 3: 4, 5, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of demons. 1 .Tim. 4: 1. Truly, "Darkness covers the land, and gross darkness the people; and thicker and darker grows the gathering tempest, which is soon to seal the doom of all that love not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness.

The christian warrior, having discovered by the light of prophecy that his warfare will not always continue, anxiously inquires; How long? He beholds the work of iniquity fearfully abounding, the rapid increase of vice and crime, while to some extent cruelty and oppression reign; and again, he inquires: How long? We look back through the lapse of ages, and view man as he was in his primeval state, possessing health and vigor; and destined to an immortal existence, had he not disobeyed the laws of his maker. We take into consideration the present condition of the human family, and how great the contrast! Most sensibly do we realize the sad consequences of man's first, and continual transgression. Disease invades this mortal frame; while grief, distress, fear and anxiety, follow in its train. Then comes Death with his iron grasp. He enters the home-circle, divides and scatters the once happy family, and leaves behind him nothing but lamentation and mourning; and with anxious heart we inquire:

> 'How long shall death the tyrant reign,
> And triumph o'er the just;
> While the rich blood of martyrs slain
> Lies mingled in the dust?'

But there is a brighter side to this picture: thank God. For fallen man He has found a ransom. Life and immortality has been brought to light through the gospel; and we may come into possession of it at the morn of the resurrection, 1. Cor. 15; 54. by virtue of the great atonement—Jesus Christ, who was sacrificed for us. This hope cheers our hearts amid the surrounding gloom, and gives us consolation in the hour of bereavement. With joyful anticipation we look forward to that event, and long for the day to dawn. But, hark! what sound is this that falls on the ear? 'Tis the voice of Gabriel's clarion resounding through the air! The morn of Jubilee has come at last. Descending, in brilliant clouds of glory, is He, who was once for sinners slain; by myriads of the angelic host attended. The command given: Gather ye, "bring my sons from afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth." The graves are seen bursting—the bonds of death are riven—the sleeping saints of all ages come forth, in beauteous immortality. The living are changed in a moment, and together they mount up to meet their Lord in the air. Escorted by the seraphic choir, they enter the holy city—the palace of the great King; there to celebrate the marriage-supper of the Lamb.

Then weary, tempest-tossed and afflicted pilgrim! how comes the rest! Beyond the scenes of mortal strife and human woes, lies thine everlasting habitation. Thy home is located upon earth made new—Paradise restored; where nothing can enter to mar thy felicity! There is an unbroken circle, the family of redeemed ones are gathered; and from them the glad song arises, "as the voice of a great multitude, saying, Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

> "How bright the vision! O, how long
> Shall this glad hour delay?
> Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
> And bring the welcome day!"

East Jay, Me. J. W. GILMAN.

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT - - - - - EDITOR.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 15, 1858.

Office...167 Hanover street.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

LORD'S DAY.—We have mentioned our excellent love feast in the morning, during which one hundred and sixty-three spoke of the love of Jesus. That morning will be long remembered by those who were present. But few such are enjoyed in one's life time. The weather was delightful, and every thing seemed to conspire to make the occasion one of the most heavenly that this earth affords. We think we knew something of the feelings of Peter and John upon the mount of transfiguration, when they said, "it is good for us to be here." It seemed as if heaven and earth had appeared in their most lovely dress, and that all the dear saints were in their happiest frame of mind, while the Holy Spirit was shedding its sweet comfort upon all the Zion-bound pilgrims, and prompting them to sing their most beautiful hymns of praise. The scene was perfectly enchanting.

It must have been a hard heart that was not made soft by those soul-stirring testimonies and the heart-cheering music. Would that all of the Lord's children could have partaken of this rich feast; but if faithful, we shall soon be at the marriage supper of the Lamb, when we shall meet without the sad thought of parting again from the loved ones.

"O hail, happy day."

Before the hour of preaching, people came pouring in from all directions, until thousands were assembled, who showed by their good behavior, that they came to learn the truth of the Bible. All seemed to participate in the good feeling of the meeting, and to manifest a desire to contribute to the happiness of all present. Every human passion appeared to be hushed except those which tend to elevate and inspire to noble deeds, and assimilate us to the pure and lovely. Those who declaim against camp meetings because so much wickedness is practiced, ought to have been present through the whole meeting, and we think they would be compelled to say, that they could not ask for better order than that which prevailed from the commencement to the close of this feast of tabernacles. We saw no disorderly conduct upon the ground during the entire week. We were satisfied that we enjoyed the protecting power of our Father in heaven, whose angels encamped round about us and delivered us from all harm.

Lords day, A. M.—Preaching by the editor. Subject,—Spiritualism.

At the close of the morning discourse, Bro. Fitch from St. Johns, New Brunswick, was ordained for the ministry. The charge was given by Bro. Brewer.

Lord's day, P M. Bro. H. L. Hastings preached an interesting discourse on the christian's hope, to which a large congregation listened with marked attention. We could truly say, that ours is a blessed hope.

Preaching in the evening by the editor. Subject—the thirteenth chapter of Revelation.

At the close of the evening meeting about two hundred and fifty sat down to the table of the Lord to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior. It was a solemn and heavenly season, that will not be soon forgotten by those present.

Thus closed our great feast of tabernacles. We felt sad as we were reminded that in a few hours we should be obliged to give the parting hand, and go out again to meet the frowns of a cold and wicked world, but we were cheered with the hope of meeting ere long, where the word farewell is never spoken.

Seven were baptized, and others found peace in believing. There were thirty-one preachers present besides the five that were ordained.

We ought not to close our report of this interesting meeting without saying, that much credit is due to the committee of arrangements, for their continued efforts to administer to the comfort of all upon the encampment. Those who have not had experience, have but a faint idea of the perplexities of such a situation, but we think few men would give better satisfaction. Should time last, and our lives be spared, we shall look forward with fond anticipation to the next great annual gathering of the saints in this consecrated grove. But the thought of meeting upon the plains of glory with saints and martyrs of all ages, eclipses every thing else, and fills the mind with joy unspeakable.

> "Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
> And bring the welcome day."

My Notes.

On Monday morning, Aug. 30th, we parted with the dear saints at the campground, and with reluctant step, and a lingering look upon the lovely, consecrated spot, we passed slowly down to the depot, to await the approach of the iron horse, that should hurry us far away to meet the frowns and sneers of the Lord's enemies, and to pass through another series of trials and temptations. It was hard parting from those loved ones, but we shall be joined in heart, and hope to meet soon at the marriage supper of the Lamb, in company with all the good that have ever lived. We feel the need of patience to wait for the glad day.

From Wilbraham, we went to the campmeeting at Savoy, stopping over night at Goshen, where a devoted church has been recently established by the faithful labors of Bro. H. Pratt.

Tuesday, in company with Bro. P., we passed through a romantic country, till we arrived at the encampment, located in a sequestered grove, near Bro. Myrick's. Brn. J. Hemenway and S. W. Bishop accompanied us. Preaching in the afternoon and evening by the writer. We attended only these two meetings, but judging from what we saw, heard, and felt, we came to the conclusion that those who remained through the meeting, would report that they had enjoyed a profitable season.

Wednesday morning we took leave of the children of the Lord, and started for Pownal, Vt. After a pleasant ride over the Hoosick mountain, through which they are now boring the railroad tunnel, one of the greatest enterprises of the age, we landed safely at South Adams, where we met Bro. Damman, on his way to the encampment. Leaving South Adams, we went to North Adams on the cars, thence to Williamstown, by stage, where we were met by Bro. M. Batchelor, who took us to his pilgrim home, where we enjoyed quiet rest in his happy family. In the evening, we met for worship in the church where Bro. B. preaches. Their church is a very neat and pleasant one, and indicates a high degree of religious prosperity. Bro. B. has been pastor over the congregation in Pownal for several years, and the people seem to appreciate his faithful watch-care.

Thursday morning, in company with Bro. B., we started for the grove meeting at Hoosick. We passed through a beautiful valley, watered by the Hoosick river, and when we arrived at the grove selected for the meeting, we found ourselves surrounded by the most handsome farming district we ever saw. Our meeting commenced Thursday A. M., and continued over the following Lord's day. The best of order was observed during the entire meeting, and much good was accomplished in scattering the truth and light, and in awakening a disposition in the hearts of the people to obey the commandments of the Lord. This is a field where Bro. Batchelor has bestowed his faithful labors, and seen the most happy results. We had a very large congregation on the Lord's day, characterized by deep interest in the truth, with an attentive ear while it was presented. At the close of the afternoon services, in the presence of a cloud of witnesses, Bro. Batchelor led seven down into the water, and buried them with Christ in baptism. It was a happy hour for the disciples of Jesus.

God's People Known to Him.

Tamar may disquiet herself, and walk in an unaccustomed path, so as Judah may not know her. Isaac, through the dimness of his sight, may bless Jacob and pass Esau. Tract of time may make Joseph to forget or be forgotten by his brethren.—Solomon may doubt to whom of right the child belongeth; and Christ may come to his own and not be received. But the Lord knoweth who are his, and his eye is always over them. Time, place, speech, or apparel, cannot obscure or darken his eye or ear. He can discern Daniel in the den—Job, though never so much changed, on the dung-hill; let Jonah be lodged in the whale's belly, Peter be put into a close prison, Lazarus be wrapped in rags, or Abel rolled in blood; yet can he call them by name, and send his angels to comfort them. Ignorance and forgetfulness may cause love and knowledge to be estranged in the creature, but the Lord is not incident to either; for his eye, as his essence, is everywhere; he knoweth all things. —John Barlow, 1616.

☞ We never knew a man disposed to scorn the humble, who was not himself a fair object of scorn to the humblest.

For the Crisis.

Inference.

To attempt to prove a doctrine of Scripture merely from inference, without any positive testimony, as is too often done in the effort to establish the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, by our orthodox divines, is contrary to all rules of sound exegesis, destitute of all authority, and a most unsafe way of arriving at the truth. First establish your doctrine on clear, literal and positive grounds, from the word of God, as a sure foundation; and then build up your superstructure with as many inferences as you please, making assurance doubly sure.

The positive testimony of scripture, with regard to the final destruction of the wicked, has been abundantly shown; and no doctrine in the whole Bible has clearer or more positive proof to substantiate it than this, that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," perish, be destroyed, as chaff is destroyed in the fire. I may therefore be permitted to add some inferences to these positive declarations, if possible to open the eyes of some, who are not willfully and obstinately blinded by custom and prejudice against the truth.

Moses, when pleading with God for the pardon of the people in worshiping the golden calf, made use of these words: "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin: and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written."—Ex. 32: 31, 32. If Moses intended by this, that he was willing to sacrifice his present and future life, that he might perish forever with his people, it was indeed a great sacrifice, the greatest he could offer. It would have been much to offer up his present life, and show that he preferred death with his people to life without them; but when he is willing to forget his title to immortality, if Israel could not enjoy it with him, this is indeed disinterested love, with scarcely a parallel in the whole range of human history. "Scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man, some would even dare to die." This applies only to the present life, and not to the life to come; and is yet considered a rare instance of friendship, for one to lay down his life for a friend. Here I cannot help remarking, though it is somewhat out of place, that if the popular theory be true, that "death," to the christian, "is the gate to endless joy," it would not surely be a very great sacrifice to be willing to enter that gate, either for, or with a friend, at any time.

If Moses understood that to be blotted out of the book of life was not to perish forever, but to live in torment, and in unceasing rebellion against God to all eternity, is it a supposable case that he could be willing to expose himself to this horrible fate, under any circumstances whatever? I draw this inference, then, from this passage: that Moses had no idea, when he uttered this prayer, that either he, or his people, could be exposed to an eternity of torment, sin and woe, as now taught in our theology. How could he, when not a word is said on the subject in the four books of Moses?

I draw the same inference too, from the language of the apostle Paul, in Rom. 9: 3—"For I could wish that myself were accused before Christ, for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." Could Paul be understood as here wishing, and willing, to endure endless torment, endless sin, and endless woe, even to save his brethren from the same calamity? He might be willing to endure the penalty of everlasting destruction, and have his name blotted out of the book of life, for his brethren, his kinsmen according to the flesh, that they might enjoy eternal life without him; but more than this, is neither reasonable, scriptural nor possible; and to believe an impossibility, is stretching faith a little too far; and, thanks be to God, he requires no such a sacrifice at our hands. It is enough for us to believe that the wages of sin is death, and the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. J. P.

☞ There are a great many men in the world with loose notions of the vast secrets which lie undeveloped in nature's bosom; but who, as soon as one practical man succeeds in extracting these secrets by dint of painful thought and labor, and elaborating them so that the world shall enjoy the advantages of the discovery, modestly appropriate to their own genius what is the clear property of another man's labor of brains and hand.

For the Crisis.

Patience and Peace.

Go together. You cannot separate them. God has married them for all time. Man's strength is to endure. Whatever man can inflict, I am overcomer if I can bear it all patiently. "What can your religion do for you now?" said a cruel master as he lifted the gory scourge from the bleeding back of a faithful slave. "It teaches me to love you, mass'r," was the victorious reply.—And the slave with love was stronger than the master with a scourge. Ah, this patient principle of love is mightier than rage and wrath. One is the billow—wind-lashed, angry, towering and foaming around; the other is the rock—serene in impregnable strength; unmoved in all the fury of the storm.

Peace gives patience, and patience gives peace. Both act and re-act upon each other. If you want peace, be patient.—Don't fret. Don't worry. Leave God to order all thy ways. Don't pick green apples from the tree of providence—they'll set your teeth on edge, besides making you sick. Let them get ripe—then they are better.

Be patient. There's nothing but sorrow gained by fretting. But for the patient there is peace. Peace like a river. Bear the little trials that surround you on every hand. Don't fret nor worry nor scold nor rage. Be patient. Let the world wag.—Let the devil bark. Smile at Satan's rage. There's nothing that makes him so mad as that. Hide in the rock of ages. Then let the storm howl. Have faith in God.

Be patient unto the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. Be patient toward all men, including your husband. Toward all women, your own wife included. Towards all children, not excepting your own. Have patience and you'll save a good deal of repenting, sighing, confessing and crying. Keep quiet. It will make the house quiet, the neighborhood quiet, the church quiet, and if all would be patient, the world would be much quieter than it is. Try it, my friend. Have patience, and you will have peace—peace like a river, and righteousness like the waves of the sea.

God bless thee, tried, troubled, perplexed pilgrim, and help thee to be patient to the end. So be it. H. L. H.

Edenboro, Pa., July 23d, 1858.

Blessedness in Sorrow.

There are times when some great sorrow has torn the mind from its familiar supports, and laid level those defenses which in prosperity seemed so stable—when the most rooted convictions of the reason seem rottenness, and the blossom of our heavenward imagination goes up before that blast as dust—when our works, and joys, and hopes, with all their multitude, and pomp, and glory, seem to go down together into the pit, and the soul is left as a garden that hath no water, and as a wandering bird cast out of the nest—in that day of trouble, and of treading down, and perplexity, the noise of viols, the mirth of the tabret, and the joy of the harp, are silent in the grave. Blessed is the man who, when cast into this utter wretchedness, far away from all creatures and from all comfort, can yet be willing, amidst all his tears and his anguish, there to remain as long as God shall please.—British Quar.

A Mother.

Around the idea of one's mother, the mind of man clings with fond affection. It is the first dear thought stamped upon our infant hearts, when yet soft and capable of receiving the most profound impressions, and all the after feelings are more or less light in comparison. Our passions and our willfulness may lead us far from the object of our filial love; but when death has stilled her monitory voice, and nothing but calm memory remains to recapitulate her virtues and good deeds, affection, like a flower beaten to the ground by rude storms, raises up her head and smiles amid her tears. Round that idea, as we have said, the mind clings with fond affection; and even when the earlier period of our loss forces memory to be silent, fancy takes the place of remembrance and twines the image of our departed parent with a garland of graces, and beauties, and virtues, which we doubt not she possessed.

☞ There is an ugly kind of forgiveness in this world—a kind of hedgehog forgiveness, shot out like quills. Men take one who has offended, and set him down before the blowpipe of their indignation, and scorch him, and burn his fault into him; and when they have kneaded him sufficiently with their fiery fists, then—they forgive him.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

BRO. GRANT:—I think it time we spoke out more fully and freely on the great truth of life only in Christ; i. e. by telling our experiences, as converts from tradition, &c., whether it has produced more love for God, more of a spirit of non-conformity to this world, yea or nay; for I find a propensity (in certain quarters) to search for all the bad men, bad actions, &c., that can be found among professed Adventists, who believe the Bible teaches the unconscious state of the dead and destruction of the wicked, &c., and then hold up such before the world, as a proof that we are in a dreadful error which will eventually damn all who believe it.

When I professedly believed in an eternity of torment, I was not a better man than now; I did not love God as now. I dreaded a contest with Universalists, for I knew not how to vindicate God's character as a being of love and goodness. I became a wicked backslider in that time; but since this great and glorious truth has filled my soul, I have felt almost like being in a new world. I now see that God is love. I love Him now as never before. I fear Him as a good child fears to offend a good, kind parent. I drank rum then; now I am a temperance man, abstaining from intoxicating drinks, tobacco (that handmaid of intemperance,) tea, coffee, &c., believing, as I do, that I ought to present my body a living sacrifice to God, holy and acceptable, and not in a defiled state; for such as defile the temple of God, he will destroy; and I fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. I do not need the doctrine of the popular Orthodox hell torments preached to me to restrain me from drinking whiskey, keeping drinking and gambling saloons, siding with Kansas Border Ruffians, &c., &c., for I am satisfied that all such will finally be lost; for they certainly cannot love God, or his cause; if they did, they would voluntarily strive to do all his righteous will.

I think it a sure sign that men are hard pushed for arguments, when they begin to pick up hypocrites and world-loving professors of religion, to exhibit their many wrong doings, and never in charity show a little of the other side of the picture.

I find good devoted christians who believe in eternal torment: and what does it all argue? Let us not imitate the old Jews, who, instead of investigating Christ's doctrine, in a spirit of kindness, were constantly assailing his character; but rather prove all things, holding fast that which is good. To the law and the testimony; and may God defend the right.

I remain your Bro. in Christ, professing to have that hope which leads its possessor cheerfully and constantly to purify himself.

J. T. DIXON.

Peace Dale, R. I.

From Sr. L. P. Hastings.

Dearly beloved pilgrims and strangers, scattered abroad over this wilderness world, permit me to address you once more through the common medium. And first let me say that I am thankful that we have a medium, but not such as the professedly disembodied spirits use, but may it be in deed and in truth a Spiritual medium, and one through which kindred spirits may have a free interchange of pure thoughts, sentiments and feelings. It does appear to me that the point of time is near when, in prophetic imagery, John saw the "Beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him that sat on the horse, and against his army;" and his name is called "The Word of God." Surely against the word of God all the powers of earth are combining and arraying themselves for desperate conflict, and it does appear to me the time will soon come when all who will stand up boldly on the word of God alone, will know what it is to engage in this mighty but final struggle. Oh, who will stand? who will be well shod with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace?

May the Lord open our eyes to discern the signs of the times. We especially need the shield of faith. May the Lord help us to take it. I love to hear from the pilgrims scattered abroad, as we are quite alone. Although there are those of like faith in Michigan, we do not often see one. Our Eastern friends, and those who have lately left there, of our acquaintance, are still dear to us, and we often remember the precious interviews of former days, and long for their return.

May the Lord bless those who meet in the name of the Lord at the anticipated campmeetings, and remember that the lonely ones are with you in spirit. Adieu.

L. P. HASTINGS.

P. S. Should Bro. Hemenway or any other of the Lord's watchmen be passing through Galesburgh, Michigan, we should be glad to receive a call from them.

Foreign News.

HALIFAX, Sept. 8. The Cunard steamship Asia, Capt. Lott, from Liverpool 28th ult., arrived at this port at 5.30 this morning.

The American and Russian treaties had been concluded. The Americans were believed to have stipulated for an annual visit to Pekin.

The Commissioner at Canton was urging the people to war, and ignored the negotiations at the north.

A proclamation had been issued by General Straubenzee, establishing a partial blockade.

The French government, anticipating more outrages on Christians in consequence of the bombardment of Jeddah, was about to augment its naval forces in the Mediterranean.

It was rumored in Paris, Friday, that the imperial government had demanded from England explanations relative to the bombardment of Jeddah.

The Daily News calls upon the European powers to watch closely American designs upon Nicaragua, under the conviction that the policy of the American government is to acquire possession of the Isthmus.

Charles Drummond, the well known London banker, is dead.

A new French naval station for the Eastern coast of Africa is to be created at Isle Reunion. The Patrie observes, this news is big with important consequences for the influence of the French flag, and prosperity of the French colonies.

TURKEY.

Some ministerial changes are taking place at Constantinople, and the retirement of the Grand Vizier is spoken of.

The Paris correspondent of the Times understands that the Turkish government has complained to the English Ambassador at Constantinople of the bombardment of Jeddah, at a moment when it was known Ismael Pasha was on his way thither with full power to punish the guilty.

The Divan had issued a circular contradictory of the rumor of the approaching destruction of Mecca by the Western powers, which was occasioning great excitement.

More riots are reported in Candia, and ten Christians killed. The Porte demanded the recall of the Greek Consul in Candia.

SPAIN.

A Madrid Telegram of the 25th says a military expedition was being prepared for Havana.

CHINA.

It is stated that the amount of indemnity to be paid by China to England and France, as stipulated in the treaty of Tientin, is 30,000,000 francs.

The report that a reconciliation had taken place between Austria and Russia is formally denied.

Obituary Notices.

Died, in Stone Settlement, C. E, April 19th, 1858, of dropsy, MARY, wife of Edson Kennedy, aged 41 years.

Sister Kennedy obtained a "good hope through grace," which afforded her "everlasting consolation," in the year 1842, by hearing the proclamation, "reform, for the reign of heaven approacheth."

From that time, until she fell asleep in Christ, she maintained the dignity of the Christian character, and obtained a good report through faith. For the last ten years, our sister was "made to possess months of vanity and wearisome nights," by reason of abdominal tumors, which made her life one unmitigated scene of unrest—and called forth the warm sympathies of all who knew her. Disabled by disease—and suffering constant pain, such was her love for truth, that her place in the public meeting was rarely vacant, and she listened to the word of God, and sung the sweet songs of Zion, with a relish, that ought to rebuke those who, in the possession of health, and without excuse, "forsake the assembling of themselves together."

Her disease in its onward progress, resulted in the worst kind of abdominal dropsy, and about thirty months before her death, tapping became necessary, and the accumulation of water was so rapid, that for nearly two years before her death, it had to be repeated twice each week. An exact account was kept of water drawn during thirty months, which amounted to eight hundred and eighty gallons. But our suffering sister is at rest—laid away in gloomy hades, to await the sound of the last trumpet, and catch the earliest notes of the joyful mandate that shall wake the saints to life. Verily, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord—that they may rest from their labors," rest in hope of that bright Eden home, whose inhabitants shall never say, I am sick, where no dropsies shall be either felt or feared,—

'Nor wasted forms, on couches lie,
To wait grim death's approach,
Nor traveller worn with woes he long has borne,
Goes plodding down those blissful vales."

Our sister's death was sudden, but peaceful, and her funeral, as might be expected, was attended by a large concourse of people, to whom the writer preached concerning "Jesus and the resurrection" as a theme of comfort, causing the bereaved, the suffering, to smile through their tears, though in heaviness and sorrowful, yet always rejoicing. May this hope sustain the bereaved circle, and their end be as peaceful.

Blessed the dead, who have died in the Lord,
Wait they in silence the promised reward;
Quiet they rest, from their labors are free,
No more afflicted, or wayworn shall be;
Taken away from the evil to come.
Died they in hope of a glorious home,
When over death they shall have victory—
Awake and put on Immortality.

During the time of their pilgrimage here,
Harrassed with doubt, and perplexed with fear;
Lest in the end—they should be overcome,
And fail to share in the saints' happy home.
The warfare with them forever is o'er,
The last tear is shed—they sorrow no more.
Soon o'er the grave they shall have victory,
Rise all Immortal—the Savior to see.

Through tribulation and sorrow they come,
Washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb;
Counted the honors of earth but as dross—
Willing of all things to suffer the loss;
If by all means they so happy might be Raised with the first to Immortality,
Sown in dishonor, in glory to rise,
Waked by the Saviour, possessed of the prize.

C. P. DOW.

Died, of apoplexy, in Barnston, C. E., June 24, 1858, CLARISSA, wife of Matthew L. Clark, in the 67th year of her age.

Sister Clark experienced religion, and embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ in 1842. About a year ago she had the first fit of apoplexy, which much impaired her health, yet she was able to be about the house and do some work. For a few weeks previous to her decease, she often spoke of dying, and said she did not expect to live and see the Lord come. She spoke with much composure of death, and said she believed she was prepared to meet it. Prayer-meetings on the Sabbath had been held for some time in Bro. Clark's house, and on the Lord's day preceding her death, at the close of the meeting she spoke freely to the brethren and sisters, appeared to enjoy her mind extremely well, and remarked to her son, "You will not have me here long, and when I go it will be suddenly." The next morning, about two o'clock, the fit came and one side of her was completely paralyzed. She had her senses a part of the time afterward, but could not speak distinctly. She lingered till the fourth day, when she fell asleep in Jesus. A discourse was preached at her funeral by Elder D. Merrill, from Thess. 2:16,17. She leaves a husband, three sons and one dagubter, to mourn her loss.

The following lines, expressive of faith and hope, were composed by a relative of the deceased:

To day we meet with those we love,
To-morrow place them with the dead;
But O, we hope to meet them soon
Where farewell tears will ne'er be shed.

Our friends in life, they seem so dear,
'Tis hard to bow beneath the rod;
But O, the stroke seems less severe,
The nearer we approach to God.

Who would not cry, O Jesus come—
Come, put an end to grief and pain;
O speed the time when friends shall meet,
Meet, nevermore to part again!

To those who now in Jesus sleep
A song of triumph he will bring—
"O grave, where is thy victory?
O monster death, where is thy sting?

O, blessed thought, God knows his own,
If in the depths of sea, or land,
And when the last loud trump is blown,
They will appear at his right hand.

J. M. O.

BROTHER GRANT:—It becomes my painful duty to announce to you the death of our beloved brother, Lewis F. Wilkerson, son of Robert and Anna Wilkerson, aged 20 years, after a distressing sickness of fourteen days, of nervous fever. He was the youngest of eight children, and the only one unmarried. He was possessed of a remarkably sweet disposition, and seemed to be a hopeful prop to sustain his aged parents in their declining days; but who are now left to mourn and lament bitterly his early death. But they mourn not without hope. He gave evidence of experimental religion soon after he was fifteen years of age. His moral character was unspotted, and his christian life was remarkably devoted, especially the last few months of his life. He was a firm believer in the speedy coming of Christ; and the glorious subjects of the resurrection and kingdom of God on the new earth, engrossed much of his attention.

On his death-bed he sung parts of several hymns, among which is the following:

"Arise and shine, O Zion fair;
Behold, thy light is come;
The glorious conquering king is near,
To take his exiles home:
The trumpet sounding through the sky
Will set the captives free;
The day of wonders now is nigh,
The year of jubilee.

Arise, ye nations under ground,
Before the Judge appear;
All tongues, all languages, shall come,
Their final doom to hear.
King Jesus on his azure throne,
Ten thousand angels round,
While Gabriel with his awful trump
Echoes the dreadful sound.

The glorious news of gospel grace,
With sinners now is o'er;
The gospel trumpet now is still,
And will be blown no more.
The watchmen now have left the walls,
And bid the world adieu;
And with their flocks on Canaan's shore
They strike their songs anew."

Pray for the mourners.

B. P. HILDRETH.

Will the Advent Herald please copy?

Died, in East Kingston, N. H., Aug. 8th, 1858, L. JULIETT, wife of T. J. Heath, and daughter of Ezra M. and Betsy Currier, aged 18 years, 8 months.

A light is from our household gone,
A voice we love is stilled;
A place is vacant by our side,
Which never can be filled.

We miss her in the fireside group,
Her cheerful voice is hushed;
We cannot see her pleasant smile—
Our earthly hopes are crushed.

Cease, my sad heart, thy mourning now,
Let tears no longer flow;
Look with an eye of faith above—
Look not on things below.

P. S. C.

Married.

In Madison, Me., by Rev. J. F. Farringway, J. C. Baker of Woodstock, N. B., and Miss Eliza A. McKenney, daughter of Henry McKenney of Madison, Me.

Editorial Notices.

☞ To those who have not paid anything for the Crisis during the last year, and who have not written us expressing their inability to pay, we would say, that we shall be under the necessity of discontinuing their papers.

Any who wish for the paper, and cannot pay, will have it continued if they will only inform us of the fact.

☞ Those wishing to get Bro. Hudson's great work, entitled "Debt and Grace," can obtain it in Springfield, Mass., of John Turner, bookseller, two doors north of the Baptist church.

It is sold by Peck, White & Peck, New Haven, and by Hubbard & Burgess, 135 William street, New York.

NOTICES.

☞ Will the writer of the following please give us his address?

"AUGUST 26, 1858.

Brother Grant,—Please continue to send me the Crisis."

ORRIN P. ALLEN'S P. O. address is Hackensack, New Jersey.

Notice to Western Preachers & Churches.

A proposition for a General Convention of Adventists and Millennarians in the West.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—At the last Illinois Annual Conference of Adventists, it was appointed the Secretary to correspond with the several Conferences of the West, with a view to promote a more general and effectual cooperation, in carrying forward the cause of our soon-coming Lord. While attending to this duty, it has been suggested by a number of brethren that we have a General Convention, at some convenient place, some time in the month of November next, to take into consideration the subject of a plan of operations, by which we may unite and perhaps systemize our labors in this wide spread field; and further adopt such measures as may seem calculated to strengthen and build up the cause of Christ in this vast but destitute region. All feel,

"We are living in a grand and awful time," when, if ever, prompt, harmonious, and energetic effort is demanded at the hands of the Church of Christ. This proposition is designed to embrace brethren of the entire Western States, but especially Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. And now will such as are interested in the proposed Convention, let us hear from them immediately, giving us their mind as to the time and place of such a meeting. Address P. B. MORGAN, Ottawa, Ill., (Sect. of the Ill. Conf.)

MOSES CHANDLER,
P. B. MORGAN.

Sept. 1st, 1858.

☞ NOTICE.—If the Lord permit, a Conference will be held in Brunswick, Me., in the Yellow School-house, about 2 1-2 miles from the village, on the Bath road, commencing Thurday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath. We hope to see a good gathering of the firiends in that region. Come, beloved, in the name of the Lord, and let us make one more effort to save sinners, and cheer each other on in our pilgrimage to the better land.

Those coming from abroad will call on Bro. Thomas M. Storer.

R. R. YORK,
I. C. WELLCOME.

Notice for Maine Brethren.

After a pretty general consultation with those interested in the arrangements proposed and recommended by our last Annual Conference in Maine, it is decided that the limits of the Eastern Quarterly Conference shall embrace all east of the Penobscot river, and west of it north of Belfast to the Kennebec river at Waterville, and from thence up north to Brighton and onward.

The Eastern Central Quarterly Conference to embrace all south of that, between Penobscot Bay and the Kennebec river. The Western Central Quarterly Conference to embrace all west of the above, as far as the Androscoggin river, and Livermore, Hartford and Canton, west of that river.

The Western Quarterly Conference to embrace all the remaining western portion of the State.

As some who are interested could not well be consulted in season, and others neglected to respond to their peers in this matter, they will be heard if they think they are not properly convened by the above named limits, and all due changes made.

I. C. WELLCOME, Scribe.

Richmond, Me., Aug. 20, 1858.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove Meeting at Chandler's Mills, Belgrade, Me., commencing Thursday, at 10 o'clock, A. M., September 16, and continue over the Lord's day.

H. B. SEVEY,
I. C. WELLCOME.

Western Central Quarterly Conference.

This Conference will be held in connection with the Grove Meeting at Chandler's Mills, Belgrade, Me., which commences Sept. 16th.

I. C. WELLCOME.
H. B. SEVEY.

Conference at North Raymond, Me.

The Maine Western Quarterly Conference will be held with the church at North Raymond, Me., to commence Thursday, Sept. 16th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. Strangers coming into the place, can call on brethren Stephen Fogg, Stephen Thurlow, Isaac Adams, Bela Latham, Jonas Morrill, Wm. Morrill, Jr., Thomas Morrill, Robert Thurlow, John Tripp, Thomas Smith and John E. Strout.

The friends in Raymond will do all they can to make provision for all who may come. We hope to see a good gathering, both of ministers and membership, filled with the spirit and power of the gospel, to labor directly for the salvation of souls.

In behalf of the brethren,
JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro. D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is to be holden at Lake Village, to commence Thursday, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

A general attendance of brethren, and especially brethren in the ministry, is desired.

The friends at Lake Village will make provision for all who may need.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 23, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber.

P. S. W. DEYO,
Conference Clerk.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Tent Meeting held in Brown County, Ill., some four miles South of Mt. Sterling, near Brn. C. A. Twombly and Joseph Bush, to commence Tuesday, 21st September, and continue over the following Lord's day. There will be a Conference held in connection with the meeting. Elder M. Chandler will be present with the preaching tent, which will make us a commodious house of worship.

We hope all the friends in that region will come without fail, and spend one week in God's worship. Let nothing hinder you from coming. We want to see you—worship with you—confer with you—devise means by which the destitute fields may be supplied with preaching—concentrate our force—bring together the scattered flock—set things in gospel order; yea, arouse ourselves, wake up zeal that we may put forth an effort in harmony with the great enterprise in which we are engaged, and work while the day lasts, for the sun is fast going down.

I will bring Books and Tracts to supply the demand.

WALTER PRATT.

Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill.

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets.

WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.

Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Maine Eastern Central Quarterly Conference.

This Conference will be held in South Hope, commencing Thursday, 2 o'clock P. M., Sept. 30th, and continue over the Sabbath. Ministering brethren and others are invited to attend and labor for the salvation of sinners.

In behalf of the brethren,
THOMAS SMITH,
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Notice

TO THE PREACHERS.

To prevent all further complaint that some monopolize the preaching and preachers; and that others will not help bear the burden, in this place, it is now the conclusion that the brethren will invite those preachers whom they desire, in addition to the stated Sabbath supply. ☞ And those inviting will provide. This is the plan until further arrangements. Meetings are held every Sunday at the Chapel on Arch street. Bro. Turner supplies.

W. S. CAMPBELL,
For the brethren.

New Britain, Aug. 23, 1858.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Bro. J. Couch will preach in Boston, Sunday, Sept. 19th.

I propose to preach, by the Lord's permission, at—

Portsmouth, Sunday,	Sept. 19th.
Salem, Wednesday eve'g,	" 22nd.
Roxbury, Thursday "	" 23d.
Boston, Sunday "	" 26th.
Plymouth, Mass., Sunday,	Oct. 3d.

H. F. CARPENTER.

Bro. H. PRATT appoints to preach in—

Worcester,	Sept. 19th.
Clinton, (evening)	" 20th.
Groton Junction,	" 21st.
Nashua, N. H.,	" 22d.
Concord, " (Chapel)	" 23d,

and over the following Sabbath.

Providence permitting, I will preach in—

Plymouth, Vt.,	Sept. 16th and 17th.
Rutland,	Lord's day, 19th.
Chittendon, at the Wesleyan Methodist Church,	20th and 21st.

MILES GRANT.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.

Bro. J. Hemenway, Sept. 19th, 26th, and Oct. 3d.
Bro. Ira Morgan, Oct. 10th and 17th.
Bro. S. S. Brewer, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.
Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.
Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

Business.

To Correspondents.

R. W. Neal—All right.

Errata in Cash Receipts—

Dr. J. Naramore, Miss A. Field, T. Pease, Benj Jennings and A. Streeter should have been Cr. $2 each.

W. Howard should have been Wm. Rowand, E. G. Cooper E. G. Kingsbury, and R. Randall D. Randall.

Cash Receipts.

B Swan 156, $2,64; C R Baker 156, $1,08; A Stillman 208, $1,50; T Hardy, Jr., $11,75; W Rowarth $10; Capt. E Mitchell 169, $3; A D Eastwood 170, 54 cts.

M Batchelor 187, J D Fletcher 169, F H Smith 169, R Hatch 169,—50 cts each.

G W Wiggin 182, J Marston 182, A Kingsbury 182, P Blanchard 144, J E Healey 162, M Cole 182, J H McCoy 189, A Coy 180, G B Keach 175, D S Cable 176, E Town 156, H H Hemenway 104, R C Jackman 182, L Tayler 182, A Messer 169, C W Brewster 174, W Rowarth 182, J Blaisdell 158, M Waterhouse 158, E Potter 189, F A Tayler 182, J S Heath 182, R Spenser 182, M Broadbent 182, W Sheldon 182, M Steere 182, J Smith 182, W W Doughty 182, H Christensen 185, L S Breckenridge 182, H N Smith 182, S Boothby 160, J Vickery 182, E C Field 156, A C Smith 182, J French 169, J H Sleeper 166, G S Hastings 182, O Jones 182, R O White 180, W Slade 142, S P Goodsell 182, E H Case 156, G L White 182, J Prince 156, S W Austin 177, J Saunders 182, I I Leslie 182,—$1 each.

R E Wood 198, W F Higgins for Worcester Brn. J Myers 201, D Wilson 208, Miss E Dyer 208, S Bliss 182, A Hunt 182, B Fifield 182, M A Stevens 158, S Hooper 110, G F Fowler 195, S Lacy 196, A Edgecomb 182, J C Stevens 170, S N Davis 178, A Smith 190, J Woodruff 182, Mrs J Sloan 156,—$2 each.

For Books and Tracts—B. Snyder 68 cts., T. Hardy, Jr., $5,40, J. Pinkham $1,24.

☞ Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 100 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

MAN'S DESTINY. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cts. Postage, 8 cts.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison and Geo. Storrs. Question:—"Does the Bible teach that the creature Man, which the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground, has a Superadded Entity called the 'soul?'" Price 38 cents, in paper covers; bound, 50 cts. Postage, 8 cts.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.: The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

[Eld. Miles Grant, Editor:—The coincidence of receiving the accompanying lines from Scotland on the same day when I was perusing the interesting communication (No. 5) of Bro. Cotton's, published in your latest No. of the Crisis, is my apology for forwarding the lines for publication in your Advent columns, as the deceased was an humble lover and expectant of King Jesus.

Yours in Christian faith,

J. L. Boyd.

South Groton, Mass.]

LINES

Written when reflecting on the fate of a departed brother, who perished by the burning of the steamship "Montreal," June 26, 1857.

Dear brother, alas! thou art gone, and forever;
All thy fond cherished hopes with thyself are laid low;
Though sweet thy fond ties that once bound us together,
How soon are they snapped by Death's merciless blow!

In the June of thy life, with thy beauties half blown,
And the fragrance of youth beaming bright in thine eye;
From a home where the warmest affections had grown,
Thou didst haste to depart,—it was only to die!

Oh! why should our hearts such endearments e'er form?
Is it only to cause us vexation and pain?
And why must our loved ones thus from us be torn
And parted asunder—will we ne'er meet again?

Ah! yes; though in shreds our affections be riven—
Though the earth be consumed, and the heavens depart—
Though to Death o'er our bodies the victory be given—
Though each heart he may pierce by his sin-poisoned darts—

Yet those who "in Jesus" are peacefully sleeping,
In His Kingdom shall meet where no parting is known;
The dread sword of Death, which hath caused us such weeping,
His own bosom shall pierce, and its owner dethrone.

James Grant.

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 26th, 1858.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Papal Authority in a Small Sphere.

Modesty and propriety seem to require that when a teacher assumes his position, who takes it on trust from feeling or tradition, should not rush recklessly over his wiser and better instructed brother, lest he dash and break on "the rock of ages." Heb. 1: 1–10; Ps. 102: 1–25.

The Lord God Almighty, our Father in heaven, is revealed in Heb. 1: 1–10, as having spoken "to the fathers by the prophets, and in these last days by his Son, whom HE hath appointed heir of all things." This Son hath by inheritance "a more excellent name than" angels. His "Lord" saith to him, "I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son." Again, "unto the Son HE saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever; . . . God, even thy God, hath anointed (Messiah) thee above thy fellows."—Ps. 45: 7; Heb. 1: 7–9. Thus in the eight verses, eight times this distinction is made and maintained.

Who then is the "Lord" in verse 10 of this chapter? The answer is found in Ps. 102: 1–25. The word says "Jehovah" eight times (though once contracted.) Verses 1, 12, 15, 16, 18, 19, 21 and 22. In verse 24 the word God is a contraction of Aloah. The Lord God is here the "One God"—the Creator. Thus we find an whole octave of witnesses in both Testaments to this point, that the Lord is God Almighty, and not "the Son," in Heb. 1.

Let any one hereafter rush on this "rock" who may feel competent. But there is no seeming modesty, much less, piety, in him who, against all this weight of proof, assumes to judge us "infidel" and "blasphemous," who "believe" more than he has, as yet, apprehended. J. B. C.

For the Crisis.

"Thou Shalt Surely Die."

Christ came to the world to save man from one of two things: endless existence in misery, or an eternal state of death. One of these conditions must therefore be meant by the phrase "thou shalt surely die." We may darken the subject by a multitude of words, but to this point we must come at last: When God said, "thou shalt surely die," did He mean that Adam and his posterity should exist eternally in torment?

Will those who believe the sinner is to be eternally conscious and suffer endless pain, say frankly and confidently without qualification that this is the meaning of the death threatened to Adam? L.

For the Crisis.

Life.

Life consists of a continued series of actions and re-actions looking to some particular end, and necessarily carried on through a structure of material particles, which constitute an organism. There is a vital principle at work among those particles, that goes to make up the organism, which surpasses anything which man has ever yet devised or ever can devise. It is an agency about which we know but little, yet we can trace its effects from the phenomena which it produces.

In tracing animal and vegetable life to its origin, as far as we are able by the aid of the microscope, we find that each distinct organism takes its rise from a very minute atom, and gradually increases by the addition of new matter until it attains its full growth. So an injured part is repaired from the surrounding parts. The process by which these systems are built up and renovated, is termed cell-growth. The first cell or germ has the power of originating other cells, and these new cells still others. This is done in several different ways. In some cases the original cell is divided into two, and in other cases the new cells originate from germs in the walls of the present cell. Thus in the constant wear of the animal system, when one cell has been used up in liberating force, several new cells take its place.

From the original cell, those of all parts of the organism arise; but when the system has once been completed, a particular cell is capable of originating only those of its own kind. These germs lie dormant until called into action by some exciting medium, and that action is continued only by a constant supply of nutrient matter. Hence has arisen the question whether life, or the vital principle, resides inherently within the germ, or whether it is derived from some external source. This is a difficult question, and will continue to be, so long as we know not what that vital principle is. We may conjecture, and attribute this principle to heat, electricity, chemical affinity, and the like, but we have no hope of arriving at absolute certainties. Its achievement lies beyond the scope of scientific development.

The fact that from a single germ, the whole system is developed, including the system of nerves which regulate the vital actions, whose centre may be the original centre from which the organism started, would lead some to suppose that the vital principle is inherent, and is ready to take on action as soon as the necessary matter is afforded with which to build up an organism. Also, in the case of repair, the germs contained in the walls of the cell destroyed would seem to derive their vital principle from that cell, as they do not germinate until the old cell dies, although surrounded with nutrient matter.

Again, others suppose this force comes from heat, and in the case of repair, is produced by the burning out of the old cell. In both cases, whether of repair or of original growth, heat is essential to action. Others, again, attribute it to electricity, considering that nervous action is performed through the agency of electricity, and that this action is caused by nervous power. The blood has been supposed to contain the principle of life, and by its contact with the germ, excites it to action, during which action it appropriates to its use the nutrient properties of the blood. Again, chemical affinity is not the last cause which has been spoken of, for there are many other theories. This affinity results from the presence of the blood, or by means of the heat evolved in chemical combination. In assigning either of these causes, we come no nearer to the real fact than when we say that it is a vital principle. For we "cannot tell from whence it comes, or whither it goeth."

Life, then, is a problem, the solution of which cannot arise from a philosophical explanation. We see death is momentarily taking place in all organic matter, and that a constant addition of life is necessary to existence. This life, the Scriptures tell us, is inherent only in him who made all things, for God alone hath immortality. All other life is a gift, and while the precious boon is imparted, through first or second causes, it matters not, the tendency to decay and death is stayed; but when God withdraws his all-sustaining arm, we die. Thus it is with respect to a future state; those only can expect to live to whom life is promised. This comes through Jesus Christ, whom God raised from the dead that he might bring many sons unto glory. Charles H. Perkins.

Boston, Aug. 23d.

For the Crisis.

The Cause in the West.

SECOND TOUR.

Wednesday, July 7th, started for my Quarterly meeting at Elizabeth, Jo Davis County, in company with Brn. Jones and Gilson. Stopped at Union Grove the first night, with Bro. Abijah Heard, formerly from Vermont; found a cordial reception. His house is a pilgrim's home. Thursday morning started again. Arrived in time at Elizabeth for an evening meeting. Met a company of warm hearts, anxiously waiting for my arrival. Meeting commenced well. Friday, pitched our tent; had a meeting in it in the afternoon. A storm came up during service, and nearly blowed our tent down; but we saved it; no one hurt; the tent but little damaged; repaired again and went on; had a refreshing season. Bro. Janes stopped till Wednesday morning, and baptized three who were willing to put on Christ. Monday, I started in company with Brn. Gibson and Moyer from McHenry Co., (the latter recently converted; a very promising young man, who feels it his duty to preach the Gospel,) for Wis., Crawford Co., a distance of about 150 miles. Arrived there on Thursday. Friday, commenced meeting. Continued over Sunday. A great gathering; good interest; very busy time, yet the people turned out well. Monday, started for Viroqua, Badax Co., 25 miles, leaving appointment for the next Sunday. At Seneca got out an appointment at Viroqua for Tuesday night, in the Christian meeting-house. Had a great turnout; never heard anything of the kind before; great attention. Continued my meetings there till Friday evening. God blessed the word, and many embraced the truth. The whole community was moved; some hardened sinners were made to feel who had never been known to take any interest before; they wanted to hear more, but I had to return to Seneca on Saturday, and left them for the present. Sunday, at Seneca; good turnout; great interest; concluded to stay till Tuesday or Wednesday and baptize, and organize a church. Monday evening preached. Tuesday morning at nine o'clock repaired to a creek, about three miles, to baptize. It rained some, but there was a great gathering, and God gave us a shower of divine grace. I baptized thirteen happy souls; and such a melting time I never witnessed before at the water. God's spirit was manifested in power. In the evening met again; had a short discourse on church order, and organized a church of seventeen. I think I concluded I would stop one day more. That evening the work started anew, and concluded I would stay over another Sunday; so we continued our meeting, interest increasing.

Saturday, had a number up for prayers; one infidel among the rest, (who was baptized the next day.) Sunday morning preached to a large congregation. After preaching went to the water again, and baptized six more. At five o'clock met for preaching again; house crowded; many could not get in. Preached my last discourse for the present; after which we partook of the Lord's Supper. It was a feast indeed; many will remember the season till the judgment.

The general cry was from most every quarter, Come to our neighborhood; and many would plead, with tears in their eyes, for the word of life. O, that there were more faithful laborers in this Western field. Monday, August 2, I started for the Mississippi river, to take steamboat for home. The distance to the river was six miles. Two loads followed me there, and I preached and baptized two more, making in all twenty-one, and swelled the number on our church list to twenty-six. Tuesday took steamboat. Wednesday evening arrived home, after being absent four weeks; found the family well. O, how good the Lord is; how good it is to trust in him.

Moses Chandler.

The Mother.—Despise not thy mother when she is old. Age may wear and waste a mother's beauty, strength, limbs, sense and estate; but her relation as a mother is as the sun when it goes forth in its might, for it is always in its meridian, and knoweth no evening. The person may be grey-headed, but her motherly relation is even in its bloom. It may be autumn—yes, winter, but with the mother as a mother, it is always spring. Alas! how little do we appreciate a mother's tenderness while living. But when she is dead—when the cares and coldness of the world come withering to our heart—when we experience how difficult it is to find true sympathy—how few love us for ourselves—how few will befriend us in misfortune—then it is that we think of the mother that we have lost.

Choice Selections.

The Widow's Lamp.

Some years ago there dwelt a widow in a lonely cottage on the sea-shore. All around her the coast was rugged and dangerous, and many a time was her heart melted by the sight of wrecked fishing boats and coasting vessels, and the piteous cries of perishing human beings. One stormy night, when the howling wind was making her loneliness more lonely, and her mind was conjuring up what the next morning's light might disclose, a happy thought occurred to her. Her cottage stood on an elevated spot, and her window looked out upon the sea—might she not place her lamp by that window, and it might be a beacon-light to warn some poor mariner off the coast? She did so; all her life after, during the winter's nights, her lamp burned at the window, and many a poor fisherman had cause to bless God for the widow's lamp—many a crew were saved from perishing.

That widow woman "did what she could." And if all believers kept their light burning as brightly and steadily, might not many a soul be warned to flee from the wrath to come? Many Christians have not the power to do much active service for Christ, but if they would but live as lights in the world, they would do much. If those who cannot preach to the old or teach the young, would but walk worthy of Him who hath called them to his kingdom and glory, how much would the hands of ministers be strengthened and their hearts encouraged! We are told that the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus to death, because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away and believed on Jesus. Lazarus does not seem to have been either a teacher or preacher, yet his very presence was a converting proof of the power of the Lord of glory. Should not all who have known the power and grace of Him who still is the resurrection and the life, so walk that men may take knowledge of them that they have been with Jesus?

It is not thus with those who, "by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, and immortality." Day by day, minute by minute, they execute the appointed task to which the requisite measure of time and strength is proportioned; and thus, having worked while it is called to-day, they at length rest from their labors, and "their works do follow them!"

Let us, then, "whatever our hands find to do, do it with all our might," recollecting that now is the proper and "accepted time."

Morning Prayer.

So fit and useful is morning devotion, it ought not to be omitted without necessity. If our circumstances will allow the privilege, it is a bad sign when no part of the morning is spent in prayer. If God finds no place in our minds at that early and peaceful hour, he will hardly recur to us in the tumults of life. If the benefits of the morning do not soften us, we can hardly expect the heart to melt with gratitude through the day. If the world then rush in and take possession of us, when we are at some distance and have had a respite from its cares, how can we hope to shake it off when we shall be in the midst of it, pressed and agitated by it on every side? Let a part of the morning, if possible, be set apart to devotion; and to this end we should fix the hour of rising, so that we may have an early hour at our own disposal. Our piety is suspicious, if we can renounce, as too many do, the pleasures and benefits of early prayer, rather than forego the senseless indulgence of unnecessary sleep. What! we can rise early enough for business. We can even anticipate the dawn, if a favorite pleasure or an uncommon gain request the effort. But we cannot rise, that we may bless our great Benefactor, that we may arm ourselves for the severe conflicts to which our principles are to be exposed! We are willing to rush into the world, without thanks offered or a blessing sought! From a day thus begun, what ought we to expect but thoughtlessness and guilt.—Dr. Channing.

Aspiration.

I have seen a lark rising from his bed of grass and soaring upwards, singing as he rises, and in hopes to get to heaven and climb above the clouds; but the poor bird was beaten back with the loud sighing of an eastern wind, and his motion made irregular and inconstant, descending more at every breath of the tempest than all the vibrations of his wings served to exalt him, till the little creature was forced to sit down and pant, and stay till the storm was overpast; and then it made a prosperous flight; for then it did rise and sing, as if it had learned music and motion from some angel as he passed some time through the air. So is the prayer of the good man when agitated by any passion. He fain would speak to God, and his words are of this earth, earthly; he would look to his Maker, but he could not help seeing also that which distracted him, and a tempest was raised and the man overruled; his prayer was broken, and his thoughts were troubled, and his words ascended to the clouds, and the wandering of his imagination recalled them, and in all the fluctuating varieties of passion they are never like to reach God at all. But he sits him down and sighs over his infirmity, and fixes his thoughts upon things above, and forgets all the little vain passages of this life, and his spirit is becalmed, and his soul is even and still, and then it softly and sweetly ascends to heaven on the wings of the Holy Dove, and dwells with God, till it returns, like the useful bee, loaded with a blessing and the dew of heaven.—Jeremy Taylor.

An Indian's Gift to Christ.

In a portion of the Southern territory from which the red man has now been driven, I once attended a large protracted meeting held in the wild forest. The theme on which the preacher dwelt, and which he illustrated with surpassing beauty and grandeur, was "Christ and him crucified." He spoke of the good Shepherd who came into the world to seek and to save the lost. He told how this Saviour met the rude buffeting of the heartless soldiers. He drew a picture of Gethsemane and the unbefriended Stranger who wept there. He pointed to Him as he hung bleeding upon the cross.

The congregation wept. Soon there was a slight movement in the assembly, and a tall son of the forest, with tears on his cheeks, approached the pulpit and said, "Did Jesus die for poor Indian? Me have no lands to give to Jesus, the white man take them away; me give him my dog and my rifle." The minister told him Jesus could not accept those gifts. "Me give Jesus my dog, my rifle, and my blanket: poor Indian, he got no more to give—he give Jesus all." The minister replied that Christ could not accept them. The poor, ignorant, but generous child of the forest bent his head in sorrow and meditated. He raised his noble brow once more, and fixed his eye on the preacher, while he sobbed out, "Here is poor Indian, will Jesus have him?" A thrill of unutterable joy ran through the soul of the minister and people, as this fierce son of the wilderness now sat, in his right mind, at the feet of Jesus. The Spirit had done his work, and he who had been so poor, received the earnest of an inheritance which will not fade when the diadems of earth shall have mouldered forever.—Amer. Messenger.

Ocean Telegraph.

In speaking of the Atlantic Telegraph, Nathan H. Chamberlain says:—

Observe where this telegraphic line is laid. Far down in the dark depths of waters inaccessible, that no plummet ever sounded, it stretches for more than six hundred leagues, along the silent, shadowy mystic bed of the sea; across soaring mountains, whose summits are swept with changing tides; laying its slender folds in the black craters choked up with waters; across wide plains or sudden precipice, in the secrecies of whose yawning jaws unnamed denizens of the sea abide; over rock, and boulder, and soft sand; over solitary relics of the primeval world, preserved in the calm depths; vestiges of the tropics and the poles strewn there by the currents of the sea; over fair sea-shells, and the debris of long-forgotten races, of fish, and bird, and beast; over the gold of luckless mariners, laid away in safety of ocean secrecy; over the ribs of shattered ships, laid up amongst the gathering ocean sands in a mausoleum befitting a gallant barque; over the skeletons of ill-starred mariners, wrapt in their winding-sheet of waters; laid where unnamed monsters of the deep might float slowly past it, and leviathan might sport above it; laid where no ray of light can ever reach, where the bright sun touches into untold splendors of infinite shape and coloring the sea-spray of the surface; or where the moon clothes with a silvery mantle the midnight waves; laid in the eternal night of changeless darkness—darkness old as when God divided sea from land; in those sunless, hueless, joyless depths no eye can ever see; laid in the hushed quiet of tideless waters; beneath the sweep of ocean currents; in halls of science no sound of rushing waters or wintry winds can reach, laid in the unseen, untroubled, unchanged; mysterious under sea.

Silent Influence.—It is the bubbling spring which flows gently, the little rivulet which runs along day and night, by the farm-house, that is useful rather than the swollen flood or warring cataract. Niagara excites our wonder, and we stand amazed at the power and greatness of God there, as he "pours it from the hollow of his hand." But one Niagara is enough for the continent or the world, while the same world requires thousands and tens of thousands of silver fountains and gently flowing rivulets, that water every farm and meadow, and every garden, and that shall flow on every day and every night with their gentle, quiet beauty. So with the acts of our lives. It is not by great deeds, like those of the martyrs, that good is to done—it is by the daily and quiet virtues of life, the Christian temper, the good qualities of relatives and friends and all, that it is to be done.—Albert Barnes.

Enjoyment.—We have time to enjoy ourselves and we sin if we don't do it. Enjoyment is one of the necessaries of human life, and it is much better to give the young good wholesome pleasure, than to have them steal impurities. They will have it, if not given, it will be stolen. Give our young men and our women proper out-door pleasure, and we shall see fewer diseased bodies, fewer puny frames and pale faces. We shall have more mothers and more babies, and the latter that are now lilies of the valley, and go under the valley, will then be more robust; they will then grow up to be men and women such as men and women should be, and were meant to be.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Conversation.—The most casual remark lives forever in its effects. There is not a word which has not a silent history. And hence it is that every "idle word" which man utter assumes a character so important, that an inquest will be held on it in the general judgment.—Barnes.

From the Christian Messenger.

"Almost Discouraged."

What, 'almost discouraged?' Poor child, what are you discouraged about? "Discouraged" when the journey's end is near? Discouraged when he, the loved "ruler of thy heart"—is coming to bring thy crown? —"Discouraged" while the eternal God is thy refuge and underneath thee are the everlasting arms? "Discouraged" while he says my grace is sufficient for thee? "Discouraged while he hath said "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee? "Discouraged" when he hath given his angels charge concerning thee, to keep thee in all thy ways? "Discouraged" while Jesus is touched with the feeling of our infirmities and knows how to succor them that are tempted! "Discouraged" while every trial worketh an exceeding weight of glory?

"Discouraged?" O, no, I wouldn't be discouraged—soon the master will say, I was hungry and ye fed me—soon he will remember each "cup of cold water" given in a disciple's name—and every act done in secret for his glory will be known and remembered in that day.

"Discouraged?" Yes, the disciples were, when they had toiled all night and taken nothing, but at Christ's command they cast in the net once more, and caught a boat-load that time—what a haul! They were full of courage then.

"Discouraged?" Yes, the twelve chosen friends of Christ were discouraged when they vainly strove to guide their laboring bark amid the tempest's rage. And do you feel thus—does it seem that the Master is asleep and you are in peril? O awake him then with earnest prayer, and when he rebukes the wind there will be a great calm.

"Discouraged?" Yes, so were the followers of Jesus on the waves of the troubled Gennesaret, and Jesus was away—but while they were tossed with waves he prayed upon the mountain top. And so now while we are discouraged with life's tempests and sad as we think of our absent Lord, but though absent, yet on the distant hills of light he pleads our cause with God. And by and by when our sinking hearts quail before the tempest's wildest rage, he will come treading upon the rude billows that disturb us—hushing the fury of the fearful tempests, and guiding us to the port of peace.

Now I wouldn't be discouraged, "or almost discouraged" any more,—O trust in the Lord! Hope in his mercy. Believe his precious promises—forget your poor miserable sinful self and find IN HIM your all. Cast your care on him. Tell your woes to him. Give yourself away to him. Serve him with all your heart and he will be your strength, your hope, your joy, and consolation. Now don't be discouraged any more, will you?—Trust in the Lord always. H. L. H.

Heaven upon Earth.—It is indeed a precious consolation that a Christian knows how he may ascend into Heaven. Remains he at Jerusalem, at Rome, anywhere upon earth, in the field, or in the house, he may still be in heaven, for God the Father, the Son and Holy Ghost will be with him and dwell in him. If God dwells with us here upon earth, then indeed it is true, that all we do, think, speak, or suffer, must be well done, whether we eat or drink, work, lie down or rise up, study, sing, read or pray, God is glorified in all. We may ever find heaven upon earth if we only have grace enough, and are able to believe. Heaven itself has not the honor of which a Christian can boast. Of Heaven God says it is my throne, and the earth it is my footstool. But a Christian heart is his dwelling place. In us he will dwell, if we only believe that Christ suffered and died for us, and love him in return for such compassion.—Martin Luther.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Canada Subscribers have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i.e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 159. BOSTON, MASS., SEPTEMBER 22, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 3.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"ALL THE WICKED WILL GOD DESTROY."

BY ELDER S. B. BREWER.

O God, thy word it doth engage
My mind to know thy law;
I learn thy love on every page,
It fills my heart with awe.
I read the transcript of thy mind,
Each page thine image bears,
Thy purposes are there defined
In living characters.

Eternal life thy saints shall have
When Eden is restored,
Beyond the dark and gloomy grave,
Is written in God's word;
Eternal death, to be destroyed,
To cease to live, to die,
Are fearful terms therein employed—
The soul that sins shall die.

The second death poor sinner's die,
This truth God's word declares;
As ashes under foot must lie,
Burnt up, consumed as tares.
O sinner, heed approaching fate
As precious moments roll;
O fly, before it is too late,
From death to save thy soul!

Fairhaven, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Visit to Dorrville, R. I.

I went to the above named place some three weeks since, and commenced preaching in the Seventh-day Baptist meeting house, which was freely offered by Mr. Charles Vars, to whom it belongs. Friday evening, preached on the inheritance of the saints from Prov. 11: 31, showing that this earth in its renewed state will constitute the eternal abode of the saints.

Saturday evening preached on the unconscious state of the dead, taking up the most prominent passages of Scripture used to prove that the dead know more than the living, and showed that, when fairly understood, they do not support any such view. After I was through, Eld. Clark, a Seventh-day Baptist preacher, arose and gave notice that he would preach the next Monday evening on the spiritual nature of man, and gave me an invitation to attend, which I was glad to accept, if I could be allowed to reply, which was granted. On Monday evening he preached on the immortality of man. I will not attempt to give his arguments, nor mine, for they are familiar with your readers. I appointed the next evening to reply to him. Tuesday evening a large congregation gathered to hear. I preached about two hours in answer to my opponent's arguments. The blessing of the Lord attended the word, and some were convinced of the truth. Eld. Joshua Clark, of Potter's Hill, was present, and was invited by his friends to speak, but declined; but he gave an appointment in the grove, where I had preached the Sunday before, for the purpose of refuting my arguments. But Eld. H. Clark was not satisfied with his first effort, and gave notice that he would preach again on the same subject. I undertook to reply to him after he was through. Many questions were proposed which I was very glad to answer.

Sunday morning dawned upon us and we repaired to the grove to listen to Eld. J. Clark, not however expecting to get any new light, for we knew his positions just as well before he began as afterwards. Not allowing me to reply to his arguments there, I gave notice that I would reply to him the next Sunday. Last Sunday we were on the ground and preached two sermons in answer to him to a good, respectable congregation.

We tried to get them to have a regular discussion and speak alternately thirty minutes each; but they did not seem disposed, and now we say, though we don't challenge any man for a discussion, but as the thing stands there, now we will meet them in a fair and open discussion, at any time and place that they may name. We hope that there will be a church raised up in this place that will be an example of piety and a way mark to glory.

E. Bellows.

Lafayette, R. I.

For the Crisis.

The Celestial Telegraph.

We have celebrated the great achievement of the ocean telegraph, and praised the Creator who has given such understanding to men. Our higher praise is due for a telegraph which connects, not continent with continent, or man with man, but earth with heaven and man with God. O, blessed medium of communication, not between kings and rulers of earth, but between every humble soul and the infinite Majesty in the Heavens.

One end of this blessed telegraph is attached to every contrite spirit, and the other is held by the Lion of the tribe of Judah, who presents all messages to the King of the Universe. No message can pass this telegraph except by the great Operator, with whom the King is ever well pleased.—Matt. 3: 17. A professed leader,* some time since, violated this holy rule, and standing in the presence of the people, said: "Let us come unto God without a mediator." The great Operator thundered the truth from the celestial battery to the presumptuous man—"No man cometh to the Father but by me."—John 14: 6.

Dear Reader, have you not a message to send to the court of heaven in this precious Name by this Telegraph? Have you ever proved its efficacy to obtain, not gold or silver, or place of earthly honor and profit, but the riches which shall endure, when the rich men, and the mighty men, shall call upon the rocks to hide them from the power of the Judge, when the great day of his wrath is come? If you tremble at the awful word of the Lord, which condemns you to everlasting death for transgressing his holy law of Love, and will obey his great command to "Repent," (Matt. 3: 2,) you may send your message immediately by this telegraph—"Lord save, or I perish"—and receive, with more than lightning speed, the gracious answer—"Thy sins are forgiven thee; go in peace."

Are you a child of God, conscious of ungrateful backslidings and inordinate attachment to worldly things; desirous to return from the husks of earth, to feast on the bread of thy Father's house? Send now your message by this telegraph—"My soul cleaveth to the dust, quicken thou me according to thy word."—Ps. 119: 25—and thy poor heart shall be cheered by the return of his love. "I will heal (thy) backslidings, I will love (thee) freely, for mine anger is turned away from (thee.)"—Hosea 14: 4.

Are you perplexed with the cares of mortal life, and troubled at its disappointments and woes? Send your sad tale at once by this telegraph, and receive the consoling answers of peace. "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; they shall not overflow thee."—Isa. 43: 2. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth."—Heb. 12: 6. Instead of poring over your troubles, go to work in your Lord's vineyard, casting your care upon him. Labor for the salvation of those who are whelmed in like troubles with your own, without the hope you possess, by God's mercy, of eternal deliverance.

O, blessed telegraph, laid in the ocean of divine love and mercy! From all parts of this fallen world, messages innumerable are passing at the same instant, without interruption, constituting a holy and blessed communion between earth and heaven. Cemented by the unction of God's own spirit, (Rom. 8: 26, 27,) entering "into the holiest by the blood of Jesus," (Heb. 10: 19-22,) no accident can befal this telegraph; nor can anything but regarding iniquity in our hearts, (Ps. 66: 18); and turning away our "ear from hearing the law" of our God, deprive us of its sacred privileges.—Prov. 28: 9.

Now, beloved brethren, let us unceasingly storm the strong holds of the powers of darkness with this celestial battery, until "the kingdoms of this world (shall) become the kingdom of Jehovah and of his Christ.—Rev. 11: 15.

Henry Grew.

*Elias Hicks.

For the Crisis.

A Sketch of my Labors,

WITH AN EXPLANATION AND CORRECTION.

The remarks purported to be mine at the Conference held in Ottawa, Illinois, need correction and explanation. As it now reads, it is rash, meagre, and does many noble minded men injustice. Hence I will give a brief account of my labors for the last year, for the satisfaction of my friends, who have so frequently solicited me to write for the press, and to relieve the minds of those who may think, like myself, the remarks said to be mine, without an explanation and correction, are slanderous.

Two years ago I was taken sick, in connection with the rest of our family, my wife excepted, when we laid our lovely little boy in the grave, on the banks of the Mississippi river. That scene was one to us that language fails to describe; hence, I leave it without comment with Him who knoweth all things—"too wise to err, too good to be unkind." The rest of the family recovered, I was some better; had sufficient strength to walk about, but suffered much from my head and lungs, which were affected by the disease. The first of March we packed our goods—broke up keeping house—visited our friends in Cordova, Princeton und Camanche. This no doubt was injurious to me, as the spring was cold and backward, but this seemed to be the only way at that time. The friends received us kindly, and entertained us willingly, no doubt, for which we shall ever feel our indebtedness, and pray our Lord to remember them. My health was not sufficient to preach. I made some attempts, by urgent requests of friends, but always suffered in consequence. I could not endure mental labor; and I was really afraid I never should be able to do any more preaching or studying. Some of my friends thought I could preach; this of course I had to bear, but it was trying, when I was so weak mentally.

We moved to Mendon, Adams Co., June, 1857, (they call this place Egypt, when corn is scarce,) where we stopped until Sept. 8th. In this time (of our stopping in Mendon,) I preached some on Sundays, as my strength would allow. As my health improved, I worked the more; but not sufficiently strong to labor without feeling I was weak, and had to suffer if I labored beyond my strength. My wife was quite sick while we resided here. However, the friends were very kind, and rendered all necessary aid. By kind providence, she recovered. Bro. Chandler visited us, and held a number of meetings (to some profit) in the Town Hall. I held a number of meetings in the same place. Some searched to see whether these things were so, and were convinced. Others, like the pharisees, seeing their craft in danger, (their tradition) spoke against this way. Bro. Luther Fenn called on us, which gladdened our hearts. How cheering to meet our Eastern friends. He rendered us much assistance.

We left Mendon Sept. 8th. The house in which we lived was sold, and the purchaser wanted to move in immediately. which was the cause of our leaving. We moved to this place, (Rough and Ready P. O., Hancock Co.,) into a log cabin, (a school house.) The brethren proposed helping me build a small house. Accordingly we made arrangements, and put up a house, 16 by 24 feet, in which we live today, although it is but partly finished. Looks very much like an Advent believer's house—half finished—one coat of plastering put on, much of it off now—two rooms below, aside from clothes-press and buttery. No cellar wall—nothing done above, room for small chambers however. Got a spot fenced for garden, &c. I speak of these things, as we are in a jealous age, and a disposition exists in some parts to make things appear large, and in opposition to the effects of the Gospel of the coming Kingdom. There are some people that think it awful if a servant of God should have one tenth as many comforts as they have themselves. I do not know, but it would be right for me to say, I would like to have some of these close-fisted, narrow-minded, small-soul men go through what I have been through since I have been West. The reason I built, I could not find a house to move into; and one of two things I must do. If I stopped in this region, I must build a house in which to live, or I could sell out and go East. It would have been very gratifying to us all to choose the latter, and go East; but here is a destitute field, which caused us to decide to remain West, and forego the comfort and consolations of our friends East. And here we are to-day, doing a little.

OUR LABORS.

The first season I labored continually. I traveled and preached, sold some books, gave away many tracts; this course I pursued until I was taken sick. One year, nearly, elapsed before I became strong enough to pursue my former course of labor. And the first effort I made, (i. e. holding series of meetings,) I found I lacked strength to go through as formerly. I held four series of meetings during the winter, beside many other regular appointments, averaging one sermon per day from the middle of Dec. until late this spring—mud time—when I went to Conference at Ottawa. Was glad to meet our brethren once more in conference. Two years had elapsed since I had met with them. The conference was very good.

From there I went to Cordova, held some meetings, baptized some in the "Father of Waters;" also attended the Conference in Princeton, Iowa. Meetings were very good; the result, those that reside there can tell. The great day will tell also. Perhaps it was like Noah's preaching, to condemn. I returned home through mud, mud, mud. We had a Conference here. Bro. Chandler was with us, and gave us a number of discourses, which did good.

THE DISCOURAGEMENTS.

I meet with different influences in different localities. I cannot, in this brief sketch, mention all the opposing elements I have to meet, but will, however, mention some.

1. I find some preachers preaching against the doctrines we hold dear, and warning all to keep away from our meetings. They use hard names and soft arguments. This can hardly be considered a discouraging feature. However, it may be one.

2. Bigotry and sectarianism prevail to a great extent in many places. There is but a faint hope of this class embracing truth, or getting sufficiently free to gain life eternal. There is more hope of almost every other class than this. They are confident they have it all, hence will not investigate, and think, if I may judge from their acts, they are doing God's service when they rail against those who are warning men to prepare for the speedy coming of judgment.

3. Thoughtlessness and recklessness in regard to divine things prevails. "I have no time to think, nor do I care about these things."

4. Worldly-mindedness is almost a God in the West. The spirit of speculation has run so high that I might adopt the language of one of the reformers: "The world, the world, the world; this is the supreme deity that is adored. Buy, sell, and get gain, away with the thoughts of death and judgment. My farm, my merchandise, I will have them, though heaven weeps blood over my head, and the earth trembles beneath my feet." Hard times will cool off the fever, no doubt.

5. Intemperance, in some places, is a serious barrier. This is not general, however; only now and then a place. Where intemperance abounds, the gospel finds no place, and it is a lost community.

6. Pro-slavery influence exists in some localities. There are, however, some towns that are called the hot-beds of abolitionists, where the under-ground railroad is laid. There is more or less sensitiveness felt on the question of slavery, especially in the Southern counties where I have labored. We may be said to live between the two tides. Sometimes we meet one wave, then comes the opposite. Slavery, all must admit, is opposed to reform; hence, opposed to the gospel of the Son of God. All see it. All feel it. All know it. I must hasten and consider some of the ENCOURAGING FEATURES.

There are noble hearted and candid men that are inquiring for the truth, both in and out of the church. Such are taking a decided stand as fast as they see the light. They will be true—you will always know where to find them. Others, honest, yet a little dull of apprehension, will come along after a while; and still others, who have long since seen the inconsistency of endless conscious being in misery, but are at a stand, as they cannot embrace Universalism, and have never heard the truth on this subject, (i. e. the wicked, "God will destroy.") I have for a long time been satisfied that the preaching of endless suffering to the sinner has made more infidels and Universalists than all of their advocates. The more I travel and converse with different individuals, the more, if possible, I am confirmed that my conclusion is true. I find professors and non-professors who look on endless conscious being in misery, in the light of Bishop Newton. Hear him: "Nothing can be more contrary to his nature and attributes, than for a God, all-wise, all-powerful, all-good, all-perfect, to bestow existence on any being whose destiny he foresees and foreknows must terminate in wretchedness and misery, without recovery or remedy, without respite or end. God is love, and he would rather not have given life, than to render that life a torment and curse to all eternity. Imagine numberless creatures, produced out of nothing, delivered over to torment of endless ages, without the least hope or possibility of relaxation or redemption. Imagine it, you may, but you can never seriously believe it, nor reconcile it to God and goodness. God could never make any creature, whose end he foreknew would be misery everlasting." When they hear they believe.

As to the effect of my labors, I will say but little, for I have always abhorred a newspaper revival. I will say, I am accused of filling the whole region with my doctrine, by preaching, lending books and scattering tracts; and many are embracing the truth. Well, how many I do not know. However, there are a number, to my knowledge, in different places. If they accuse me now of doing so much, they will no doubt have an opportunity of bringing greater accusations, if the Lord gives me health and strength, and will favor me with his blessing. I have not done much yet, for want of means, compared with my former labors. I have labored in Hancock, Adams, Pike and Brown counties. Some in Missouri. Have given lectures on the prophecies mostly, although am not backward to introduce life and death. I always intend to preach what the people need, if I can satisfy my own mind; do them good—bring them to Christ, the Life-Giver. Bro. Scott goes out when he can leave any one by the stuff.

MY SALARY.

Some are anxious to hear on this point, but this is about the last thing I mention. I will say, my pay has been much better than Paul's. I have never passed through his trials and deprivations as yet. Have been in some very strait places, and could hardly see my way out. We are not very extravagant in dress or our living. Perhaps you can judge more correctly if I give you the amount received and expended in my family the last year. I have received for my family $56,73. I have paid out for traveling $20, leaving a balance for my family expenditures of $36,73. From these figures, which are correct, you can judge of our family extravagance. It needs no comment. I have thought at times I would ask my friends East for aid, but I saw others making appeals who no doubt were in greater straits than myself; and also the "Western Mission" was calling for aid. Hence, I concluded I should leave my affairs with Him who feeds the ravens. Many calls I have had to refuse for want of means to pay my expenses.

Walter Pratt.

☞ There is not in the world a surer sign of a little soul, than the striving to gain respect by such despicable means as dress and rich clothes. None will depend on these ornaments but they who have no other.—Scarron.

For the Crisis.

The Ocean Telegraph and Cable Celebration.

Who cares for them? not I, be sure! in the light of expressions of joy and extravagant exhibition of overwhelming enthusiasm upon the unexpected success of a great enterprise—an enterprise in which two nations are interested and have been alike engaged for its successful result—in which two continents and the whole world must share an interest. It is the completion of the most gigantic scheme which human wisdom ever planned or human skill undertook to effect. It crowns the age thus far; and the age crowns all other ages. It unites England and America—Europe and the whole American continent. In the same hour messages have already come from London to Newfoundland. When machinery is perfectly adapted, fifteen minutes will be sufficient to print a dispatch from London.

Wonder of wonders! Knowledge is increased, and likely to increase more rapidly by its successful advancement. A sanguine expectation, an indomitable perseverance, a lavish expenditure of money—the favor of two of the mightiest governments on earth—the science, skill and patience of philosophers; and triumph over all obstacles obtains; two thousand miles of telegraphic cord lie on the ocean beds, sometimes two miles below the surface; and that subtle fluid whose natural, visible operations are in the air, is made by the inventive genius of man to traverse the slender cable through the dark ocean underworld,—is harnessed to the thought of another continent; and with all the rapidity thought could suggest, flies with its now tangible freight through trackless passages—silent, inconceivable gulfs—unexplored cavernous depths, from which thought never before came forth, though thought has often been there buried, by the drowning of the shipwrecked.

I blame them not for celebrating. The world has never seen such a day before. But what with the illuminations, bonfires, clangor of bells, booming of cannon, fireworks, processions, mottoes, transparencies, speeches, sermons, services in the churches at dead of night, chanting "Te Deum," while "night is hideous" with the howls of the rabble outside—services in the different churches, Central (Congregational,) Christ's (Episcopal,) St. Patrick's Cathedral (in Hartford,) all at the same time, and for the same thing—which led the Editors to say that the religious (!) element was the most important in the whole demonstration! Protestantism, Catholicism, Spiritualism, Infidelity, and the Devil, "cheek by jowl" in the celebration—with banners and streamers, triumphal arches, bands of music and vocal hymns—"God save the Queen," "Hail Columbia," "Yankee Doodle," "Old Hundred," all in discordant harmony. But how does it "Praise God from whom all blessings flow?"

1. I see Scripture in strange misconception and misapplication, with an ill-assorted position; with silly cant phrases and unmeaning mottoes. For instance; "Peace on earth," &c., and "What hath God wrought?"

2. Scripture and even portions of prophecy to show that this is the very dawn of the millennium. Bennett's Herald quotes any quantity to show that the Cable fulfils it. Satan quoted Scripture anciently, and equally in point with the "Satanic Press."

No doubt that "the Cable" may be considered one of the events which gives intensity to the signs of the times. It is the "time of the end; knowledge is increased;" another feature showing the mind of man in its inventive energies, at the far off verge of its untrammelled flight. What more? "Canst thou send lightnings, and will they go and say unto thee here we are?"

The Telegraphic cord of Morse is the son of the lightning rod of Franklin. Dr. Franklin's paper, read before some gentlemen of the Royal Academy, showing that lightning and electricity are the same, I think about 1798, was "laughed at," he says himself. Nevertheless, it is true. The world is being constantly revolutionized on such questions. Dr. Hawes says, in the prayer of consecration, "We consecrate this great improvement to thee; so far as we are concerned." Well said, doctor, but the Devil will be five hours earlier in the morning at the East than the doctors of divinity in the West.

The Telegraph across the ocean was predicted by Morse in 1843.

Should not telegraphic communication favor materialism? Does not thought result from material energies and action? If not, how could it traverse a material wire and unite with material electricity and magnetism? The telegraph serves to identify the age. But it will not be a means of the conversion of the world, or the reign of Christ, nor of "the inhabitants of one city saying to the inhabitants of another let us go up and worship before the Lord," as the brother quoted in a world's conversion union prayer meeting in Wall street, New York, when they heard the news. Certainly not, in fulfillment of the prophecy.

Yours truly, W. S. Campbell.

For the Crisis.

A Praying Wife.

Bless God for a praying wife, a helpmeet in the work of God. One whose affection, fed by the love of God, never chills; whose heart, true to its Lord, wanders not from its steady aim. One who loves and hopes and trusts and prays. One who sends forth the sweetest fragrance from a holy heart up to the throne of God, whence it descends again in showers of blessing upon the subjects of those fervent prayers.

How many little troubles are borne and laid before the mercy seat by a praying wife. How many little trials are prayed over by her, which would be fretted over by others. How many burdens are cast by her upon the everlasting arm. How many dark places in life are brightened by her smile, how many rough places smoothed by her prayers.

Wife, do you pray?—earnestly? fervently? unceasingly? O pray. Are you poor? Pray. Are you sad? Pray. Are you afflicted? Pray. Is your husband hard and cruel and wicked and blasphemous? Pray—O pray, for what knowest thou, O woman, but thou shalt save thy husband? Try. Pray for him. I heard of one woman who prayed for an ungodly husband every day for a year, and he seemed to grow harder every day. Then she prayed every day for six months longer, and at the end of that time, the very last day, he broke down before God. He had a praying wife.

Reader, are you a praying wife? Do you pray? O pray much. Pray for your husband and for all around. Are you a prayerless wife? God pity you, for you don't know the purest joys of life. Man, have you a praying wife? Love her then, for she is a treasure. Pray with her around the altar—in the closet, and wherever you are. Reader, are you prayerless? Learn to pray. Begin with this prayer: "God be merciful to me a sinner," and go on till prayer is lost in praise and hope in glad fruition. O pray,—all of you, husbands, wives; fathers, mothers; children and all.

O how many prayers my praying wife has put up to God for me, while I have wandered as a pilgrim and stranger on the earth. God hears them even to-day; while I am far from home and friends they prevail on high. Bless God for my praying wife. God bless her. H. L. H.

Edenboro, Pa. July 23, '58.

Invisible Harmonies.

We are apt to "limit the Holy One of Israel," and to say "some things have worked together for our good." God says, "All things!" Joys, sorrows, crosses, losses, prosperity, adversity, health, sickness; the gourd bestowed, and the gourd withered; the cup full, and the cup emptied: the lingering sick-bed, the early grave!

Often, indeed, would sight and sense lead us to doubt the reality of the promise. We can see, in many things, scarce a dim reflection of love. Useful lives taken, blossoms prematurely plucked, spiritual props removed, benevolent schemes blown upon. But the apostle does not say, "We see," but "We know." It is the province of faith to trust God in the dark. The uninitiated and undiscerning cannot understand or explain the revolution and dependencies of the varied wheels in a complicated machine; but they have confidence in the wisdom of the artificer, that all is designed to "work out" some great and useful end. Be it ours to write over every mysterious dealing, "This also cometh from the Lord of Hosts, who is wonderful in counsel and excellent in working."—Rev. R. Macduff.

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT - - - - EDITOR.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 22, 1858.

Office....167 Hanover street.

Read This.

☞ Those who have not paid anything on the Crisis for the last year, and who have not written us during that time, are requested to write us immediately, and inform us whether they wish to have it continued. If they cannot pay now, and wish the paper, we shall continue it, if they will only inform us of their wishes. Please attend to this matter at once. Sit down now and drop us a line.

☞ Bro. Lombard, we are glad to learn of your success in the West, and hope you will continue to let your light shine. Now is the time to stand up for Jesus.

Diary Leaves.

We parted with our readers at the interesting baptism in Hoosick, N. Y. After its close, we went to Troy in company with Bro. and Sr. Briggs, who love the truth and are preparing to meet the coming Bridegroom. There are some faithful souls in this city, and others are becoming interested in the way of life. They are anxious to have something done to arouse the people. We hope they will not be disappointed.

Monday morning, Sept. 6th, we left Troy at 4 1-2 o'clock, for the camp ground near Collinsville, Ct., and arrived about 2 o'clock P. M. This meeting was very pleasantly located upon a hill, a few rods from the railroad. The committee spared no pains to make this meeting delightful to all who came to enjoy it. It was a model campmeeting, and we felt that we received the approbation of the Lord. The weather was perfectly delightful until Saturday morning, when we were obliged to leave to fill an appointment. There were then fifteen tents on the ground, and sixteen preachers.

We were not aware of the strength of our attachment to the dear saints on the camp ground, till after our separation. The language of David came forcibly to our mind, when he said, "Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest" in the tented grove, and pray, and sing, and rejoice with the Lord's happy family; but, praise his name, the great feast of tabernacles in the everlasting kingdom will soon begin, and then we hope to be there with all the Lord's loved ones, from whom we shall part no more forever. We do not wonder that Dr. Watts wrote,

"Fly swifter round ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

We enjoyed the meeting at Collinsville,

1. Because the ground and arrangements were so well adapted to convenience and comfort.

2. Because we met so many with whom we have sung and prayed in days by-gone, who are still determined, by the help of the Lord, to endure to the end. It seemed as though we had got home. It was like the family gathering at thanksgiving, when separated and loved ones can meet in fond embrace at the old farm-house, and witness the happy smiles of our christian parents, as they look upon John and William, Mary and Jane, who for years have been absent from their childhood home, who left with no hope in Christ, but have now returned at this yearly gathering, not only to greet fond and anxious parents, but to tell them of the love of Jesus, and help sing his praise around the family board. Some, with whom we have pleaded and prayed years ago, and endeavored to persuade to be christians, were present, to tell us that they had become the friends of Jesus, and now loved his appearing, and were longing for the glad hour to arrive, when the good will be gathered to the great "camp of the saints."

3. We enjoyed this meeting because of the good singing that was continually sounding through the beautiful grove from hearts warm with the love of God. Some of it was perfectly charming, and had a powerful effect on the sinner's heart in softening and subduing it, and preparing it for the reception of the glorious truth of the gospel.

4. This meeting was excellent because of the good prayer meetings, and the earnest efforts made for the welfare of the unconverted and backslidden, and the happy results attending. It could be truly said of many, that they were ready for every good work. In the evening hour, prayers of the earnest ones, who were off alone, or in little companies, pleading with the Lord, echoed in upon us, lending a sweet charm to the hallowed scene around.

5. We enjoyed this meeting because of the excellent order maintained. All classes seemed anxious to assist us in having a good meeting. Every one, so far as we knew, appeared to be friendly, and showed their good feeling by kind words and deeds. We lay down to sleep at night, without fear of disturbance. We had peace in all our borders. Though we did not see him, we have no difficulty in believing that "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them."

6. Another reason why this was a very good meeting, was the sweet harmony that prevailed between those who conducted the meeting and those who came to enjoy it. We have never seen a more practical exhibition of the unity of the Spirit than at the campmeeting. Although we differed in sentiment on some points, yet it was in love. We really felt like brethren and sisters—all of one family. Each seemed anxious to promote the good of all the rest.

7. In addition to other things that conspired to make this meeting one of the best we ever enjoyed, was the eloquent and soul-stirring preaching of Brn. Burnham, Hastings and others, who seemed to feel just like preaching the everlasting gospel. The people came to hear the truth, and went away satisfied that their time had been well spent. Many, who had been bitterly opposed, were astonished at the clearness of the doctrine, and wondered why they had not seen it before. We think the most happy results will follow this meeting, and that on account of it, the cause of Christ will take advanced ground in all that region. We are hoping to hear much additional good news from this meeting, when we get the report of the last two days of its session. We shall look back with h ppy remembrance upon the golden days spent in that consecrated grove, and hope, if time continues, to meet there again.

To the dear brethren and sisters whose society we there enjoyed, we would say, let your light so shine that others will see the way to the kingdom. Consecrate all to the Lord. "Present your bodies a living sacrifice." It "is your reasonable service." Do all to his glory. Let us try to please the Lord in all things, and may our hearts ever be "knit together in love," till Jesus comes to take us home.

For the Crisis.

Financial Report.

Dear Bro Grant:—I hand you herewith a report, for publication in the Crisis, that our friends may all know how the matter now stands.

The committee appointed to prepare the campground at Wilbraham for a place of annual meeting, make the following report:

Paid for preaching stand and fixtures		$88 00
" " labor and expenses in digging for well		15 00
" " lumber, slabs and nails		51 00
" " labor, team work, horse hire and expenses		51 82
" " chandeliers, lamps and fixtures		10 25
" " expenses of meeting this year, (1858)		58 80
" " Insurance of building and contents		4 50
		$277 37
CONTRA.
Received from subscribers to Fund,	$137 00
" " three public collections	55 15
" " one private collect'n	20 48	$212 63
Leaving a balance unpaid of		$64 74

This amount is larger than was reported at the meeting, owing to several bills being presented that did not appear in the report, and were not known when the report was made. It is believed that all bills are now settled, and if those who have subscribed will forward the amounts they pledged, the committee will be relieved from debt, as the unpaid subscriptions amount to $63. Otherwise, they will have the burden to bear. Subscriptions may be forwarded to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., and they shall be noticed in the Crisis.

The following articles were found on the ground, and may be had on application to H. Munger, Chicopee Falls: one large double woolen shawl; three or four handkerchiefs; one tobacco box, full of tobacco, found by M. Grant; a blue overcoat, supposed to belong to Bro. Naramore of Rochester, and sent to him; one 2-feet box rule, for the pocket.

We failed to find the following things which were borrowed from the boarding stand:—1 2-inch auger, 1 pr. beam steelyards, 1 hatchet, hammer, various articles of crockery and 17 boarding tickets.

Yours, in glorious hope,
Randolph E. Ladd.

Springfield, Sept. 10th, 1858.

For the Crisis.

Bible vs. Nature.

What do you think of the Bible, friend worldly-wise? "Why, I think it contains some very good principles; but to believe the whole of it would be most unreasonable. It presents such unjust ideas of God, showing him to be a God of fierce anger, cruel, delighting in bloodshed, commissioning his people to destroy whole nations, men, women, innocent children, and even the beasts, cattle and sheep belonging to these nations, which certainly could not have known wickedness. I cannot believe in such a God as that, or in a book that attributes such things to God—God is kind, merciful. He will not destroy his creatures. He is love." So then you have not much confidence in the Bible, simply because, as you say, its account of God makes Him, in his dealings with men sometimes to appear cruel and unkind? "I confess it"—Well, suppose we lay aside the Bible; what book should we read to learn God truly in your estimation? "O, the book of Nature, most certainly—the God of Nature is not an angry, life destroying Being, he is a God of kindness and love."

I thought you would say so—your father's family are all great lovers of nature, I believe; you I presume have read the book of nature frequently, perhaps nearly through; but your manner of speaking makes me think you must have forgotten some part of the story. You recollect well, no doubt, what was said about its having a God, and about his Omnipotence and wisdom; but do you remember its account of the God of Nature, how that in A. D. 272 he left his people in Britain without food so that they ate the bark of trees: also in A. D. 310, so that 40, 000 perished; and in Italy, that they devoured their own children; also A. D. 1124, so that the dead lay in the streets unburied? Do you remember that the God of Nature destroyed in Constantinople A. D., 717, by pestilence, 300,000 persons: also A. D. 1671, 200, 000 more in like manner; and that by famine and plague he destroyed so many that the living could not bury them, A. D. 1077? Have you forgotten that among the Eastern nations A. D. 1335, he cut off by a pestilence, called the Black death, 20,000,000? You must bear in mind also that the God of whom Nature speaks has frequently shaken the earth and caused it to swallow up whole cities with their inhabitants small and great.

Once, A. D. 357, in Asia, Macedonia, 150 cities and towns were destroyed and human life past all calculation. A. D. 1005, for three months an earthquake's power was felt which was followed by pestilence, in which it is said one third the human race died. These are some, but by no means all of Nature's reports concerning the cruelty and severity of her God. Do you say "Nature's God is not to be learned from these things." I reply, how else can we know her God except from her works, her exhibitions of his providential care? and judging from these things is not Nature's revelation of God manifold more unlovely, unmerciful, and severe than the Bible revelation of the same being? Yet, notwithstanding, your confidence in the book of nature is firm; how unreasonable then to reject the Bible for the same things which you allow in Nature. But you say—"Nature has another side to the picture." Very well, so has the Bible. The Bible is not all Moses and Moabites; Ahab and Amalekites;—it is not all judgment, it is full of mercy; it is not all condemnation, it is full of pardon; it is not all Sinai, it has a Calvary; it is not all death, it has life; not all punishment, it has glorious, eternal rewards, without money and without price. Nature has suffering, toil and pain. It promises no relief, no rest, save the grave. Nature promises death, but no life from the dead. Nature has work that must be done—it offers no reward beyond the grave. Nature blesses the wicked and curses the good, favors the rich, oppresses the poor—ends all alike in the grave. In all these things she speaks of an unjust God, a God delighting in afflicting, and sparing of even small blessings.

Have you gained anything by choosing the God of Nature and rejecting the God of the Bible, friend Worldly wise? I think not. The Bible speaks of momentary or temporal suffering, storms and toil; but it also tells of eternal joy, rest and glory. It speaks of this world now, groaning and full of trouble. It tells of it by and by, renewed and full of God's glory. It reminds of death now, but promises to all who will accept by faith, life from the dead in the world to come—the earth renewed. Think of these things, my friend, and perhaps we'll talk again soon.

Syracuse, N. Y. H. F. C.

For the Crisis.

Umbrella Punishment.

To the objection that "everlasting punishment" implies everlasting suffering, it may be replied that various orthodox writers allow that eternal annihilation would be eternal punishment. Watts, Baxter, Dr. Edwards and others, may be cited to this purpose; and a late orthodox reviewer (National Magazine, September) has said that annihilation is an evil more terrible even than eternal punishment.

But it happens—and we are glad to see it—that when orthodox people argue on this subject, they often don't mind what others say; they care little for authorities. And you can't at once convince them that the Jews—the first hearers of Christ's words—thought as did the persons above named. So we must join issue with them in the nature of the case.

One such person told me once that whatever could not feel could not suffer, and could not be punished; and then, brandishing his umbrella as if he had ready a knock-down argument, he said, "Is there any feeling in that? can you punish it?" And how can a man be punished when he does not even exist any longer?"

I will give you my reply, with some additions and variations.

"Very well, sir. I grant you that a non-entity cannot be a subject of punishment; neither can your umbrella be punished. But all that does not touch the case in hand. We were not talking about umbrellas, but about men; men created in the image of God, and created to be immortal; their being granted them that they might have it for an eternal blessing. Such are you and I; and we shall be very foolish and very wicked if we do not attain to that.

"Now you know that the ancients said a good deal about metamorphoses,—man being changed into brutes and things, and changed back again. What if you, for some guilt of yours, should all at once be changed into an umbrella! Would you think that no punishment? Everybody would say, not that the umbrella was punished, but that you were punished in the umbrella, and that as long as you were nothing but an umbrella. And I can think of only two ways in which that would not be a punishment. One is this: without any fault of yours, but because God had grown cruel, your life might be a hardship, and likely to be so for always; then you might choose to be an umbrella to be rid of endless pain. The other is this: you might choose, out of the abundance of your good will, and by the consent of your heavenly Father, just to resign your immortal being in favor of your umbrella. And, to gratify your self-denial, he who is able of the stones to raise up children unto Abraham might allow you and your dead umbrella to change places for all eternity. So we will suppose the umbrella is exalted and glorified, as one of the sons of God, to shine as the brightness of the firmament, and as the stars forever and ever. What a splendid career! what unspeakable honor and glory for that which was a poor paltry umbrella, only just one whit better than you and I were before we existed. And the umbrella could not be honored alone. You who consented to take its place, with greater love than he "'Who gave an enemy his plank,

Then turned aside to die,'

would certainly be taken as a splendid trophy of an umbrella, and preserved in the halls of the eternal mansion, with ceaseless vigilance, as a monument of one who gave his eternal life for a mere thing, not expecting to receive as much again, but only wishing that the dead utensil might have eternal joy.

"In these two methods your umbrella-hood might be no punishment, but even a great reward. But suppose now that you were made into an umbrella for some foolish act, as when Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage; or for some mean thing, sheep-stealing for instance; or for some splendid crime, conquering a hemisphere just for the glory of it, while a million widows and orphans cursed you for it;—suppose in that way you got to be an umbrella instead of being a mighty angel—would you think that no punishment? Suppose the saved widows and orphans, or the good neighbor whose sheep you stole, sitting at the marriage supper of the Lamb, should be shown the identical umbrella into which you were transmuted,—your very humble self;—how they would laugh you to scorn! And would you take comfort now to think you could not feel your shame? Even that last consolation, to know that you were beyond the reach of pain, or care, or shame,—if that be a consolation,—would be denied you.

"And if you would deem that a very poor sort of impunity, to be forever a senseless umbrella, the laughing stock of all in the heavenly kingdom who ever knew you or heard of you, how much better off would you be in being made into nothing at all? Did not even Belial think wiser when he said,

"'For who would lose,
Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
These thoughts that wander through eternity,
To perish rather and be swallowed up
And lost in the wide womb of uncreated night,
Devoid of sense and motion?'"

So much for the umbrella. We conclude it is one thing that the hand of man should make such an article from a piece of timber; that a son of man should be made into an umbrella by the judgment of God, is a very different thing. Perhaps some will say that the supposition is of an impossible thing, as many do who forget that all reasoning implies suppositions, often of impossibilities. But to meet this objection I will make another supposition in my next. C. F. Hudson.

For the Crisis.

Long Prayers.

Why must our patience be taxed with so long prayers? Are we not thus imitating the "heathen," who think they shall be heard for their much speaking?" Our relation to God forbids that we should "use vain repetitions." We are to him as dying men to one who has power to save us from the impending death. Were either of us drowning in the presence of one who could save us by calling upon him, think you that it would enter our minds to commence, by a eulogy on his life and character? Should we plead our own merits? Should we regard grammatical construction, or "polished periods," or vain formality, in any sense? No, nothing like it. But our petition, like one of old, would be—"Save, or I perish."

Study the prayer which Christ taught his disciples. Consider its brevity, and yet its fullness; then mark our deviation, and let it prompt us to be more brief, simple and pointed in our petitions to him, who can save us from the ruin of the "second death," from which there is no reprieve. I. K. Lombard.

Letter from Sr. M. H. Morrison.

Bro. Grant:—In the fall of '56, husband and I moved to the Townships. In a short time after we left, all professing to be looking for the return of the Nobleman ceased to meet. We returned in the spring of '57, and endeavored to draw some together; but failed in our effort. Two months since, we were favored with a visit from Sister Matthews of Danville. Another effort together, but all failed; until our much esteemed and beloved Bro. Porter came along, and, by the blessing of God and his good wisdom, part have been gathered to sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. My prayer is, may we ever individually act consistently, according to our great and high profession; so that we may be ever ready to stand for and keep up the character of each other, in front of the enemy, clinging to one another.

On Sept. 5th, in the forenoon, the church came together, and attended to the ordinances of God's house. Then, at three o'clock, Elder Porter gave a very lengthy and forcible discourse, touching on many different points.

Brn. pray for us, that we may keep alive, and have our lamps burning. We are but a small number; nevertheless, can attend to Christ's commands; although so few as not to have bishops, deacons, &c. &c., according to the primitive example. But we trust in the blessed promise—"where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Amen and amen.

Your Sister looking for redemption at the appearing of Jesus,
M. H. Morrison.

New Glasgow, C. E.

Christ the Shepherd Leading his Sheep. What a beautiful image, or picture, to represent the attitude and personal relationship of Jesus among his followers; —that he does not drive them on before, as a herd of unwilling disciples, but goes before himself, leading them into paths he has trod, and dangers he has met, and sacrifices he has borne himself, calling them after him, and to be only followers. He "leadeth them out."—Dr. Bushnell.

From Sr. Vesta N. Cudworth.

To the dear children of God I would say: I feel like facing the storm, although the heavens are not quite clear. I think with the poet—

"We're getting round the pier."

A few more struggles, a little more patience, and the old ship of Zion will enter the harbor, with her masts bent to the breeze, and her crew shouting—

"Glory to God, all our dangers are o'er."

Some on board, are already measuring distances, anxious to know how many leagues we are from shore. God bless them, and make their bow to abide in strength. May they study the prophecies —dig, dig, until they find the treasure—time; for God has placed it in the word, and because we have failed to understand, or solve the problem, the idea of understanding the time at all, has become disreputable with many. But I believe the time is at hand when God will honor those that honor his truth, and those that have sought to save their lives, or reputation, at the expense of truth, will perish.

Dear children, "quit you like men; be strong." It is an hour of peril, it is a time of rebuke; but it will be rolled off when we enter the goodly land. Our mistakes have not made infidels, but discovered them. I know there are graves enough in Egypt, but God has not led us out there to perish; but he will keep us here until he has proved us, and tried us, and he will find what is in us. Glory to God, I am glad, for my feet had well nigh slipped; and often with a desponding heart I have turned sickening away from the strife, to the rest, in perspective, for the church of God. With impatience I have desired the compensation, before the battle was fought; the rest, before the work was done. And while contemplating the fulfillment of scripture, hearing the proud called happy, seeing those that work wickedness set up, and those that tempt God even delivered, I have exclaimed in the bitterness of my soul, when will the heart cease to bleed and the eyes to weep over the wrongs we cannot right, and sorrows we cannot heal? As the mariner awakes on a piece of the wreck, after the storm has subsided, gazes round him and exclaims, why have I been saved, the friends I have loved are gone, all here is lost, and I have outlived my usefulness. Thus have I mourned. Then God has opened mine eyes, and shown me others more desolate than myself, saying, these you may comfort; some are perishing, those you may save. These comforted, those saved, I began to solace myself with love, feel again new cords binding me to the dear ones here. But, alas! soon they are gone; soon die. Some go back to Egypt.

The bird that sang the sweetest,
The vine that crown'd the rock;
The glory of the garden,
The flower of the flock.

But, thank God, I am getting inured to the storm. I do not suffer myself to be weighed down with trials, that can do no good, neither do I try to carry every body to the kingdom. I mean to do my duty, and leave results with God; scatter the truth, feeling satisfied that it will prove a savor of life or death, and know not to give flattering titles to man. I mean to overcome evil with good, forgive all as I hope to be forgiven, and hold myself in readiness to make reparation when sensible of wrong—gladly, heartily; but have no hope save in the blood of Christ.

Domestic News.

The Free-Lovers ready for Action.—The free-love paper at Berlin Heights, Ohio, wants the world to understand that the free-lovers are not non-resistants, and if the mob attempts to break up their general bed and board, they will do it at their peril:—

"Let the men who are expected to do the dirty work of Berlin bigotry, be informed that the men who think to use them, are guilty of the meanness of asking them to incur a risk which they are too wary to encounter themselves Let them be informed that we are prepared for them—that the citizens from different sections have supplied us with arms, and promised to help us use them if necessary. Let them understand that an attack upon us is the precursor of certain death to some of the marauders—that unless powder loses its peculiar properties, hell will stand a chance for quite a reinforcement from their number."

Comet of 1858.—This remarkable comet (says the Albany Argus) is now visible to the naked eye. It is now only 140 millions of miles distant, and is rapidly approaching the earth, and already shows through a common opera glass a well defined tail. We are told that during the first week in October the comet will be of the most striking brightness, possibly the largest of the century, and at that time will be seen near Arcturus, perhaps even surpassing that brilliant star in splendor. It is now visible for about an hour after sunset, and an hour before sunrise, in a line with the two stars called the pointers, and forming nearly a right angle between these and Arcturus. It is now best seen at four o'clock in the morning.

Later from Utah.—St. Louis, Sept. 16.—We have advices from Leavenworth to 13th instant, per United States express to Booneville to-day. The Salt Lake mail arrived at St. Joseph on the 10th inst., having made the trip in twenty days. The Mormons continued to arrive in the city from the South, and were entering upon their usual avocations.

Brigham Young still keeps himself concealed and lives in constant danger and fear of the vengeance of his own people, who have become greatly incensed at the unveiling of his numerous frauds. This confirms the former reports.

One company of troops had left Fort Bridger for Oregon, and others would leave soon. The Indians were all quiet.

Rev. Eleazar Williams, more generally known as claiming to be the Dauphin of France, died at Hogansburg, New York, at 8 o'clock, on the morning of the 28th of August. His last words were: "Lord Jesus Christ, have mercy on me, and receive my spirit."

"Mary."—This name, by a decree of Pio Nono, can no longer be given to children, on pain of excommunication. His infallibility would reserve it, as far as possible hereafter, for the Virgin of immaculate conception!

Foreign News.

New York, Sept. 16.

Steamship Persia, Judkins, from Liverpool 4th inst., arrived here at half-past 8 o'clock this evening.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor has emancipated the 200,000 serfs belonging to the imperial domain.

A powder magazine containing 200,000 pounds of powder exploded in Astrakan, on the Caspian Sea. Half the town is destroyed, and half the inhabitants killed.

CHINA.

Among other stipulations of the American Chinese treaty, as published, are the following:

Direct correspondence between the American Minister and the Government at Pekin, with right of an annual visit to Pekin; permanent residence there, if conceded to other powers; suppression of piracy; opening of new ports, including Swatow and Tainan, in Formosa; the United States never to pay higher duties than the most favored nations; double tunnage abolished; absolute toleration for Christianity and the United States legation to be at Shanghai instead of Canton.

TURKEY.

Threats of death to the Christians had been made at Tripoli, and the French Consul at Beyrout had proceeded there to insist on measures of precaution.

Latest.—London, Saturday.—Letters from Damascus say that the Russian Consul had been insulted by the fanatics, and had retired to Beyrout

Vienna letters say that advices from Constantinople inspire fears for the safety of the Christians. The existence of a conspiracy to dethrone the Sultan has been confirmed.

Great hostility continued to be shown towards foreign residents in Canton, and the acting British Consul had advised them to be prepared for a sudden departure.

The blockade of the river at Canton has been established, as far as Chinese boats were concerned. Trade had been suspended. All the native merchants and foreigners had left. A French man-of-war had shelled Shamur, a part of the western suburbs, a Frenchman having been killed.

Obituary Notices.

Sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, Dec. 23d, 1857, Edward Anson Gage, son of Anson Gage of Northfield, Mass., of the consumption, after a lingering illness of nearly two years, aged 13 years 10 months.

During his protracted sickness the little martyr was never known to complain. He often exhorted his parents to meet him in the Kingdom. Said little Edward; "O! how lonesome I shall be in the Kingdom if I do not find you there!" The evening he fell asleep, he frequently responded Amen to the prayers of his parents; and ere the sun arose he fell a victim to the last enemy, to sleep until the heavens be no more, and the shadows on the mountains flee away at the appearing of the Life-giver. Oh, come! Lord Jesus. Oh come! come quickly! Even so come. Amen.

"Parents, meet me," said the dying child, weeping
In the Kingdom of God, the home of the blest;"
Such was the language of Edward now sleeping;
"Or I shall be lonesome in the saint's promised rest."
'Neath his own maple tree they have pillowed his head
With his dear sister Ellen, in Jesus they sleep;
He rests now in hope in the home of the dead,
And for Christ to return his fond parents weep.

Lonesome! O never shall one of God's saints be
In the kingdom of Jesus, the land of sweet rest;
Where the glory of God, as the waters the sea,
Shall cover fair Eden the home of the blest.
O! never amid the undying pleasures,
Where the blood-washed are singing the praise of their King,
'Mid bright sunny joys, while recounting their treasures,
Shall thoughts of grief sadden their hearts while they sing.

Lonesome! O, no, in those bright realms of glory,
Where an unclouded sun doth eternally shine,
Where millions shall join in rehearsing the story,
Where all hearts are united in praises sublime,
Where bland and serene the mild zephyrs are playing,
Where the rich strains of music float ever along,
Where the palm bearing victors will ever be straying,
Where angels and saints all unite in one song.

Lonesome! O no; there grief never shall enter,
Where God is the temple, the Lamb is the light;
Where the just are made perfect, pure joys shall centre,
Where skies are unclouded and the sun ever bright.
Sleep sweetly in Jesus, for soon the glad morning,
That brings life to the sleepers, must certainly break;
When Christ the Life giver in glory returning,
Shall all the dead saints immortal awake.

S. S. Brewer.

Hartford, Ct.

Died in the faith, Jane Ruland, at Hempstead, L. I., 30th day of April, 1858, in the 54th year of her age.

Sister R has been from the beginning a devoted christian. She joined the church of which I was pastor at Patchogue, L. I., about nineteen years since; from which time to her death she pre-eminently exemplified the christian character. She embraced the blessed hope of the coming and kingdom of Jesus at the first announcement of their approach, and has been a steadfast believer ever since. She has been tried with sore and fiery trials; but they served a good purpose. They drove her to God; she appreciated prayer; she used her privilege in this matter by bringing all hard cases to the Lord, who rolled back the tempests, chained the lion, and quenched the fire. For fifteen years I have never seen her when she was not praying or praising God, and recounting his mercies. Her faith seemed to be an abiding element and always at her service.

She took cold by attending night meetings in the late flow of zeal that happened to the churches. A severe bilious attack succeeded, inflicting a forced march to the grave. But she did not suspect death was lurking about her path and bed. The arrow sped swiftly and surely; when fell a saint of unsurpassed devotion and faith.

Poor dear child of hope! She had served God's purpose and could be spared. Her heavenly Father knew that death in her case would be a relief from a greater evil, and so she rests in hope.

God pity his people and repeal the law of death. Amen. B. Matthias.

Bro. Grant:—Again has the great enemy of our race visited us, and pressed his cold icy hand upon one of our number. We have received the sad intelligence that our beloved brother, Ira Cutting, who left here to spend the summer in Eastport, Me., and was soon expected back again, has been cut down in the full strength of manhood, and prime of life, and has become a tenant of the great charnel-house, there to rest in the land of the enemy till Christ, who is our life, shall appear, and call upon the sea and land to deliver up those who loved him here. We feel sad; but do not sorrow as those having no hope. No, no: we believe he was Christ's when living, and died in the love of God. His smiling countenance, his even temperament, his love for the society of the christian, always tendered to him a happy welcome. He loved to be at the prayer meeting. His voice mingled with the prayers and exhortations, and joined in harmony to sing God's praise. He bore the cross, that he might wear the crown. He has gone—sung his last song—offered his last prayer. His place is vacant. Who shall fill it? May that hope which was his, buoy up his bereaved wife, with the rest of us, and prepare us to meet with him in that home where there is no sickness nor death.

Salem, Mass. T. H., Jr.

Died, in Gravesend, Lynn, Mass., January 28th, 1858, George William, son of Thomas M. and Catharine E. Wiffen, aged 3 years 2 months 2 days.

Also, June 16th, Catharine Elizabeth, wife of Thomas M. Wiffen, and daughter of William and Dorcas G. Payne, aged 29 years 2 months 13 days.

Also, George William, second son of Thomas M. and Catherine E. Wiffen, died August 27th, aged 2 months 13 days.

But when the archangel trump shall sound,
And bring these loved ones from the ground,
O may we then in union sweet
Meet at our dear Redeemer's feet!

Thus have I been bereft of all that was near and dear to me on earth by the cold hand of death.

"I walk a lonely pilgrim here,
O'er life's uneven way;
My aching heart keeps hoping for
A bright and better day."

M. Wiffen.

Lynn, Mass.

Married.

In Williamstown, Aug. 31st, by Rev. Mr. McGilton, Mr. Edmund Lillie and Miss Helen S. Coon, both of Williamstown.

Dedication.—The Advent Chapel at Scitico, Ct., was dedicated to the worship of God on the 16th day of September. Eld. Edwin Burnham preached the dedication sermon. A series of meetings followed, which were continued over the Sabbath. Some interest was manifest on the part of the community, and the prospects are fair for future good in that region.

NOTICES.

☞ Bro. Alexander Hunt, McIndoes Falls, Vt., has been burned out in the late fire at that place, and is anxious to get a situation where he can earn enough to support his large family. He can work at carriage building, house painting, carpentering, plastering, joinering, sleigh making, or in a machine shop. If any of our readers can find a place for our brother in his distress, he will feel very thankful for the favor. Address him at McIndoes Falls, Vt.

☞ Will the writer of the following please give us his address?

"August 26, 1858.

Brother Grant,—Please continue to send me the Crisis."

☞ NOTICE.—If the Lord permit, a Conference will be held in Brunswick, Me., in the Yellow School-house, about 2 1-2 miles from the village, on the Bath road, commencing Thurday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath. We hope to see a good gathering of the firiends in that region. Come, beloved, in the name of the Lord, and let us make one more effort to save sinners, and cheer each other on in our pilgrimage to the better land.

Those coming from abroad will call on Bro. Thomas M. Storer.

R. R. YORK,
I. C. WELLCOME.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro. D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. Preble.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is to be holden at Lake Village, to commence Thursday, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

A general attendance of brethren, and especially brethren in the ministry, is desired.

The friends at Lake Village will make provision for all who may need.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 23, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber. P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

☞ NOTICE.—We would earnestly request those who are indebted to this office for Hymn Books, to remit us the amount due, as we, in all cases, have to pay cash for the same, and cannot afford to be out of the money. Probably some of our brethren have overlooked the fact that they are so long indebted for books. We would, therefore, in all love and earnestness, call their attention to the matter, as the funds of the paper are too contracted to afford lengthened credit.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, } Secretaries.
A. PEARCE, }

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets. WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.

Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Maine Eastern Central Quarterly Conference.

This Conference will be held in South Hope, commencing Thursday, 2 o'clock P. M., Sept. 30th, and continue over the Sabbath. Ministering brethren and others are invited to attend and labor for the salvation of sinners.

In behalf of the brethren,
THOMAS SMITH,
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Notice

TO THE PREACHERS.

To prevent all further complaint that some monopolize the preaching and preachers; and that others will not help bear the burden, in this place, it is now the conclusion that the brethren will invite those preachers whom they desire, in addition to the stated Sabbath supply. ☞ And those inviting will provide. This is the plan until further arrangements. Meetings are held every Sunday at the Chapel on Arch street. Bro. Turner supplies.

W. S. CAMPBELL,
For the brethren.

New Britain, Aug. 23, 1858.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

☞ I will preach in North Springfield, Vt. the last Sunday in September. Pawlett, Vt., the first Sunday in October.
S. W. BISHOP.

☞ The Lord willing, I will preach at the following places, viz:

At East Boston, Lord's day, Sept. 26th.
Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, Oct. 3.
Rye, N. H., where the brethren may appoint, in the evening, Oct. 4th & 5th.
Portland, Me., evening, Oct. 7th.
Yarmouth, Me., Lord's day, Oct. 10th.
WM. M. INGHAM.

Lowell, Sept. 20th, 1858.

☞ Providence permitting, I will preach in Portland, Me., on Sunday, the 26th inst.
R. R. YORK.

S. S. Brazee appoints to preach in

Pine Swamp, Ct.,	Sept. 26th.
Paulings, N. Y.,	" 28th.
Goshen, Mass.,	Oct. 6th.
Holley, "	" 7th.
Savoy, "	" 8th.
North Adams, Sunday,	" 10th.
Cheshire, Mass.,	" 11th.

I propose to preach, by the Lord's permission, at—

Portsmouth, Sunday,	Sept. 19th.
Salem, Wednesday eve'g,	" 22nd.
Roxbury, Thursday "	" 23d.
Boston, Sunday "	" 26th.
Plymouth, Mass., Sunday,	Oct. 3d.

H. F. CARPENTER.

Bro. H. Pratt appoints to preach in—Concord, N. H. (Chapel) - - Sept. 23d, and over the following Sabbath.

Business.

To Correspondents.

T. Smith, money received.

S. E. Reed, please send us your address.

Eld. H. Grew, one dollar.

M L Clark, Derby Line,—your money, $22, is credited in first No. of this volume.

Cash Receipts.

Errata.—D. Cable should be credited $2.00 instead of one. S. Lacy should be S. Locy. O. Jones should be $1.50.

T White 182, $2,78; O P Redington 183, 25 cts; A C Scranton 232, $5.00; T S Pepper 182, $3.00.

C M Smith 169, F Chaloner 170, Mr. Perry 170, 50 cts. each.

E G Emmons 182, A D Smith 182, L Dudley 208, B F Miles 178, Jane J. Austin 182, A Tennant 177, J O Sweet 182, R Allen 182, B F Brown 182, W Sprague 182, S Tucker 182, E Cross 182, G Morris 162, Capt. D Tripp 182, W P Wentworth 184, M A Eccleston 186, C Dagget 182, G Brackett 182, L Moran 181, M Burheit 126, N McCulloch, Jr, 182, M A Dickenson 182, B Wheelock 208, L McDuffee 182, E Kelly 178, E Garland 143, Bro. Fish, H Finn 182, W Mitchell, M E Gavit 184, N Hart 136, J S Douglas 182, A Bunnell 166, C Baldwin 184, A Russ 182, S Woodruff 195, J Spalding, Jr. 182, W B Lang 182, J W Marden 156, C E Hinman 184, T Chambers 182, W Hunter 184, F Norbut for the poor,—$1.00 each.

G Morgan 204, R F Woodruff 180, H L Parsons 185, Dr. A M Higgins 130, J Ellis 173, J L McLean 208, L Y Moses 156, A Sage 208, C Bulkley 192, E W Hall 195, R Lyman 182, H H Hall 156, P Blair 208, P White 163, C Morse 163, T Foote 188,—$2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts—G L White $5.40; T H Rowe 10 cts; E Whitney $7.00; E Bellows $3.00; C D Williams 50 cts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger. including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1–Church not in Darkness; 2–The Three Worlds; 3–The Last Days; 4–Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5–Noah, his Age and Ours; 6–Desire of all Nations; 7–It is Done; by John Cumming. 8–A Voice of Warning; 9–New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10–*Ancient Landmarks; 11–State of the Dead; by Milton. 12–Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1–Future Punishment; by Grew. 2–Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked 3–Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4–Key of Truth; 5–Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6–†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1–The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2–The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1–Olive Leaves, separate; 2–Ancient Landmarks separate; 3–Forty Questions on Immortality; 4–Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Brancis Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street N. Y.

*The Landmarks are issued in setts of six. Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Man's Destiny. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cts. Postage, 3 cts.

The Discussion: Between Prof. H. Mattison and Geo. Storrs. Question:—"Does the Bible teach that the creature Man, which the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground, has a Superadded Entity called the soul?" Price 25 cents in paper covers; bound, 50 cts. Postage, 3 cts.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.: The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy

From Sr. Vesta N. Cudworth.

To the dear children of God I would say: I feel like facing the storm, although the heavens are not quite clear. I think with the poet—

"We're getting round the pier."

A few more struggles, a little more patience, and the old ship of Zion will enter the harbor, with her masts bent to the breeze, and her crew shouting—

"Glory to God, all our dangers are o'er."

Some on board, are already measuring distances, anxious to know how many leagues we are from shore. God bless them, and make their bow to abide in strength. May they study the prophecies—dig, dig, until they find the treasure—time; for God has placed it in the word, and because we have failed to understand, or solve the problem, the idea of understanding the time at all, has become disreputable with many. But I believe the time is at hand when God will honor those that honor his truth, and those that have sought to save their lives, or reputation, at the expense of truth, will perish.

Dear children, "quit you like men; be strong." It is an hour of peril, it is a time of rebuke; but it will be rolled off when we enter the goodly land. Our mistakes have not made infidels, but discovered them. I know there are graves enough in Egypt, but God has not led us out there to perish; but he will keep us here until he has proved us, and tried us, and he will find what is in us. Glory to God, I am glad, for my feet had well nigh slipped; and often with a desponding heart I have turned sickening away from the strife, to the rest, in perspective, for the church of God. With impatience I have desired the compensation, before the battle was fought; the rest, before the work was done. And while contemplating the fulfillment of scripture, hearing the proud called happy, seeing those that work wickedness set up, and those that tempt God even delivered, I have exclaimed in the bitterness of my soul, when will the heart cease to bleed and the eyes to weep over the wrongs we cannot right, and sorrows we cannot heal? As the mariner awakes on a piece of the wreck, after the storm has subsided, gazes round him and exclaims, why have I been saved, the friends I have loved are gone, all here is lost, and I have outlived my usefulness. Thus have I mourned. Then God has opened mine eyes, and shown me others more desolate than myself, saying, these you may comfort; some are perishing, those you may save. These comforted, those saved, I began to solace myself with love, feel again new cords binding me to the dear ones here. But, alas! soon they are gone; soon die. Some go back to Egypt.

The bird that sang the sweetest,
The vine that crown'd the rock;
The glory of the garden,
The flower of the flock.

But, thank God, I am getting inured to the storm. I do not suffer myself to be weighed down with trials, that can do no good, neither do I try to carry every body to the kingdom. I mean to do my duty, and leave results with God; scatter the truth, feeling satisfied that it will prove a savor of life or death, and know not to give flattering titles to man. I mean to overcome evil with good, forgive all as I hope to be forgiven, and hold myself in readiness to make reparation when sensible of wrong—gladly, heartily; but have no hope save in the blood of Christ.

Domestic News.

THE FREE-LOVERS READY FOR ACTION.—The free-love paper at Berlin Heights, Ohio, wants the world to understand that the free-lovers are not non-resistants, and if the mob attempts to break up their general bed and board, they will do it at their peril:—

"Let the men who are expected to do the dirty work of Berlin bigotry, be informed that the men who think to use them, are guilty of the meanness of asking them to incur a risk which they are too wary to encounter themselves. Let them be informed that we are prepared for them—that the citizens from different sections have supplied us with arms, and promised to help us use them if necessary. Let them understand that an attack upon us is the precursor of certain death to some of the marauders—that unless powder loses its peculiar properties, hell will stand a chance for quite a reinforcement from their number."

COMET OF 1858.—This remarkable comet (says the Albany Argus) is now visible to the naked eye. It is now only 140 millions of miles distant, and is rapidly approaching the earth, and already shows through a common opera glass a well defined tail. We are told that during the first week in October the comet will be of the most striking brightness, possibly the largest of the century, and at that time will be seen near Arcturus, perhaps even surpassing that brilliant star in splendor. It is now visible for about an hour after sunset, and an hour before sunrise, in a line with the two stars called the pointers, and forming nearly a right angle between these and Arcturus. It is now best seen at four o'clock in the morning.

LATER FROM UTAH.—St. Louis, Sept. 16.—We have advices from Leavenworth to 13th instant, per United States express to Booneville to-day. The Salt Lake mail arrived at St. Joseph on the 10th inst., having made the trip in twenty days. The Mormons continued to arrive in the city from the South, and were entering upon their usual avocations.

Brigham Young still keeps himself concealed and lives in constant danger and fear of the vengeance of his own people, who have become greatly incensed at the unveiling of his numerous frauds. This confirms the former reports.

One company of troops had left Fort Bridger for Oregon, and others would leave soon. The Indians were all quiet.

Rev. Eleazar Williams, more generally known as claiming to be the Dauphin of France, died at Hogansburg, New York, at 8 o'clock, on the morning of the 28th of August. His last words were: "Lord Jesus Christ, have mercy on me, and receive my spirit."

"MARY."—This name, by a decree of Pio Nono, can no longer be given to children, on pain of excommunication. His infallibility would reserve it, as far as possible hereafter, for the Virgin of immaculate conception!

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.

Steamship Persia, Judkins, from Liverpool 4th inst., arrived here at half-past 8 o'clock this evening.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor has emancipated the 200,000 serfs belonging to the imperial domain.

A powder magazine containing 200,000 pounds of powder exploded in Astrakan, on the Caspian Sea. Half the town is destroyed, and half the inhabitants killed.

CHINA.

Among other stipulations of the American Chinese treaty, as published, are the following:

Direct correspondence between the American Minister and the Government at Pekin, with right of an annual visit to Pekin; permanent residence there, if conceded to other powers; suppression of piracy; opening of new ports, including Swatow and Tainan, in Formosa; the United States never to pay higher duties than the most favored nations; double tunnage abolished; absolute toleration for Christianity and the United States legation to be at Shanghai instead of Canton.

TURKEY.

Threats of death to the Christians had been made at Tripoli, and the French Consul at Beyrout had proceeded there to insist on measures of precaution.

LATEST.—London, Saturday.—Letters from Damascus say that the Russian Consul had been insulted by the fanatics, and had retired to Beyrout.

Vienna letters say that advices from Constantinople inspire fears for the safety of the Christians. The existence of a conspiracy to dethrone the Sultan has been confirmed.

Great hostility continued to be shown towards foreign residents in Canton, and the acting British Consul had advised them to be prepared for a sudden departure.

The blockade of the river at Canton has been established, as far as Chinese boats were concerned. Trade had been suspended. All the native merchants and foreigners had left. A French man-of-war had shelled Shamur, a part of the western suburbs, a Frenchman having been killed.

Obituary Notices.

Sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, Dec. 23d, 1857, EDWARD ANSON GAGE, son of Anson Gage of Northfield, Mass., of the consumption, after a lingering illness of nearly two years, aged 13 years 10 months.

During his protracted sickness the little martyr was never known to complain. He often exhorted his parents to meet him in the Kingdom. Said little Edward; "O! how lonesome I shall be in the Kingdom if I do not find you there!" The evening he fell asleep, he frequently responded Amen to the prayers of his parents; and ere the sun arose he fell a victim to the last enemy, to sleep until the heavens be no more, and the shadows on the mountains flee away at the appearing of the Life-giver. Oh, come! Lord Jesus. Oh come! come quickly! Even so come. Amen.

"Parents, meet me," said the dying child, weeping
In the Kingdom of God, the home of the blest;"
Such was the language of Edward now sleeping;
"Or I shall be lonesome in the saint's promised rest."
'Neath his own maple tree they have pillowed his head
With his dear sister Ellen, in Jesus they sleep;
He rests now in hope in the home of the dead,
And for Christ to return his fond parents weep.

Lonesome! O never shall one of God's saints be
In the kingdom of Jesus, the land of sweet rest;
Where the glory of God, as the waters the sea,
Shall cover fair Eden the home of the blest.
O! never amid the undying pleasures,
Where the blood-washed are singing the praise of their King,
'Mid bright sunny joys, while recounting their treasures,
Shall thoughts of grief sadden their hearts while they sing.

Lonesome! O, no, in those bright realms of glory,
Where an unclouded sun doth eternally shine,
Where millions shall join in rehearsing the story,
Where all hearts are united in praises sublime,
Where bland and serene the mild zephyrs are playing,
Where the rich strains of music float ever along,
Where the palm bearing victors will ever be straying,
Where angels and saints all unite in one song.

Lonesome! O no; there grief never shall enter,
Where God is the temple, the Lamb is the light;
Where the just are made perfect, pure joys shall centre,
Where skies are unclouded and the sun ever bright.
Sleep sweetly in Jesus, for soon the glad morning,
That brings life to the sleepers, must certainly break;
When Christ the Life giver in glory returning,
Shall all the dead saints immortal awake.

S. S. BREWER.

Hartford, Ct.

Died in the faith, JANE RULAND, at Hempstead, L. I., 30th day of April, 1858, in the 54th year of her age.

Sister R has been from the beginning a devoted christian. She joined the church of which I was pastor at Patchogue, L. I., about nineteen years since; from which time to her death she pre-eminently exemplified the christian character. She embraced the blessed hope of the coming and kingdom of Jesus at the first announcement of their approach, and has been a steadfast believer ever since. She has been tried with sore and fiery trials; but they served a good purpose. They drove her to God; she appreciated prayer; she used her privilege in this matter by bringing all hard cases to the Lord, who rolled back the tempests, chained the lion, and quenched the fire. For fifteen years I have never seen her when she was not praying or praising God, and recounting his mercies. Her faith seemed to be an abiding element and always at her service.

She took cold by attending night meetings in the late flow of zeal that happened to the churches. A severe bilious attack succeeded, inflicting a forced march to the grave. But she did not suspect death was lurking about her path and bed. The arrow sped swiftly and surely; when fell a saint of unsurpassed devotion and faith.

Poor dear child of hope! She had served God's purpose and could be spared. Her heavenly Father knew that death in her case would be a relief from a greater evil, and so she rests in hope.

God pity his people and repeal the law of death. Amen. B. MATTHIAS.

BRO. GRANT:—Again has the great enemy of our race visited us, and pressed his cold icy hand upon one of our number. We have received the sad intelligence that our beloved brother, IRA CUTTING, who left here to spend the summer in Eastport, Me., and was soon expected back again, has been cut down in the full strength of manhood, and prime of life, and has become a tenant of the great charnel-house, there to rest in the land of the enemy till Christ, who is our life, shall appear, and call upon the sea and land to deliver up those who loved him here. We feel sad; but do not sorrow as those having no hope. No, no: we believe he was Christ's when living, and died in the love of God. His smiling countenance, his even temperament, his love for the society of the christian, always tendered to him a happy welcome. He loved to be at the prayer meeting. His voice mingled with the prayers and exhortations, and joined in harmony to sing God's praise. He bore the cross, that he might wear the crown. He has gone—sung his last song—offered his last prayer. His place is vacant. Who shall fill it? May that hope which was his, buoy up his bereaved wife, with the rest of us, and prepare us to meet with him in that home where there is no sickness nor death.

Salem, Mass. T. H., JR.

Died, in Gravesend, Lynn, Mass., January 28th, 1858, GEORGE WILLIAM, son of Thomas M. and Catharine E. Wiffen, aged 3 years 2 months 2 days.

Also, June 16th, CATHARINE ELIZABETH, wife of Thomas M. Wiffen, and daughter of William and Dorcas G. Payne, aged 29 years 2 months 13 days.

Also, GEORGE WILLIAM, second son of Thomas M. and Catherine E. Wiffen, died August 27th, aged 2 months 13 days.

But when the archangel trump shall sound,
And bring these loved ones from the ground,
O may we then in union sweet
Meet at our dear Redeemer's feet!

Thus have I been bereft of all that was near and dear to me on earth by the cold hand of death.

"I walk a lonely pilgrim here,
O'er life's uneven way;
My aching heart keeps hoping for
A bright and better day."

M. WIFFEN.

Lynn, Mass.

Married.

In Williamstown, Aug. 31st, by Rev. Mr. McGilton, Mr. EDMUND LILLIE and Miss HELEN S. COON, both of Williamstown.

DEDICATION.—The Advent Chapel at Scitico, Ct., was dedicated to the worship of God on the 16th day of September. Eld. Edwin Burnham preached the dedication sermon. A series of meetings followed, which were continued over the Sabbath. Some interest was manifest on the part of the community, and the prospects are fair for future good in that region.

NOTICES.

☞ Bro. ALEXANDER HUNT, McIndoes Falls, Vt., has been burned out in the late fire at that place, and is anxious to get a situation where he can earn enough to support his large family. He can work at carriage building, house painting, carpentering, plastering, joinering, sleigh making, or in a machine shop. If any of our readers can find a place for our brother in his distress, he will feel very thankful for the favor. Address him at McIndoes Falls, Vt.

☞ Will the writer of the following please give us his address?

"AUGUST 26, 1858.

Brother Grant,—Please continue to send me the Crisis."

☞ NOTICE.—If the Lord permit, a Conference will be held in Brunswick, Me., in the Yellow School-house, about 2 1-2 miles from the village, on the Bath road, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath. We hope to see a good gathering of the friends in that region. Come, beloved, in the name of the Lord, and let us make one more effort to save sinners, and cheer each other on in our pilgrimage to the better land.

Those coming from abroad will call on Bro. Thomas M. Storer.

R. R. YORK,
I. C. WELLCOME.

Conference at Warner, N. H.

There will be a Conference at Warner Village, in the Universalist Meetinghouse, to commence Thursday, Sept. 23d, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

This meeting is intended for a general gathering of all that may feel interested in such meetings.

The friends in Warner will make provision for all who may need; and it is hoped that brethren who attend, both in the ministry and membership, will come in the spirit of the Gospel, and labor directly for the salvation of souls.

With much prayer, and great humility, let us come up to this general gathering of saints, and the Lord will be with us. It is already ascertained that Bro. D. Churchill, J. Couch and the writer, expect to be at the meeting, and probably quite a number of other brethren in the ministry.

In behalf of the brethren,
T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 7, 1858.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is to be holden at Lake Village, to commence Thursday, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

A general attendance of brethren, and especially brethren in the ministry, is desired.

The friends at Lake Village will make provision for all who may need.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 23, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyous.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber. P. S. W. DEYO,
Conference Clerk.

☞ NOTICE.—We would earnestly request those who are indebted to this office for Hymn Books, to remit us the amount due, as we, in all cases, have to pay cash for the same, and cannot afford to be out of the money. Probably some of our brethren have overlooked the fact that they are so long indebted for books. We would, therefore, in all love and earnestness, call their attention to the matter, as the funds of the paper are too contracted to afford lengthened credit.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, } Secretaries.
A. PEARCE, }

Ohio Conference.

By permission of God, a Conference will be held at Springfield, Ohio, commencing Sept. 29th, 1858. To this Conference all are invited—East, West, North, South. All possible arrangements will be made to entertain brethren and sisters, and make their sojourn here a pleasant one. Last year a conference for Ohio was called, and upon short notice a goodly number came together. It was a time not to be forgotten. A plan of organization was harmoniously entered into, and an Evangelist appointed. At the approaching conference we expect to hear encouraging reports from him. The time for organization, council, and instruction in the doctrine of the coming kingdom of Christ, has come.

While the enemy is concentrating his forces against the Bible and against all law and order, we should concentrate our forces in defence of the Bible. A revival of Spiritualism is now going on; Spiritualism and Literalism are arrayed against each other. We are the people called, in the providence of God, to stand up for the defence of the Bible. We want to show to Christ and to the world that we will defend the truth even to the loss of this life.

Let all come in the spirit of Christ, in harmony and love for one another, in the power of truth. Let none come with a determination to exclusively press any one peculiar view of his own, and denounce all others as unchristian because they can't see as they see. Difference of views we expect, and a fair and candid expression of views is desirable; but let them be made in the spirit of Christ.

We shall feel disappointed here if this Conference prove not one of the most harmonious ever held in these last days of discord and confusion. We hope the world around will be compelled to acknowledge that we have the spirit of Christ. Already do we hear of an interest being felt in this Conference. Brethren and sisters are anxiously awaiting its assembling. We hear of some coming from the East, and we hope some will come from the West. Those coming will call on the subscriber, corner of Spring and North streets. WILLIAM FISH,
Sec. of last Conference.

Springfield, Ohio, July 19, 1858.

Maine Eastern Central Quarterly Conference.

This Conference will be held in South Hope, commencing Thursday, 2 o'clock P. M., Sept. 30th, and continue over the Sabbath. Ministering brethren and others are invited to attend and labor for the salvation of sinners.

In behalf of the brethren,
THOMAS SMITH,
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Notice.

TO THE PREACHERS.

To prevent all further complaint that some monopolize the preaching and preachers; and that others will not help bear the burden, in this place, it is now the conclusion that the brethren will invite those preachers whom they desire, in addition to the stated Sabbath supply. ☞ And those inviting will provide. This is the plan until further arrangements. Meetings are held every Sunday at the Chapel on Arch street. Bro. Turner supplies.

W. S. CAMPBELL,
For the brethren.

New Britain, Aug. 23, 1858.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

☞ I will preach in North Springfield, Vt., the last Sunday in September. Pawlett, Vt., the first Sunday in October.

S. W. BISHOP.

☞ The Lord willing, I will preach at the following places, viz:

At East Boston, Lord's day, Sept. 26th.
Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, Oct. 3.
Rye, N. H., where the brethren may appoint, in the evening, Oct. 4th & 5th.
Portland, Me., evening, Oct. 7th.
Yarmouth, Me., Lord's day, Oct. 10th.

WM. M. INGHAM.

Lowell, Sept. 20th, 1858.

☞ Providence permitting, I will preach in Portland, Me., on Sunday, the 26th inst.

R. R. YORK.

S. S. Brazee appoints to preach in

Pine Swamp, Ct.,	Sept. 26th.
Paulings, N. Y.,	" 28th.
Goshen, Mass.,	Oct. 6th.
Holley, "	" 7th.
Savoy, "	" 8th.
North Adams, Sunday,	" 10th.
Cheshire, Mass.,	" 11th.

I propose to preach, by the Lord's permission, at—

Portsmouth, Sunday,	Sept. 19th.
Salem, Wednesday eve'g,	" 22nd.
Roxbury, Thursday "	" 23d.
Boston, Sunday "	" 26th.
Plymouth, Mass., Sunday,	Oct. 3d.

H. F. CARPENTER.

Bro. H. PRATT appoints to preach in—Concord, N. H. (Chapel) - Sept. 23d, and over the following Sabbath.

Business.

To Correspondents.

T. Smith, money received.

S. E. Reed, please send us your address.

Eld. H. Grew, one dollar.

M L Clark, Derby Line,—your money, $22, is credited in first No. of this volume.

Cash Receipts.

ERRATA.—D. Cable should be credited $2.00 instead of one. S. Lacy should be S. Locy. O. Jones should be $1.50.

T White 182, $2,78; O P Redington 183, 25 cts; A C Scranton 232, $5.00; T S Pepper 182, $3.00.

C M Smith 169, F Chaloner 170, Mr. Perry 170, 50 cts. each.

E G Emmons 182, A D Smith 182, L Dudley 208, B F Miles 178, Jane J. Austin 182, A Tennant 177, J O Sweet 182, R Allen 182, B F Brown 182, W Sprague 182, S Tucker 182, E Cross 182, G Morris 162, Capt. D Tripp 182, W P Wentworth 184, M A Eccleston 186, C Dagget 182, G Brackett 182, L Moran 181, M Burheit 126, N McCulloch, Jr., 182, M A Dickenson 182, B Wheelock 208, L McDuffee 182, E Kelly 178, E Garland 143, Bro. Fish, H Finn 182, W Mitchell, M E Gavit 184, N Hart 136, J S Douglas 182, A Bunnell 166, C Baldwin 184, A Russ 182, S Woodruff 195, J Spalding, Jr. 182, W B Lang 182, J W Marden 156, C E Hinman 184, T Chambers 182, W Hunter 184, F Norbut for the poor,—$1.00 each.

G Morgan 204, R F Woodruff 180, H L Parsons 185, Dr. A M Higgins 130, J Ellis 173, J L McLean 208, L Y Moses 156, A Sage 208, C Bulkley 182, E W Hall 195, R Lyman 182, H H Hall 156, P Blair 208, P White 163, C Morse 163, T Foote 188,—$2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts—G L White $5.40; T H Rowe 10 cts; E Whitney $7.00; E Bellows $3.00; C D Williams 50 cts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch, Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street N. Y.

*The Landmarks are issued in setts of six. Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

MAN'S DESTINY. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cts. Postage, 3 cts.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison and Geo. Storrs. Question:—"Does the Bible teach that the creature Man, which the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground, has a Superadded Entity called the soul?" Price 25 cents in paper covers; bound, 50 cts. Postage, 3 cts.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.: The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hall; Great Controversy.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"SWEAR NOT AT ALL."

"Swear not at all." My ear is pained
To hear Jehovah's name profaned.
"Swear not at all," for so said Christ,
Whose words were ever gems unpriced.
This law the child of God proclaims—
"Above all things, swear not," said James.
That message was of priceless worth—
"God's throne is heaven—his footstool earth."
Swear not by these—before that throne
Our words, our very thoughts are known.
Swear not by thine own hand or head—
Not by the living or the dead;
Nor yet thy life, nor soul, nor health,
Nor yet that glittering phantom, wealth.
Nor swear by earth; as we explore,
God's footprints tell on every shore.
Not by the stars nor orb of day,
Nor gems that paved the milky way,
Nor yet more distant realms above,
Made vocal by Jehovah's love.
Not by the saints nor seraphim;
These are of God, and now TO HIM.
Not by the balmy breath of spring,
Nor feathered songsters on the wing.
Not by the monsters of the deep,
Nor raging storms that o'er us sweep,
Nor by the lightning's flash on high,
Nor by the thunder roaring by.
Not by angelic harp nor lyre,
And never on the Atlantic wire.
Nor by the King nor Queen, or both,
Nor yet by any other oath.
"Swear not at all."

LORENZO D. GROSVENOR.

South Groton, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Exposition of Revelation Xiii.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Much has been written, preached and said concerning this portion of Revelation; and probably many have concluded it is best to let it stand on the pages of Holy Writ as of very little importance whether we understand it or not; as sufficient for our instruction in righteousness is so plain, we had better attend to that. Well, let us hold fast to all we know, grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever. Amen.

I humbly submit some few thoughts, and also some facts to the readers of the Crisis; and as I shall not be dogmatically positive, I hope I shall obtain a reading of what I may have to say on this matter.

Rev. 13: 1. And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy. And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

I think I may say it is conceded on all sides, that the Leopard beast was the Eastern or Greek Empire; and his predecessor in power was Pagan Rome, symbolised by the Dragon. According to the prophecy, the DRAGON was to transfer his power, his seat and his authority to the beast. Have we history to corroborate this fact? (See Gibbon Vol. iii. page 512. Phillips and Sampson's Edition.) On the extinction of the Western Empire, the historian has this statement: "The unfortunate Augustulus was made the instrument of his own disgrace. He signified his resignation to the senate, and that assembly in their last act of obedience to a Roman Prince, still affected the spirit of freedom, and the forms of the constitution. An epistle was addressed by their unanimous decree to the EMPEROR ZENO, the son-in-law and successor of Leo, who had lately been restored, after a short rebellion, to the Byzantic Throne. They solemnly "disclaim the necessity or even the wish of continuing the Imperial succession in Italy, since, in their opinion, the majesty of a sole monarch is sufficient to pervade and protect at the same time BOTH THE EAST AND THE WEST. In their own name and in the name of the people they consent that the SEAT OF UNIVERSAL EMPIRE shall be transferred from ROME TO CONSTANTINOPLE; and they basely renounce the right of choosing their Master, the only vestige that yet remained of the AUTHORITY WHICH HAD GIVEN LAWS TO THE WORLD."

Thus the Dragon gave his seat, power and authority to the beast, or Rome transferred her power to the Greek Emperor.

And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed; and all the world wondered after the beast.

The revelator sees one of his heads, as it were wounded to death. The deadly wound is this: The Saracens had conquered Africa and crossed the straits; had overrun Spain, and were already threatening the destruction of France, when they were opposed by Martel, between Tours and Poitiers, 732. The conflict is reported to have lasted seven days; and the Arabs fled, leaving 300,000 of their dead on the field. "The victory of Charles," says Hallam, "has immortalized his name; and may justly be reckoned among those few battles of which a contrary event would have essentially varied the drama of the world in all its subsequent scenes." See White's History, page 206. Please read Gibbon, Vol. V. pages 289–290. Says Gibbon: The Saracens "were soon driven beyond the Pyrenees by Charles Martel and his valiant race. It might have been expected that the Savior of Christendom would have been canonized, or at least applauded, by the gratitude of the clergy, who are indebted to his sword for their present existence."

Thus I understand the deadly wound to have been inflicted by the Arabian enthusiasts, with their sword, on the dominions of the leopard beast; and healed by the sword of Charles Martel at the battle of Tours, A. D. 732.

And they worshiped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshiped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him? And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months.

And there was given unto this beast a mouth speaking great things. This same mouth is predicted by the prophet, Dan. 7: 20, 21, which I conceive to be the Papacy. We will briefly notice some of the great things and blasphemies of this mouth, that uttered such great swelling words of vanity. Hear Pope Stephen, writing to the French. "I, Peter, called to the Apostleship by Jesus Christ, the son of the living God, beseech you, Pepin, Charles Carloman, and you, lords clerical and lay of the Kingdom of France, not to permit my city of Rome and my people to be longer rent by the Lombards. If you wish to sheen the tearing of your bodies and souls in eternal fire, by the forks of Satan, do not abandon yourselves to criminal indifference, and obey me promptly. Thus you will surmount all your enemies in this world; you shall live many years, eating the good things of the earth. And after your death you shall obtain eternal life. Otherwise know that by my authority of the Holy Trinity, in the name of my Apostleship, you shall be deprived forever of the Kingdom of God."

Hear Pope Gregory speak: "In the name of Almighty God I suspend and interdict from governing the kingdom of Germany and Italy, Henry, son of the emperor Henry, who, with a haughtiness unexampled, has dared to rebel against the church. I absolve all christians whatever from the oath which they have taken or shall hereafter take to him." In writing to Philip I. of France, he expresses himself in these terms: "Strive to please St. Peter, who has thy Kingdom as well as thy soul in his power; and who can bind thee and absolve in heaven as well as on earth."

We will now suspend further remarks, as it regards the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th verses, and proceed to the examination of the character in the 11th verse. The prophet Dan. in the 7th chapter, 20th, 21st, sees a horn with eyes and mouth; and beholds this same HORN making war and prevailing against them until the Ancient of days came. We shall now proceed to identify this Two HORNED BEAST with the one seen by the prophet Daniel in vision; also the same as that in the seventh verse of this chapter.

Dan 7: 21. "I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints and prevailed against them."	Rev. 13: 7. "And it was given unto him to make war with the saints and to overcome them."

First. He is seen coming up out of the EARTH; his predecessor rose up out of the SEA. I understand Italy to mean the earth; from the parity of reasoning that the sea is the Eastern empire. There must be bounds to this symbolic sea, as in a natural sense. And from very striking facts in the history of the Popes and Italy, we humbly think we can show that the Papacy is the Two HORNED BEAST. If so, Italy is the Earth.

"And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon."

He is seen coming up out of the EARTH having two horns like a lamb. What constitutes the two horns like a lamb? I understand the language to be comparative, not to be Christ-like, as some imagine; but weak, in comparison, not to be a full grown horn or kingdom, but what a lamb is to its sire. Have we any account of such weak dukedoms or territories having been put in the possession of the pope?

See Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, page 195, when Aistalphus, king of the Lombards, meditated the conquest of the Grecian provinces of Italy, and of reducing all Italy under the yoke of the Lombards. "The Pope Stephen now addressed himself to his powerful patron and protector. Pepin represented to him his deplorable condition, and implored his assistance. The French monarch embarked with zeal in the cause of the terrified and supplicant pontiff, crossed the Alps in 754 with a numerous army, and having defeated Aistalphus, obliged him, by a solemn treaty, to deliver up to the see of Rome, the Exarchate of Ravenna, Pentapolis and all the cities, castles and territories which he had seized in the Roman dukedom. It was, not, however, long before the Lombard Prince violated, without remorse, an engagement which he had contracted with reluctance. In 755 he laid seige to Rome for the second time, but was again obliged to sue for peace by the victorious arms of Pepin, who returned into Italy, and forcing the Lombard to execute the treaty he had so audaciously violated, made a new grant of the EXARCHATE and the PENTAPOLIS to the Pontiff and his successors. And thus was the Bishop of Rome raised to the RANK OF A TEMPORAL PRINCE."

Read the following from Simpson's Key to the Prophecies, page 320.

"It was in the year of our Lord 755 that the Pope of Rome absolutely shook off the authority of the Emperor. From this year therefore the commencement of the Popedom is to be dated in the full sense. This year too, Pepin, King of France, sent the keys of Ravenna and Pentapolis to the pope." On pages 314–315—"When Leo III. therefore was made pope, A. D. 796, he notified his election to Charles the Great, the son and successor of Pepin, sending to him for a present the golden keys which had been laid on the tomb of St. Peter, and the banner of the city of Rome; first, as an acknowledgment of his holding the territories of Ravenna and Pentapolis as a donation from his father; and the other as a signification that Charles should come and subdue for him the senate and people of Rome, as his father had done the Exarchate of Ravenna and the region of Pentapolis. . . . . He then made a donation of the city and duchy of Rome and its compania to the Pope, which completed the three kingdoms."

Thus this ecclesiastical* beast came up out of the EARTH—Rome in Italy—having these two horns like a lamb, namely, Ravenna and Pentapolis.

"And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men. And he deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live."

Before speaking of his deceptive miracles, we shall first identify the image to the beast which had the wound by the sword, and did live.

I think I have given sufficient evidence that it was the first head of the Leopard beast, namely, the Greek, that was wounded by the Saracenic sword, and healed by the sword of Charles Martel, at the battle of Tours. Now I shall proceed to show that the Pope of Rome, the two-horned beast, was the only power on earth that could fill this mould of prophecy.

First. This two-horned beast was to exercise all the power of the first before him. The dragon gave his seat to the beast, and power, and great authority. So this character must exercise all that power. Hear Koch on this point, page 36, London edition: "A new and powerful monarchy rose on the ruins of the German Empire, that of the Roman Pontiffs, which monopolized both spiritual and temporal dominions, and extended its influence over all the kingdoms of christendom." You will not fail to notice the seventh verse of this chapter under consideration. "And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations."

And power was given him over all kindreds, and nations, and tongues. If the MOUTH of the leopard beast was to have such power and influence by his associate influence, in like manner must this two-horned monster exercise all his power, because he, the leopard, is the beast before him. It is a fact that the first beast was the Greek or Eastern empire. It is a fact that the empire of Charlemagne was the Western empire. The Eastern empire did become weak and decrepid, and the pope did crown Charlemagne emperor of the West. In this respect, I consider his the image of the beast. See Gibbon, page 40, vol. 5. "It was after the Nicene synod, and under the reign of the pious Irene, that the popes consummated the seperation of Rome and Italy by the translation of the empire to the less orthodox Charlemagne. On page 43—"On the festival of Christmas, the last year of the eighth century, Charlemagne appeared in the Church of St. Peter, and to gratify the vanity of Rome, he had exchanged the simple dress of his country for the habit of a patrician. After the celebration of the holy mysteries, Leo suddenly placed a precious crown on his head, and the dome resounded with the acclamations of the people. Long life and victory to Charles, the most pious Augustus crowned by God, the great and pacific Emperor of the Romans." Thus you have the IMAGE to the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

(To be concluded.)

* See Campbell's Debate with Roman Catholic Bishop, page 228, where he calls the Papacy an ecclesiastical beast.

Choice Selections.

Christ among the Poor.

Suppose that the Savior were to visit our country amid signs and demonstrations of his glory that none could mistake or resist. What, think you, would be the reception with which he would meet? There is not, perhaps, a palace or mansion in these realms to which he would not be invited. Warm and earnest requests for his presence would pour in from every quarter. Even worldly men, who are never reluctant to give entertainment to goodness when it has required renown, would vie with Christians in their endeavors to welcome the Lord of Glory. The swiftest steeds would be for him—the most gorgeous chariot would be for him—the softest couch would be for him—the richest viands would be for him—wealth would unlock her treasures, and lay them at his feet. The honor he would confer would be felt to bear proportion to the degree in which he laid men under obligations to serve him. He would be urged and entreated to demand more and yet more. Many a fountain of liberality hitherto sealed would burst forth and flow as with an exhaustless fullness. Even avarice herself would be betrayed into a momentary generosity, and poverty would strip herself more bare, and forego even her scanty meal, that she may pay her homage to the King of kings;—who then would be found complaining that the Savior's needs imposed an oppressive tax upon his people? And yet, dear brethren, is not the Savior here? Do we require the carnal and sensuous manifestation of his person to convince us of his presence? Are we forgetful or careless of the blessedness pronounced on those who have "not seen, and yet have believed?" Is he not with his church "alway, even to the end of the world?" Is he not seen in every poor, famished, oppressed, persecuted disciple? Could he be nearer to us? Could he see us with a clearer and more searching eye? Could he speak to us with tenderer words? Could he support us with a stronger arm, were he, as heretofore, "manifest in the flesh?"

Verily, the Lord is here! The Lord is here! If he is not seen by fleshly eye, he tests us all the more. And though I have spoken of the generous and importunate hospitality which would welcome the visible advent of the Savior to our land, I must now say that in all this demonstration there might be no more of true affection than is even now displayed. Would the fact that worldly men opened to him their houses, prove that they had opened to him their hearts? Or would the increased benevolence even of christian men indicate an intenser love for him? The influence of a carnal consideration would account for both the one and the other; and the holiness of our motives, and the reality of our affection for the Savior, are more conclusively tested now that he is unseen, than they would be were he to become a denizen of our world. Would you feed him if he were hungry? He is hungry in his disciples. Would you clothe him if he were naked? He is naked in his disciples. Would you entertain him as a guest were he to come as a stranger? He is a stranger in his disciples. Would you give him the best you have, and as much as a burning affection could spare? He demands it now, and demands it on behalf of every agency by which his kingdom is being spread through the world.—Rev. E. Mellor, London.

BACKBITING.—The longer I live, the more I feel the importance of adhering to the following rules, which I have laid down for myself in relation to such matters. 1st. To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others. 2d. To believe nothing of the kind until I am substantially forced to it. 3d. Never to drink into the spirit of one who circulates an ill report. 4th. Always to moderate, as far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed towards others. 5th. Always to believe that if the other side was heard, a very different account would be given of the matter.—Rev. Charles Simeon.

IT is with the singing of a congregation as with the sighing of the wind in the forest, where the notes of the million rustling leaves, and the boughs striking upon each other, altogether make a harmony, no matter what be the individual discords.

Do not wait for a change of outward circumstances, but take your circumstances as they are, and make the most of them.

Science and the Bible.

In speaking of this book there is one question which, though it does not occupy so large a space as formerly, nevertheless excites a great and growing interest, and it is this: Is it true that science in its freest development in the least degree contradicts any written word of God? Once it was said that it did: but what are the last results? That the progressive science of the nineteenth century and the statements in that blessed book show that true science and true religion have a common origin—the bosom of God. Now mark, your Bible was not written to teach science, but it is the only book that will stand the test of science. The Veda, the Shaster and the Koran cannot stand the test, but the Bible can, and even where it seems to us beset with difficulty and mystery, those passages by modern investigation shine with a brilliant light. Let me mention to you one or two proofs of this. First of all, the Bible never hints at a system of science. If it had been written by mere human writers, they might have indicated here and there something like a system of science. It speaks of flowers and trees, from the hyssop on the wall to the cedar of Lebanon, but there is not a hint of a system of botany. It speaks of stars and sun and moon, but not a hint of a system of astronomy. So that no investigator or professor of science can assert that he is in the least degree assisted or impeded in his system of science by the Bible; so that it seems to me, the silence of the Bible is as impressive as its eloquence, just as on the dial the shadow and the sunshine are alike instructive as to the hour of the day. Then take the word "firmament," which you find in Genesis. In the Greek it is translated by a word signifying a concave with a vast solid mass. Translators translated it according to their knowledge; but when you go back to the original word you find that it means a space without limit. So that, you see, Moses was far in advance of those who translated him; for the actual truth is disclosed by modern science.

Take another instance: Job speaks of himself as standing on the circle of the earth, and Isaiah speaks of the circle of the sea. Now, you know that the rotundity of the earth was for some years regarded as a heresy by the Church of Rome; but no one believes now that it is a flat surface, except, perhaps, Archbishop Cullen. Take one thought more: "Who can sway the influence of the Pleiades?" Many have wondered what was the influence of the Pleiades. Science, however, tells us that the stars, and the sun and the moon, and the earth, and their leading satellites, constitute one group which revolves round a central sun, and that central sun is one of the Pleiades. Here, then, we see that, while the Bible does not teach science, when it does refer to science it is always correct.—Dr. Cumming at the Anniversary of the Bible Society in London.

God's Temple in Us Desolate.

That God hath withdrawn himself, and left this his temple desolate, we have many sad and plain proofs before us. The stately ruins are visible to every eye that bear in their front, yet extant, this doleful inscription, "Here God once dwelt." Enough appears of the admirable frame and structure of the soul of man, to show the Divine presence did some time reside in it; more than enough of vicious deformity, to proclaim He is now retired and gone. The lamps are extinct, the altar overturned, the light and love are now vanished, which did the one shine with so heavenly brightness, the other burn with so pious fervor; the golden candlestick is displaced and thrown away as a useless thing, to make room for the throne of the Prince of Darkness; the sacred incense, which sent rolling up in clouds its rich perfumes, is exchanged for a poisonous, hellish vapor, and here is "instead of a sweet savor, a stench." The comely order of this house is turned all into confusion; "the beauties of holiness" into noisome impurities; the "house of prayer into a den of thieves," and that of the worst and most horrid kind; for every lust is a thief, and every theft sacrilege; continual rapine and robbery are committed upon holy things. The noble powers which were designed and dedicated to Divine contemplation and delight are alienated to the service of the most despicable idols, and employed unto the vilest intuitions and embraces; to behold and admire lying vanities, to indulge and cherish lust and wickedness.—John Howe.

ANALYSIS OF DRESS.—I never see a person proud of his dress but I think, "Well, he has only cast off clothes, after all; he has the jacket of the lamb, and the old great coat of the sheep; from head to foot he is dressed in what the trees or the animals have used before him. His shoes are made of hides, his stockings of the cotton shrub, his shirt of the flax plant, his handkerchief is spun by the caterpillar, and his gloves are the waistcoat of the angola."

IT is very rare to find ground which produces nothing; if it be not covered with flowers, fruit trees and grains, it produces briars and pines. It is the same with man; if he be not virtuous, he is vicious.

TIME.—Time is like a river in which metals and solid substances are sunk, while chaff and straw float upon the surface.

"The secret you dare not tell your mother is a dangerous secret—one that will be likely to bring you sorrow."

The Dying Sailor.

My friend, the Rev. C. J. Hyatt, Superintendent of Thames Agency, London, in his report for November, says, a sailor in the west of England became a new creature, in advanced life, and soon afterwards was called to die. Two christian friends, who had previously known him, and had marked with pleasure the evidences of his piety, called to see him. "Well, dear brother," said they, "how is it with you? have you a good hope?" "LAND AHEAD!" exclaimed the good old man. They came a second time. "How are you now, brother? are your prospects still bright?" "I'M ROUNDING THE POINT!" was his reply. Once more they stood at his bed-side. "Brother, can you tell us now where your hope is fixed? Is Christ precious still? Is heaven in view?" He gathered up his remaining strength, sat up in his bed, and with his last breath, exclaimed, "LET GO THE ANCHOR!"—E. R. A.

—Congregational Visitor.

For the Children.

Carrie's Faith.

Carrie's father and uncle had gone one afternoon, with the horse and wagon, to a part of the farm a mile or more distant from home. Before it was time for them to return, the horse came home alone. Alarmed lest some accident had befallen them, Carrie's mother asked her if she would be willing to go all that long distance alone, and tell them of the horse's return.

It was then nearly dark, but she had often rode there with her father, and knew that he would return with her, so she was not afraid to go; but when she reached the place, her father and uncle were nowhere to be found. Little Carrie waited and looked awhile, then climbed into the wagon and seated herself quietly till they should come. It was a long time for a little girl of seven years to wait in a strange place, in the dark too, and you may imagine the relief and joy she felt when at last she heard her father's voice calling "Carrie." "I am here, father. I am in the wagon," she cried.

She was soon in the arms of her father, who inquired, "were you not afraid, my daughter, to stay here alone so long?" "Not much," she replied; "and I knew you would come back here; and I thought if I tried to find you, perhaps I should get lost."

"But," said her father, "we have been home another way to look for the horse, and how did you know I should come back for you?"

"O, I knew you would."

"And were you not very lonesome here in the dark?"

"I was a little, but I thought mother wished me to come, and I could not go back alone, it was so dark, and so I thought God would take care of me till you came; and I said over my little hymns and prayers, and then you came."

Precious child! Her confidence in her father was not misplaced. He had never deceived nor neglected her. She knew he would come.

Dear children, you have a kind Heavenly Father. He does more for you than any earthly parent can. He loads you with favors. He preserves you in your going out and coming in. He blesses you with home and friends. Will you not trust him as fully as Carrie did her earthly parents? He has given you directions which, if followed, will keep you safely in all the dangers and trials of life, and bring you at last to his glorious home. Will you not obey his commands, and await his blessing with the same child-like confidence and trust?

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year..............$2.00
For a single copy 6 months.............1.00
For a single copy 3 months...............50
Five copies to one address for 6 months....4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months.....8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months, 15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months, 22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 160. BOSTON, MASS., SEPTEMBER 29, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 4.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE ANASTASIS.

Time glides along with stealthy tread,
Till the loud trump that calls the dead,
From every clime, from every sea,
Awakes the blood-washed company.

Where Eden groves in beauty bloomed,
The first of martyrs lies entombed;
On Abel's ear the summons breaks,—
From sleep six thousand years he wakes.

And he who saw the murky cloud
The Old World's last blue sky enshroud,
Who rode secure the world-wide wave,
Now leaves the prison of the grave.

Machpelah's cave, in Ephron's field,
The "Friend of God" that day shall yield;
The dawn of Jesus' day appears,—
Eternal gladness Abraham cheers.

And he who viewed the "promised land"
From Pisgah's top at God's command;
Whose lustrous face in death did pale,
Beth-Peor leaves in Moab's vale.

Israel's sweet Psalmist hears the sound
Of heavenly choirs, and leaves the ground,
Tunes his own harp, and raptured sings
The glory of the King of Kings.

And he who sung of Salem's towers,
'Mid the New Earth's unfading bowers,
Whose lips were touched with sacred fire,
Now sweeps the chords of seraph's lyre.

And he who shed the bitter tear
For Zion's griefs—the weeping seer—
Weeps floods no more, for Zion now
Wears Heaven's gems upon her brow.

From Israel's land where vineyards grow,
From Alpine heights of fleecy snow,
From Papal blood-stained martyr lands,
From Afric's wastes of burning sands,—

From marble tombs, from turfy graves,
From sea-girt isles, from rolling waves,
From East from West, from South from North,
The white-robed myriads all come forth.

The white, the red, the jetty form,
From Shem, or Ham, or Japhet born,
Alike immortal beauty wear,
Alike eternal glory share.

Behold the saved of human race,
Divine in form, divine in grace;
See here the price of Jesus' blood,
See here the kings and priests of God.

With Spirit life now animate,—
Heirs of the Kingdom's blest estate,
The angels' equals—die no more,
But reign with Christ on Eden's shore.

S. A. Chaplin.

Pierceton, Ind.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Letters to the Young in Christ.

Dear Young Friends:—I as one among you, feel deeply interested in your spiritual welfare, and as there is no one to write for us, I propose that we should write for ourselves.

You may think that you cannot say any thing which will benefit the rest; but remember that God chooses the "weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty." A poor, weak, stammering christian, whose words are few, often does more good, from his very helplessness, than he who, in the pride of his strength, recounts in lofty and beautiful language the experience of his life. The one relies wholly upon God, the other upon himself. Smiles and tears alternate while the former is speaking; while a feeling of coldness, defiance, and opposition arises at the words of the latter.

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver," says the renowned Solomon; and cannot you say one word for Jesus? If you do not write more than a dozen lines it is enough. Write in earnest; leave the result with God, and

"The good, the joy which it may bring,
Eternity shall tell."

We can admonish, exhort, reprove and encourage each other to continue in the way of life, and to reduce the great and sublime precepts of christianity to practice.

May our Commander and Leader direct our efforts is my prayer. S. R. C.

Pierceton, Ind.

No affliction would trouble a child of God if he knew God's reasons for sending it.

For the Crisis.

The Conference at Jamestown.

Bro. Grant:—We have just closed at Jamestown, Mich., one of the best conferences the church has ever witnessed. I was exceedingly happy and overjoyed to behold a body of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, numbering about sixty, so happily bound together, not with cords of self-interest or sectarianism,—but with the cord of sympathetic love which flowed so freely and purely from God's throne of everlasting benevolence.

Here were the aged, middle-aged—young men and young women of noble and interesting appearance and good intelligence, and even children,—whose minds had been illuminated with the everlasting good news of the gospel of God's Son, by the arduous labors of our dearly beloved brethren Hoyt, Crozier, and Simonds, who are very devoted and efficient ministers of the Word of Life.

All these precious jewels seemed to be well instructed in the things coecerning the Kingdom of God and the plan of salvation. All appeared to be very steadfast, unmovable, and abounding in good works and graces of the gospel,—and on Lord's day, at the close of the second discourse, about fifty arose, one after another, in rapid succession, and spoke to the edification and comfort of the congregation; their countenances sent forth an expression of joy which was doubtless a full and proper index of their hearts, and what was truly gratifying to the servants of Christ and the way-worn saint was to hear the young converts express such decision of mind and determination to wade through every peril, if need be, in order to enjoy the blessings of the Kingdom of God.

Bro. Miller and myself were appointed to preach the word of life, and while we endeavored to comfort and instruct those dear children in reference to practical godliness and the kingdom of God, our own hearts were edified, comforted, and strengthened, to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, that more fruit of the like stamp might be raised up in different parts of Michigan to send forth the good, great, glorious and sanctifying truths to dying men, and thus bless the world by their influence. True ministers of Christ will sacrifice almost every earthly endearment, and wade through almost every difficulty, in order to witness such happy and blessed results arising from their labors, for it fills their souls with joy and delight! O, how it pains my very soul to see ministers so self-sacrificing, so zealous, persevering and uncompromising, and at the same time very many of the brethren cherishing the same faith and hope, who are living in affluent circumstances, scattered here and there over Michigan, that do so little, and perhaps nothing towards ustaining faithful ministers of the word. There must be a different state of things brought about: God requires it at your hands, dear brethren, instead of laying up treasures on earth, adding farm to farm, house to house, barn to barn, and spending all your available means in your own aggrandizement.

Do, in the name of the ever-blessed Jesus, sell off some of your land, fine horses, cattle, or any thing by which you can sacrifice for God and his truth. We have no disposition to impose on you any law, or visions of E. G. White, to produce such an effect, but we do hope you will be governed by the law of God in this matter, and lay by in store on each first day of the week something that will tell or speak loudly for the cause of God. A religion that costs nothing is good for nothing.

Your brother, desiring the best possible good of the church and world.

A. N. Seymour.

Weaverville, Mich., Aug 27, '58.

☞ You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom. The more you draw from it, the more clear and plentiful it will become.

☞ If thou wouldst preserve a sound body, use fasting and walking; if a healthful soul, fasting and praying; walking exercises the body, praying exercises the soul, fasting cleanses both.—Enchiridion.

For the Crisis.

Familiar Letters.—No. 11.

Dear Uncle Fred:—We find but one portion of holy writ that teaches the doctrine of a millennium. Nevertheless, it is to be as confidently believed as though there were many. We know that such has been the faith of the church from early time, and not until these latter times has it been taught and received that this millennium would precede the advent of Jesus Christ.

You have no doubt read the chapter which teaches us the thousand years reign, a great many times; but let us examine it again, and see at what era it commences. In the first place we have brought to view the binding of the devil. Next in order, thrones are seen, and those to whom judgment is given are seated upon them. These embrace all those who were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, the holy martyrs, and those who had not worshiped the beast, nor the image of the beast, neither received his mark. This class live and reign with Christ a thousand years, or a millennium. The rest of the dead do not live again until the termination of the thousand years. Those who do live again are the "blessed and holy;" their part is in the "first resurrection." On all such the second death will have no power. When the thousand years are expired, satan is again loosed, and goes forth to deceive the nations that are in the entire earth. They are gathered together against the camp of the saints, and the beloved city; but fire descends from God out of heaven and devours them, and Satan, who deceived them, has his place in the lake of fire. Here we have the brief history of the commencement and termination of the millennium. Allow me now for a little while to criticise it more closely, and to compare it with other Scriptures.

First, Satan is bound. Question. Is Satan bound prior to the advent of Jesus Christ? I have, in a previous letter, cited you to Paul's testimony respecting the "working of Satan," which was to continue unto the coming of the Lord. Let me repeat it again. "And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs, and lying wonders." After the Man of Sin has had his day, Satan is thus to work, and then the Lord is revealed, who destroys the former, and binds the latter. By reference to Rev. 19: 20, you will see that mention is made of the casting of the beast and the false prophet into the lake of fire, and the consummation of the great battle, when the King of kings, and Lord of lords, has subdued his enemies and dashed them in pieces as a potter's vessel. When Satan is sentenced to the lake, the beast is spoken of as already there.

Thrones are seen—thrones of judgment. To whom is judgment to be given? The Saviour says, to his disciples who follow him; that they shall sit upon thrones, and judge the tribes of Israel; and the time when they are to sit on those thrones, and exercise judgment, is "in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory." What does the "regeneration mean? Webster says that it is to reproduce—to form into a new and better state, to renew, to renovate. It follows then that when "the Son of man shall become the King of kings, and sit on the throne of his glory, there is something to be regenerated, renovated, or formed into a new and better state. We will trace it still further, that we may learn all that we can about this important subject.

Turn with me now to Acts 3: 21, and read: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Here we are taught that Christ will not come until the "times of restitution." What is meant by "restitution?" Webster defines it to be "the act of returning, or restoring, to a person something, of the right of which he has been unjustly deprived, as the restitution of ancient rights to the crown. Restitution is made by restoring a specific thing taken away, or lost. The act of recovering a former state or posture." "Restitution of all things: the putting the world in a holy and happy state." The terms "regeneration" and "restitution" evidently refer to the same thing, and the same time; and with both, the coming of the Son of man is connected. What is to be regenerated? what is to be restored? Evidently that which was defiled with the curse. Evidently that which was lost. "The Son of Man is come to save that which was lost."—Mat. 18: 11. "The restitution of all things." Man, by transgression, forfeits life, and has gone down in death. By the resurrection, man is restored again to life. He lost the kingdom; by the second Adam it will be restored. "And then, O Tower of the flock, the strong-hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." ("Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.") "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

The tree of life will be restored, and the Paradise in which it stood.—See Rev. 2: 7. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."—Rev. 21: 2. The tree of life is found in the New Jerusalem, the mother of the church. She bears in her bosom the seeds of immortality, and to all of her children will it be given.

The earth will be renewed. "There shall be no more curse."—Rev. 22: 3. "Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created; and thou renewest the face of the earth." These things are embraced in the "regeneration" and "restitution;" and this is the time when thrones are set, and judgment given unto the saints. In Ps. 143: 5–9, we find a prediction of the execution of judgment. "To execute upon them (the heathen, and kings of the earth) the judgment written: this honor have all his saints." Again, Cor. 6: 2, 3—"Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" See also Rev. 2: 26, 27.

One more passage, Uncle Fred., and I will close my remarks on this point. Dan. 7: 21, 22. Here we find the little horn prevailing against the saints until the coming of the Ancient of days; "and judgment was then given," says Daniel, "to the saints of the Most High," and they possessed the kingdom. I have now shown you clearly, I think, from the word of God, at what time the thrones are set, and judgment is given unto those who sit upon them. Not prior, but subsequent, to the coming of the Son of Man to restore all things.

My sheet is full, and I must defer further criticisms unto my next.

Till then, adieu. Kate.

For the Crisis.

Peace and Safety.

The inspired apostle informs us in 1 Thess. 5: 8, that "when they shall say peace and safety then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." In the next verses it is said, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." "Ye are all the children of light." It is evident from the context, and other portions of the "sure word," that just prior to the second coming of Christ, some great event will transpire which will lull the minds of the dwellers upon earth into a feeling of security, causing them to run blind-folded into the snare which God has set for them—causing them at the same time to say, "peace and safety." It is also evident that this very proclamation will tend to enlighten the minds of God's dear children and cause them to "know perfectly" what it is that is coming upon an ungodly world.

The important inquiry now to be made is, has there such a proclamation been made, and what has caused it? All conversant with the events connected with the successful laying of the Atlantic telegraph cable, can readily see both the event and the result. Most of the messages that have yet passed through this wondrous channel, have borne the peace and safety character. The first of which was from the electricians, and was this: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to men"—which message has been endorsed by a hearty amen, by universal acclamation as the resultant object or work to be speedily consummated through its instrumentality.

The second message was that of peaceful congratulations between the Queen of Great Britain and the President of the United States, containing pledges of peace and good will on the part of their respective nations. And thirdly followed the anunciation of peace between the great European powers and China, opening at once that immense empire, containing about four hundred millions of earth's population, to the arts of peace and the Christian religion. These results were communicated with lightning speed throughout the length and breadth of our land and of Great Britain, everywhere producing an extravagant rejoicing, as much so as if it was demonstrated that wars and rumors of war, and other great national evils resultant from ignorance, cupidity and vice were forever banished from the earth; and the great universal family of man were brought together, and united by this iron cord in the bonds of brotherly love and peace.

If we turn our attention to the action of our great ecclesiastical and benevolent institutions, and particularly to the late meeting of the American Board of Foreign Missions, held at Detroit, we see the same delusive sentiment pervading all their acts and anticipations. The speedy evangelization of the world and the ushering in of the millennial glory, through the instrumentality of this and other human agencies, of their own devising, was prominent.

Beloved in the Lord, in the events transpiring before us, we see an exact fulfillment of the sure word, and therefore are justified in the exercise ot the assurance of faith; yea, of "knowing perfectly" that the day of the Lord is at hand, and that if we continue in the faith, yet a very little longer, the promised salvation will be ours. Therefore, let us not cast away our confidence in any portion of revealed truth, for all is profitable and needed in this hour of temptation that has come upon all the world, to try them that dwell therein. O, who can stand the test? P. Alling.

Norwalk, O., Sept. 1858.

For the Crisis.

"Spiritualism."

Modern "Spiritualism," alias "Demonology," is doing a fearful work in causing men's ears to be turned away from the truth; a work of which many seem not to be aware. In many communities, a sermon against this stupendous delusion (may I not say masterpiece of Satan?) would be thought totally uncalled for. Such a demonstration as the "Rutland Convention" ought to open the eyes of christians, and cause them to investigate this system of error by the light of Revelation—the Bible. Let me give you, from the writings of a distinguished Spiritualist, Dr. T. L. Nichols, the mission of Spiritualism. In his "Monthly Magazine of Social Science and Progressive Literature" for November, 1854, page 66, he says:—

"Spiritualism, or the phenomena of inter-communication between the living generation and those who have passed into another sphere of being, is now the faith of probably more than a million of people in this country. This faith, or the teaching of the spirits, has swept away much of the respect for the old theologies. It has abolished hell, and so taken from the pulpit its great engine of terror, and the means of governing men by their fears; a terrible means, that fails at the hour of need. It has abolished no less the dread of annihilation, giving assurance of a future life of progress and active enjoyment. It has abolished the terrible dread of death, which came from fear of annihilation or hell. Hell gives power to the pulpit or church; the fear of death is the most potent terror of the law. Spiritualism has destroyed both together. But this dread of death and hell by which the world has been so long governed, is false and dangerous. It makes men cowards, so that whenever it is necessary to have men brave, they must be disciplined out of it, and the natural and common bravery of men shows that this fear has but a partial and artificial hold upon them. It fails also where we most need to govern. Suppose Captain Luce had been surrounded by a crew of sailors, engineers and firemen, who were Spiritualists; would they have lost all sense of duty and manliness in a panic to save their bodies and souls? Spiritualism, therefore, by destroying the dogmas which are the foundation of the power of church and state, tends directly to the destruction of both institutions.

Spiritualism meets, neutralizes, and destroys christianity. A Spiritualist is no longer a christian in any popular use of the term. Advanced spirits do not teach total depravity, nor hell, nor the atonement of Christ; nothing of the kind. How long can a musty old Theology, with its long past miracles, and its horrible dogmas, stand before a faith like this, sustained by daily intercourse with spirits, and manifestations of supernatural power; not coming to a few priests, but to the great masses of the people? And these spirits are not only demolishing the old, as no ordinary agencies could demolish it; but they are teaching a new philosophy of individual sovereignty; of true freedom, of growth and development, according to the law of individual life; of a true society, in which each one shall find his own sphere, and the highest happiness of each individual. This is the work of Spiritualism. You may not believe in it; you may think it a folly, a delusion; but you must recognize it, nevertheless, as a living fact of the age."

The Doctor, after giving a great number of testimonies to prove the fact of spirit-communication, queries thus:—

"What is the object or use of these communications? Let us take the testimony of the spirits themselves. A spirit, or invisible force representing itself to be John C. Calhoun, says, "It is to draw mankind together into harmony, and convince sceptics of the immortality of the soul."

At another time and place, what was believed to be the spirit of the late W. R. Channing, in answer to the same question, said: "To unite mankind and convince sceptical minds of the immortality of the soul."

So the Bible doctrine of immortality by the resurrection of the dead and change of the living saints, by Christ the great life-giver, at his return, is utterly ignored by these anti-"christian" spiritualists. And is it so, that "Spiritualism destroys christianity?" That "a Spiritualist is no longer a christian?" Such is manifestly the legitimate tendency of the system. This "new philosophy," falsely so called, rests mainly upon the heathen dogma of inherent natural immortality out of Christ; by which Satan would oppose the great truth of Christ's immediate return, the resurrection, as the christian's hope; and the doctrine of this earth renewed as the saint's inheritance. And this new development of "Satanic wrath" brings to my mind what Charlotte Elizabeth, an authoress, who has been a hundred times commended by the religious press of this country and Europe as "one of the best religious writers of the age," wrote upon the subject of "Evil Spirits" and "Satanic wrath." She says:—

"We are now writing of Satanic wrath as his permitted day shortens, and his wrath does not always vent itself in explosions of rage. It works sometimes in secrecy and darkness; fierce, indeed, and cruel always, but never devoid of skillful cunning to direct it. There is as much of his wrath in the speaking of smooth things, and the prophesying of peace to those with whom the Lord has a controversy, as in the greatest tumult of violence. Who shall tell the extent of that truthful hatred against God and his fair creation, which prompted the bland, insinuating lie, 'Ye shall not surely die.' Oh that ministers and congregations would bear in mind, equally bear in mind, how great a stake the enemy has in drawing away their minds from the unadorned simplicity that is in the doctrines of the cross. But the doctrine of the crown is another, which he now struggles with all his infernal might to suppress. A crucified Savior, an atoning sacrifice, a mediating High Priest in heaven, he loathes to think on, or to suffer his bond-slaves to hear of; but a reigning king, about to rescue the earth from all his usurpations, to plant his throne in righteousness in the midst of his people, to send forth his word from Zion, and his law from Jerusalem. This is the very knell of Satan's departure; and to stifle the sound he will foster humility itself, any grace by the perversion of which he may hope to seal the preacher's lips on that fearful topic. For eighteen centuries he has heard the petition ascending on all sides, 'Thy kingdom come;' [illegible] not how often is it [illegible] the papacy with its [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 160. BOSTON, MASS., SEPTEMBER 29, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 4.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE ANASTASIS

Time glides along with stealthy tread,
Till the loud trump that calls the dead,
From every clime, from every sea,
Awakes the blood-washed company.

Where Eden groves in beauty bloomed,
The first of martyrs lies entombed;
On Abel's ear the summons breaks,—
From sleep six thousand years he wakes.

And he who saw the murky cloud
The Old World's last blue sky enshroud,
Who rode secure the world-wide wave,
Now leaves the prison of the grave.

Machpelah's cave, in Ephron's field,
The "Friend of God" that day shall yield;
The dawn of Jesus' day appears,—
Eternal gladness Abraham cheers.

And he who viewed the "promised land"
From Pisgah's top at God's command;
Whose lustrous face in death did pale,
Beth-Peor leaves in Moab's vale.

Israel's sweet Psalmist hears the sound
Of heavenly choirs, and leaves the ground,
Tunes his own harp, and raptured sings
The glory of the King of Kings.

And he who sung of Salem's towers,
'Mid the New Earth's unfading bowers,
Whose lips were touched with sacred fire,
Now sweeps the chords of seraph's lyre.

And he who shed the bitter tear
For Zion's griefs—the weeping seer—
Weeps floods no more, for Zion now
Wears Heaven's gems upon her brow.

From Israel's land where vineyards grow,
From Alpine heights of fleecy snow,
From Papal blood-stained martyr lands,
From Afric's wastes of burning sands,—

From marble tombs, from turfy graves,
From sea-girt isles, from rolling waves,
From East from West, from South from North,
The white-robed myriads all come forth.

The white, the red, the jetty form,
From Shem, or Ham, or Japhet born,
Alike immortal beauty wear,
Alike eternal glory share.

Behold the saved of human race,
Divine in form, divine in grace;
See here the price of Jesus' blood,
See here the kings and priests of God.

With Spirit life now animate,—
Heirs of the Kingdom's blest estate,
The angels' equals—die no more,
But reign with Christ on Eden's shore.

S. A. CHAPLIN.

Pierceton, Ind.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Letters to the Young in Christ.

DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS:—I as one among you, feel deeply interested in your spiritual welfare, and as there is no one to write for us, I propose that we should write for ourselves.

You may think that you cannot say any thing which will benefit the rest; but remember that God chooses the "weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty." A poor, weak, stammering christian, whose words are few, often does more good, from his very helplessness, than he who, in the pride of his strength, recounts in lofty and beautiful language the experience of his life. The one relies wholly upon God, the other upon himself. Smiles and tears alternate while the former is speaking; while a feeling of coldness, defiance, and opposition arises at the words of the latter.

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver," says the renowned Solomon; and cannot you say one word for Jesus? If you do not write more than a dozen lines it is enough. Write in earnest; leave the result with God, and

"The good, the joy which it may bring,
Eternity shall tell."

We can admonish, exhort, reprove and encourage each other to continue in the way of life, and to reduce the great and sublime precepts of christianity to practice.

May our Commander and Leader direct our efforts is my prayer. S. R. C.

Pierceton, Ind.

No affliction would trouble a child of God if he knew God's reasons for sending it.

For the Crisis.

The Conference at Jamestown.

BRO. GRANT:—We have just closed at Jamestown, Mich., one of the best conferences the church has ever witnessed. I was exceedingly happy and overjoyed to behold a body of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, numbering about sixty, so happily bound together, not with cords of self-interest or sectarianism,—but with the cord of sympathetic love which flowed so freely and purely from God's throne of everlasting benevolence.

Here were the aged, middle-aged—young men and young women of noble and interesting appearance and good intelligence, and even children,—whose minds had been illuminated with the everlasting good news of the gospel of God's Son, by the arduous labors of our dearly beloved brethren Hoyt, Crozier, and Simonds, who are very devoted and efficient ministers of the Word of Life.

All these precious jewels seemed to be well instructed in the things coecerning the Kingdom of God and the plan of salvation. All appeared to be very steadfast, unmovable, and abounding in good works and graces of the gospel,—and on Lord's day, at the close of the second discourse, about fifty arose, one after another, in rapid succession, and spoke to the edification and comfort of the congregation; their countenances sent forth an expression of joy which was doubtless a full and proper index of their hearts, and what was truly gratifying to the servants of Christ and the way-worn saint was to hear the young converts express such decision of mind and determination to wade through every peril, if need be, in order to enjoy the blessings of the Kingdom of God.

Bro. Miller and myself were appointed to preach the word of life, and while we endeavored to comfort and instruct those dear children in reference to practical godliness and the kingdom of God, our own hearts were edified, comforted, and strengthened, to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, that more fruit of the like stamp might be raised up in different parts of Michigan to send forth the good, great, glorious and sanctifying truths to dying men, and thus bless the world by their influence. True ministers of Christ will sacrifice almost every earthly endearment, and wade through almost every difficulty, in order to witness such happy and blessed results arising from their labors, for it fills their souls with joy and delight! O, how it pains my very soul to see ministers so self-sacrificing, so zealous, persevering and uncompromising, and at the same time very many of the brethren cherishing the same faith and hope, who are living in affluent circumstances, scattered here and there over Michigan, that do so little, and perhaps nothing towards ustaining faithful ministers of the word. There must be a different state of things brought about: God requires it at your hands, dear brethren, instead of laying up treasures on earth, adding farm to farm, house to house, barn to barn, and spending all your available means in your own aggrandizement.

Do, in the name of the ever-blessed Jesus, sell off some of your land, fine horses, cattle, or any thing by which you can sacrifice for God and his truth. We have no disposition to impose on you any law, or visions of E. G. White, to produce such an effect, but we do hope you will be governed by the law of God in this matter, and lay by in store on each first day of the week something that will tell or speak loudly for the cause of God. A religion that costs nothing is good for nothing.

Your brother, desiring the best possible good of the church and world.

A. N. SEYMOUR.

Weaverville, Mich., Aug 27, '58.

☞ You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom. The more you draw from it, the more clear and plentiful it will become.

☞ If thou wouldst preserve a sound body, use fasting and walking; if a healthful soul, fasting and praying; walking exercises the body, praying exercises the soul, fasting cleanses both.—Enchiridion.

For the Crisis.

Familiar Letters.—No. 11.

DEAR UNCLE FRED:—We find but one portion of holy writ that teaches the doctrine of a millennium. Nevertheless, it is to be as confidently believed as though there were many. We know that such has been the faith of the church from early time, and not until these latter times has it been taught and received that this millennium would precede the advent of Jesus Christ.

You have no doubt read the chapter which teaches us the thousand years reign, a great many times; but let us examine it again, and see at what era it commences. In the first place we have brought to view the binding of the devil. Next in order, thrones are seen, and those to whom judgment is given are seated upon them. These embrace all those who were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, the holy martyrs, and those who had not worshiped the beast, nor the image of the beast, neither received his mark. This class live and reign with Christ a thousand years, or a millennium. The rest of the dead do not live again until the termination of the thousand years. Those who do live again are the "blessed and holy;" their part is in the "first resurrection." On all such the second death will have no power. When the thousand years are expired, satan is again loosed, and goes forth to deceive the nations that are in the entire earth. They are gathered together against the camp of the saints, and the beloved city; but fire descends from God out of heaven and devours them, and Satan, who deceived them, has his place in the lake of fire. Here we have the brief history of the commencement and termination of the millennium. Allow me now for a little while to criticise it more closely, and to compare it with other Scriptures.

First, Satan is bound. Question. Is Satan bound prior to the advent of Jesus Christ? I have, in a previous letter, cited you to Paul's testimony respecting the "working of Satan," which was to continue unto the coming of the Lord. Let me repeat it again. "And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs, and lying wonders." After the Man of Sin has had his day, Satan is thus to work, and then the Lord is revealed, who destroys the former, and binds the latter. By reference to Rev. 19:20, you will see that mention is made of the casting of the beast and the false prophet into the lake of fire, and the consummation of the great battle, when the King of kings, and Lord of lords, has subdued his enemies and dashed them in pieces as a potter's vessel. When Satan is sentenced to the lake, the beast is spoken of as already there.

Thrones are seen—thrones of judgment. To whom is judgment to be given? The Saviour says, to his disciples who follow him; that they shall sit upon thrones, and judge the tribes of Israel; and the time when they are to sit on those thrones, and exercise judgment, is "in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory." What does the "regeneration mean? Webster says that it is to reproduce—to form into a new and better state, to renew, to renovate. It follows then that when "the Son of man shall become the King of kings, and sit on the throne of his glory, there is something to be regenerated, renovated, or formed into a new and better state. We will trace it still further, that we may learn all that we can about this important subject.

Turn with me now to Acts 3:21, and read: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Here we are taught that Christ will not come until the "times of restitution." What is meant by "restitution?" Webster defines it to be "the act of returning, or restoring, to a person something, of the right of which he has been unjustly deprived, as the restitution of ancient rights to the crown. Restitution is made by restoring a specific thing taken away, or lost. The act of recovering a former state or posture." "Restitution of all things: the putting the world in a holy and happy state." The terms "regeneration" and "restitution" evidently refer to the same thing, and the same time; and with both, the coming of the Son of man is connected. What is to be regenerated? what is to be restored? Evidently that which was defiled with the curse. Evidently that which was lost. "The Son of Man is come to save that which was lost."—Mat. 18:11. "The restitution of all things." Man, by transgression, forfeits life, and has gone down in death. By the resurrection, man is restored again to life. He lost the kingdom; by the second Adam it will be restored. "And then, O Tower of the flock, the strong-hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." ("Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.") "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

The tree of life will be restored, and the Paradise in which it stood.—See Rev. 2:7. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."—Rev. 21:2. The tree of life is found in the New Jerusalem, the mother of the church. She bears in her bosom the seeds of immortality, and to all of her children will it be given.

The earth will be renewed. "There shall be no more curse."—Rev. 22:3. "Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created; and thou renewest the face of the earth." These things are embraced in the "regeneration" and "restitution;" and this is the time when thrones are set, and judgment given unto the saints. In Ps. 143:5–9, we find a prediction of the execution of judgment. "To execute upon them (the heathen, and kings of the earth) the judgment written: this honor have all his saints." Again, Cor. 6:2, 3—"Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" See also Rev. 2:26, 27.

One more passage, Uncle Fred., and I will close my remarks on this point. Dan. 7:21, 22. Here we find the little horn prevailing against the saints until the coming of the Ancient of days; "and judgment was then given," says Daniel, "to the saints of the Most High," and they possessed the kingdom. I have now shown you clearly, I think, from the word of God, at what time the thrones are set, and judgment is given unto those who sit upon them. Not prior, but subsequent, to the coming of the Son of Man to restore all things.

My sheet is full, and I must defer further criticisms unto my next.

Till then, adieu. KATE.

For the Crisis.

Peace and Safety.

The inspired apostle informs us in 1 Thess. 5:8, that "when they shall say peace and safety then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." In the next verses it is said, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." "Ye are all the children of light." It is evident from the context, and other portions of the "sure word," that just prior to the second coming of Christ, some great event will transpire which will lull the minds of the dwellers upon earth into a feeling of security, causing them to run blind-folded into the snare which God has set for them—causing them at the same time to say, "peace and safety." It is also evident that this very proclamation will tend to enlighten the minds of God's dear children and cause them to "know perfectly" what it is that is coming upon an ungodly world.

The important inquiry now to be made is, has there such a proclamation been made, and what has caused it? All conversant with the events connected with the successful laying of the Atlantic telegraph cable, can readily see both the event and the result. Most of the messages that have yet passed through this wondrous channel, have borne the peace and safety character. The first of which was from the electricians, and was this: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to men"—which message has been endorsed by a hearty amen, by universal acclamation as the resultant object or work to be speedily consummated through its instrumentality.

The second message was that of peaceful congratulations between the Queen of Great Britain and the President of the United States, containing pledges of peace and good will on the part of their respective nations. And thirdly followed the anunciation of peace between the great European powers and China, opening at once that immense empire, containing about four hundred millions of earth's population, to the arts of peace and the Christian religion. These results were communicated with lightning speed throughout the length and breadth of our land and of Great Britain, everywhere producing an extravagant rejoicing, as much so as if it was demonstrated that wars and rumors of war, and other great national evils resultant from ignorance, cupidity and vice were forever banished from the earth; and the great universal family of man were brought together, and united by this iron cord in the bonds of brotherly love and peace.

If we turn our attention to the action of our great ecclesiastical and benevolent institutions, and particularly to the late meeting of the American Board of Foreign Missions, held at Detroit, we see the same delusive sentiment pervading all their acts and anticipations. The speedy evangelization of the world and the ushering in of the millennial glory, through the instrumentality of this and other human agencies, of their own devising, was prominent.

Beloved in the Lord, in the events transpiring before us, we see an exact fulfillment of the sure word, and therefore are justified in the exercise of the assurance of faith; yea, of "knowing perfectly" that the day of the Lord is at hand, and that if we continue in the faith, yet a very little longer, the promised salvation will be ours. Therefore, let us not cast away our confidence in any portion of revealed truth, for all is profitable and needed in this hour of temptation that has come upon all the world, to try them that dwell therein. O, who can stand the test? P. ALLING.

Norwalk, O., Sept. 1858.

For the Crisis.

"Spiritualism."

Modern "Spiritualism," alias "Demonology," is doing a fearful work in causing men's ears to be turned away from the truth; a work of which many seem not to be aware. In many communities, a sermon against this stupendous delusion (may I not say masterpiece of Satan?) would be thought totally uncalled for. Such a demonstration as the "Rutland Convention" ought to open the eyes of christians, and cause them to investigate this system of error by the light of Revelation—the Bible. Let me give you, from the writings of a distinguished Spiritualist, Dr. T. L. Nichols, the mission of Spiritualism. In his "Monthly Magazine of Social Science and Progressive Literature" for November, 1854, page 66, he says:—

"Spiritualism, or the phenomena of inter-communication between the living generation and those who have passed into another sphere of being, is now the faith of probably more than a million of people in this country. This faith, or the teaching of the spirits, has swept away much of the respect for the old theologies. It has abolished hell, and so taken from the pulpit its great engine of terror, and the means of governing men by their fears; a terrible means, that fails at the hour of need. It has abolished no less the dread of annihilation, giving assurance of a future life of progress and active enjoyment. It has abolished the terrible dread of death, which came from fear of annihilation or hell. Hell gives power to the pulpit or church; the fear of death is the most potent terror of the law. Spiritualism has destroyed both together. But this dread of death and hell, by which the world has been so long governed, is false and dangerous. It makes men cowards, so that whenever it is necessary to have men brave, they must be disciplined out of it, and the natural and common bravery of men shows that this fear has but a partial and artificial hold upon them. It fails also where we [illegible]. Suppose Captain Luce had been surrounded by a crew of sailors, engineers and firemen, who were Spiritualists; would they have lost all sense of duty and manliness in a panic to save their bodies and souls? Spiritualism, therefore, by destroying the dogmas which are the foundation of the power of church and state, tends directly to the destruction of both institutions.

Spiritualism meets, neutralizes, and destroys christianity. A Spiritualist is no longer a christian in any popular use of the term. Advanced spirits do not teach total depravity, nor hell, nor the atonement of Christ; nothing of the kind. How long can a musty old Theology, with its long past miracles, and its horrible dogmas, stand before a faith like this, sustained by daily intercourse with spirits, and manifestations of supernatural power; not coming to a few priests, but to the great masses of the people? And these spirits are not only demolishing the old, as no ordinary agencies could demolish it; but they are teaching a new philosophy of individual sovereignty; of true freedom, of growth and development, according to the law of individual life; of a true society, in which each one shall find his own sphere, and the highest happiness of each individual. This is the work of Spiritualism. You may not believe in it; you may think it a folly, a delusion; but you must recognize it, nevertheless, as a living fact of the age."

The Doctor, after giving a great number of testimonies to prove the fact of spirit-communication, queries thus:—

"What is the object or use of these communications? Let us take the testimony of the spirits themselves. A spirit, or invisible force representing itself to be John C. Calhoun, says, "It is to draw mankind together into harmony, and convince sceptics of the immortality of the soul."

At another time and place, what was believed to be the spirit of the late W. E. Channing, in answer to the same question, said: "To unite mankind and convince sceptical minds of the immortality of the soul."

So the Bible doctrine of immortality by the resurrection of the dead and change of the living saints, by Christ the great life-giver, at his return, is utterly ignored by these anti-"christian" spiritualists. And is it so, that "Spiritualism destroys christianity?" That "a Spiritualist is no longer a christian?" Such is manifestly the legitimate tendency of the system. This "new philosophy," falsely so called, rests mainly upon the heathen dogma of inherent natural immortality out of Christ; by which Satan would oppose the great truth of Christ's immediate return, the resurrection, as the christian's hope; and the doctrine of this earth renewed as the saint's inheritance. And this new development of "Satanic wrath" brings to my mind what Charlotte Elizabeth, an authoress, who has been a hundred times commended by the religious press of this country and Europe as "one of the best religious writers of the age," wrote upon the subject of "Evil Spirits" and "Satanic wrath." She says:—

"We are now writing of Satanic wrath as his permitted day shortens, and his wrath does not always vent itself in explosions of rage. It works sometimes in secrecy and darkness; fierce, indeed, and cruel always, but never devoid of skillful cunning to direct it. There is as much of his wrath in the speaking of smooth things, and the prophesying of peace to those with whom the Lord has a controversy, as in the greatest tumult of violence. Who shall tell the extent of that truthful hatred against God and his fair creation, which prompted the bland, insinuating lie, 'Ye shall not surely die.' Oh that ministers and congregations would [illegible], equally bear in mind, how great a stake the enemy has in drawing away their minds from the unadorned simplicity that is in the doctrines of the cross. But the doctrine of the crown is another, which he now struggles with all his infernal might to suppress. A crucified Savior, an atoning sacrifice, a mediating High Priest in heaven, he loathes to think on, or to suffer his bond-slaves to hear of; but a reigning king, about to rescue the earth from all his usurpations, to plant his throne in righteousness in the midst of his people, to send forth his word from Zion, and his law from Jerusalem. This is the very knell of Satan's departure; and to stifle the sound he will [illegible] any grace by the [illegible] of which he may hope to seal the [illegible] fearful topic. For [illegible] has heard the [illegible] sides, 'Thy kingdom come' [illegible] not [illegible] the people [illegible]

[Pa]ter-nosters,) so long as men do not inquire into the nature of the coming kingdom, or watch for its approach. An imperfect Gospel he can tolerate, and in our day that is an imperfect Gospel which omits the great truth of a speedy manifestation of the Lord from heaven."

Thus, right here, in the last hour of probation, the Devil repeats the bland, insinuating lie, "Ye shall not surely die," and seeks to annihilate the "dread of death—the most potent terror of the law," by destroying "the church" and "christianity," and the Bible itself, as a compend of "musty old Theology, with its long past miracles and horrible dogmas." Brethren, let us give the more earnest heed to the word of God, "lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices. C. P. Dow.

St. Armand, C. E.

For the Crisis.

Charity.

Bro. Grant:—The following article I copy from an old magazine, and perhaps you may consider it worthy a place in the Crisis:

"Charity, as used in the Bible, signifies love. Every charitable man, therefore, is truly pious; for 'he that loveth, is born of God;" and every uncharitable man is unconverted; for, "if any man love not the Lord Jesus, let him be anathema maranatha. Charity, in the popular sense, consists in believing all creeds equally safe, provided those who adopt them respectively, are only sincere. (Rome is sincere.) In this abused sense of the word, an individual is charitable precisely in proportion to his indifference to revealed truth; uncharitable in proportion to this disposition, "earnestly to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." Doubtless the devil had an agency in propagating this perversion of the word; because it power fully promotes the spread of error. Errorists, so long as their numbers and influence are small, always profess to abound in charity and liberality, and never fail to characterize all opposition to their errors as bigotry and persecution; and the multitude, ignorant of the proper import of those words, are captivated by the mere sound.

True charity loves God—loves his truth, too. It considers God as really dishonored when his truth is assailed, as when his name is profaned. It, therefore, as firmly opposes the teacher of error, as the advocate of immorality. Nay, it regards the errors which undermine the fundamental doctrines of christianity as more dangerous than mere immoral conduct. The latter is but the outbreaking of depraved appetites and passions, which leaves the understanding still accessible to truth and conscience, and teaches men to sin religiously! If Saul of Tarsus had been aiding in a highway robbery, instead of consenting to Stephen's death, his feelings would have been vastly different. None do so much mischief in the world—none are so hard to reclaim, as those who learn to sin conscientiously.

Charity is not blind. She does not believe that all will enter the kingdom, but prays for it. She does not consider every path the "narrow" one, but points them to the only true path. She loves the church too well not to oppose the entrance of error. (Amen.)

Enlightened charity discriminates between truth and error, and does not make every stone a corner-stone, nor every piece of timber in the temple a pillar. Much less does she transfer the corner-stone in its place. Yet she would not mar the beauty, nor impair the strength, of the temple of truth, by casting away as useless any of its stones or timbors.

True charity reasons with and persuades, but never forces men to embrace her creed. She is a child of the light, and will not hold fellowship with the sons of darkness."

Yes, dear brethren and sisters, this is the character of charity. Let us see to it that we possess her nature. How many cry, "charity, charity," while charity cries, "I know you not." They claim her, but she disowns them all.

In this night of darkness, amid the wisdom of "serpents," we must be very cautious what we play with. If we would be charitable, let it be in a proper sense. Keep up your colors, soldiers, and let errorists keep theirs alongside—if they can. Don't extinguish your "light" to let their dim, faint, expiring ray be seen.

M. Mathews.

N. Glasgow, C. E.

Fault Finding.—Having in my youth notions of severe piety, says a celebrated Persian writer, I used to rise in the night to watch and pray. One night as I was engaged in these exercises, my father, a man of practical virtue, awoke while I was reading. "Behold," said I to him, "thy other children are lost in irreligious slumber, while I alone awake to praise God." "Son of my soul, said he, "it is better to sleep, than to wake to mark the faults of thy brethren."

☞ No man shall ever come to heaven himself who has not sent his heart thither before him. [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT - - - - - EDITOR.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 29, 1858.

Office . . . 167 Hanover street.

Diary Leaves.—No. 2.

Saturday, Sept. 11th. We left the camp-ground this morning with much reluctance, as we parted with loved ones in Christ, while their eyes were dimmed with tears. O how sweet is communion with saints. Let the glad day hasten when they will all be gathered home to the land of rest. Bro. Hudson accompanied us as far as Plainville. His great work, called "Debt and Grace," is doing much to awaken the theological world on the subject of future punishment. Many already see that the Bible most plainly teaches that the wicked will be destroyed, and not "preserved in indescribable agonies," as Dr. Benton says. "Debt and Grace" is a book for the times. We wish all who believe in eternal misery would give it a candid reading.

We also enjoyed the pleasant company of Bro. and Sr. Brewer as far as Hartford. For a few hours, we had a very pleasant visit with them in the happy family of Bro. Sage, near the Deaf and Dumb Asylum. We sung the sweet songs of Zion together, talked of our home in the coming kingdom, when parted friends will meet to part no more. We tore away again from sweet friendship's joys, and hastened to our appointment at Danielsonville, Ct., where we received, as ever, a most cordial welcome, and enjoyed a heart-cheering meeting with the dear saints.

Lord's day, 12th. We had a large congregation, good attention, and a profitable season. This is a living church, and it is pleasant meeting with them. Some of them know what it is to be reproached for Christ's sake, and to rejoice because worthy to suffer in so good a cause. O Lord, let thy blessing abide on them, and may they be able to keep themselves "unspotted from the world."

Monday, 13th. We arrived in Boston about noon, after an absence of three weeks. Good prayer meeting at the office in the evening. We learn these meetings have been excellent during our absence. Thank the Lord. No news so good as to hear of christian prosperity.

Wednesday, 15th. We left home again for the mountains in Vermont, and preached at Cavendish, in the Baptist church. We had a profitable meeting. We called on Bro. J. Spaulding, Jun., who is but just alive. He has a large rose cancer, that must soon terminate his life, but he has a good hope of eternal life through Christ. As we saw him in his suffering condition, it made us sigh for Jesus to come, and introduce us into the healthy, holy land.

Thursday, 16th. So rainy that we had no meeting.

Friday, 17th. Bro. Solomon Spaulding took us to Plymouth, Vt., where we had a large congregation to hear on the subject of Spiritualism. The enemy of all righteousness has tried hard to sow his infernal doctrines in this place. He has had some success. One who has been a professor of religion, and held some meetings, has become a Spiritualist, and endeavored to persuade a christian woman to leave her husband and become his spiritual wife. Of all deceivers and deceived, Spiritualists seem to be the worst. No delusion is more fatal in its consequences. But we apprehend the worst is yet to come.

Saturday, 18th. Went to Rutland, and had a good meeting at the Town Hall, in company with the faithful ones who love to meet for the worship of their soon coming Lord.

Lord's day, 19th. A large congregation and good attention. Many are anxious to know the truth, and a goodly number are embracing it with joyful hearts. Two were baptized, and went on their way rejoicing. In the evening we gathered around the table of the Lord to commemorate his death and sufferings. It was a solemn and profitable season. Many wept as they thought of the sufferings of Jesus, and we parted firmly resolved, by the help of the Lord, to meet again at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Monday evening, 20th. Meeting this evening at the Wesleyan church in Chittendon, Vt. Subject—"The destruction of the wicked." We preached on this subject at the request of the preacher in charge, Bro. B. Whitney. A large audience listened attentively, and the truth was received into honest hearts, who rejoiced in the goodness of God in putting wicked men out of misery.

Tuesday evening, 21st. Preached at the Wesleyan church. Subject, by request, Spiritualism. Many begin to see that this is the greatest and worst of all delusions. The demons are infesting all lands, cities, villages and school districts with their poisonous doctrines. We are astonished at the apathy of many on this subject. We fear some will not awake till they are bound hand and foot in this snare of the devil. Spiritualism is to the moral world as a mighty cloud of locusts to the natural. Nothing green is left behind. Only a moral waste remains in its pathway to sadden the heart of all the good, who love Christ and his truth. It is antichrist in the fullest sense, and is doing more to overthrow the Bible and christianity, than all other things combined. It poisons the very foundation of good, and pollutes the streams of salvation that Jesus sends to cleanse and bless our fallen race.

Query.

Bro. Grant:—There has been much written and talked about Christian Character as a test of christian fellowship and communion. Is it not necessary to define or qualify the words, so that it will be known what constitutes a christian character? We see a great many that are moralists; they neither love God nor his people, yet they maintain a good moral character. The Pharisees, for instance, were great sticklers for morality. They did not love the author of our christian religion. They were ignorant of Christ's righteousness, and went about to establish their own righteousness by keeping the law. Wm. T. Harding.

In other articles, we thought we had made the point plain, to which Bro. Harding calls our attention. It should be observed, there is a wide difference between a moral and a christian character. "Moral," says Webster, "denotes something which respects the conduct of men, and their relations as social beings, whose actions have a bearing on each other's rights and happiness."

By christian character is meant a character like that of Christ—a character accepted and approved by him, such an one as is necessary for salvation. None but real christians possess the true christian character, which is the only true test of christian fellowship. A man may have a good moral character and not be a christian; but he, who is a christian, must of necessity possess a good moral character. Morality covers but part of the ground included by the word christian. When we speak of a christian character, we mean one that will be accepted by the King of kings; and we hold that those whom the Lord fellowships as his brethren, we should acknowledge as ours. In order to have a genuine christian character, one must do all to the glory of God. His motive must ever be to please the Savior in all things. He may make many mistakes in judgment, and unconsciously hold many errors in doctrine, but he is always ready to do, and believe right, when he knows what the Lord would have him do and believe. A man's christian character is not to be measured by the amount of knowledge and truth in his possession, but by the amount of obedience. "To obey is better than sacrifice." Demons have more knowledge, and know more of truth than men; but they do not obey the Lord, hence they are destitute of a true christian character. They know the teachings of the Bible, and know that the word of the Lord is true but refuse to keep the commandments.

A poor ignorant slave, who cannot read a word, may be a better christian than the man who preaches to him the gospel. If the slave embraces and obeys all the truth that comes within his reach, and does all to the glory of God, and the preacher does not, then the slave has the best christian character, and his ways would be more pleasing to the Lord. "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required." If it were not for this righteous arrangement, the poor and unlearned would stand a poor chance for salvation. Says the apostle James, "Hearken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" Cannot a poor, ignorant man believe as strongly, love as ardently, and obey as fully, as a learned man? Certainly. He may not know a hundreth part as much truth as the D. D. who would be ashamed of his society, while at the same time he is much more highly esteemed by Jesus and all the heavenly host. Why? Because the poor man is trying to please the Lord in all things, and the other only in some.

Again, according to the gospel standard, the poorest man in the world may give more than the richest. All have read the account in Mark 12: 41–44, and recollect the "poor widow," who cast two mites into the treasury. Although these two mites were worth but a farthing, and the "rich cast in much," the Savior said, "this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury." How is this? "She cast in all that she had." Others only gave a part of their treasures. Let us remember, "If there be first a willing mind, it is acceptable according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." This principle is very important in determining a man's christian character, which we consider the test of christian fellowship. We believe it to be the true test, because we think it is the one by which we shall be tried at the judgment.

Something Desired.

At the Wilbraham Campmeeting, a committee of seven was appointed to prepare a collection of music and choice hymns to be used as an accompaniment to the Harp. If any of our readers have any good tunes, that they would like to have inserted in the new music book, they are requested to forward them to the Crisis office. If they cannot forward the music, if they will send us a list of the tunes, we will make an effort to obtain them. If any have any choice hymns that are not in the Harp, if they will forward them as soon as possible, or tell us in what book they can be found, we would be glad to place them in the hands of the committee.

For the Crisis.

Conference Report.

The Western Central Quarterly Conference commenced at the place of the grove meeting in Rome, Chandler's Mills, Belgrade, Me., Sept. 18th, at 8 o'clock, A. M., and organized by choice of I. Wight, chairman, and I. C. Wellcome, scribe. As there was no special business to bring before the conference, the time was spent by Brn. Dudley, Smith, Wellcome, Wight, Sevey, Haggett and Partridge, in interesting remarks on the importance of system and united effort in promoting the cause of our soon coming King. There were but few brethren from the various societies, and no regular reports were made, as we hope there will be hereafter. There was a good delegation from Livermore.

1. Voted, to record the names of the ministers connected with this conference, which were as follows: N. Smith, H. B. Sevey, I. C. Wellcome, E. M. Haggett, D. M. Hanscomb.

2. Voted, that the Quarterly Conference shall act as a committee of the whole on any business that properly comes before it.

3. Voted, that the next Quarterly Conference be held at South Livermore, the first Thursday in January, at 2 o'clock, P. M. To which time and place the conference then adjourned.

I. C. Wellcome, Scribe.

Richmond, Me., Sept. 21, 1858.

P. S.—The grove meeting connected with our conference was quite interesting, notwithstanding a heavy rain on the first day prevented the people from coming together, and the second day it was too cold to occupy the grove, and we were obliged to hold our meetings in a school house near by. The evenings we occupied in three school districts, and the meetings were well attended by very attentive hearers. On the last day the congregation was quite large, considering the circumstances; and the word preached, the exhortations following each day, accompanied by earnest prayers and joyful songs of praise, seemed to strengthen and cheer the hearts of the saints, and enlist the attention of others. We trust the effort was not in vain, and that the seed sown will produce some good fruit to God's glory. New acquaintances were formed between believers in the coming kingdom, which will not be forgotten. Impressions were made on the hearts of sinners, which we hope will lead them to Christ and his kingdom. And we parted feeling that the kindred tie was strengthened, confidently believing that we should soon meet each other in the coming kingdom of God. The Lord's Supper was administered to a goodly number of believers at the close of our last service in the grove, which was a season of much interest. Our friends in the place will receive our thanks for their kindness to us all. I. C. W.

Letter from Sr. E. J. M.

Beloved in the Lord:—"Health and peace and plenty" cheer our hearts, and we again triumph over our enemies. How good the Lord is! "Trust in him all ye his saints, for his mercy endureth forever." His promises are not yea to-day and nay to-morrow, but yea and amen in Christ Jesus, unto the glory of God, by us. Neither are the conditions of his promises unreasonable, but in every way calculated, by their performance, to prepare us to appreciate the blessings promised. My heart exults in the fact that God has given us a revelation of his mind and will. In view of the perils of these last days, I often exclaim, The Bible! the Bible! Praise the Lord, O my soul, for the Bible! It is like a stupendous rock in the midst of the sea, broad and high, immutable as its Author. With its "shadows" and "clefts" and "coverts," the inhabitants thereof sing, although darkness and gloom surround its base, and the angry waters of unbelief, in its varied forms, rage and foam and vainly strive to change, diminish or undermine. Earthquakes and thunderbolts may demolish other rocks, and they will do it, that our enemies shall be constrained to acknowledge that "Their Rock is not like our Rock."

It must appear clear to every candid reader and believer in the Holy Scriptures, that we are living in perilous times,—times in which God is sending strong delusions upon such as have not received the truth in the love of it, but have pleasure in unrighteousness. It would be strange if men's hearts did not fail them, men who have been governed by a worldly policy, and have known nothing of trusting in the Lord, and have cared less for the truths contained in his word, for even those who have kept the word of his patience, and believe God is faithful to do his part, and will keep them from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth, not being ignorant of Satan's devices, have at times a feeling of fear and dismay, which leads them to inquire anxiously respecting their place of safety. Many are the spirits that have gone out into the world—Satan hath come down in great wrath knowing that his time is short, (and woe to the inhabitants of the earth who have not made God their refuge) and being the Prince of devils or demons, has got his host pretty well marshalled, and they have gone to the kings of the earth and the whole world. Truly they are making a tumult—have discovered the main obstacle in their way of progression. The Bible—, "If we can get the Bible out of our way, we can accomplish all we wish." And have they not already taken crafty counsel against God's people, who keepeth the truth, and counseled against His hidden ones?

I believe God has a people living on the earth who will overcome and stand before the Son of man. Many of them hitherto have been hidden ones, whose hands God has been teaching to war and their fingers to fight. They have been learning also that their weapons are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ; which warfare must first be with themselves, and when their obedience is fulfilled, they will be in readiness to revenge all disobedience in others. The armor, too, must be understandingly adjusted and girded on. It is a people, also, who have been judging themselves, remembering all the way the Lord God hath led them these forty years, (or more, perhaps less,) in the wilderness, to humble and prove them and know if they would keep his commandments. If individuals know they have fulfilled the condition of the promises, with what confidence can they take God at his word, and expect the promised good. Such a faith will all need who are called to wrestle against spiritual wickedness in high places.

There is a faith that stands in the power of God. The trials coming will make each manifest. "It is not by might or by power but by my spirit saith the Lord." All good that is accomplished is done by the Spirit of the Lord—hence the necessity of being filled with the Spirit.

As I have seen and read of the delusive operations of every other spirit, it has been with intense anxiety that I have inquired, Lord, is my heart prepared to be filled with thy Spirit? So long as a vessel is filled with vinegar, it cannot be filled with water. The heart in its natural state is not prepared to be filled with the Spirit. There must be an emptying process, a circumcising operation, a breaking up of the fallow ground, and a cleansing it with the washing of the water by the word.

This is not the work of a moment, and happy indeed are all such who are dead indeed unto sin but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

The dangers of the way call for a church that is filled with the Spirit—have the "unction of the Holy One and know all things." Hitherto the promise has been made good; "As thy day is, so shall thy strength be." And to make it good in the coming conflict, the Lord calls for a separation of the precious from the vile, that the mouth of his people may be as his mouth. And let all who have been learning of the spirit how to do it, (for God never commands us to do a thing without teaching us how to do it) lift up their heads and rejoice for their redemption draweth nigh. It is not the will of their Heavenly Father that they should bow down any longer, but awake, awake put on thy beautiful garments O Zion, for great is the Lord thy God in the midst of thee! Yea, He shall take the cup of trembling out of thine hand, and put it into the hand of them who have afflicted thee; and shall say as he said unto Daniel who became weak in view of all Gabriel had shown him, Be strong, yea, be strong. And when God blesses in vain does man curse. All who obey the command of the apostle, "Be careful for nothing, but in every thing, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God, shall have the peace of God that passeth all understanding to keep their heart and mind through Christ Jesus; and with their hearts thus kept, what attacks from the enemy can they not endure, and what storms not outride?

My heart is greatly enlarged toward the true Zion. I ardently desire and patiently wait for the manifestation of the sons of God. For it doth not yet appear what we shall be, even before the personal appearing of Him who is our life. Every jot and tittle of his word must be fulfilled. Jesus said to his disciples who attended his ministry, "Greater works than these shall ye do because I go to the Father."

That was the spring time of the gospel. They had the early rain or descent of the Holy Spirit. As the husbandman hath long patience in waiting for the precious fruit of the earth, even until he receive the early and latter rain, so the saints of God have been called to exercise long patience; for long and dark has been the night, and from many places has the cry gone forth, How long, O Lord, how long? And they have not cried in vain, for the Spirit of God has now and then given brilliancy to the light that shines from the sure word of prophecy, which will continue to shine until the day dawns.

In the morning when we look toward the east and see no light different from what emanates from the multitude of stars in the firmament, we decide at once that the day has not dawned; but if we discover the smallest gleam of light like as it has been in mornings before, we settle it in our minds that the season of slumbering is over, and we must soon rise. O my brethren, is it not true that while we have been giving heed to the sure word of prophecy, our faith has brought distant objects nigh, and made things that were not, as though they were?

It has reminded me of the words of Christ to his disciples, "And now I have told you before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass ye might believe." Have we not in the spirit understood what the dawning, and the Day Star in our hearts mean, so that when it comes to pass, we shall believe? By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death, and by faith are we to be perfected with the saints of God of all ages. And my God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus. E. J. M.

No. Palermo, Me.

Pastoral Visiting.—There is a charm in the week day services of a parish minister which has not been duly estimated, either by philanthropists or patriots. His official and recognized character furnishes him with a ready passport to every habitation; and he will soon find that a visit to the house of a parishioner is the surest way of finding access to his heart. Even the hardiest and most hopeless in vice cannot altogether withstand this influence; and at times, in their own domestic history, there are opportunities, whether by sickness, disaster, or death, which afford a weighty advantage to the christian kindness that is brought to bear upon them. His week-day attentions and their Sabbath attendance go hand in hand. It is thus that a house-going minister wins for himself a church-going people.—Dr. Chalmers.

For the Crisis.

Unconscious Punishment.

In my last letter, I stated the objection that it is impossible that a man should be changed into an umbrella, and therefore the illustration comes to nothing. Waving the reply that a large share of all reasoning implies suppositions of impossible things, (for we cannot know the meaning of things that are, unless we think, "What if they were not?) I proceed now to make a supposition of what might easily be if God should so choose.

We will suppose, then, that a person should fall into a state of suspended animation; that he should be, not actually dead, but that, while the vital principle remained, he should neither move, nor breathe, nor think, nor feel; that the body should not decay, nor the soul be annihilated; only the person should cease from all vital action. In short, that he should exist whole and entire, without at all living.

Now all this might possibly happen, as when one sleeps at night, without being noticed or thought of. In that case it might be a refreshment, a recreation, a reinvigoration of the powers and faculties of the man—a very sound sleep, followed by a day of more than ordinary wakefulness and enjoyment. If it were thus serviceable, it would be gain instead of loss; as when a person has obtained rest by the use of morphine. But suppose one should take a little too much morphine—not enough to kill him, but too much to wake up again. Then when the bell rings for breakfast, and the dead friend don't answer to the call, and some one says, "Don't wait, he'll be down soon." But the morning lengthens on to day, and he does not come. Then what fears, that dare not be told, seize every heart! And some one runs to the bed room, calling tremblingly, and opens the door to call again, but no "I am coming," is heard. One goes to the bedside, and touches—a corpse? no, not that; for something whispers that the dead friend can't be dead; that sprightly form was never made to die, and it is fondly hoped that he who moved and spoke so like a thing of joy yesterday may do so again to-day, or to-morrow, or next day, until hope slowly and reluctantly yields to blank despair; and the undecaying form, still noble to look upon, too good for worms and the grave, and needing no embalmer's art, is laid away—not out of sight nor ever out of mind, a lasting and eternal monument of life not yet gone, and of death not yet come; but the form too brute and senseless to know of that endless questioning, whether Life or Death shall gain the victory.

Meanwhile, what sighs, and sobs, and shrieks have been uttered, while those who survive (as we suppose) in endless and conscious life, have doubted whether he would yet live, and have asked why he should at all die. Did God not love him well enough to let him wake again? Was God angry with him for some irreverence, or impiety, or crime? Or has God forgotten to awaken him from sweet repose, in carelessness, or in perplexity for the million times ten million cares that burden him? Why, it is asked, and inquiry roams through all the universe of thought, to find why this unceasing calamity has come upon one so dead?

All the answers that are worth a fig for any moral import, are reduced to two. If this unwaking slumber was not an accident, and God himself an accident accordingly, then this undecaying repose of the noble form was, 1st, a reward of some good thought or deed. Thus the Egyptians tried to bestow the semblance of immortality on those who were thought worthy of eternal life, by the art of embalming. Or, 2dly, that eternal lethargy was the palsying stroke of an offended Maker, and every tear that is shed for it, ought to be a prayer that we may duly seek his favor. For it was his infinite goodness that made endless life possible, and endless sleep accordingly penal.

Show me the man who thinks such a doom would not be a most fearful unconscious punishment, and who would not look forward to it with shuddering and horror—and I will show you a man who is either not full grown to the proper sentiments of a human being, or who has outgrown them, and is reprobate. We accept neither character as a standard by which to measure the dealings or the word of God. He need not inflict ceaseless pangs upon such, so that they may forever know that they are punished.

We need not say that if an eternally suspended animation would be an eternal punishment, annihilation would be the same; for it would be neither worse nor better. So thought the Jews, who first heard the words of the Life-giver. When they spoke of the "pains of death," they meant the pain of being dead; for Peter spoke thus of the entombed Christ. And those unfelt pangs were punishment for the guilty; for among the Jewish proverbs we find, "When a man shall die, he shall inherit serpents, and beasts, and worms;" "He that joineth himself to harlots will be reckless; rottenness and worms shall inherit him; and he shall be lifted up for a greater example, and his soul shall be taken away out of the number." And Job, though he wished to die, could say, "Before I go and return no more, to a land that is dark and covered with the mist of death; a land of misery and darkness, where is the shadow of death, and no order, but eternal horror dwells."

Nay, so dreadful did non-existence seem to the Jew, that he would speak of a senseless thing as punished in being destroyed. "The idol that is made by hands is cursed, and also he that made it; himself, because he made it, and the corruptible thing, because it was called a god. For to God both the wicked and his wickedness are alike hateful. And that which was made, together with him who made it, shall be punished, (the same word used as in Matt. 25: 46.) . . . for neither were they from the beginning, neither shall they be forever."—Wisdom, 14: 8–13.

C. F. H.

"DEBT AND GRACE"

Can be obtained of Hubbard & Burgess, 135 William st., J. W. Young, 138 William st, New York; Peck, White & Peck, New Haven; C. G. Geer, 256 Main street, Hartford; A. Boothby, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct.; John Turner, two doors north of Baptist Church, Springfield; T. Dewey, Great Barrington; Bro. J. Whiting, Bristol, Ct.; Bro. J. Denny, Waterbury, Ct.; Bro. S. B. Munn, Pawlings, N. Y.; Bro. Fox, Otis Centre, Mass.; Bro. J. R. Loomis, Winsted, Ct.; Abbott & Tuttle, Rome, N. Y.; Goss & Williams, Auburn; Prince & Axtell, Geneva; Bro. H. L. Hastings, Rochester; Phinney & Co., and Bro. J. Blain, Buffalo; H. P. B. Jewett and J. B. Cobb, Cleveland; S. C. Briggs & Co., Chicago.

Obituary Notices.

I am requested to perform the painful duty of announcing the death of Widow Dolly Ireland, of Athens, Me., aged 37 years, who was very suddenly overcome by the cruel monster. On the 10th of July last, she left home to go a few miles distant on business, and had proceeded but a little way, when she fell from her carriage in an unconscious and dying state, in which she remained about four hours, when life became extinct, and she, the late living, fond mother, slept the cold sleep of death. To this desolated family the very dregs of the bitter cup seem wrung out. Little more than one year before, the father was led away through death's gloomy portals, and friends buried him in Newport, Me., near the old homestead of his father, to which place she was likewise conveyed, where they now quietly rest side by side. Their slumber is too deep to be broken by the wail of their orphan children; nor do they heed the footsteps of once cherished friends, who may come at the hour of twilight to scatter fresh tears upon their graves.

Our Sister professed faith in Christ in the morning of life, and ever appeared to reverence and love the ways of religion. When she heard the proclamation of the soon coming kingdom, she with her husband became identified with those who left all to go out to meet the bridegroom. Her faith claimed the expectation of life only through Christ.

Her funeral was attended on the 12th, at the house of her husband's father, where a large concourse of friends and acquaintance, together with the deeply afflicted family, listened to a very affecting and appropriate discourse given by Bro. J. Billings, from Ps. 27: 10. "When my father and mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up." That this may be the portion of these forsaken children, is the sincere prayer of the writer; and I here take the liberty to solicit for them the prayers of God's believing people. L. Damman.

Corinna, Me., Sept. 22, 1858.

Died, in Portland, Me., Sept. 17, Clarence Edwin, son of Bro. James and Sr. Huldah Brooks, aged 5 years 1 month 2 days.

Repeatedly have this dear brother and sister been called to mourn over those of their little ones who have been seized by the cold hand of death. Truly this recent bereavement has opened their wounded hearts afresh. But while thus deeply afflicted, they are enabled to rejoice in the "blessed hope" that soon their children will live again, and be restored to them, in that happy land where "the seed of the Lord shall be blessed, and their offspring with them."

May the grace of God sustain this dear brother and sister, and their surviving daughter, and lead them ever to say, "Not my will but thine be done." R. R. York.

Died, in East Boston, on the 18th of September, William Franklin, only son of William and Cordelia McMongle, aged 8 months and 10 days.

He sleeps in his little coffin,
He rests by the moaning wave;
And only the star and the zephyr
Keep watch by his little grave.

Foreign News.

Halifax, Sept. 22.

The Royal Mail Steamship Niagara, from Liverpool 11th inst., arrived at this port at 5 o'clock this morning.

RUSSIA.

Letters from Warsaw mention that three ships-of-war are on the way from St. Petersburg to the Gulf of Tartary, in order to join the squadron in the Amoor river, which has recently received a reinforcement of vessels.

Religious fanaticism continues to prevail in the East. At Aleppo a perfect panic prevailed for three days. The Mussulmen armed themselves and the city was threatened; the authorities, however, prevented any serious consequences.

At Tripoli a similar panic prevailed, and was only dissipated by the arrival of a man-of-war in port.

It is said that Russia and France support the project of obtaining from Turkey the cession to Montenegro of a small port on the Adriatic, through which the Montenegrins may communicate with the world without.

Lord Stratford de Redcliffe had started for Constantinople, and among the numerous missions attributed to him by rumor, is the thwarting of this project.

The Brussels Nord publishes a rumor from Alexandria that the Consular agents for France, Austria, the United States, and Greece, at Hanchio, the ancient Cos, in the Archipelago, had been assassinated. The English Consul is said to have saved himself by jumping from a window. The report lacks confirmation, and, indeed, an authentic contradiction is said to have reached the French government.

Later news from India and China have been received, but it was not important. The bearer of the English treaty with China accompanies the mail. The treaty itself confirms the announcement in relation to it previously reported.

An English paper states that the Emperor Napoleon is in treaty for the purchase of the Leviathan. The price asked is £600,000, or about two-thirds of the sum believed to have been expended upon this mammoth failure.

Halifax Sept. 27. Steamship Prince Albert, from Galway at midnight on the 14th inst., arrived off Halifax harbor at 10 o'clock on Saturday night.

TURKEY.

Letters from Constantinople state that a conspiracy existed there to get rid of the present Sultan and replace him by his brother, Abdul Aziz. It is further stated that the conspiracy has gone so far that a majority of the Foreign Ambassadors at Constantinople had thought proper to inform certain leading persons in the plot, that if Abdul Aziz came to the throne by violent means, he would not be recognized by the European powers.

Turkey and Persia are said to have been on the brink of a complete rupture.

Domestic News.

STEAMER AUSTRIA BURNED.

The steamship Austria, which left Southampton on the 4th inst., was burnt at sea on the 13th. Some five hundred and thirty-three lives were lost. Between sixty and seventy saved. The fire broke out in the steerage. An attempt was made to launch a boat, but it was swamped from the numbers rushing into it. Some twenty or more souls were saved by means of one of the metallic boats attached to the ship. Many distinguished Germans were among the passengers.

Fire in New York.—New York, Sept. 23.—The works of the Empire Stone Dressing Mills were burned this evening, together with a sawmill on the premises, and a large stock of dressed and undressed lumber. The premises occupied the whole square bounded by 29th and 30th streets, First Avenue and East River, and were covered with buildings, lumber, and other stock. The fire commenced at 6 o'clock, and was burning fiercely at 10. The buildings are all down. Loss quite heavy.

Trinity Bay, Sept. 23.—We can at last announce the gratifying intelligence that the Atlantic Cable is again in complete working order. Good electrical currents have been passing through the line for the last three days, and though we are not informed of the transmission of any specific messages, it can be stated with accuracy that the signals received from Valentia are as perfect as ever. It is hoped the Cable will be ready for business in a few weeks at the farthest.

From Sr. M. Mayhew.

Bro. Grant:—The Lord permitted me to attend the Savoy campmeeting two days. I enjoyed it much, (not having been to a meeting before in five months.) It rejoiced my heart to see some of the dear children, whom I had not seen in seven years. The meeting was a profitable one to me.

I want to say one word to those who have lately been set apart for the work of the ministry. Remember your high and holy calling, brethren, and the responsible station in which you are placed. And remember, too, that you can do all things through Christ strengthening you; who has left this blessed promise on record for you,—"And, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

May the Lord help us, brethren and sisters, to endure unto the end, that we may inherit immortality.

Mary Mayhew.

Cheshire, Mass.

Men's Hearts.—We may stand and knock at men's hearts till our own ache, but no opening till Christ come. He can fit a key to all the cross wards of the will, and with sweet efficacy open it, and that without any force or violence to it.—Flavel.

☞ He who is most addicted to reading the inspired Scripture, has the best surety that all his other reading will be chosen according to the purest principles of taste and wisdom.—Adams.

Book Notice.

THE GREAT CONTROVERSY BETWEEN GOD AND MAN.

Its Origin, Progress and End.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

[Notices of the Press.]

"This work presents a historical survey of human apostacy, of Divine interpositions in behalf of fallen men, and of the judgments inflicted on the incorrigible."—Christian Observer, Phila.

"The author has succeeded in presenting within this narrow compass much, in the way of argument and illustration, that is valuable to the thoughtful reader. While some of the views he advocates may admit of controversy, the clear and earnest style in which he writes cannot fail to please those even who disagree with him in points of minor importance."—Episcopal Recorder, Phila.

"This is a well meant and well written book. . . The book can be read with profit. It is a bold and earnest setting forth of the evils of the age, and all is done in a clear and forcible style."—Banner of the Cross.

"The writer is a man of much talent and great boldness, and has a happy command of forcible language in which to clothe his ideas. . . Upon the advice of others more competent to judge than ourselves, we commend this volume to the public.—Rochester Daily Union.

"The Great Controversy" I read with much satisfaction. It appeared to me that your volume contained a large amount of excellent matter, expressed with much vigor of style and calculated to be highly useful."—John H. Hopkins, D. D., Episcopal Bishop of Vermont.

"I have read your work, "The Great Controversy," with much interest. It is written with great ability, and in a very vigorous and spirited style. On pp. 47–52 you have powerfully answered some of the old infidel cavils. I shall be glad if this work of yours has an extensive circulation; and if my humble name can, in any way, help to give it currency, you are quite welcome to use my recommendation. Many thanks to you for the book and the letter which accompanied it."—Rev. Edward Winthrop, M. A., late rector of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk, Ohio. Author of Lectures on the Second Advent, Letters on Prophecy, Premium Essay on Prophetic Symbols, &c. &c.

The above are specimens of the recommendations which "The Great Controversy" has received. It is a neat 12 mo. volume, and is sent by mail on receipt of the price, 60 cents. Discount to agents.

Address, H. L. Hastings,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale by Miles Grant, Boston; N. Branch, Moline, Ill; Smith, English & Co., 40 N. 6th St., Philadelphia, &c. &c.

NOTICES.

☞ NOTICE.—If the Lord permit, a Conference will be held in Brunswick, Me., in the Yellow School-house, about 2 1-2 miles from the village, on the Bath road, commencing Thurday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath. We hope to see a good gathering of the friends in that region. Come, beloved, in the name of the Lord, and let us make one more effort to save sinners, and cheer each other on in our pilgrimage to the better land.

Those coming from abroad will call on Bro. Thomas M. Storer.

R. R. YORK,
I. C. WELLCOME.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is to be holden at Lake Village, to commence Thursday, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

A general attendance of brethren, and especially brethren in the ministry, is desired.

The friends at Lake Village will make provision for all who may need.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 23, 1858.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber. P. S. W. Deyo,
Conference Clerk.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.

Bro. J. Hemenway, Sept. 19th, 26th, and Oct. 3d.
Bro. Ira Morgan, Oct. 10th and 17th.
Bro. S. S. Brewer, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.
Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.
Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, } Secretaries.
A. PEARCE, }

Orrin P. Allen's P. O. address is Hackensack, New Jersey.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I will preach in—
Warren Hall, Worcester, . . . Sunday, Oct. 3.
Southbridge, Mass. (Westville) Friday, " 8.
" " Saturday, " 9.
" " Sunday, " 10.
Wellington, Ct., . . Tuesday evening, " 12.
Warehouse Point, where Bro. Bancroft may appoint, . . . Wednesday evening, Oct. 13.
L. BOUTELL.

The Lord willing, Brn. James G. Smith and I. Damman will meet with the people in Dover, Me., in the neighborhood of Bran's Mills, where the brethren may think best, on Friday evening, Oct. 1st.

Dover Village, Saturday evening, and over the Sabbath following.

Augusta, Me., Saturday evening, Oct. 9th, and over the Sabbath following.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the people in Tuftonburough, N. H., where Bro. Moulton may appoint, Oct. 13th, evening.

I. Damman.

☞ I will preach in North Springfield, Vt. the last Sunday in September. Pawlett, Vt. the first Sunday in October.

S. W. BISHOP.

☞ The Lord willing, I will preach at the following places, viz:
At Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, Oct. 3.
Rye, N. H., where the brethren may appoint, in the evening, Oct. 4th & 5th.
Portland, Me., evening, Oct. 7th.
Yarmouth, Me., Lord's day, Oct. 10th.
WM. M. INGHAM.
Lowell, Sept. 20th, 1858.

S. S. Brazee appoints to preach in
Goshen, Mass., - - - - - - Oct. 6th.
Holley, " - - - - - - " 7th.
Savoy, " - - - - - - " 8th.
North Adams, Sunday, - - - " 10th.
Cheshire, Mass., - - - " 11th.

I propose to preach, by the Lord's permission, at—
Plymouth, Mass., Sunday, - Oct. 3d.
H. F. CARPENTER.

Business.

To Correspondents.

J H McCoy, Rochester—Bro. Hastings made it all right.

J. B. Richardson—Money received; pays to No. 156.

Cash Receipts.

Mrs. J. Steer 234, $3.00; C. Piper 157, $1.50; M. Young 175, $4.00; I. Pray 156, $2.28; D. C. Terry, 169, $4.00; J. B. Huntly 186, $1.13.

W Collier 156, P H Palmer 161, S A Coville 109, J Brazee 169, 50 cents each.

R Taylor 182, J Palmer 189, A T Wiggins 182, Mrs. E Potter 182, C Lewis 182, M A Hoxie 184, Mrs. E Parker 175, B Bussier 152, J Clothey 175, C Cottle 182, S K Fenton 182, N D Kidder 182, C Hastings 182, G French 142, J W Ireland 195, S Henry 182, C G Baker 180, J Marshall 165, E P Tallmage 165, S Blaisdell 182, E Flanders, Jr., 171, J Bowman 152, J Allen 208, C W Martin 185, $1.00 each.

C Pettibone 204, Mrs. J P Darling 182, W O Hough 201, H W Buxton 177, M Whitaker 174, W Payne 174, W A Calderwood 156, $2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.—E Gilbert $1.00, C Piper 50 cents, H E Bissel 10 cts., A A Tupper $1.12, C B Turner $1.09.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 60 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked [illegible]. By J. [illegible] Baptist minister. Price, [illegible] per hundred; [illegible] cents single; postage [illegible] cents. [illegible] 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 30 cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 5 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low, or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six. [illegible] which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Man's Destiny. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 25 cents; bound, [illegible] cts. Postage, 3 cts.

The Discussion: Between Prof. H. [illegible] and Geo. Storrs. [illegible] [illegible]

☞ The following [illegible] had of J. B. [illegible] Harp, by Elder Himes; [illegible] Great Controversy

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Exposition of Revelation Xiii.

BY S. A. BREWER.

[Concluded from last week.]

We will cite you to an extract from Bower's Lives of the Popes, vol. 2, page 187, concerning the amity between the Eastern and Western emperors; or, in scripture terms, between the beast and his image. "The Embassadors were well received by Charlemagne, and a peace was concluded on the following terms: I. That the Greeks should acknowledge Charlemagne for the emperor of the West, and allow him that title. II. That they should afford no kind of assistance to the dukes of Benevento, who, depending upon their friendship and protection, were ever raising new disturbances in Italy. III. That the Western empire should not extend beyond the dukedom of Benevento, and consequently that the remaining part of Italy lying between that dukedom and the Straits of Massena, with the Island of Sicily, should belong to the Eastern empire and be peaceably possessed by Nicepherous and his successors in the Imperial throne."

"And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed."

And HE, the two horned beast, the ecclesiastic beast, had power to give life unto the image of the beast. See note on page 196 of Mosheim's Ecc. Hist., vol 1. "Charles in reality was already Emperor of the West; that is, the most powerful of the European monarchs. He wanted therefore nothing more than the title of emperor and the supreme dominion in Rome and its territory, both of which he obtained by the ASSISTANCE OF LEO III." Thus the pope made an IMAGE.

Let me introduce a few extracts from history, showing that none but the Pope of Rome could possibly have answered the description of the Revelator. He was to have power over nations, and people, and tongues. Gregory VII. dethroned emperor Henry IV. and Boleslaus II., king of Poland. Pope Zachary deposed Childrique, king of France, and absolved the French from their allegiance to the legitimate sovereign, and placed Pepin upon the throne in his stead. Upon the same ground Boniface VIII. deposed Philippe le Bel, and hurled the thunders of excommunication against him, declaring: "That it is necessary for the salvation of ALL MEN to be subject to the pope." Pope Innocent III. dethroned the emperor Othon IV. Pope Innocent IV. deposed emperor Frederic II., and Pope Julius II. took the kingdom of Navarre from its legitimate sovereign, and gave it to Spain. For a more glaring exhibition of power, read the following extract from the 5th council of Toledo. The holy fathers say: "We, the holy council, promulge this sentence, or decree, pleasing to God, that whosoever hereafter shall succeed to the kingdom, shall not mount the throne till he has sworn among other oaths to permit no man to live in his kingdom who is not a Catholic; and if after he has taken the reins of government, he shall violate this promise, let him be anathema maranatha in the sight of the eternal God, and become fuel for the eternal fire!" There is a specimen of the tender mercies of this two-horned beast, also of his power to cause all to be put to death that would not worship the beast or his image.

This two-horned monster was to do great wonders, so that he made fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast. I do not for one moment suppose that this ecclesiastical beast ever did, ever will, or ever can, work such a miracle as to cause literal fire to descend from heaven; but the simple fact I conceive to be this: all that become so enthusiastically infatuated with the pretended power of the Romish priesthood, and their lying wonders, which I will not stop to specify, to them God declared he would send a strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, because they had pleasure in unrighteousness.—See 2 Thess. 2: 11, 12. The popes of Rome have claimed to receive their power from God. Read the following, the bull of Pope Sixtus V. against Henry, king of Navarre. It contains the following assertions: "The authority given to St. Peter and his successors, by the immense power of the eternal King, excels all the powers of earthly kings and princes." In A. D. 1231, letters were sent to the French king Louis, commanding him, in the name of God, "to smite the Albigenses with the sword, and burn their cities with FIRE." See History of the Catholic Inquisition, by the Rev. Cyrus Mason, page 46. After Isabella was elevated to the throne of Spain, Francis Torquemada, her confessor, came into her presence and reminded her of the oath she had registered in heaven. He represented it to be her duty to convert the Moors and Jews, or commit them to the flames. He was appointed grand inquisitor of Spain, during the fourteen years that he exercised his new and congenial function. He prosecuted before his tribunal upwards of one hundred thousand individuals, of whom six thousand were condemned to the flames, and their goods became the prey of the spoiler."

I therefore consider the idea of his making fire come down from heaven, to be the fact that he has deceived his simple faithful in the belief that he has heaven appointed power from God to burn heretics at the stake, and consume their houses, cities and property.

"And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."

Another feature of this two-horned ecclesiastic beast is this. Verse 17—"And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." We will proceed to give several opinions on this mysterious name.

Dr. A. Clarke says on this subject: "THE LATIN KINGDOM has exclusively this number, 666." According to Putnam, Rome began to be built B. C. 753, and the Latins were conquered by the Romans 640 B. C. Says A. Campbell, in the debate referred to above on page 228, 229:

"My present argument requires me to identify this beast with the Roman Church or with the Little Horn—and therefore in addition to the resembling attributes already traced, I proceed to the most definite of its marks. The ecclesiastic beast or kingdom is thus definitely the letters of a name, which together make 666. The name of a man is the name of this kingdom. Now we begin with a Roman Saint, even with the great Irenæus. We shall find in the name of the king and founder of the Latin Empire the name of this prophetic personage. It is said by the saint that among the Greeks the king's name was written LATEINOS, the letters of which being numerals in that language, exactly make the sum for 666. * * * The conclusion from these premises is, that as there is no other kingdom on earth whose name is exactly 666,—and as the beast, the symbol of this kingdom, has been proved to be the Latin Empire, and The Latine Basilica being proved to contain 666, this definitely and clearly marks out the Roman institution as that to which the 13th chapter of the Apocalypse and the 7th chapter of Daniel refer. * * * * This moreover explains that love of Latin which to this day distinguishes this church. They not only have long gloried in the name, Roman, or Latin Catholic, or Church of Rome; but they still say mass in Latin, and perform their religious services in that dead language; for although Paul had rather speak five sentences in the vernacular than ten thousand sentences in an unknown tongue; and although in the age of the 'primitive fathers' the whole church prayed and taught in the language of every country where they worshiped; still for the sake of Latin, to this day, and even in this country, Romanists perform their most devout services in that dead and foreign language, as though God preferred that language to every other. Thus they are providentially bearing to all nations and languages the grand mark and the number of the name which identifies them as the Beast and Babylon of John."

I will insert one more criticism from Barnes' Notes:

"The word Lateinos—the Latin, actually has all the conditions supposed in the interpretation of this passage. From this word the number specified, 666, is made out as follows:

L	A	T	E	I	N	O	S
30	1	300	5	10	50	70	200	—666

Thus it was suggested by Irenæus, who says, 'It seems to me very probable; for this is a name of the last of Daniel's four kingdoms they being Latins that now reign.

18th verse—'And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.'

Whether this means literally that this monster should proscribe every person in their kingdom from buying or selling any commodity; or whether it means only in the matter of religious belief, is the question. The latter, I opine, for the following reasons: The apostle Peter, the boasted predecessor of his degenerate successor the pope, declares in his epistle—

'But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways: by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.'

Touching this point we will quote from the 10th session of the Lateran Council, A. D. 1215, Pope Leo X. presiding. The decree of the Lateran Council was sanctioned by the Council of Trent, and is now orthodox faith of Rome, or Latin Church. "We in fine ordain and decree, that no person shall presume to print, or cause to be printed, any book or other writing whatsoever, either in our city (Rome) or any other cities and dioceses, unless it first shall have been carefully examined; if in this city, by our Vicar and the master of the holy palace; or, if in other cities and dioceses, by the Bishop or his deputy, with the inquisitor of heretical pravity for the diocese in which the said impression is about to be made; and unless also it shall have received under their own hand their written approval, given without price and without delay, whosoever shall presume to do otherwise, besides the loss of the books, which shall be bound by the sentence of excommunication."

"No means must be here omitted," says Clement XII., our predecessor of happy memory, in the Encyclical Letter on the proscription of bad books,—"no means must be here omitted, as the extremity of the case calls for all our exertions to exterminate the fatal pest which spreads through so many works; nor can the materials of error be otherwise destroyed than by flames, which consume the depraved elements of evil."

Thus the Latin two-horned beast forbids to buy or sell all books that have not the name of this beast. Even the Holy Bible has been burned by the Romish priest at Champlain, N. Y. And well for the poor Protestant heretics that this two-horned monster has not the power; or the fires of papal vengeance would soon be crackling around us; and for the good of our souls consume our flesh and calcine our bones. Thanks be to the mercy of God, that we are free from the iron hoof of the LATIN Man of Sin.

Dear reader, if the above exposition is not in the main something near the truth, I must say that it is passing strange that there are so many striking incidents in the history of Papacy, as well as in the prophecy, most strikingly descriptive of the characters, and the embodiment of facts that I have brought to bear on this important part of holy writ. With a recapitulation, I shall take my leave of this part of prophecy.

RECAPITULATION.

The Dragon is presented at some length in the XII chapter. In the XIII, 2d verse, he gives his power to the leopard beast. Then the seven-headed monster for a time is the ruling power. Then the mouth is given to him, and finally matures, a political-ecclesiastical beast. Then the leopard or Greek Empire waning, and receiving a deadly wound, as the Greek was one of the heads of the monster. The two-horned beast, i. e. the papacy, that was coming up to power, separates from the Eastern empire, and becomes supreme Bishop of the Western, in A. D. 800. See Putnam, page 74. This year Charlemagne and Pope Leo III. found the new empire of the West, the former crowned at Rome by the Pope, king of Italy, Germany and France. Thus we have the beast and his image.

Now I wish those that look for the two-horned beast to arise, or think he is now about to manifest himself, to observe these facts concerning the matter:

First. If the two-horned beast is yet to manifest himself, he must exercise all the power of the leopard beast, and cause the earth and all to worship the first beast.

Secondly. If that is a fact, the forty-and-two months are in the future.

Thirdly. Then it follows that the period spoken of in Daniel 1: 25, in which the saints were to be given into the hands of the horn, is yet in the future; and they must yet pass under that power.

Fourthly. Or it must be allowed that the millions of martyrs that have died for their faith, were not recognized either in the 13th of Rev. or in the above passage in the prophecy of Daniel.

Fifthly. If that two-horned power is yet to arise, then there is, beyond a doubt to my mind, at least 1200 years in the future, before the saints obtain their inheritance.

Finally, it does seem clear that every particular in the prophecy of these wicked powers has been developed, and all that remains to consummate the entire prophetic history, is the 11th verse of Dan. 7th, "I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame."

Fairhaven, Mass., Aug. 1858.

Poetry.

THE JOY OF THE CROSS.

Long plunged in sorrow, I resign
My soul to that dear hand of thine,
Without reserve of fear;
That hand shall wipe my streaming eyes,
Or into smiles of glad surprise
Transform the falling tear.

My sole possession is thy love,
In earth beneath, or heaven above,
I have no other store;
And though with fervent suit I pray,
And importune thee night and day,
I ask thee nothing more.

My rapid hours pursue the course
Prescribed them by love's sweetest force,
And I thy Sovereign will,
Without a wish to escape my doom;
Though still a sufferer from the womb
And doomed to suffer still.

By thy command, where'er I stray,
Sorrow attends me all the way,
A never failing friend;
And if my sufferings may augment
Thy praise, behold me well content,
Let sorrow still attend!

It cost me no regret that she,
Who followed Christ, should follow me;
And though where'er she goes,
Thorns spring spontaneous at her feet,
I love her, and extract a sweet
From all her bitter woes.

Adieu! ye vain delights of earth,
Insipid sports and childish mirth,
I taste no sweets in you;
Unknown delights are in the cross,
All joy beside to me is dross;
And Jesus thought so too.

The cross! Oh, ravishment and bliss,
How grateful e'en its anguish is,
Its bitterness how sweet!
THESE every sense and all the mind,
In all her faculties refined,
Taste happiness complete.

Souls once enabled to disdain;
Base, sublunary joys, maintain
Their dignity secure;
The fever of desire is passed,
And love has all its genuine taste,
Is delicate and pure.

Self-love no grace in sorrow sees,
Consults her own peculiar ease;
'Tis all the bliss she knows;
But nobler ends true love employ,
In self-denial is her joy,
In suffering her repose.

Sorrow and love go side by side;
Nor height nor depth can e'er divide
Their heaven-appointed bands;
Those dear associates still are one,
Nor till the race of life is ran,
Disjoin their wedded hands.

Jesus, avenger of our fall,
Thou faithful lover, above all
The Cross have ever borne!
Oh, tell me,—life is in thy voice,—
How much afflictions were thy choice
And sloth and ease thy scorn!

Thy choice and mine shall be the same,
Inspirer of that holy flame
Which must forever blaze!
To take the Cross and follow thee,
Where love and duty lead, shall be
My portion and my praise.

—Madame Guyon.

Choice Selections.

The Cares and Frets of Life.

We do not mind one little winged freebooter of the night with his minstrelsy of blood, but a whole swarm of mosquitos buzzing about us, we cannot endure. A single particle of dust is not much, but when it comes in clouds in a hot summer's day, settling upon books and furniture and clothes, and blowing into the eyes, it is an annoyance that can scarcely be borne. So there are many cares and troubles in life which, taken singly, we would disdain to notice, but which in the aggregate become such frets and burdens that they make us weary of existence. The only way we can learn to bear them with cheerfulness is by looking to the future, and living in it even while yet on earth. A man who is journeying to his own wedding, or to his father's house, would scarcely be called a man if he complained of the unavoidable discomforts of traveling in the cars. He takes the confinement and the cramped position and the dust and cinders as things of course, and solaces himself with thoughts of the home he is approaching, where he will have pure air and room and liberty and comfort. Now this world is one great car-life, and we must expect, in passing through, to take the fare of the road. It will not be hard to do this if we are sure of a blissful home awaiting us beyond.

When rivers have found the ocean, they roll thither all the currents and channels of their cataract—disturbed waters, and tranquilize themselves, and at their mouths widen into bays. So the heart that has found the future tends constantly towards heaven, and quiets its eddying cares, and tranquilizes itself or ever it reaches the eternal ocean.—Beecher.

MEN plant prayers and endeavors, and go the next day looking to see if they have borne graces. Now, God does not send graces as he sends light and rain; but they are wrought in us through long days of discipline and growth. Acorns and graces sprout quickly, but grow long before ripening.

Climate and Seasons of Palestine.

The seasons of the Holy Land are properly two—the rainy and the dry. The rainy season commences in the latter part of October, or early in November; and the first autumn showers appear to be what is meant in the Bible by the "first" or former rain. "In autumn," Dr Robinson observes, "the whole land has become dry and parched, the cisterns are nearly empty, the few streams and fountains fail, and all nature, physical and animal, looks forward with longing to the return of the rainy season. Mists and clouds begin to make their appearance, and showers occasionally to fall; the husbandman sows his seed, and the thirsty earth is soon drenched with an abundance of rain."

These showers come up from the west or south-west. Thus our Lord says, "When ye see a cloud arise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is." Thus also, after the three years' drought in the time of king Ahab, the messenger of Elijah, posted on mount Carmel, and looking out over the Mediterranean, saw at length "a little cloud rise out of the sea like a man's hand;" this grew and spread towards the land, and soon "the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain." 1 Kings 18: 42—45.

A few fine days follow these "early rains" of November, and afford the farmer an opportunity to sow his wheat and barley in the moistened earth. Then the rainy season sets in, with frequent showers, often heavy and accompanied with thunder and lightning. One of these thunder storms David describes in Psalm twenty-nine, where he shows us the storm gathering upon the sea, bursting on the coast, rocking mount Lebanon, and sweeping across the land, while in the temple the awe-struck people adore the mighty God of Israel.

During January and February the mean temperature at Jerusalem is 47 degrees 4 minutes. Snow sometimes falls, but does not rest long on the ground. The cold is not severe, and the frosts only touch the surface of still waters, without penetrating the earth. From November to March there is an abundance of moisture to loosen and fertilize the soil, and bring forward the grain—which, as the spring sun returns, grows rapidly. The rains however now become less frequent, and after March there are only a few highly-prized showers, the "latter rain" of scripture, Deut. 11: 14, serving to swell and ripen the growing crops, which the hot sun soon after brings to maturity. Dr. Robinson records a thunder storm in May, with heavy rains; but considers it a very unusual phenomenon in Jerusalem.

In April and May the barley and wheat ripen and are harvested; and afterwards in succession apricots, almonds, figs, dates, grapes, olives, etc. Meanwhile not a drop of rain falls from the sky. Day after day its clear blue remains unbroken by a passing cloud. Rain in harvest-time would be a memorable phenomenon, or even a remarkable interposition of Providence, as in the days of Samuel, 1 Sam. 12: 16—18. Only "the dew of heaven from above," falling plentifully during the night, mitigates the parching heat. Towards the close of this season "the total absence of rain destroys the verdure of the fields, and gives to the whole landscape the aspect of drought and barrenness. The only green thing which remains is the foliage of the scattered fruit trees, and occasional vineyards and fields of millet." Yet the heat is not excessive, on the high table lands at least; the average temperature in July being 77 degrees 3 minutes. The climate therefore is justly regarded as healthy and invigorating. An occasional hot wind however from the southern or eastern desert, parches every thing with its stifling heat. On the seacoast also, and in the sunken valley of the Jordan, the heat is sometimes extreme, and the climate prejudicial to strangers.—Amer. Messenger.

An Earnest following of Christ.

They who are attentive to the duties of their station, and enemies to sloth and self-indulgence, are likely to be eminent and useful, and they alone. We ought to proceed in our appointed course, notwithstanding remote difficulties, which may appear to us insurmountable; and to rely on the Lord to remove them when the critical moment arrives; for interpositions are intended to excite, not to supersede, our activity. But we should look well to the path of our feet, especially when "we have not passed that way heretofore." The precepts of the word of God, his providential dispensations, and the counsel and example of his ministers and people, when properly attended to, together with the inward teaching of the Holy Spirit, humbly sought by earnest prayer, will make our way plain to us, though perplexed in itself; and we cannot, in general, go wrong in keeping close to the ordinances of God, and thus, as it were, following the ark in all its removals. In so doing we must not fear rivers of trouble, mountains of difficulties, or hosts of opposing foes; but, confiding in the faithful promise, the Almighty power, and covenant love of our God, "the living God"—"the Lord of the whole earth," we may proceed with boldness and alacrity. Whether we be called to endure poverty, pain, reproach, persecution, or death, we are following the "Author and Finisher of our faith; nor can we set our foot in any perilous or arduous spot, through the whole journey, but faith will there descry the print of the Redeemer's foot, who trode that very path to glory above, and who calls us to "follow him," that where he is there we may be also. —Scott.

Miracles attending our Savior's Passion.

RECORDED IN PROFANE HISTORY.

Phlegon, A. D. 138, says Jesus Christ, according to the prophecies which had before spoken of him, came to his Passion in the eighteenth year of Tiberius, at which time in other, even in heathen memoirs, we find it written to this purpose: "There was an eclipse of the sun, Bithynia was shaken by an earthquake, and in the city of Nice many houses were overturned."

It may be doubted, perhaps, whether these memoirs record or relate to the miracles attending our Lord's Passion; but there are other references more distinct and reliable, particularly that of Tertullian in his Apology for the Christians against the Heathen, the most eloquent and powerful defence of the christian religion which had then been written. It was addressed between A. D. 199 and 205 to the Roman provincial govincial governor. Tertullian declares that Pontius Pilate was constrained, by the malicious machinations of the Jews, to devote Jesus Christ to death upon the cross; that there he soon gave up the ghost, and prevented the office of the executioner, and then adds, "At the same time, while the sun was yet mid heaven, the light of heaven was withdrawn, insomuch that they who knew not that this had been predicted of Christ, supposed it to be an eclipse. And yet this catastrophe of the world you yourselves have recorded in your own archives"

Again: Lucien, the martyr of Antioch, in his Apology, addressed to the Emperor Maximinus, A. D. 312, says: "Look into your own annals. There you will find that in the time of Pilate, when Christ suffered, the sun was obscured, and the light of day was interrupted with darkness."

It is well known that the Romans carefully preserved public annals of current events occurring not only at Rome, but in the provinces of the empire. In the opinion of the learned, therefore, these apologists here make their confident appeal to such public records, in attestation of those which attended the death of Jesus Christ, as related by the evangelists." Divers of the most remarkable circumstances attending our Savior's crucifixion," says the learned Dr. Samuel Clarke, "were recorded in the public Roman registers, and earnestly appealed to by the first christians, as what would not be denied by the adversaries themselves." Grotius also declares that there were not only private histories, like that of Phlegon, but public records, to which christians were accustomed to appeal, not only in attestation of the star which appeared after the birth of Christ, but of the earthquake and the miraculous darkness which occurred about the time of his crucifixion.—American Presbyterian.

HOW TO GET RID OF TROUBLE.—To shake off trouble we must set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat, and go and visit the poor; inquire into their wants and administer unto them; seek out the desolate and oppressed, and tell them of the consolation of religion. I have often tried this, and found it the best medicine for a heavy heart.—Howard, the Philanthropist.

You need not break the glasses of a telescope, or coat them over with paint, in order to prevent you from seeing through them. Just breathe upon them, and the dew of your breath will shut out all the stars.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have for prepaying the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Exposition of Revelation Xiii.

BY S. S. BREWER.

[Concluded from last week.]

We will cite you to an extract from Bower's Lives of the Popes, vol. 2, page 187, concerning the amity between the Eastern and Western emperors; or, in scripture terms, between the beast and his image. "The Embassadors were well received by Charlemagne, and a peace was concluded on the following terms: I. That the Greeks should acknowledge Charlemagne for the emperor of the West, and allow him that title. II. That they should afford no kind of assistance to the dukes of Benevento, who, depending upon their friendship and protection, were ever raising new disturbances in Italy. III. That the Western empire should not extend beyond the dukedom of Benevento, and consequently that the remaining part of Italy lying between that dukedom and the Straits of Massena, with the Island of Sicily, should belong to the Eastern empire and be peaceably possessed by Nicepherous and his successors in the Imperial throne."

"And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed."

And HE, the two horned beast, the ecclesiastic beast, had power to give life unto the image of the beast. See note on page 196 of Mosheim's Ecc. Hist., vol 1. "Charles in reality was already Emperor of the West; that is, the most powerful of the European monarchs. He wanted therefore nothing more than the title of emperor and the supreme dominion in Rome and its territory, both of which he obtained by the ASSISTANCE OF LEO III." Thus the pope made an IMAGE.

Let me introduce a few extracts from history, showing that none but the Pope of Rome could possibly have answered the description of the Revelator. He was to have power over nations, and people, and tongues. Gregory VII. dethroned emperor Henry IV. and Boleslaus II., king of Poland. Pope Zachary deposed Childrique, king of France, and absolved the French from their allegiance to the legitimate sovereign, and placed Pepin upon the throne in his stead. Upon the same ground Boniface VIII. deposed Philippe le Bel, and hurled the thunders of excommunication against him, declaring: "That it is necessary for the salvation of ALL MEN to be subject to the pope." Pope Innocent III. dethroned the emperor Othon IV. Pope Innocent IV. deposed emperor Frederic II., and Pope Julius II. took the kingdom of Navarre from its legitimate sovereign, and gave it to Spain. For a more glaring exhibition of power, read the following extract from the 5th council of Toledo. The holy fathers say: "We, the holy council, promulge this sentence, or decree, pleasing to God, that whosoever hereafter shall succeed to the kingdom, shall not mount the throne till he has sworn among other oaths to permit no man to live in his kingdom who is not a Catholic; and if after he has taken the reins of government, he shall violate this promise, let him be anathema maranatha in the sight of the eternal God, and become fuel for the eternal fire!" There is a specimen of the tender mercies of this two-horned beast, also of his power to cause all to be put to death that would not worship the beast or his image.

This two-horned monster was to do great wonders, so that he made fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast. I do not for one moment suppose that this ecclesiastical beast ever did, ever will, or ever can, work such a miracle as to cause literal fire to descend from heaven; but the simple fact I conceive to be this: all that become so enthusiastically infatuated with the pretended power of the Romish priesthood, and their lying wonders, which I will not stop to specify, to them God declared he would send a strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, because they had pleasure in unrighteousness.—See 2 Thess. 2: 11, 12. The popes of Rome have claimed to receive their power from God. Read the following: the bull of Pope Sixtus V. against Henry, king of Navarre. It contains the following assertions: "The authority given to St. Peter and his successors, by the immense power of the eternal King, excels all the powers of earthly [illegible] ters were sent to the French king Louis, commanding him, in the name of God, "to smite the Albigenses with the sword, and burn their cities with FIRE." See History of the Catholic Inquisition, by the Rev. Cyrus Mason, page 46. After Isabella was elevated to the throne of Spain, Francis Torquemada, her confessor, came into her presence and reminded her of the oath she had registered in heaven. He represented it to be her duty to convert the Moors and Jews, or commit them to the flames. He was appointed grand inquisitor of Spain, during the fourteen years that he exercised his new and congenial function. He prosecuted before his tribunal upwards of one hundred thousand individuals, of whom six thousand were condemned to the flames, and their goods became the prey of the spoiler."

I therefore consider the idea of his making fire come down from heaven, to be the fact that he has deceived his simple faithful in the belief that he has heaven appointed power from God to burn heretics at the stake, and consume their houses, cities and property.

"And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."

Another feature of this two-horned ecclesiastic beast is this. Verse 17—"And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." We will proceed to give several opinions on this mysterious name.

Dr. A. Clarke says on this subject: "THE LATIN KINGDOM has exclusively this number, 666." According to Putnam, Rome began to be built B. C. 753, and the Latins were conquered by the Romans 640 B. C. Says A. Campbell, in the debate referred to above on page 228, 229:

"My present argument requires me to identify this beast with the Roman Church or with the Little Horn—and therefore in addition to the resembling attributes already traced, I proceed to the most definite of its marks. The ecclesiastic beast or kingdom is thus definitely the letters of a name, which together make 666. The name of a man is the name of this kingdom. Now we begin with a Roman Saint, even with the great Irenæus. We shall find in the name of the king and founder of the Latin Empire the name of this prophetic personage. It is said by the saint that among the Greeks the king's name was written LATEINOS, the letters of which being numerals in that language, exactly make the sum for 666. * * * The conclusion from these premises is, that as there is no other kingdom on earth whose name is exactly 666,—and as the beast, the symbol of this kingdom, has been proved to be the Latin Empire, and The Latine Basilica being proved to contain 666, this definitely and clearly marks out the Roman institution as that to which the 13th chapter of the Apocalypse and the 7th chapter of Daniel refer. * * * * This moreover explains that love of Latin which to this day distinguishes this church. They not only have long gloried in the name, Roman, or Latin Catholic, or Church of Rome; but they still say mass in Latin, and perform their religious services in that dead language; for although Paul had rather speak five sentences in the vernacular than ten thousand sentences in an unknown tongue; and although in the age of the 'primitive fathers' the whole church prayed and taught in the language of every country where they worshiped; still for the sake of Latin, to this day, and even in this country, Romanists perform their most devout services in that dead and foreign language, as though God preferred that language to every other. Thus they are providentially bearing to all nations and languages the grand mark and the number of the name which identifies them as the Beast and Babylon of John."

I will insert one more criticism from Barnes' Notes:

"The word Lateinos—the Latin, actually has all the conditions supposed in the interpretation of this passage. From this word the number specified, 666, is made out as follows:

L	A	T	E	I	N	O	S
30	1	300	5	10	50	70	200	—666

Thus it was suggested by Irenæus, who says, 'It seems to me very probable; for this is a name of the last of Daniel's four kingdoms they being Latins that now reign.

18th verse—'And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.'

Whether this means literally that this monster should proscribe every person in their kingdom from buying or selling any commodity; or whether it means only in the matter of religious belief, is the question. The latter, I opine, for the following reasons: The apostle Peter, the boasted predecessor of his degenerate successor the pope, declares in his epistle—

'But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways: by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.'

Touching this point we will quote from the 10th session of the Lateran Council, A. D. 1215, Pope Leo X. presiding. The decree of the Lateran Council was sanctioned by the Council of Trent, and is now orthodox faith of Rome, or Latin Church. "We in fine ordain and decree, that no person shall presume to print, or cause to be printed, any book or other writing whatsoever, either in our city (Rome) or any other cities and dioceses, unless it first shall have been carefully examined; if in this city by our Vicar and the master of the holy palace; or, if in other cities and dioceses, by the Bishop or his deputy, with the inquisitor of heretical pravity for the diocese in which the said impression is about to be made; and unless also it shall have received under their own hand their written approval, given without price and without delay, whosoever shall presume to do otherwise, besides the loss of the books, which shall be bound by the sentence of excommunication."

"No means must be here omitted," says Clement XII., our predecessor of happy memory, in the Encyclical Letter on the proscription of bad books,—"no means must be here omitted, as the extremity of the case calls for all our exertions to exterminate the fatal pest which spreads through so many works; nor can the materials of error be otherwise destroyed than by flames, which consume the depraved elements of evil."

Thus the Latin two-horned beast forbids to buy or sell all books that have not the name of this beast. Even the Holy Bible has been burned by the Romish priest at Champlain, N. Y. And well for the poor Protestant heretics that this two-horned monster has not the power; or the fires of papal vengeance would soon be crackling around us; and for the good of our souls consume our flesh and calcine our bones. Thanks be to the mercy of God, that we are free from the iron hoof of the LATIN Man of Sin.

Dear reader, if the above exposition is not in the main something near the truth, I must say that it is passing strange that there are so many striking incidents in the history of Papacy, as well as in the prophecy, most strikingly descriptive of the characters, and the embodiment of facts that I have brought to bear on this important part of holy writ. With a recapitulation, I shall take my leave of this part of prophecy.

RECAPITULATION.

The Dragon is presented at some length in the XII chapter. In the XIII, 2d verse, he gives his power to the leopard beast. Then the seven-headed monster for a time is the ruling power. Then the mouth is given to him, and finally matures, a political-ecclesiastical beast. Then the leopard or Greek Empire waning, and receiving a deadly wound, as the Greek was one of the heads of the monster. The two-horned beast, i. e. the papacy, that was coming up to power, separates from the Eastern empire, and becomes supreme Bishop of the Western, in A. D. 800. See Putnam, page 74. This year Charlemagne and Pope Leo III. found the new empire of the West, the former crowned at Rome by the Pope, king of Italy, Germany and France. Thus we have the beast and his image.

Now I wish those that look for the two-horned beast to arise, or think he is now about to manifest himself, to observe these facts concerning the matter:

First. If the two-horned beast is yet to manifest himself, he must exercise all the power of the leopard beast, and cause the earth and all to worship the first beast.

Secondly. If that is a fact, the forty-and-two months are in the future.

Thirdly. Then it follows that the period spoken of in Daniel 1: 25, in which the saints were to be given into the hands of the horn, is yet in the future; and they must yet pass under that power.

Fourthly. Or it must be allowed that the millions of martyrs that have died for their faith, were not recognized either in the 13th of Rev. or in the above passage in the prophecy of Daniel.

Fifthly. If that two-horned power is yet to arise, then there is, beyond a doubt to my mind, at least 1200 years in the future, before the saints obtain their inheritance.

Finally, it does seem clear that every particular in the prophecy of these wicked powers has been developed, and all that remains to consummate the entire prophetic history, is the 11th verse of Dan. 7th. "I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame."

Fairhaven, Mass., Aug. 1858.

Poetry.

THE JOY OF THE CROSS.

Long plunged in sorrow, I resign
My soul to that dear hand of thine,
Without reserve of fear;
That hand shall wipe my streaming eyes,
Or into smiles of glad surprise
Transform the falling tear.

My sole possession is thy love,
In earth beneath, or heaven above,
I have no other store;
And though with fervent suit I pray,
And importune thee night and day,
I ask thee nothing more.

My rapid hours pursue the course
Prescribed them by love's sweetest force,
And I thy Sovereign will,
Without a wish to escape my doom;
Though still a sufferer from the womb
And doomed to suffer still.

By thy command, where'er I stray,
Sorrow attends me all the way,
A never failing friend;
And if my sufferings may augment
Thy praise, behold me well content,
Let sorrow still attend!

It cost me no regret that she,
Who followed Christ, should follow me;
And though where'er she goes,
Thorns spring spontaneous at her feet,
I love her, and extract a sweet
From all her bitter woes.

Adieu! ye vain delights of earth,
Insipid sports and childish mirth,
I taste no sweets in you;
Unknown delights are in the cross,
All joy beside to me is dross;
And Jesus thought so too.

The cross! Oh, ravishment and bliss,
How grateful e'en its anguish is,
Its bitterness how sweet!
THESE every sense and all the mind,
In all her faculties refined,
Taste happiness complete.

Souls once enabled to disdain;
Base, sublunary joys, maintain
Their dignity secure;
The fever of desire is passed,
And love has all its genuine taste,
Is delicate and pure.

Self-love no grace in sorrow sees,
Consults her own peculiar ease;
'Tis all the bliss she knows,
But nobler ends true love employ,
In self-denial is her joy,
In suffering her repose.

Sorrow and love go side by side;
Nor height nor depth can e'er divide
Their heaven-appointed bands;
Those dear associates still are one,
Nor till the race of life is ran,
Disjoin their wedded hands.

Jesus, avenger of our fall,
Thou faithful lover, above all
The Cross have ever borne!
Oh, tell me,—life is in thy voice,—
How much afflictions were thy choice
And sloth and ease thy scorn!

Thy choice and mine shall be the same,
Inspirer of that holy flame
Which must forever blaze!
To take the Cross and follow thee,
Where love and duty lead, shall be
My portion and my praise.

—Madame Guyon.

Choice Selections.

The Cares and Frets of Life.

We do not mind one little winged freebooter of the night with his minstrelsy of blood, but a whole swarm of mosquitos buzzing about us, we cannot endure. A single particle of dust is not much, but when it comes in clouds in a hot summer's day, settling upon books and furniture and clothes, and blowing into the eyes, it is an annoyance that can scarcely be borne. So there are many cares and troubles in life which, taken singly, we would disdain to notice, but which in the aggregate become such frets and burdens that they make us weary of existence. The only way we can learn to bear them with cheerfulness is by looking to the future, and living in it even while yet on earth. A man who is journeying to his own wedding, or to his father's house, would scarcely be called a man if he complained of the unavoidable discomforts of traveling in the cars. He takes the confinement and the cramped position and the dust and cinders as things of course, and solaces himself with thoughts of the home he is approaching, where he will have pure air and room and liberty and comfort. Now this world is one great car-life, and we must expect, in passing through, to take the fare of the road. It will not be hard to do this if we are sure of a blissful home awaiting us beyond.

When rivers have found the ocean, they roll thither all the currents and channels of their cataract—disturbed waters, and tranquilize themselves, and at their mouths widen into bays. So the heart that has found the future tends constantly towards heaven, and quiets its eddying cares, and tranquilizes itself or ever it reaches the eternal ocean.—Beecher.

MEN plant prayers and endeavors, and go the next day looking to see if they have borne graces. Now, God does not send graces as he sends light and rain; but they are wrought in us through long days of discipline and growth. Acorns and graces sprout quickly, but grow long before ripening.

Climate and Seasons of Palestine.

The seasons of the Holy Land are properly two—the rainy and the dry. The rainy season commences in the latter part of October, or early in November; and the first autumn showers appear to be what is meant in the Bible by the "first" or former rain. "In autumn," Dr Robinson observes, "the whole land has become dry and parched, the cisterns are nearly empty, the few streams and fountains fail, and all nature, physical and animal, looks forward with longing to the return of the rainy season. Mists and clouds begin to make their appearance, and showers occasionally to fall; the husbandman sows his seed, and the thirsty earth is soon drenched with an abundance of rain."

These showers come up from the west or south-west. Thus our Lord says, "When ye see a cloud arise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is." Thus also, after the three years' drought in the time of king Ahab, the messenger of Elijah, posted on mount Carmel, and looking out over the Mediterranean, saw at length "a little cloud rise out of the sea like a man's hand;" this grew and spread towards the land, and soon "the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain." 1 Kings 18: 42—45.

A few fine days follow these "early rains" of November, and afford the farmer an opportunity to sow his wheat and barley in the moistened earth. Then the rainy season sets in, with frequent showers, often heavy and accompanied with thunder and lightning. One of these thunder storms David describes in Psalm twenty-nine, where he shows us the storm gathering upon the sea, bursting on the coast, rocking mount Lebanon, and sweeping across the land, while in the temple the awe-struck people adore the mighty God of Israel.

During January and February the mean temperature at Jerusalem is 47 degrees 4 minutes. Snow sometimes falls, but does not rest long on the ground. The cold is not severe, and the frosts only touch the surface of still waters, without penetrating the earth. From November to March there is an abundance of moisture to loosen and fertilize the soil, and bring forward the grain—which, as the spring sun returns, grows rapidly. The rains however now become less frequent, and after March there are only a few highly-prized showers, the "latter rain" of scripture, Deut. 11: 14, serving to swell and ripen the growing crops, which the hot sun soon after brings to maturity. Dr. Robinson records a thunder storm in May, with heavy rains; but considers it a very unusual phenomenon in Jerusalem.

In April and May the barley and wheat ripen and are harvested; and afterwards in succession apricots, almonds, figs, dates, grapes, olives, etc. Meanwhile not a drop of rain falls from the sky. Day after day its clear blue remains unbroken by a passing cloud. Rain in harvest-time would be a memorable phenomenon, or even a remarkable interposition of Providence, as in the days of Samuel, 1 Sam. 12: 16—18. Only "the dew of heaven from above," falling plentifully during the night, mitigates the parching heat. Towards the close of this season "the total absence of rain destroys the verdure of the fields, and gives to the whole landscape the aspect of drought and barrenness. The only green thing which remains is the foliage of the scattered fruit trees, and occasional vineyards and fields of millet." Yet the heat is not excessive, on the high table lands at least; the average temperature in July being 77 degrees 3 minutes. The climate therefore is justly regarded as healthy and invigorating. An occasional hot wind however from the southern or eastern desert, parches every thing with its stifling heat. On the seacoast also, and in the sunken valley of the Jordan, the heat is sometimes extreme, and the climate prejudicial to strangers.—Amer. Messenger.

An Earnest following of Christ.

They who are attentive to the duties of their station, and enemies to sloth and self-indulgence, are likely to be eminent and useful, and they alone. We ought to proceed in our appointed course, notwithstanding remote difficulties, which may appear to us insurmountable; and to rely on the Lord to remove them when the critical moment arrives; for interpositions are intended to excite, not to supersede, our activity. But we should look well to the path of our feet, especially when "we have not passed that way heretofore." The precepts of the word of God, his providential dispensations, and the counsel and example of his ministers and people, when properly attended to, together with the inward teaching of the Holy Spirit, humbly sought by earnest prayer, will make our way plain to us, though perplexed in itself; and we cannot, in general, go wrong in keeping close to the ordinances of God, and thus, as it were, following the ark in all its removals. In so doing we must not fear rivers of trouble, mountains of difficulties, or hosts of opposing foes; but, confiding in the faithful promise, the Almighty power, and covenant love of our God, "the living God"—"the Lord of the whole earth," we may proceed with boldness and alacrity. Whether we be called to endure poverty, pain, reproach, persecution, or death, we are following the "Author and Finisher of our faith; nor can we set our foot in any perilous or arduous spot, through the whole journey, but faith will there descry the print of the Redeemer's foot, who trode that very path to glory above, and who calls us to "follow him," that where he is there we may be also.—Scott.

Miracles attending our Savior's Passion.

RECORDED IN PROFANE HISTORY.

Phlegon, A. D. 138, says Jesus Christ, according to the prophecies which had before spoken of him, came to his Passion in the eighteenth year of Tiberius, at which time in other, even in heathen memoirs, we find it written to this purpose: "There was an eclipse of the sun, Bithynia was shaken by an earthquake, and in the city of Nice many houses were overturned."

It may be doubted, perhaps, whether these memoirs record or relate to the miracles attending our Lord's Passion; but there are other references more distinct and reliable, particularly that of Tertullian in his Apology for the Christians against the Heathen, the most eloquent and powerful defence of the christian religion which had then been written. It was addressed between A. D. 199 and 205 to the Roman provincial govinoial governor. Tertullian declares that Pontius Pilate was constrained, by the malicious machinations of the Jews, to devote Jesus Christ to death upon the cross; that there he soon gave up the ghost, and prevented the office of the executioner, and then adds, "At the same time, while the sun was yet mid heaven, the light of heaven was withdrawn, insomuch that they who knew not that this had been predicted of Christ, supposed it to be an eclipse. And yet this catastrophe of the world you yourselves have recorded in your own archives."

Again: Lucien, the martyr of Antioch, in his Apology, addressed to the Emperor Maximinus, A. D. 312, says: "Look into your own annals. There you will find that in the time of Pilate, when Christ suffered, the sun was obscured, and the light of day was interrupted with darkness."

It is well known that the Romans carefully preserved public annals of current events occurring not only at Rome, but in the provinces of the empire. In the opinion of the learned, therefore, these apologists here make their confident appeal to such public records, in attestation of those which attended the death of Jesus Christ, as related by the evangelists." Divers of the most remarkable circumstances attending our Savior's crucifixion," says the learned Dr. Samuel Clarke, "were recorded in the public Roman registers, and earnestly appealed to by the first christians, as what would not be denied by the adversaries themselves." Grotius also declares that there were not only private histories, like that of Phlegon, but public records, to which christians were accustomed to appeal, not only in attestation of the star which appeared after the birth of Christ, but of the earthquake and the miraculous darkness which occurred about the time of his crucifixion.—American Presbyterian.

HOW TO GET RID OF TROUBLE.—To shake off trouble we must set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat, and go and visit the poor; inquire into their wants and administer unto them; seek out the desolate and oppressed, and tell them of the consolation of religion. I have often tried this, and found it the best medicine for a heavy heart.—Howard, the Philanthropist.

You need not break the glasses of a telescope, or coat them over with paint, in order to prevent you from seeing through them. Just breathe upon them, and the dew of your breath will shut out all the stars.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA Subscribers have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; [illegible] will pay for twelve numbers, or $3.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Exposition of Revelation Xiii.

BY S. A. BREWER.

[Concluded from last week.]

We will cite you to an extract from Bower's Lives of the Popes, vol. 2, page 187, concerning the amity between the Eastern and Western emperors; or, in scripture terms, between the beast and his image. "The Embassadors were well received by Charlemagne, and a peace was concluded on the following terms: I. That the Greeks should acknowledge Charlemagne for the emperor of the West, and allow him that title. II. That they should afford no kind of assistance to the dukes of Benevento, who, depending upon their friendship and protection, were ever raising new disturbances in Italy. III. That the Western empire should not extend beyond the dukedom of Benevento, and consequently that the remaining part of Italy lying between that dukedom and the Straits of Massena, with the Island of Sicily, should belong to the Eastern empire and be peaceably possessed by Nicepherous and his successors in the Imperial throne."

"And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed."

And HE, the two horned beast, the ecclesiastic beast, had power to give life unto the image of the beast. See note on page 196 of Mosheim's Ecc. Hist., vol 1. "Charles in reality was already Emperor of the West; that is, the most powerful of the European monarchs. He wanted therefore nothing more than the title of emperor and the supreme dominion in Rome and its territory, both of which he obtained by the ASSISTANCE OF LEO III." Thus the pope made an IMAGE.

Let me introduce a few extracts from history, showing that none but the Pope of Rome could possibly have answered the description of the Revelator. He was to have power over nations, and people, and tongues. Gregory VII. dethroned emperor Henry IV. and Boleslaus II., king of Poland. Pope Zachary deposed Childrique, king of France, and absolved the French from their allegiance to the legitimate sovereign, and placed Pepin upon the throne in his stead. Upon the same ground Boniface VIII. deposed Philippe le Bel, and hurled the thunders of excommunication against him, declaring: "That it is necessary for the salvation of ALL MEN to be subject to the pope." Pope Innocent III. dethroned the emperor Othon IV. Pope Innocent IV. deposed emperor Frederic II., and Pope Julius II. took the kingdom of Navarre from its legitimate sovereign, and gave it to Spain. For a more glaring exhibition of power, read the following extract from the 5th council of Toledo. The holy fathers say: "We, the holy council, promulge this sentence, or decree, pleasing to God, that whosoever hereafter shall succeed to the kingdom, shall not mount the throne till he has sworn among other oaths to permit no man to live in his kingdom who is not a Catholic; and if after he has taken the reins of government, he shall violate this promise, let him be anathema maranatha in the sight of the eternal God, and become fuel for the eternal fire!" There is a specimen of the tender mercies of this two-horned beast, also of his power to cause all to be put to death that would not worship the beast or his image.

This two-horned monster was to do great wonders, so that he made fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast. I do not for one moment suppose that this ecclesiastical beast ever did, ever will, or ever can, work such a miracle as to cause literal fire to descend from heaven; but the simple fact I conceive to be this: all that become so enthusiastically infatuated with the pretended power of the Romish priesthood, and their lying wonders, which I will not stop to specify, to them God declared he would send a strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, because they had pleasure in unrighteousness.—See 2 Thess. 2: 11, 12. The popes of Rome have claimed to receive their power from God. Read the following: the bull of Pope Sixtus V. against Henry, king of Navarre. It contains the following assertions: "The authority given to St. Peter and his successors, by the immense power of the eternal King, excels all the powers of earthly kings and princes." A. D. 1231, letters were sent to the French king Louis, commanding him, in the name of God, "to smite the Albigenses with the sword, and burn their cities with FIRE." See History of the Catholic Inquisition, by the Rev. Cyrus Mason, page 46. After Isabella was elevated to the throne of Spain, Francis Torquemada, her confessor, came into her presence and reminded her of the oath she had registered in heaven. He represented it to be her duty to convert the Moors and Jews, or commit them to the flames. He was appointed grand inquisitor of Spain, during the fourteen years that he exercised his new and congenial function. He prosecuted before his tribunal upwards of one hundred thousand individuals, of whom six thousand were condemned to the flames, and their goods became the prey of the spoiler."

I therefore consider the idea of his making fire come down from heaven, to be the fact that he has deceived his simple faithful in the belief that he has heaven appointed power from God to burn heretics at the stake, and consume their houses, cities and property.

"And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."

Another feature of this two-horned ecclesiastic beast is this. Verse 17—"And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." We will proceed to give several opinions on this mysterious name.

Dr. A. Clarke says on this subject: "THE LATIN KINGDOM has exclusively this number, 666." According to Putnam, Rome began to be built B. C. 753, and the Latins were conquered by the Romans 640 B. C. Says A. Campbell, in the debate referred to above on page 228, 229:

"My present argument requires me to identify this beast with the Roman Church or with the Little Horn—and therefore in addition to the resembling attributes already traced, I proceed to the most definite of its marks. The ecclesiastic beast or kingdom is thus definitely the letters of a name, which together make 666. The name of a man is the name of this kingdom. Now we begin with a Roman Saint, even with the great Irenæus. We shall find in the name of the king and founder of the Latin Empire the name of this prophetic personage. It is said by the saint that among the Greeks the king's name was written LATEINOS, the letters of which being numerals in that language, exactly make the sum for 666. * * * The conclusion from these premises is, that as there is no other kingdom on earth whose name is exactly 666,—and as the beast, the symbol of this kingdom, has been proved to be the Latin Empire, and The Latine Basilica being proved to contain 666, this definitely and clearly marks out the Roman institution as that to which the 13th chapter of the Apocalypse and the 7th chapter of Daniel refer. * * * * This moreover explains that love of Latin which to this day distinguishes this church. They not only have long gloried in the name, Roman, or Latin Catholic, or Church of Rome; but they still say mass in Latin, and perform their religious services in that dead language; for although Paul had rather speak five sentences in the vernacular than ten thousand sentences in an unknown tongue; and although in the age of the 'primitive fathers' the whole church prayed and taught in the language of every country where they worshiped; still for the sake of Latin, to this day, and even in this country, Romanists perform their most devout services in that dead and foreign language, as though God preferred that language to every other. Thus they are providentially bearing to all nations and languages the grand mark and the number of the name which identifies them as the Beast and Babylon of John."

I will insert one more criticism from Barnes' Notes:

"The word Lateinos—the Latin, actually has all the conditions supposed in the interpretation of this passage. From this word the number specified, 666, is made out as follows:

L	A	T	E	I	N	O	S
30	1	300	5	10	50	70	200	—666

Thus it was suggested by Irenæus, who says, 'It seems to me very probable; for this is a name of the last of Daniel's four kingdoms they being Latins that now reign.

18th verse—'And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.'

Whether this means literally that this monster should proscribe every person in their kingdom from buying or selling any commodity; or whether it means only in the matter of religious belief, is the question. The latter, I opine, for the following reasons: The apostle Peter, the boasted predecessor of his degenerate successor the pope, declares in his epistle—

'But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways: by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.'

Touching this point we will quote from the 10th session of the Lateran Council, A. D. 1215, Pope Leo X. presiding. The decree of the Lateran Council was sanctioned by the Council of Trent, and is now orthodox faith of Rome, or Latin Church. "We in fine ordain and decree, that no person shall presume to print, or cause to be printed, any book or other writing whatsoever, either in our city (Rome) or any other cities and dioceses, unless it first shall have been carefully examined; if in this city, by our Vicar and the master of the holy palace; or, if in other cities and dioceses, by the Bishop or his deputy, with the inquisitor of heretical pravity for the diocese in which the said impression is about to be made; and unless also it shall have received under their own hand their written approval, given without price and without delay, whosoever shall presume to do otherwise, besides the loss of the books, which shall be bound by the sentence of excommunication."

"No means must be here omitted," says Clement XII., our predecessor of happy memory, in the Encyclical Letter on the proscription of bad books,—"no means must be here omitted, as the extremity of the case calls for all our exertions to exterminate the fatal pest which spreads through so many works; nor can the materials of error be otherwise destroyed than by flames, which consume the depraved elements of evil."

Thus the Latin two-horned beast forbids to buy or sell all books that have not the name of this beast. Even the Holy Bible has been burned by the Romish priest at Champlain, N. Y. And well for the poor Protestant heretics that this two-horned monster has not the power; or the fires of papal vengeance would soon be crackling around us; and for the good of our souls consume our flesh and calcine our bones. Thanks be to the mercy of God, that we are free from the iron hoof of the LATIN Man of Sin.

Dear reader, if the above exposition is not in the main something near the truth, I must say that it is passing strange that there are so many striking incidents in the history of Papacy, as well as in the prophecy, most strikingly descriptive of the characters, and the embodiment of facts that I have brought to bear on this important part of holy writ. With a recapitulation, I shall take my leave of this part of prophecy.

RECAPITULATION.

The Dragon is presented at some length in the XII chapter. In the XIII, 2d verse, he gives his power to the leopard beast. Then the seven-headed monster for a time is the ruling power. Then the mouth is given to him, and finally matures, a political-ecclesiastical beast. Then the leopard or Greek Empire waning, and receiving a deadly wound, as the Greek was one of the heads of the monster. The two-horned beast, i. e. the papacy, that was coming up to power, separates from the Eastern empire, and becomes supreme Bishop of the Western, in A. D. 800. See Putnam, page 74. This year Charlemagne and Pope Leo III. found the new empire of the West, the former crowned at Rome by the Pope, king of Italy, Germany and France. Thus we have the beast and his image.

Now I wish those that look for the two-horned beast to arise, or think he is now about to manifest himself, to observe these facts concerning the matter:

First. If the two-horned beast is yet to manifest himself, he must exercise all the power of the leopard beast, and cause the earth and all to worship the first beast.

Secondly. If that is a fact, the forty-and-two months are in the future.

Thirdly. Then it follows that the period spoken of in Daniel 1: 25, in which the saints were to be given into the hands of the horn, is yet in the future; and they must yet pass under that power.

Fourthly. Or it must be allowed that the millions of martyrs that have died for their faith, were not recognized either in the 13th of Rev. or in the above passage in the prophecy of Daniel.

Fifthly. If that two-horned power is yet to arise, then there is, beyond a doubt to my mind, at least 1200 years in the future, before the saints obtain their inheritance.

Finally, it does seem clear that every particular in the prophecy of these wicked powers has been developed, and all that remains to consummate the entire prophetic history, is the 11th verse of Dan. 7th. "I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame."

Fairhaven, Mass., Aug. 1858.

Poetry.

THE JOY OF THE CROSS.

Long plunged in sorrow, I resign
My soul to that dear hand of thine,
Without reserve of fear;
That hand shall wipe my streaming eyes,
Or into smiles of glad surprise
Transform the falling tear.

My sole possession is thy love,
In earth beneath, or heaven above,
I have no other store;
And though with fervent suit I pray,
And importune thee night and day,
I ask thee nothing more.

My rapid hours pursue the course
Prescribed them by love's sweetest force,
And I thy Sovereign will,
Without a wish to escape my doom;
Though still a sufferer from the womb
And doomed to suffer still.

By thy command, where'er I stray,
Sorrow attends me all the way,
A never failing friend;
And if my sufferings may augment
Thy praise, behold me well content,
Let sorrow still attend!

It cost me no regret that she,
Who followed Christ, should follow me;
And though where'er she goes,
Thorns spring spontaneous at her feet,
I love her, and extract a sweet
From all her bitter woes.

Adieu! ye vain delights of earth,
Insipid sports and childish mirth,
I taste no sweets in you;
Unknown delights are in the cross,
All joy beside to me is dross;
And Jesus thought so too.

The cross! Oh, ravishment and bliss,
How grateful e'en its anguish is,
Its bitterness how sweet!
THESE every sense and all the mind,
In all her faculties refined,
Taste happiness complete.

Souls once enabled to disdain;
Base, sublunary joys, maintain
Their dignity secure;
The fever of desire is passed,
And love has all its genuine taste,
Is delicate and pure.

Self-love no grace in sorrow sees,
Consults her own peculiar ease;
'Tis all the bliss she knows;
But nobler ends true love employ,
In self-denial is her joy,
In suffering her repose.

Sorrow and love go side by side;
Nor height nor depth can e'er divide
Their heaven-appointed bands;
Those dear associates still are one,
Nor till the race of life is ran,
Disjoin their wedded hands.

Jesus, avenger of our fall,
Thou faithful lover, above all
The Cross have ever borne!
Oh, tell me,—life is in thy voice,—
How much afflictions were thy choice
And sloth and ease thy scorn!

Thy choice and mine shall be the same,
Inspirer of that holy flame
Which must forever blaze!
To take the Cross and follow thee,
Where love and duty lead, shall be
My portion and my praise.

—Madame Guyon.

Choice Selections.

The Cares and Frets of Life.

We do not mind one little winged freebooter of the night with his minstrelsy of blood, but a whole swarm of mosquitos buzzing about us, we cannot endure. A single particle of dust is not much, but when it comes in clouds in a hot summer's day, settling upon books and furniture and clothes, and blowing into the eyes, it is an annoyance that can scarcely be borne. So there are many cares and troubles in life which, taken singly, we would disdain to notice, but which in the aggregate become such frets and burdens that they make us weary of existence. The only way we can learn to bear them with cheerfulness is by looking to the future, and living in it even while yet on earth. A man who is journeying to his own wedding, or to his father's house, would scarcely be called a man if he complained of the unavoidable discomforts of traveling in the cars. He takes the confinement and the cramped position and the dust and cinders as things of course, and solaces himself with thoughts of the home he is approaching, where he will have pure air and room and liberty and comfort. Now this world is one great car-life, and we must expect, in passing through, to take the fare of the road. It will not be hard to do this if we are sure of a blissful home awaiting us beyond.

When rivers have found the ocean, they roll thither all the currents and channels of their cataract—disturbed waters, and tranquilize themselves, and at their mouths widen into bays. So the heart that has found the future tends constantly towards heaven, and quiets its eddying cares, and tranquilizes itself or ever it reaches the eternal ocean.—Beecher.

MEN plant prayers and endeavors, and go the next day looking to see if they have borne graces. Now, God does not send graces as he sends light and rain; but they are wrought in us through long days of discipline and growth. Acorns and graces sprout quickly, but grow long before ripening.

Climate and Seasons of Palestine.

The seasons of the Holy Land are properly two—the rainy and the dry. The rainy season commences in the latter part of October, or early in November; and the first autumn showers appear to be what is meant in the Bible by the "first" or former rain. "In autumn," Dr Robinson observes, "the whole land has become dry and parched, the cisterns are nearly empty, the few streams and fountains fail, and all nature, physical and animal, looks forward with longing to the return of the rainy season. Mists and clouds begin to make their appearance, and showers occasionally to fall; the husbandman sows his seed, and the thirsty earth is soon drenched with an abundance of rain."

These showers come up from the west or south-west. Thus our Lord says, "When ye see a cloud arise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is." Thus also, after the three years' drought in the time of king Ahab, the messenger of Elijah, posted on mount Carmel, and looking out over the Mediterranean, saw at length "a little cloud rise out of the sea like a man's hand;" this grew and spread towards the land, and soon "the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain." 1 Kings 18: 42—45.

A few fine days follow these "early rains" of November, and afford the farmer an opportunity to sow his wheat and barley in the moistened earth. Then the rainy season sets in, with frequent showers, often heavy and accompanied with thunder and lightning. One of these thunder storms David describes in Psalm twenty-nine, where he shows us the storm gathering upon the sea, bursting on the coast, rocking mount Lebanon, and sweeping across the land, while in the temple the awe-struck people adore the mighty God of Israel.

During January and February the mean temperature at Jerusalem is 47 degrees 4 minutes. Snow sometimes falls, but does not rest long on the ground. The cold is not severe, and the frosts only touch the surface of still waters, without penetrating the earth. From November to March there is an abundance of moisture to loosen and fertilize the soil, and bring forward the grain—which, as the spring sun returns, grows rapidly. The rains however now become less frequent, and after March there are only a few highly-prized showers, the "latter rain" of scripture, Deut. 11: 14, serving to swell and ripen the growing crops, which the hot sun soon after brings to maturity. Dr. Robinson records a thunder storm in May, with heavy rains; but considers it a very unusual phenomenon in Jerusalem.

In April and May the barley and wheat ripen and are harvested; and afterwards in succession apricots, almonds, figs, dates, grapes, olives, etc. Meanwhile not a drop of rain falls from the sky. Day after day its clear blue remains unbroken by a passing cloud. Rain in harvest-time would be a memorable phenomenon, or even a remarkable interposition of Providence, as in the days of Samuel, 1 Sam. 12: 16—18. Only "the dew of heaven from above," falling plentifully during the night, mitigates the parching heat. Towards the close of this season "the total absence of rain destroys the verdure of the fields, and gives to the whole landscape the aspect of drought and barrenness. The only green thing which remains is the foliage of the scattered fruit trees, and occasional vineyards and fields of millet." Yet the heat is not excessive, on the high table lands at least; the average temperature in July being 77 degrees 3 minutes. The climate therefore is justly regarded as healthy and invigorating. An occasional hot wind however from the southern or eastern desert, parches every thing with its stifling heat. On the seacoast also, and in the sunken valley of the Jordan, the heat is sometimes extreme, and the climate prejudicial to strangers.—Amer. Messenger.

An Earnest following of Christ.

They who are attentive to the duties of their station, and enemies to sloth and self-indulgence, are likely to be eminent and useful, and they alone. We ought to proceed in our appointed course, notwithstanding remote difficulties, which may appear to us insurmountable; and to rely on the Lord to remove them when the critical moment arrives; for interpositions are intended to excite, not to supersede, our activity. But we should look well to the path of our feet, especially when "we have not passed that way heretofore." The precepts of the word of God, his providential dispensations, and the counsel and example of his ministers and people, when properly attended to, together with the inward teaching of the Holy Spirit, humbly sought by earnest prayer, will make our way plain to us, though perplexed in itself; and we cannot, in general, go wrong in keeping close to the ordinances of God, and thus, as it were, following the ark in all its removals. In so doing we must not fear rivers of trouble, mountains of difficulties, or hosts of opposing foes; but, confiding in the faithful promise, the Almighty power, and covenant love of our God, "the living God"—"the Lord of the whole earth," we may proceed with boldness and alacrity. Whether we be called to endure poverty, pain, reproach, persecution, or death, we are following the "Author and Finisher of our faith; nor can we set our foot in any perilous or arduous spot, through the whole journey, but faith will there descry the print of the Redeemer's foot, who trode that very path to glory above, and who calls us to "follow him," that where he is there we may be also. —Scott.

Miracles attending our Savior's Passion.

RECORDED IN PROFANE HISTORY.

Phlegon, A. D. 138, says Jesus Christ, according to the prophecies which had before spoken of him, came to his Passion in the eighteenth year of Tiberius, at which time in other, even in heathen memoirs, we find it written to this purpose: "There was an eclipse of the sun, Bithynia was shaken by an earthquake, and in the city of Nice many houses were overturned."

It may be doubted, perhaps, whether these memoirs record or relate to the miracles attending our Lord's Passion; but there are other references more distinct and reliable, particularly that of Tertullian in his Apology for the Christians against the Heathen, the most eloquent and powerful defence of the christian religion which had then been written. It was addressed between A. D. 199 and 205 to the Roman provincial govincial governor. Tertullian declares that Pontius Pilate was constrained, by the malicious machinations of the Jews, to devote Jesus Christ to death upon the cross; that there he soon gave up the ghost, and prevented the office of the executioner, and then adds, "At the same time, while the sun was yet mid heaven, the light of heaven was withdrawn, insomuch that they who knew not that this had been predicted of Christ, supposed it to be an eclipse. And yet this catastrophe of the world you yourselves have recorded in your own archives."

Again: Lucien, the martyr of Antioch, in his Apology, addressed to the Emperor Maximinus, A. D. 312, says: "Look into your own annals. There you will find that in the time of Pilate, when Christ suffered, the sun was obscured, and the light of day was interrupted with darkness."

It is well known that the Romans carefully preserved public annals of current events occurring not only at Rome, but in the provinces of the empire. In the opinion of the learned, therefore, these apologists here make their confident appeal to such public records, in attestation of those which attended the death of Jesus Christ, as related by the evangelists." Divers of the most remarkable circumstances attending our Savior's crucifixion," says the learned Dr. Samuel Clarke, "were recorded in the public Roman registers, and earnestly appealed to by the first christians, as what would not be denied by the adversaries themselves." Grotius also declares that there were not only private histories, like that of Phlegon, but public records, to which christians were accustomed to appeal, not only in attestation of the star which appeared after the birth of Christ, but of the earthquake and the miraculous darkness which occurred about the time of his crucifixion.—American Presbyterian.

HOW TO GET RID OF TROUBLE.—To shake off trouble we must set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat, and go and visit the poor; inquire into their wants and administer unto them; seek out the desolate and oppressed, and tell them of the consolation of religion. I have often tried this, and found it the best medicine for a heavy heart.—Howard, the Philanthropist.

You need not break the glasses of a telescope, or coat them over with paint, in order to prevent you from seeing through them. Just breathe upon them, and the dew of your breath will shut out all the stars.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: $2.26 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 161. BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 6, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 5.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

ON THE DEATH OF MARY EMELINE SLATER.

Afflicted parents, dry the tear,
And put your trust in God,
And let his promise ever cheer
Under the chastening rod.
Oh, put your trust in him alone,
He'll wipe your tears away,
He's promised e'er to keep his own,
If they will watch and pray.

O weep not that her fragile form
Is in the grave so deep;
For Mary 'll yet in beauty bloom,
No more in death to sleep.
She sleeps in Jesus—sweet the rest—
Far from a world of pain;
No mortal cares distress her breast,
Nor sickness racks her frame.

Then let your hearts refrain from grief;
This lifeless lump of clay
Will from death's fetters find relief
In the resurrection day.
And may you both be ready when
Our Savior shall appear,
To meet your little Mary there,
In a better happier sphere.

MARY L. PRATT.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

"In Every Thing give Thanks."

What! in every thing? Yes; whether joy or sorrow, whatever be thy lot, give thanks. What though all look dark and dreary; though friends forsake, and the loved of earth pass from our sight; though this cold world make us feel the force of its blasts and storms; though poverty show us her wan face, and those we love turn coldly away; still give thanks. I know when the clouds of adversity roll over the mind's sky, and the weary heart seems breaking, these words would seem but the voice of indifference; but hath not He who ruleth the nations said; "all things shall work together for good to them that love God?" Then, weary-hearted one, remember this, and also remember, first the cross, then the crown; first the briars and thorns, then the roses and lilies; first the hill Difficulty, "then the plain Beulah." And should we not give thanks that we are counted worthy to suffer affliction with the people of God, like Moses, than left to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season?

We shall not always suffer. He who hath said, "Behold I come quickly," will soon fulfill his declaration, and then and a crown of righteousness which fadeth not away. If joy shall crown thy pathway, and all shall seem to be peace, then "remember thy Creator" and give him thanks. Though all may seem to be happiness now, it will not always stay; then give thanks to God; acquaint thyself with him, and be at peace.

"Rest for the weary, there's rest for you,"

But, says the natural heart of man, shall I give thanks for all these clouds of affliction that roll over my soul? Perhaps a wife may be mourning the loss of one whom she loved of all on earth the best; a fond brother weeping o'er the lovely form of a sister, laid to sleep in youthful innocence and beauty beneath the cold ground. A mother weeping o'er the loved form of an only child. These are the scenes that try the soul. Or even worse than this; perhaps some of these loved ones are reprobates from the cause of truth and virtue, wanderers from God, rushing onward to destruction, regardless of the prayers and tears of those who love them. Shall I give thanks for this, says the breaking heart? Yes. "God's ways are not our ways." We make earthly idols of those we love often, and in love for the creature forget the Creator. Let us trust in Him who "doeth all things well," and we shall at last be found of Him in peace.

"Leave to his sovereign sway,
To rule and to command;
So shalt thou wondering own his way,
How strong, how wise his hand."

MARY E. SWEETLAND.

Springfield, Mass., Sept.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.—I have been cured of expecting the Holy Spirit's influence without due preparation on our part, by observing how men preach who take up that error. I have heard such talk nonsense by the hour.—Cecil.

For the Crisis.

This World and the World to Come.

In this world we are inhabitants of a land groaning under the curse of God; a land bringing forth thorns and thistles, and abounding in all manner of sin and persecution, where satan is continually tempting us to commit some evil, and ever striving to overcome all our efforts to do good. Here we see men continually striving to gain the wealth of this world, and honor from its inhabitants; ever seeking to add to their earthly treasures, without even desiring to lay up treasures in heaven, as Christ has commanded them; ever striving to gain possession of the hard earned fruits of the daily toil of the poor, which is their whole living, instead of giving to the poor of their own abundance, and thereby lending to the Lord. Instead of seeing men girded in sackcloth, and repenting in dust and ashes of their sins and transgressions against God, we see them arrayed in gorgeous apparel, and waiting upon the most popular church in town—the most popular, because it requires its members to perform the least of Jesus' requirements; because its members are rich enough to pay a crafty priest for making all the prayers which they consider necessary for the whole church—prayers which will avail them nothing when the reapers are sent forth to gather the wheat into the garners, and burn the tares with unquenchable fire.

Here God's poor waiting ones are obliged to toil incessantly beneath the frowns and sneers of those who hire their praying done, for a few comforts of this life, and, many of them, to keep their families from actual starvation. Such bless God for the privilege of praying for themselves. They are thankful that they are permitted to pour their tale of woe into the ear of him who is ever ready to listen, and give peace and encouragement to their troubled hearts. Here all, rich and poor, righteous and wicked, are alike subject to all the evils of a mortal life; to pain, grief, and even death. We are liable at any moment to be deprived of our friends by that cruel foe, death, who often pierces our hearts with the most poignant grief, by removing to the silent tomb those connected with us by the nearest and dearest ties. Here everything is perishable; therefore nothing is perfect. Not only the health, beauty, and life of man, but everything that is pleasing to the eye or taste, is also changeable and perishable. Man sees something displeasing, as well as pleasing, in everything; therefore we find no perfect enjoyment here, no lasting happiness. Consequently we are inclined to look to a higher source of happiness; consequently we pray "Thy kingdom come," and look forward to that glorious time when this earth shall be purified, and paradise restored; when Jesus shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise; and they, together with the humble, patient ones, who are still waiting and watching for him here, shall be caught up to meet him in the air, and ever remain in his blessed presence.

There God shall wipe from our eyes every tear, and we shall weep no more, neither sorrow any more. There we shall have an immortal body, which will not be subject to pain, disease, decay and death; but will ever be in a perfect state. There we shall wear the never-fading crown of righteousness upon our heads; and in our hands we shall hold golden harps, and ever sing praises to Jesus, who will be our King. We shall meet around the throne of God with all the faithful lovers of God, with all our friends who have died in the faith, with all the good old patriarchs and prophets, who suffered, and fought, and bled, in the olden time, for the cause of God. The meek and lowly apostles left all and followed Jesus immediately at his command, and were willing to endure anything, and everything, for his sake. The heroic martyrs, who rather than renounce Jesus as their Savior, suffered the most excruciating torments and death. All, who have fulfilled the commandments of God, and been willing to own Jesus as their Lord and Redeemer; all who have been willing to accept of his salvation freely offered, will be there—a perfect, happy company, with nothing to disturb their perfect harmony. Satan will not be there to sow the seeds of discord, and lay snares and temptations in our way. The wicked will not be there to persecute and oppress us. All will be perfect harmony, and each and every one will rejoice and sing praises to God forever more. There we shall roam over blissful fields, and pick never-fading flowers, and never be weary, oppressed or care worn, but ever rejoicing in the glory of God. There we shall bathe in the river of life, which proceedeth out of the throne of God. There we shall pick fruit from the tree of life, which beareth twelve manner of fruit, and yields her fruit every month; and we shall be under no curse there, and there shall be no night, but the glory of God shall give us light forever more.

O, is not eternal life, and a right to that blissful country, that glorious city, worth asking for? Is it not worth striving for? Is it not a sufficient reward for the trials and persecutions which we endure here? Yea, we shall ever praise and bless our Heavenly Father for his tender and all-sufficient mercy and goodness, in sending his beloved and only Son Jesus, into the world, to suffer an ignominious death for us sinful, death-deserving creatures, and thereby offering us free salvation.

MRS. W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Gems.

The love of God dwelling in the heart of the regenerate in this cold world.

"God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."—1 John 4: 16.

At the North Pole there is an open sea, without an iceberg, or ice of any description to be seen upon its bosom, as Mr. Morton, of Dr. Kane's expedition, the discoverer, remarked, though at the time a strong wind was blowing directly from the North. There are also flocks of fowl brooding over the waters of that far off sea, giving animation and life to the scene. This open sea at the North is accounted for by the gulf stream, flowing deep in the ocean, and carrying far northward the warm waters of southern climes, and the regular circulation of the great waters of the globe, as that of the winds: "The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits. All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again."—Eccl. 1: 6, 7.

So with the soul "that dwelleth in love." He may be surrounded completely with a cold and heartless world; cut off even from all communication with warmer hearts; yet the warm gulf stream of God's love flows down deep into the soul, melting and dissipating the icebergs of selfishness and hate; and the spirit of God, like a dove, broods over the heart, quickening and animating all into life and immortal hope.

Christian stability and fixedness.

"My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed."—Ps. 57: 7.

Some rivers run northward; and in the northern regions, this is so both summer and winter. The summer's drought, nor the winter chill does not make them to cease their onward flow to the ocean. The summer's heat and drought may cause them to flow more sluggish, from less supply of waters from their various tributaries; and the winter's frosts and cold encase them in ice. Yet obstructed as they may be, they flow onward still, till their waters mingle with the ocean, or larger streams, and these with the ocean. So is the heart fixed on God and heaven:—the burning, scorching suns of persecution, trial and adversity, nor the chill, cold ice-damp of formalism and declension cannot obstruct their christian progress. Onward they move, until they reach the bosom of God, and the eternal joys at his "right hand."

O. R. FASSETT.

☞ No man will ever go to heaven who has not sent his heart thither before him.

For the Crisis.

The Divine Test.—2 KINGS 20: 1–18.

God must be acknowledged in his Word and Work.

Our city and our country, nay, the whole Anglo-Saxon race, have been jubilant over the successful laying of the Cable, by the agents of the Atlantic Telegraph Company. This seems rational; but yet it is our duty to contemplate this almost incredible consummation in the light of Holy Scripture. Unbelief is always blind to all that relates to our present and most important relations to God. We all have sung,

"Blind unbelief is sure to err
And scan his work in vain;
God is his own interpreter,
And he doth make it plain.

Each epoch in our world's history has had its crowning event—its turning point; and as it is regarded by men, in its relations to God, and "his goings forth from of old," they are godly or ungodly.

The divine test has been so applied by himself in various instances, as to make it absolutely determinate, and palpably plain. The godly see the presence and power of God demonstrated in his fulfillment of his prophetic word; but the ungodly, who disbelieve his word, see not the divine hand in its accomplishment. To them it is only "the wonders done in the land;" but it is "the wonder" as associated with the doings of man. Human skill and prowess is their theme of admiration; and when God is referred to, it is subordinately as the absent, distant creator, whose immediate and real recognition in his purpose would mar their triumph.

This test, showing that nothing short of an intelligent and avowed faith in God's word, and in his own agency, which secures its accomplishment, appears in the history of Hezekiah, king of Judah.—2 Kings 20. This chapter records Hezekiah's sickness unto death—the prophet's warning from God to him—and his humiliation before God, and miraculous restoration to health. "The sign" of this restoration from a deadly sickness, and the lengthening of his life "fifteen years," was the turning back of the sun's "shadow ten degrees (or five hours) on the dial of Ahaz." The time of this healing is determined by "the third day," within which he should "go up to the house of the Lord;" and the length of his life, by the fifteen years. The time is given also for the captivity, afterwards announced, as a punishment for Hezekiah's pride of heart, and his non-acknowledgement of God, as to the wonders done in the land."—2 Chron. 32: 31; 2 Kings 20: 17, 18; 24: 11; Ezek. 4: 5—390 days. Dan. 9: 1–3—70 years. Amidst these eventful scenes, the Lord destroyed the Assyrian army—185,000, and Senacherib their king; which opened the way for Babylon, hitherto a city and province, to become "The Lady of kingdoms." The king of Babylon mounted the tide raised by these movements of the Almighty. He gloried over Assyria's decline. He pampered the pride of Hezekiah; and honored him as one honored by the gods, and made the victor over their common rival, Senacherib, whose pomp and power had perished with his army. Hezekiah was the observed of all observers. "He was magnified in the sight of all nations."—2 Chron. 32: 21–25. But "his heart was lifted up, and he returned not (an acknowledgement) according to the benefit done to him."

His sin lay in not acknowledging God, in not showing his word, and the accomplishment of it, as the proof of his presence and supremacy. This was then the grand question—"Who is the Lord?" who is supreme? And this point, that Jehovah is supreme, could never have been demonstrated better than by this king of Israel. But he did not acknowledge him by saying "Our God is the Living and only true God." He promised all these "wonders." He has been faithful, and has fulfilled them; and all these things demonstrate "his power and Godhead, so that (all unbelievers) are without excuse." Instead of this, he accepted the sympathy of the Babylonian ambassadors, as shown to himself, and so God was omitted, disowned and dishonored by his chosen "witnesses." Hence the doom pronounced.

Every epoch has had its peculiar prophecies, and their actual accomplishment. They have embraced the whole course of human affairs, political and religious. Thus it was at the close of the captivity. Thus it was at the first coming of Christ—at the destruction of Jerusalem—the rise of Papacy, and the close of his "1260 years," at the French Revolution; and thus it has been through our age of "wonders," by the rush "to and fro," with "increase of knowledge." The present argument from the word of God, and its fulfillment, extends through six thousand years; and now embracing the facts of all other eras, they seem to be converging to a point in the crowning consummation of "the Great Day of God Almighty."

"The wonder" of this age is the Atlantic Telegraph. Just now it seems the crowning event. But while "the word of the Lord" locates this in the grand series, (Dan. 12,) and thus demonstrates the approaching "end" (of the apostacy, &c.,) our Hezekiahs, in church and state, join in one grand jubilee with the "ambassadors of Babylon" God is indeed sometimes named; but never as to "his Word," in its relations to "the end;" and his presence and providence, which demonstrate his faithfulness to bring "the end," as revealed.

The popular mind honors man, but ignores God in this achievement, save as God is above, or outside, or subordinate. It is man whose wisdom and skill shine forth. It is man's "kingdom and dominion" over matter and time that is thought to be advancing toward a complete supremacy. True, many allow it to assume an ecclesiastical form; still man is the mighty and honored administrator. Man's plan, man's prowess, and his future purpose is the primal theme of triumphant exultation; and this is "Babylon the Great."—Rev. 18.

The Lord was "The First and Last—Alpha and Omega," in the time of Hezekiah. He spoke of health to the sick—long life to the dying—of the sun's shadow going back ten degrees on the dial of Ahaz—of the Assyrian's destruction. Nay, his was "the excellency of the power" to perform all this. The plan was divine. It was to carry forward his all-comprehending purpose; and man was to see God as supreme, and follow his lead.

Faith sees and owns God. Faith in his word, as it applies to our time, or the time of Hezekiah, gives him supremacy. It is God who speaks in promise or prophecy. It is God who fulfils it, by whatever agency may be employed. In this the King of Judah failed. In this the leaders of this generation fail. The "four" Gentile kingdoms are accomplished. The last symbolic form of the fourth and last is nearly exhausted; and here God has revealed that "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased in the time of the END!" It is as we approach the resurrection—the kingdom of God; or the times of the restitution of all things." Dan. 12; Acts 3.

The Telegraph enterprise belongs to this time; and all the rapid strides in human progress is the signal—the sign—that God is about to "end" the dominion of man. Then the kingdom of God will have come. Weighed in the balance, this king of Judah was found wanting. He did not, to the ambassadors of the king of Babylon, acknowledge God in his word of promise, and his work of power. This was then the demonstration of his presence and his supremacy. All prayers, and zeal, and sacrifice, by Hezekiah, failed to atone for this great sin. Hence the doom of that people was sealed—for captivity and spoil.

The leaders of the church now accept of the Telegraph in its human aspect—its relation to commerce, civilization and progress in church and state. Thus God, in his revealed purpose to establish his kingdom, is ignored! "The sign"—"the wonder of the age," is made to pamper human pride. But a few, however, see "the sign." It is God's sign, not of human triumph, but of his own kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven.—Dan. 7: 27. "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation"—by the outward show of [illegible] progress, and religious [illegible].

No, no: the kingdom will be [illegible] by "the last, the 7th [illegible]" [illegible] by the appearing of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. "The kingdoms of men," the religion of men, will give place to the kingdom and religion of heaven. Thus it is written, and thus it must be. The kingdoms of this world will (at the 7th trump) become our Lord's and his Christ's.—Rev. 11: 15–18. The demonstration of this—the proof that God has spoken "the word," and will be faithful in its accomplishment, is found in facts like these, that at the time of the end, many shall run to and fro, and knowledge (shall) increase. This was foretold 2,400 years ago. The time named was our time. Thus it is located in the outline of all symbolic and verbal prophecy; and thus this age of progress is (in its relations) "the sign" that he will perform his promise as to the end of man's government, and the establishment of the kingdom of heaven. The Jews had a sign. Hezekiah had a sign. All ages have had their signs. And these signs are but facts that fulfill the foregoing "word of God." These facts embrace all "the wonders of the age."

God's purpose is supreme. All Hezekiah's plans for national aggrandisement—all Assyria's plans—all the plans of Babylon herself, were nothing in competition with God. All alike failed to inaugurate a permanent policy. Their glory was as the grass, and the flower of the field, that passeth away, (with the season that gave them birth.) But the word of the Lord liveth and abideth forever.—1 Pet. 1: 23–25

The faith that saves is not based on general principles of religious truth, and the moral fitness of things. No: faith lays hold of, relies on, and delights in the living word of the living God, as it is being accomplished in the living movements of our time. Thus "it was in the days of Noah," of Joshua, of Hezekiah, at the first advent, and through all ages of the past. Thus it is now. "The Lamp" of Life that reveals this living operation of the living God, is "the sure word of prophecy." In taking heed to its teaching, we see the stately steppings of the Most High. In confessing the word, and co-operating with this work, we "walk with God." Thus did Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and all the godly; but this, Ezra, the Jews, with their scribes and priests, and the great mass of professing christians, fail to do. For this there was wrath from the Lord against Hezekiah and the Jews; and soon there will be against the apostacy of this dispensation.

The Jews, at the first advent—Hezekiah, amid the "wonders" of his time—did not deny God to human view. No: they worshiped God, and went through all the forms of devotion; but it was no offence to him. God must be known, and acknowledged in his "present truth," and in his present work. Amen. All else makes "the ambassadors of the king of Babylon." The Jews "compassed sea and land to make proselytes," but converts made thus were "two fold more the children of hell than themselves." Our Hezekiahs and scribes seem wavering and declining toward Babylon. Hence we need first of all to "take heed to ourselves, strengthen the things that remain and are ready to die."

Love for souls is not blind, but [illegible] by believing the truth of God. Without this faith in God's present truth and [illegible] ration, we ourselves are sinking [illegible] so far in the prevailing apostasy, and need to be "converted." The beam in our eye must come out ere we get the mote out of our neighbor's eye. Nothing we do [illegible] avail for good to them, or glory for God, while we fail to see and own his [illegible] his faithfulness and power, now in fulfilling his word. One convert made truly to God is worth more, even now, than all Hezekiah's honors and favors [illegible] from Babylon's ambassadors. If we fail in our efforts to convert, while acting up to the word and work of God, we shall still be a sweet savor unto him, [illegible] 2 Cor. 2: [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] not see God [illegible] [illegible] perish.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 161. BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 6, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 5.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

ON THE DEATH OF MARY EMELINE SLATER.

Afflicted parents, dry the tear,
And put your trust in God,
And let his promise ever cheer
Under the chastening rod.
Oh, put your trust in him alone,
He'll wipe your tears away,
He's promised e'er to keep his own,
If they will watch and pray.

O weep not that her fragile form
Is in the grave so deep;
For Mary 'll yet in beauty bloom,
No more in death to sleep.
She sleeps in Jesus—sweet the rest—
Far from a world of pain;
No mortal cares distress her breast,
Nor sickness racks her frame.

Then let your hearts refrain from grief;
This lifeless lump of clay
Will from death's fetters find relief
In the resurrection day.
And may you both be ready when
Our Savior shall appear,
To meet your little Mary there,
In a better happier sphere.

MARY L. PRATT.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

"In Every Thing give Thanks."

What! in every thing? Yes; whether joy or sorrow, whatever be thy lot, give thanks. What though all look dark and dreary; though friends forsake, and the loved of earth pass from our sight; though this cold world make us feel the force of its blasts and storms; though poverty show us her wan face, and those we love turn coldly away; still give thanks. I know when the clouds of adversity roll over the mind's sky, and the weary heart seems breaking, these words would seem but the voice of indifference; but hath not He who ruleth the nations said; "all things shall work together for good to them that love God?" Then, weary-hearted one, remember this, and also remember, first the cross, then the crown; first the briars and thorns, then the roses and lilies; first the hill Difficulty, "then the plain Beulah." And should we not give thanks that we are counted worthy to suffer affliction with the people of God, like Moses, than left to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season?

We shall not always suffer. He who hath said, "Behold I come quickly," will soon fulfill his declaration, and then and a crown of righteousness which fadeth not away. If joy shall crown thy pathway, and all shall seem to be peace, then "remember thy Creator" and give him thanks. Though all may seem to be happiness now, it will not always stay; then give thanks to God; acquaint thyself with him, and be at peace.

"Rest for the weary, there's rest for you,"

But, says the natural heart of man, shall I give thanks for all these clouds of affliction that roll over my soul? Perhaps a wife may be mourning the loss of one whom she loved of all on earth the best; a fond brother weeping o'er the lovely form of a sister, laid to sleep in youthful innocence and beauty beneath the cold ground. A mother weeping o'er the loved form of an only child. These are the scenes that try the soul. Or even worse than this; perhaps some of these loved ones are reprobates from the cause of truth and virtue, wanderers from God, rushing onward to destruction, regardless of the prayers and tears of those who love them. Shall I give thanks for this, says the breaking heart? Yes. "God's ways are not our ways." We make earthly idols of those we love often, and in love for the creature forget the Creator. Let us trust in Him who "doeth all things well," and we shall at last be found of Him in peace.

"Leave to his sovereign sway,
To rule and to command;
So shalt thou wondering own his way,
How strong, how wise his hand."

MARY E. SWEETLAND.

Springfield, Mass., Sept.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.—I have been cured of expecting the Holy Spirit's influence without due preparation on our part, by observing how men preach who take up that error. I have heard such talk nonsense by the hour.—Cecil.

For the Crisis.

This World and the World to Come.

In this world we are inhabitants of a land groaning under the curse of God; a land bringing forth thorns and thistles, and abounding in all manner of sin and persecution, where satan is continually tempting us to commit some evil, and ever striving to overcome all our efforts to do good. Here we see men continually striving to gain the wealth of this world, and honor from its inhabitants; ever seeking to add to their earthly treasures, without even desiring to lay up treasures in heaven, as Christ has commanded them; ever striving to gain possession of the hard earned fruits of the daily toil of the poor, which is their whole living, instead of giving to the poor of their own abundance, and thereby lending to the Lord. Instead of seeing men girded in sackcloth, and repenting in dust and ashes of their sins and transgressions against God, we see them arrayed in gorgeous apparel, and waiting upon the most popular church in town—the most popular, because it requires its members to perform the least of Jesus' requirements; because its members are rich enough to pay a crafty priest for making all the prayers which they consider necessary for the whole church—prayers which will avail them nothing when the reapers are sent forth to gather the wheat into the garners, and burn the tares with unquenchable fire.

Here God's poor waiting ones are obliged to toil incessantly beneath the frowns and sneers of those who hire their praying done, for a few comforts of this life, and, many of them, to keep their families from actual starvation. Such bless God for the privilege of praying for themselves. They are thankful that they are permitted to pour their tale of woe into the ear of him who is ever ready to listen, and give peace and encouragement to their troubled hearts. Here all, rich and poor, righteous and wicked, are alike subject to all the evils of a mortal life; to pain, grief, and even death. We are liable at any moment to be deprived of our friends by that cruel foe, death, who often pierces our hearts with the most poignant grief, by removing to the silent tomb those connected with us by the nearest and dearest ties. Here everything is perishable; therefore nothing is perfect. Not only the health, beauty, and life of man, but everything that is pleasing to the eye or taste, is also changeable and perishable. Man sees something displeasing, as well as pleasing, in everything; therefore we find no perfect enjoyment here, no lasting happiness. Consequently we are inclined to look to a higher source of happiness; consequently we pray "Thy kingdom come," and look forward to that glorious time when this earth shall be purified, and paradise restored; when Jesus shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise; and they, together with the humble, patient ones, who are still waiting and watching for him here, shall be caught up to meet him in the air, and ever remain in his blessed presence.

There God shall wipe from our eyes every tear, and we shall weep no more, neither sorrow any more. There we shall have an immortal body, which will not be subject to pain, disease, decay and death; but will ever be in a perfect state. There we shall wear the never-fading crown of righteousness upon our heads; and in our hands we shall hold golden harps, and ever sing praises to Jesus, who will be our King. We shall meet around the throne of God with all the faithful lovers of God, with all our friends who have died in the faith, with all the good old patriarchs and prophets, who suffered, and fought, and bled, in the olden time, for the cause of God. The meek and lowly apostles left all and followed Jesus immediately at his command, and were willing to endure anything, and everything, for his sake. The heroic martyrs, who rather than renounce Jesus as their Savior, suffered the most excruciating torments and death. All, who have fulfilled the commandments of God, and been willing to own Jesus as their Lord and Redeemer; all who have been willing to accept of his salvation freely offered, will be there—a perfect, happy company, with nothing to disturb their perfect harmony. Satan will not be there to sow the seeds of discord, and lay snares and temptations in our way. The wicked will not be there to persecute and oppress us. All will be perfect harmony, and each and every one will rejoice and sing praises to God forever more. There we shall roam over blissful fields, and pick never-fading flowers, and never be weary, oppressed or care worn, but ever rejoicing in the glory of God. There we shall bathe in the river of life, which proceedeth out of the throne of God. There we shall pick fruit from the tree of life, which beareth twelve manner of fruit, and yields her fruit every month; and we shall be under no curse there, and there shall be no night, but the glory of God shall give us light forever more.

O, is not eternal life, and a right to that blissful country, that glorious city, worth asking for? Is it not worth striving for? Is it not a sufficient reward for the trials and persecutions which we endure here? Yea, we shall ever praise and bless our Heavenly Father for his tender and all-sufficient mercy and goodness, in sending his beloved and only Son Jesus, into the world, to suffer an ignominious death for us sinful, death-deserving creatures, and thereby offering us free salvation.

MRS. W. P. WENTWORTH.

La Fayette, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Gems.

The love of God dwelling in the heart of the regenerate in this cold world.

"God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."—1 John 4: 16.

At the North Pole there is an open sea, without an iceberg, or ice of any description to be seen upon its bosom, as Mr. Morton, of Dr. Kane's expedition, the discoverer, remarked, though at the time a strong wind was blowing directly from the North. There are also flocks of fowl brooding over the waters of that far off sea, giving animation and life to the scene. This open sea at the North is accounted for by the gulf stream, flowing deep in the ocean, and carrying far northward the warm waters of southern climes, and the regular circulation of the great waters of the globe, as that of the winds: "The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits. All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again."—Eccl. 1: 6, 7.

So with the soul "that dwelleth in love." He may be surrounded completely with a cold and heartless world; cut off even from all communication with warmer hearts; yet the warm gulf stream of God's love flows down deep into the soul, melting and dissipating the icebergs of selfishness and hate; and the spirit of God, like a dove, broods over the heart, quickening and animating all into life and immortal hope.

Christian stability and fixedness.

"My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed."—Ps. 57: 7.

Some rivers run northward; and in the northern regions, this is so both summer and winter. The summer's drought, nor the winter chill does not make them to cease their onward flow to the ocean. The summer's heat and drought may cause them to flow more sluggish, from less supply of waters from their various tributaries; and the winter's frosts and cold encase them in ice. Yet obstructed as they may be, they flow onward still, till their waters mingle with the ocean, or larger streams, and these with the ocean. So is the heart fixed on God and heaven:—the burning, scorching suns of persection, trial and adversity, nor the chill, cold ice-damp of formalism and declension cannot obstruct their christian progress. Onward they move, until they reach the bosom of God, and the eternal joys at his "right hand."

O. R. FASSETT.

☞ No man will ever go to heaven who has not sent his heart thither before him.

For the Crisis.

The Divine Test.—2 KINGS 20: 1–18.

God must be acknowledged in his Word and Work.

Our city and our country, nay, the whole Anglo-Saxon race, have been jubilant over the successful laying of the Cable, by the agents of the Atlantic Telegraph Company. This seems rational; but yet it is our duty to contemplate this almost incredible consummation in the light of Holy Scripture. Unbelief is always blind to all that relates to our present and most important relations to God. We all have sung,

"Blind unbelief is sure to err
And scan his work in vain;
God is his own interpreter,
And he doth make it plain.

Each epoch in our world's history has had its crowning event—its turning point; and as it is regarded by men, in its relations to God, and "his goings forth from of old," they are godly or ungodly.

The divine test has been so applied by himself in various instances, as to make it absolutely determinate, and palpably plain. The godly see the presence and power of God demonstrated in his fulfillment of his prophetic word; but the ungodly, who disbelieve his word, see not the divine hand in its accomplishment. To them it is only "the wonders done in the land;" but it is "the wonder" as associated with the doings of man. Human skill and prowess is their theme of admiration; and when God is referred to, it is subordinately as the absent, distant creator, whose immediate and real recognition in his purpose would mar their triumph.

This test, showing that nothing short of an intelligent and avowed faith in God's word, and in his own agency, which secures its accomplishment, appears in the history of Hezekiah, king of Judah.—2 Kings 20. This chapter records Hezekiah's sickness unto death—the prophet's warning from God to him—and his humiliation before God, and miraculous restoration to health. "The sign" of this restoration from a deadly sickness, and the lengthening of his life "fifteen years," was the turning back of the sun's "shadow ten degrees (or five hours) on the dial of Ahaz." The time of this healing is determined by "the third day," within which he should "go up to the house of the Lord;" and the length of his life, by the fifteen years. The time is given also for the captivity, afterwards announced, as a punishment for Hezekiah's pride of heart, and his non-acknowledgement of God, as to the wonders done in the land."—2 Chron. 32: 31; 2 Kings 20: 17, 18; 24: 11; Ezek. 4: 5—390 days. Dan. 9: 1–3—70 years. Amidst these eventful scenes, the Lord destroyed the Assyrian army—185,000, and Senacherib their king; which opened the way for Babylon, hitherto a city and province, to become "The Lady of kingdoms." The king of Babylon mounted the tide raised by these movements of the Almighty. He gloried over Assyria's decline. He pampered the pride of Hezekiah; and honored him as one honored by the gods, and made the victor over their common rival, Senacherib, whose pomp and power had perished with his army. Hezekiah was the observed of all observers. "He was magnified in the sight of all nations."—2 Chron. 32: 21–25. But "his heart was lifted up, and he returned not (an acknowledgement) according to the benefit done to him."

His sin lay in not acknowledging God, in not showing his word, and the accomplishment of it, as the proof of his presence and supremacy. This was then the grand question—"Who is the Lord?" who is supreme? And this point, that Jehovah is supreme, could never have been demonstrated better than by this king of Israel. But he did not acknowledge him by saying "Our God is the Living and only true God." He promised all these "wonders." He has been faithful, and has fulfilled them; and all these things demonstrate "his power and Godhead, so that (all unbelievers) are without excuse." Instead of this, he accepted the sympathy of the Babylonian ambassadors, as shown to himself, and so God was omitted, disowned and dishonored by his chosen "witnesses." Hence the doom pronounced.

Every epoch has had its peculiar prophecies, and their actual accomplishment. They have embraced the whole course of human affairs, political and religious. Thus it was at the close of the captivity. Thus it was at the first coming of Christ—at the destruction of Jerusalem—the rise of Papacy, and the close of his "1260 years," at the French Revolution; and thus it has been through our age of "wonders," by the rush "to and fro," with "increase of knowledge." The present argument from the word of God, and its fulfillment, extends through six thousand years; and now embracing the facts of all other eras, they seem to be converging to a point in the crowning consummation of "the Great Day of God Almighty."

"The wonder" of this age is the Atlantic Telegraph. Just now it seems the crowning event. But while "the word of the Lord" locates this in the grand series, (Dan. 12,) and thus demonstrates the approaching "end" (of the apostacy, &c.,) our Hezekiahs, in church and state, join in one grand jubilee with the "ambassadors of Babylon" God is indeed sometimes named; but never as to "his Word," in its relations to "the end;" and his presence and providence, which demonstrate his faithfulness to bring "the end," as revealed.

The popular mind honors man, but ignores God in this achievement, save as God is above, or outside, or subordinate. It is man whose wisdom and skill shine forth. It is man's "kingdom and dominion" over matter and time that is thought to be advancing toward a complete supremacy. True, many allow it to assume an ecclesiastical form; still man is the mighty and honored administrator. Man's plan, man's prowess, and his future purpose is the primal theme of triumphant exultation; and this is "Babylon the Great."—Rev. 18.

The Lord was "The First and Last—Alpha and Omega," in the time of Hezekiah. He spoke of health to the sick—long life to the dying—of the sun's shadow going back ten degrees on the dial of Ahaz—of the Assyrian's destruction. Nay, his was "the excellency of the power" to perform all this. The plan was divine. It was to carry forward his all-comprehending purpose; and man was to see God as supreme, and follow his lead.

Faith sees and owns God. Faith in his word, as it applies to our time, or the time of Hezekiah, gives him supremacy. It is God who speaks in promise or prophecy. It is God who fulfils it, by whatever agency may be employed. In this the King of Judah failed. In this the leaders of this generation fail. The "four" Gentile kingdoms are accomplished. The last symbolic form of the fourth and last is nearly exhausted; and here God has revealed that "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased in the time of the END!" It is as we approach the resurrection—the kingdom of God; or the times of the restitution of all things." Dan. 12; Acts 3.

The Telegraph enterprise belongs to this time; and all the rapid strides in human progress is the signal—the sign—that God is about to "end" the dominion of man. Then the kingdom of God will have come. Weighed in the balance, this king of Judah was found wanting. He did not, to the ambassadors of the king of Babylon, acknowledge God in his word of promise, and his work of power. This was then the demonstration of his presence and his supremacy. All prayers, and zeal, and sacrifice, by Hezekiah, failed to atone for this great sin. Hence the doom of that people was sealed—for captivity and spoil.

The leaders of the church now accept of the Telegraph in its human aspect—its relation to commerce, civilization and progress in church and state. Thus God, in his revealed purpose to establish his kingdom, is ignored! "The sign"—"the wonder of the age," is made to pamper human pride. But a few, however, see "the sign." It is God's sign, not of human triumph, but of his own kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven.—Dan. 7: 27.

"The kingdom of God cometh not with observation"—by the outward show of scientific progress, and [illegible]

No, no: the kingdom will be [illegible] by "the last, the 7th trump," [illegible] by the appearing of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. "The kingdom of men," the religion of man, will give place to the kingdom and religion of heaven. Thus it is written, and thus it must be. The kingdoms of this world will (at the 7th trump) become our Lord's and his Christ's.—Rev. 11: 15–18. The demonstration of this—the proof that God has spoken "the word," and will be faithful in its accomplishment, is found in facts like these, that at the time of the end, many shall run to and fro, and knowledge (shall) increase. This was foretold 2,400 years ago. The time named was our time. Thus it is located in the outline of all symbolic and verbal prophecy; and thus this age of progress is (in its relations) "the sign" that he will perform his promise as to the end of man's government, and the establishment of the kingdom of heaven. The Jews had a sign. Hezekiah had a sign. All ages have had their signs. And these signs are but facts that fulfill the foregoing "word of God." These facts embrace all "the wonders of the age."

God's purpose is supreme. All Hezekiah's plans for national aggrandizement—all Assyria's plans—all the plans of Babylon herself, were nothing in competition with God. All alike failed to inaugurate a permanent policy. Their glory was as the grass, and the flower of the field, that passeth away, (with the season that gave them birth.) But the word of the Lord liveth and abideth forever.—1 Pet. 1: 23–25

The faith that saves is not based on general principles of religious truth, and the moral fitness of things. Nay, faith lays hold of, relies on, and delights in the living word of the living God, as it is being accomplished in the living movements of our time. Thus "it was in the days of Noah," of Joshua, of Hezekiah, at the first advent, and through all ages of the past. Thus it is now. "The Lamp" of Life that reveals this living operation of the living God, is "the sure word of prophecy." In taking heed to its teaching, we see the stately steppings of the Most High. In confessing the word, and co-operating with this work, we "walk with God." Thus did Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and all the godly; but this, Ezra, the Jews, with their scribes and priests, and the great mass of professing christians, fail to do. For this there was wrath from the Lord against Hezekiah and the Jews; and soon there will be against the apostacy of this dispensation.

The Jews, at the first advent—Hezekiah, amid the "wonders" of his time—did not deny God to human view. No: they worshiped God, and went through all the forms of devotion; but it was no offence to him. God must be known and acknowledged in his "present truth," and in his present work. Amen. All else adopts "the ambassadors of the king of Babylon." The Jews "compassed sea and land to make proselytes," but converts made thus were "two fold more the children of hell than themselves." Our Hezekiahs and scribes seem wavering and declining toward Babylon. Hence we need first of all to "take heed to ourselves, strengthen the things that remain and are ready to die."

Love for souls is not blind; but is implied by believing the truth of God. Without this faith in God's present truth and separation, we ourselves are sinking [illegible] so far in the prevailing apostasy, and need to be "converted." The beam in our eye must come out ere we get the mote out of our neighbor's eye. Nothing we do [illegible] avail for good to man, or glory to God, while we fail to see and own his presence, his faithfulness and power, now in fulfilling his word. One convert made truly to God is worth more, even now, than all Hezekiah's hosts and hecatombs [illegible] Babylon's ambassadors. If we fail in our efforts to convert, while acting up to the word and work of God, we shall still be a sweet savor unto him, and cannot fail of [illegible] 2 Cor. 2: [illegible] persons." [illegible] church or ministry [illegible] not see God [illegible] the [illegible] perish.

For the Crisis.

The Advent.

"Tell us, when shall these things be? and what is the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"

Much is said in relation to the time of our second coming of our blessed Savior. And I have been led to inquire, is it necessary for us, as christians, looking for his immediate coming, to know by any other way than the way set forth in the gospel by Christ and his apostles? Christ has told us plainly that certain signs should precede his coming, and by them we should know that the time was nigh at hand, and it appears to me that all who search the Scriptures to know the will of Christ concerning his children while on probation, desirous also of doing his will, will come to the conclusion at once, while they behold the signs therein set forth, that we are living in the last age of the world: and by comparing prophecy with prophecy, and the fulfillment of the same in the history of the world, and by our own observation and the almost daily evidence which surrounds us; that soon we may expect to hear the cry, Behold the Bridegroom cometh! And though he comes never so suddenly, if we are truly his disciples, we shall have oil in our vessels with our lamps, looking for his appearing; yea, upon the watch tower, waiting to hail his glorious advent.

Brethren and sisters in Christ, are we now at our post, following our glorious Leader in all that pertains to us as faithful soldiers of King Jesus? Are we as faithful as was Noah while building the ark? May the Lord enable us to do every duty, that we may not be found not having on the wedding garment. May all that read these lines be wise unto salvation, that we may all receive immortality when the Lord cometh to reward his saints and make up his jewels.

C. W. Baker.

Vernon, Conn.

For the Crisis.

Haul in your Net.

Yes, you fisherman, you have been dragging that old net for a year without catching a fish, simply because you haven't hauled it in. Do you think to get it full so? They'll run out, dodge under, or escape some way, and you never have them safe till they are hauled ashore. Many a good fish has been lost because the net wasn't hauled in.

Whenever men are preaching the word they should haul in their nets. Give men a chance to start for glory. Ask them to come out and confess Christ. Tell them to stand up for Jesus. Bring them to the standard and to the test. Don't leave the matter undecided. Say to them, how long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God serve him. Do not leave them till they decide. Get them out. Visit them, pray with them, talk with them, try them and see if they'll not confess Jesus—Haul in the net! Get them committed—baptised, enlisted, harnessed, in a word, caught.

See what's in the net. Don't let it drag all over the river and lose all that you ever had in it, for the vain hope of making a big haul. If you have got one or two fish in, haul it in, and then when they are secure try it again. Sometimes you may bring your net ashore full of great fishes, but it is not filled by long dragging. Take a short sweep and then haul the net ashore.

Have you toiled all night and caught nothing? Perhaps you haven't hauled in the net. Try it. You'll find a few fish; by perseverance you will be a successful fisher of men.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Order! Order!!

The Devil and Dr. Faustus, so I was told once, on a certain occasion made a league. The Devil was to bring the Dr. a sieve full of water from the river, and if he could do it the Dr. was to go with him. The Devil tried and failed. Have we not been trying to do the Devil's attempted task about long enough? Can the work of God progress without order? In vain we put the truth into a leaking article. God will not allow New Testament order to be ignored. He is a God of order. We must come into New Testament order or reap the whirlwind. God will bless his own elements of operation. Order has not about with him a choice element in the church. [illegible] Edwin Burnham.

[illegible] is not perhaps [illegible] idolatry to set up a graven [illegible] of a sinless stock or [illegible] to set up his own [illegible] [illegible] will of God.

The World's Crisis.
MILES GRANT, EDITOR.
BOSTON, OCTOBER 6, 1858.
Office... 167 Hanover Street.

Diary Leaves.—No. 3.

We have seldom seen people more anxious to hear and know the truth, than in the section of Vermont we have recently visited. They seem to be famishing for the want of a pure gospel. They have been fed on fables till the breath of life hardly remains. We have no doubt that two weeks' faithful labor would result in a glorious revival of pure religion.

Wednesday evening, Sept. 22. Preached in Slab City, to a crowded house of very attentive hearers.

Thursday evening, 23d. Preached in Mendon. House crowded with people who seemed very anxious to know the truth. People are getting quite dissatisfied with the fables of these last days, as presented by many popular preachers, but seem delighted with the simple and wholesome truth of the Bible, when brought out from beneath the theological rubbish where it has been long buried,

Friday evening, 24th. Preached in the M. E. Church in Chittendon. We had a full house, but apparently, no careless listeners. It was easy speaking, and we hope to hear of good fruit resulting from this meeting.

During the day, we spent some five hours in pleasant conversation with Bro. Henry, a Baptist preacher from Pawtuxet, R. I., on the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked. He treated the subject with more candor than most clergymen, and we have hope that he will yet see these great truths, and preach them to the glory of God. We think there is nothing taught at the present day so dishonoring to God, as the doctrine of eternal misery.

Lord's day, 26th. We spent this day very pleasantly in Poultney, Vt. This is a very pleasant village, about eighteen miles south-west of Rutland, on the railroad from Rutland to Troy. The Troy Conference Academy in this place is a flourishing institution of learning, well conducted by able men. Our meetings were held in Union Hall, formerly known as the Stone Church, a very pleasant and convenient place of worship. Although the Methodists had a campmeeting about seven miles from the place, we had a full house to hear on the reward of the righteous and the punishment of the wicked. We have seldom seen a more intelligent congregation. The first citizens in the place felt it no disgrace to be present, and many went away fully satisfied that they had heard the truth. Before we left the place, we heard them boldly and earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. We hope to hear good tidings from this place. In the evening we listened to an interesting discourse, in the same place, from Bishop Hopkins, on the evidences of christianity.

Monday, 27th. Came home, and attended an excellent prayer meeting at the office. The prayer meetings in Boston seem to be gradually increasing in interest. We hope our brethren visiting the city will attend our prayer meetings, Monday and Thursday evenings.

☞ We are requested to say that religious services are held every Sabbath at the corner of Bleeker and Morton streets, New York. Hours of worship 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. and 3 P. M. Sunday School at 9 A. M. and 1 1-2 P. M. Preaching by Elder Geo. Storrs. Prayer meetings Wednesday evenings. Seats free. M. M. Lawson, Secretary.

We copy the following from their circular:

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

THE BIBLE OUR CREED.

1st.—A Christian Church is a Society of believers in Jesus Christ, assembling in one place for religious worship, and is of Divine institution.

2d.—Christ is the only Head of the Church, and the Word of God the only rule of faith and conduct.

3d.—No person who loves the Lord Jesus Christ, and obeys the Gospel of God our Savior, can be deprived of church membership.

4th.—Every man has an inalienable right to private judgment in matters of religion; and an equal right to express his opinions in any way which will not violate the laws of God, or the rights of his fellow man.

Angels.

We have been requested to give our views of angels. This we have done, to some extent, while speaking of demons, but will make a few additional remarks. We understand,

1. That angels are a class of beings higher than men.

In Ps. 8: 4–8, we read, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet: all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and watsoever passeth though the paths of the sea."

If we turn to Gen. 1: 26, where the Lord proposes to make man, we find him saying, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." This is in complete harmony with the Psalmist.

We are told by the Spiritualists that angels are departed human spirits, and that, consequently, there were no angels till after some "had left the form." But, observe man was made at first, lower than the angels. When building a house, it is not correct to say you are building it lower than another which has no existence. And if, in after years, you put another story upon it, it is still the same house, and not higher than itself, or one never built. So man could not be made lower than the angels when there were none. And when elevated to his future glorified state he is not then an angel, but made "equal" to them. Strange idea, that he should be made equal to himself!

2. From what has been stated, it seems clear that angels existed before the creation of man, and occupied a more elevated position.

3. They are endowed with power and intelligence superior to men. This appears from various accounts of their manifestations to our race. When Peter was imprisoned, bound with chains, and guarded by soldiers, the angel came and broke his fetters, illumined the prison, opened the massive iron gates, and set Peter at liberty. Another rolled the great stone from the door of the sepulchre where our Savior was laid. The angel Gabriel was sent to instruct Daniel and to announce the birth of John the Baptist and Christ. Another came to the aid of Paul, when about to be shipwrecked.

4. The angels were on probation. Hence we read of the "evil angels," "the angels that sinned," and of "the angels which kept not their first estate." We think these scriptures would be inexplicable if we did not admit that angels were on trial.

5. From the foregoing, it follows that there are two classes, the one good and the other bad.

6. The good angels are called "ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." This class have never manifested themselves through mediums,—have never claimed to be departed human spirits.

7. The evil angels are trying to deceive our race, and lead them from the truth of the Bible. This they do by pretending to be the spirits of our friends, whereas, they are our worst enemies.

8. The angels are in form, like men, and have been sometimes mistaken for men. Hence we read, "be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares,"—not etherial, disembodied human spirits. Angels have the power of rendering themselves visible or invisible, to our vision, as did Christ after his resurrection, but have tangible, material organisms. When they visited Lot their feet were washed, "he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat."—Gen. 2, 3. The good angels always come on important business and appear in their own person. They are called the "holy angels," to distinguish them from the demons, or fallen angels, who manifest themselves through mediums.

☞ A babe is a mother's anchor; she cannot go far from her moorings. And yet a true mother never lives so little in the present as when by the side of the cradle. Her thoughts follow the imagined features of the child. The babe is the boldest of pilots, and guides her fearless thoughts down through scenes of coming years.—Selected.

☞ The defects of the mind, like those of the face, grow worse as we grow old.

The Comet.

The comet now seen in the North at evening and morning, is a rare visitor. The questions arise in our minds, what is it? where did it come from? what is its mission? when will it come again? have we any thing to fear from its visit? We have no answer to the first three inquiries. In answer to the inquiry, "when will it come again?" astronomers are not agreed. Some think it may be seen again in about three hundred years. A distinguished American astronomer has calculated the elements of the comet and come to the conclusion that it will not be seen again in several thousand years. If so, the faithful will be at home before we receive another visit from this celestial pilgrim; or as a writer in one of our journals says, "When it comes again, who shall say whether it will be greeted by any of Adam's race, but may not rather come trailing in upon 'a new heaven and a new earth.'"

In answer to the question, "Have we any thing to fear from its visit?" we are told by those best prepared to judge, that there is no cause for any alarm. This comet is called Donati's, and was first seen on its present visit last June. It is said to be about three thousand miles in diameter, which is larger than our moon. Its tail is said to be fifteen millions of miles in length, which would reach around the earth six hundred times. On the 13th of Sept. it was found to be one hundred and twenty millions of miles off, and on the 9th or 10th of Oct., when it will be nearest, its distance from us will be about fifty-two millions of miles. Its velocity at present is about thirty-five miles per second, or one hundred and twenty-six thousand miles per hour, We can form but a faint idea of a body three thousand miles in diameter, traveling with such immense speed. We are startled when the steam engine rushes by at thirty miles per hour, but how puny are the greatest works of man, when compared with those of our Creator. We often wonder that he should take any notice of us, but we are told that, "even the very hairs of your head are all numbered." Ours is a God of wonders, mercy, justice and love. Let us praise him for his marvellous works to the children of men.

Help the Needy.

"I was sick and ye visited me."—Jesus.

We learn that Bro. D. E. Moulton, Worcester, Mass., is still wasting away with consumption, and is needy. The brethren in Worcester are doing what they can, but are not able to do all that is necessary. Who will help make our Bro. and his family comfortable the little time that he may remain to suffer the effects of disease? He has faithfully preached the gospel to others, and shall he not receive of our temporal things, especially in his present situation? If you have no money, send him provision. Do not let it be said to us at last, "I was sick," and ye did not minister unto me.

Direct to D. E. Moulton, Worcester, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Extract.

The following is from Mr. Saurin's sermon on Prov. 28: 23, worthy of the serious consideration of every minister of the gospel.

H. G.

"What idea would you form of us, if while we are exhorting you not to sell the truth, any human motives should induce us to sell it, by avoiding to present portraits too striking, lest any of you should know yourselves again? God forbid we should do so! If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I would not go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to speak less or more. Permit me to forget every interest but that of truth; and to have no object in view but your salvation and our own. And thou, God of truth! fill my mind, during the whole of this sermon, with this exhortation of thine apostle: I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine 2 Tim. 4: 1, 2. Take heed unto thyself and unto thy doctrine; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee.—1 Tim. 4: 16. Amen."

☞ Tears do not dwell long on the cheeks of youth. Rain drops easy from the bud, rests on the bosom of the maturer flowers, and breaks down that which has lived its day.

For the Crisis.

"Deceiving and being Deceived."

It is thought by many, that the great deceptive agent of the last days is, or will be, Spiritualism. It is manifest from its present workings, and from many scriptures it will perform an important part in this work. Other scriptures, however, teach equally definite, that other powers, and those too of a national character, will also take an active part, and perhaps the lead, in deceiving the dwellers upon earth, and thereby prepare them to be overtaken at an instant suddenly, and cut asunder as the enemies of God.

The object of this communication is to throw out some proof that this work of deception has already so far advanced as to justify the children of God in looking for the consummation at any moment.

In the 13th chapter of the book of Revelations we have a historic account of the two last forms of worldly governments in the two beasts there brought to view. In verse 3d we learn, that when "the deadly wound" is healed, "all the world are to wonder after the beast" (i. e., after the beast which heals this deadly wound.) This "wounding" evidently corresponds with the carrying into captivity and "killing with the sword," mentioned in verse 10th, and was fulfilled, as is generally admitted, near the close of the last century, in the overthrow of the Papal beast or head by Napoleon. From verses 12–14 it appears that the healing process, or restoration of the ten-horned beast occurs during the existence and by virtue of the acts of the two-horned beast, which two-horned beast not only causes the ten-horned beast "to live again," but has power to do "great wonders in his sight," by which "the dwellers upon earth are deceived;" amongst which is "the calling of fire down from heaven in the sight of men."

By a careful examination of chapter 17th, it appears that the scarlet colored beast represents the same power as does the two-horned beast, viz., the last form of earthly governments, the one that carries the woman (the papacy) to the judgment. In verses 8th and 11th it is called the "Eighth," and it is said that when the dwellers upon earth behold this beast, that was, is not, and yet is, they shall wonder, (the same as in chap. 13: 3;) which wondering will be caused by the working of those great signs which the two-horned beast has power to do, by which the dwellers upon earth are deceived. One very important point should be carefully noted, which is this, that in the two chapters above quoted from, but two classes of character are brought to view, viz., "Those whose names are written in the book of life," and those "who are not;" the latter are also termed "the dwellers upon earth," and are "to wonder and be deceived;" which facts clothe the subject with immense importance, and should elicit from every honest mind a full and careful examination of the whole subject, that we may know to which class we belong. A mistake will end in our destruction. As to the extent of the dominion of this power, it appears to occupy the entire field of prophecy—the entire earth. Hence all the world are included in it, in some form, and the various acts of the governments and the dwellers upon earth, during its continuance, may be appropriately ascribed to the two-horned beast.

We will now examine at least one of those great signs or wonders to be performed by the two-horned beast, and learn if we can its effects upon the dwellers upon earth. For instance, the magnetic telegraph. A writer in the New York Evangelist, of the 23d inst., in speaking upon this subject, says by the Atlantic Cable, "Briton's lion and America's eagle are united and shall no more bite and devour, but lovingly join in spreading peace on earth and good will to men. God is in this great event—the telegraph triumph. That God and nations are hasting the union of all mankind,—that the lightnings of heaven and the depths of the sea have joined hands to bind all the nations of men into one brotherhood." Another writer in the same paper says, "these cords shall yet vibrate with the grandest tidings that the earth has ever heard, 'that the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and he shall reign forever.' We all remember how, during the last winter, there was flashed along the telegraphic wires, while the whole land was moved with the wonders of God's grace, the message—'And the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, let us go speedily to pray before the Lord and seek the Lord of Hosts. I will go also.' Not Philadelphia to New York only shall send such messages in the day that is drawing nigh, but New York to London, and London to Rome, and Rome to Constantinople, and she to Jerusalem, and Jerusalem to the far cities of the Orient, and they again to this western continent, till the whole round world shall be girt with this one burning thought, Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will towards men." Similar sentiments are uttered by the entire religious press of the land, and much the same by the secular, and are responded to by the world at large.

If the Bible teaches the above anticipations and promises are to be fulfilled through such instrumentalities, then the world is right and are justified in the sight of God in their exultations. But if not, then it is certain the world, the church, the dwellers upon earth, and all who entertain such hopes, are wrong and consequently deceived!!

Again. This calling of fire down from heaven in the sight of men, has caused the dwellers upon earth to "wonder" in so much, the present is familiarly called "an age of wonders." Hence the prophecies of chaps. 13: 3, and 17: 8, are literally fulfilled under the existing dynasties, which hold in their hands the dominion of the earth, which can be no other than the European Alliance, the same that restored the papacy in 1814–15, after it had been killed by a sword and carried into captivity by Napoleon.

In the light of this subject we most clearly see the great work of "deceiving and being deceived" most fearfully accomplished; also we see some of the dangers to which God's people are exposed, and should lose no time in examining ourselves in the light of His word, and learn our true state and standing before it is forever too late.

P. Alling.

Norwalk, O.

Baptism.

[Extracts from Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History.]

"Whoever acknowledged Christ as the Savior of mankind, and made a solemn profession of his confidence in him, was immediately baptized and received into the church." Cent. 1, Book 1, Part 2, Chap. 2, ¶ 7.

"In the earliest times of the church, all who professed firmly to believe that Jesus was the only Redeemer of the world, and who, in consequence of this profession, promised to live in a manner conformable to the purity of his holy religion, were immediately received among the disciples of Christ. This was all the preparation for baptism then required; and a more accurate instruction in the doctrines of christianity was to be administered to them after their reception of that sacrament." Ibid. Chap. 3, ¶ 5.

"The sacrament of baptism was administered in this century, without the public assemblies, in places appointed and prepared for that purpose, and was performed by the immersion of the whole body in the baptismal fount." At first it was usual for all who labored in the propagation of the gospel to be present at the ceremony; and it was also customary, that the converts should be baptized and received into the church by those under whose ministry they had embraced the christian doctrine." Ib. Chap. 4, ¶ 8.

"The sacrament of baptism was administered publicly twice every year, at the festivals of Easter and Pentecost or Whitsuntide, either by the bishop, or in consequence of his authorization and appointment, by the presbyters. The persons that were to be baptized, after they had repeated the creed, confessed and renounced their sins, and particularly the devil and his pompous allurements, were immersed under water, and received into Christ's kingdom by a solemn invocation of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, according to the express command of our blessed Lord." Ib. Century 2, Chap. 4, ¶. 13.

Let the sprinklers of children or of adults meditate upon these testimonies of their own writers, concerning the primitive and apostolic practice of Baptism, and let them go "down into the water" and be "buried with Christ by Baptism into death," and so "fulfill all righteousness," and "walk in newness of life," as those that are alive from the dead.

H. S. H.

☞ Deal gently, deal kindly, deal lovingly, and there is not a wolf in human shape but will be melted by kindness; and there is not a tiger in woman's form but will break down and sue for pardon, if God should bless the love that is brought to bear upon her by her friend.—Spurgeon.

☞ It is stated that Charles Letcher, the printer of the Free Love paper at Berlin Heights, Ohio, has committed suicide. His mother, an excellent woman, living in Iowa, did all she could to win her son from the seductive influences of a sensual fanaticism, but in vain; and the end has been desperation, insanity and suicide.

For the Crisis.

Erasmus.

Erasmus, a native of Rotterdam on the Rhine, in Holland, was prominent among those men who took an active part in producing the stirring events of the 15th and 16th centuries—centuries full of great men and great ideas; centuries which gave rise to the Reformation, and freed the human mind from that bondage in which it had so long been held. Born among a people, sordid, unpolished, despisers of learning, and as yet not prominent in Europe, he exhibited at a very early age those traits of character which afterward rendered him superior to any of his countrymen, and made him the most renowned scholar of his time in Europe. He had not attained his ninth year when, having a melodious voice, he was chosen chorister of the cathedral in Utrecht; and before he was thirteen he could repeat all Terence and Horace by heart. About this time he became an orphan. Forced into a convent, by those who wished his patrimony, he acquired a perfect aversion to the monastic state, which stayed by him till the end of his life. As soon as opportunity offered, he left the monastery and began to lead a life of mendicant scholarship. Poor, of a weakly constitution, and relying upon the generosity of his protectors, he traveled from place to place, investigating truth, lecturing to students, and by an untiring industry and perseverance, laying the foundation of his future greatness. Whenever he was so fortunate as to obtain money, he spent it first for Greek books and then for clothes.

As a man, he was shrewd, witty, clear-sighted, yet sincere, frank, and honest. He was possessed of a natural vivacity, and of that independence characteristic of his nation, which despots find hard to deal with. Still, he lacked that moral courage which would have made him illustrious as a Reformer. For a long time he shrank from the study of theology, for fear that he should differ from the commonly received opinions, and so be denounced as a heretic. He would rather that others should suffer martyrdom than he; and he was always cautious not to take rash and violent steps in regard to religious matters. He was resolved to take all things easily, and enjoy the pleasures of a literary life.

He very early acquired a high reputation as a scholar. His presence was sought at the renowned courts of Henry VIII., of Francis I. and Charles V. The honors which they were wont to bestow upon him, with the offer of the cardinal's hat by the Pope, were steadily refused, not that he did not wish to be noticed and have his vanity gratified, but that he preferred the comforts of life to the cares and responsibilities of office. Accordingly, we find him roaming over Europe, one day discoursing Greek at Oxford, and another reading in the University library at Paris; and still on another poring over old manuscripts with the cardinals at Rome. His having been trained for the priesthood in early life, gave him a greater knowledge of ecclesiastical literature than was possessed by any other of the rervivers of ancient learning. His acute judgment and extensive learning enabled him to detect many errors in the doctrines and practices of the Romish Church. Some of these he confuted by argument, and against others, as in his Praise of Folly, he turned an irresistible torrent of satirical wit. His Aphorisms fill ten massive folios. His Notes on the New Testament were welcome aids and new incentives to its study. His Greek Testament, and new Latin version, served not only to call divines from the scholastic theology to the study of the Holy Scriptures, but mark an era in biblical literature and vital christianity. They incited Bilney and Tyndale to their work of introducing the gospel into England. In sending forth the word of God in the original language, he exclaimed, "Would to God it might bear as much fruit for christianity as it has cost me labor and application."

In this manner, he prepared the way for others, though he did not take any very active part himself as a Reformer. His excessive timidity kept him from openly and violently attacking the Court of Rome. He had seen too much of the vicious life of the monks while within the monastery, to remain wholly silent. He was able, under the protection of great prelates and royal authority, to expose these corruptions to the gaze of the world. In vain did the monks strive against him, and vow vengeance upon his head. A rumor that his Colloquies had got into the Index Expurgatorius, sold 24,000 copies, and made him his fortune. They were read by all classes of society, and afforded sport and laughter to many an old soldier and school boy. Thus were many drawn into the cause of reform who would have been repulsed by more open means. While the reformers could reach only those who were affected by earnest and sober truth he gained the indifferent and the worldly. Against the attacks of Luther and his associates the Church brought to bear its stupendous enginery, but his sly hits and pungent satires they could not repel. Thus the witticisms of Erasmus and the tracts of Luther concurred in producing the same results.

CHAS. H. PERKINS.

For the Crisis.

To the Tried and Tempted.

"Is poverty thy portion?
Privation keen thy lot?
Doth sickness sorely press thee?
By friends art thou forgot?
This is the night trial.
The day will surely come!
That brings the Blessed Savior
And your eternal home.

Are you surrounded with trials, and pressed with temptations? Consider what support the grace of God has afforded others in circumstances equally, or much more afflicting; in deaths and tortures, imprisonments and exiles, in poverty and sickness, they have through grace been made more than conquerors. You also have experienced as great affliction in time past, and though almost ready to despair of help, yet God brought salvation, and caused you to triumph in his grace; and to adore the wisdom and power of that providence by which you made so happy an escape. And now his arm is not shortened that he cannot save, neither is his ear heavy that he cannot hear. He is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. And the weapons of your warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down the strong holds of the enemy. Use your armor like faithful soldiers, and no enemy will be able to stand before you. Believe that they who are for you, are more than they who are against you. The all powerful God is your Father; the ever blessed Redeemer your brother; the Holy Ghost and Bible your comforter and guide; angels your ministers; and who or what can withstand you? Go on then to certain victory, and an unfading crown. Above all things, remember that God sees you. He is everywhere present. He sees and knows your heart, words and actions. He is well acquainted with all your trials and sufferings. He knows what light, strength and comfort are needful to bear them, to resist, to gain a full and final victory. And he is as able and willing to give a full supply of grace, as to know you need it. As he is nigh so is he a present help in time of trouble. Keep these things in mind, and it will be impossible to sink or despair while you lean upon the arm of an almighty Deliverer.

Believe that God holds the reins of universal government. He will suffer nothing to transpire but what he will overrule for his own glory and the good of the faithful. Consider the promise that you shall not be tempted above that you are able to bear, but with the temptation will make a way for your happy escape. In all your troubles here, have recourse to the sure antidote of the Apostle. These light afflictions which are but for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. They are working for us! What a comforting thought! They do a work for us that cannot be done without them. It is suffering that weans us from the world and its fashions and pleasures. And the Lord is now leading his people through the furnace, to purify and cleanse them from all that is wrong, that they may be fitted up for his kingdom, and that they may be presented to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.

O, the time is short. We are living in a time when we may expect sudden destruction on this world. It is a perfect peace and safety time, when all are asleep excepting those that truly are loving his appearing. Dear saints, take courage; this may be the last conflict. Satan may never be permitted to tempt us more. This year may terminate all the frowns and flatteries of the world which relate to us. Before another cold winter Jesus may come, and with his lovely hand wipe away all your tears of anguish and sorrow, and say, well done, good and faithful child, your Father calls, come home.

C. DAGGETT.

West Bangor, Me., Sept., 1858.

LAMP OIL.—To remove lamp oil from cotton and woolen goods, rub in thoroughly with the hand some clean, fresh lard, let it remain for two or three hours, then apply soft soap, and wash in warm water. This can be depended on.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, Sept. 29.

The steamship Arabia, from Liverpool at 3 P. M. of the 18th inst., arrived at her dock at 5 o'clock this P. M.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Times publishes a long letter from a correspondent at Valentia, in regard to the difficulty in the Atlantic Cable. The view is a rather discouraging one, but it is nevertheless stated that Mr. Henley, who has been for some days making experiments on the Cable, is sanguine of making the line again serviceable, by the use of his powerful magnetic electrical machines, which are now on their way from London. Mr. Lundy, one of the assistants at Valentia, has come to Newfoundland to ascertain the condition of the wire at Trinity Bay, and to arrange a day on which a certain known code of signals are to be sent down at concerted times from both ends, and to endeavor thus to re-establish intelligible communication.

The Times of the 19th says the shares have declined to between $420 and $460.

It appears that the recent experiments induce a belief that the fracture or fractures (for it is thought there may be two) will be found to exist at a distance of between two and three hundred miles from the shore. For about 230 or 240 miles the depth is only 410 fathoms, and within that length the mischief could easily be repaired; but sudden descent then occurs of 1518 fathoms, where it is extremely doubtful if anything could be done. The probability seems to be that it is at this abrupt point the damage has been sustained.

PORTUGAL.

The vintage will be the most abundant of the last five years.

RUSSIA.

A St. Petersburg letter says a financial plan has been submitted to the Emperor, destined to furnish the capital for the emancipation of the Serfs. According to it a Bank of issue would be established with a capital equal to the indemnity to be paid to the proprietors; the notes ultimately to be withdrawn from circulation by means of a sinking fund. There is every chance for its adoption, though perhaps with some modifications.

The grain crops in the Russian territory of the Black Sea had been destroyed by locusts and hot winds.

The Emperor wishes the Grand Duke Michael to become Governor of Poland in room of Prince Gortschakoff, who desires to retire.

TURKEY.

The excitement among the Mussulmen was daily increasing. The sums spent in the purchase of weapons are said to be enormous.

An insurrection in Persia had been suppressed.

FRANCE.

A treaty is said to have been made with the King of Korea, a vassal of China, for the establishment of a French commercial settlement there.

Domestic News.

BURNING OF THE STEAMSHIP AUSTRIA.

The following is a part of the statement from one of the saved, who was on board of the Austria when it took fire.

CHARTRES BREW'S STATEMENT.—At this time the scene on the quarter-deck was indescribable and truly heart-rending. Passengers were rushing to and fro, husbands seeking wives, wives in search of husbands, relatives looking after relatives, mothers lamenting their children, some wholly paralyzed by fear, others crying to be saved, but few perfectly calm and collected. The flames pressed so closely upon them that many jumped into the sea. Relatives, clasped in each other's arms, leaped over and met a watery grave. Two girls, supposed sisters, jumped over and sank kissing each other. A missionary and wife leaped into the sea together, and the stewardess and assistant steward, arm in arm, followed.

One Hungarian gentleman, with seven fine children, (four girls,) made his wife jump in, then blessed the six oldest children, made them jump in one after the other, and followed them, with an infant in his own arms.

About this time I was standing outside the bulwarks, holding on by the davits, leaning out to avoid the flames, which were leaping towards me. Saw a swamped boat under me, spinning by a rope still attached to the ship. As the oars were tied in her, thought if I got to her I would be enabled to save myself and some others. Let myself down by the rope, passing over a man who was clinging to it, but who refused to come with me. Took out my penknife to cut the tackle, when the large blade broke; then severed it with the small blade. The ship passed ahead. As I approached the screw, found the boat drawn towards it; tried to keep the boat off, but the screw caught and capsized her over me. Dived away from the ship, and came to the surface near the boat, which was keel uppermost. Got on her, and by pressing on one side, with assistance of a wave, she righted, but was still swamped. The oars had been knocked out by the screw. The only thing I could find in her to paddle with was some laths nailed together as sheathing for sides. When I looked around, the ship was a quarter of a mile from me. Could see ladies and gentlemen jumping off the poop into the water in twos and threes—some ladies in flames.

Several hesitated to leap from the burning ship until the last moment, as the height was 22 feet, and only at length when compelled to throw themselves off to avoid the more painful death.

☞ Of the eleven ocean steamers lost during the last twenty years, three were British, six American, one French and one German. Four of the number were Pacific steamers, and the remainder Atlantic. The number of lives lost was 2965, and the amount of property destroyed ten and a half millions.—Traveller.

SUB-MARINE TELEGRAPH WIRE.—The last Cosmos copies from the English Builder a curious item of news bearing on the subject:

"On examining a piece of submarine cable cut from the end of the La Manche line, long in use, there were noticed an indefinite series of ruptures or subdivisions, as if the wire had been chopped into morsels, or had been disintegrated under the influence of the electric vibrations. Since, in the case of the Transatlantic cable, currents positive and negative alternately are launched through it, such a disintegration of the wire must be expected to come about even more rapidly. The fact itself is too mysterious to be discussed at present.

NOTICES.

Notice.

I would say that, if it please God, I shall be in New York in the early part of October for a few days, and shall be glad to receive orders for Books, Tracts, &c., of which I hope then to have a full supply of all kinds. I will try to fill all orders promptly—especially those that are accompanied by the cash. The poor that wish for tracts are invited to send in their orders and they shall receive all they want without price. Don't be afraid to send; let them be circulated. Persons owing for books will of course remit as fast as able. If any persons wish for Greek Testaments, Hebrew Bibles, Septuagints, Lexicons, Hebrew or Greek, Concordances, Cruden's, unabridged, "condensed" or "pocket," The Englishman's Greek Concordance, Ecclesiastical Histories, Eusebius, Mosheim, &c. &c.; Commentaries, Murdock's Syriac Testament, or any other good books, for Sunday School libraries or private use, published in America or England, I will be very glad to get them for them as cheap or cheaper than they could themselves, and send them by express as directed. All such orders should be accompanied by the CASH, with directions where to send—town, county and State; also by what railroad or express line. Orders may be sent till October 10th, directed plainly, to

H. L. HASTINGS, care of J. J. REED, Printer, 43 Centre Street, New York.

North Western Pennsylvania Conference.

By the request of a number of brethren in this region, we appoint a Conference, to be held in the School House, near Bro. M. Whitaker's, two miles north of Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, Oct. 22d, and continuing over the Lord's day.

The design of the meeting is to strengthen and encourage each other, and to see what can be done for the promulgation of the gospel among us. We wish to have some concert of action in the matter, and devise some means for sending the good news into new places.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us rally in the name of the Lord, and come up to his help against the mighty. The enemy is rallying his forces on every hand. Let us be up and doing, have our house set in order, and be like unto men that wait for their Lord.

For the Brethren,
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Notice.

Whereas, Bro. Champlain has resigned the pastorship of the River Point Advent Church, R. I., we have chosen Bro. E. Bellows as pastor. Bro. Bellows will preach one Sunday in a month—the first. The other three Sundays are left open to the preaching brethren whom we may invite. We hope those we have invited will come soon and see us.

JOHN P. BABCOCK,
For the Brethren.

Book Notice.

I would say to the Brn., that I have just got printed, in Boston, an improved edition of DEATH NOT LIFE, in paper covers, and bound,—also GLAD TIDINGS and my two tracts on the word HELL, and Foster's noted letter. They can be had of Bro. Grant at the prices now noticed in the Crisis, and by writing me at Buffalo. Brethren in the ministry can have them to sell on commission, and I hope they will send soon and get a supply for the winter. I expect to remain in the East till Jan., and will visit brethren by their sending a request to the Crisis. JACOB BLAIN.

Boston, Oct. 2, 1858.

☞ NOTICE.—If the Lord permit, a Conference will be held in Brunswick, Me., in the Yellow School-house, about 2 1-2 miles from the village, on the Bath road, commencing Thurday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath. We hope to see a good gathering of the firiends in that region. Come, beloved, in the name of the Lord, and let us make one more effort to save sinners, and cheer each other on in our pilgrimage to the better land.

Those coming from abroad will call on Bro. Thomas M. Storer.

R. R. YORK,
I. C. WELLCOME.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The State Conference is to be holden at Lake Village, to commence Thursday, October 7th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

A general attendance of brethren, and especially brethren in the ministry, is desired.

The friends at Lake Village will make provision for all who may need.

T. M. PREBLE,
Clerk of the Conference.

East Weare, N. H., Aug. 23, 1858.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.

Bro Ira Morgan, Oct. 10th and 17th.
Bro. S. S. Brewer, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.
Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.
Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, }
A. PEARCE, } Secretaries.

☞ Eld. W. B. Davis' P. O. address is Warren, N. H.

Oakes P. Allen's P. O. address is Hackensack, New Jersey.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Brooklyn, Ct., at the Town Hall, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 12th, and continue five evenings. MILES GRANT.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will supply the desk at Chapman Hall for several weeks.

Bro. A. H. Higgins appoints to preach in Wilbraham, School House, Wilbraham, Oct. 10.
Springfield, - - - - Oct. 17.
Ware, School House, near Bro. [illegible], - - Oct. 24.
Scitico, Advent Chapel, - - Oct. 31.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings at the following places:

Lynn Dye House, Tuesday evening, - Oct. 12.
Salem, Wednesday eve., - - - Oct. 13.
Portsmouth, Thursday eve., - - Oct. 14.
Portland, Friday, - - - - Oct. 15.
Brunswick Conference, - - - Oct. 16.

From there back as the way opens to do good. HIRAM MUNGER.

I will preach as follows:
Rawsonville, Vt., - - - - Oct. 10th.
Cornish, N. H., Sunday, - - - Oct. 17th.
Dover, N. H., (where Bro. Colbath may appoint,) - - - Sunday, Oct. 24th.
S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will preach at—
Northfield Farms, Mass., Thursday evening, October 14.
Hinsdale, N. H., Friday evening, October 15.
West Brattleboro', Vt., Sunday, Oct. 17.
WM. SUTHERLAND.

☞ R. E. LADD appoints to meet the Church of God at the new Chapel in Scitico, on Sabbath, Oct. 17th.

☞ The Lord willing, I will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., on the third Lord's day in October, the 17th. JACOB BLAIN.

Providence permitting, Bro. S. G. MATHEWSON will preach in New Britain, Ct., October 19th, 20th, and 21st, (evenings.)

I will preach, the Lord willing, at—
Portsmouth, - - - Sunday, Oct. 10th.
Bristol, Ct., evenings of Oct. 21st, 22d, 23d, and Sunday, the 24th.

Bro. Sutherland is expected to be present and labor with me. H. F. CARPENTER.

My P. O. address is Worcester, Mass.

I will preach in—
Warren Hall, Worcester, . . Sunday, Oct. 3.
Southbridge, Mass. (Westville) Friday, " 8.
" " Saturday, " 9.
" " Sunday, " 10.
Wellington, Ct., . . Tuesday evening, " 12.
Warehouse Point, where Bro. Bancroft may appoint, . . . Wednesday evening, Oct. 13.
L. BOUTELL.

The Lord willing, Brn. James G. Smith and I. Damman will meet with the people in Dover, Me., in the neighborhood of Bran's Mills, where the brethren may think best, on Friday evening, Oct. 1st.

Dover Village, Saturday evening, and over the Sabbath following.

Augusta, Me., Saturday evening, Oct. 9th, and over the Sabbath following.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the people in Tuftonborough, N. H., where Bro. Moulton may appoint, Oct. 13th, evening.

I. DAMMAN.

☞ The Lord willing, I will preach at the following places, viz:
At Portsmouth, N. H., Lord's day, Oct. 3.
Rye, N. H., where the brethren may appoint, in the evening, Oct. 4th & 5th.
Portland, Me., evening, Oct. 7th.
Yarmouth, Me., Lord's day, Oct. 10th.
WM. M. INGHAM.

Lowell, Sept. 20th, 1858.

S. S. Brazee appoints to preach in
Goshen, Mass., - - - - Oct. 6th.
Holley, " - - - - " 7th.
Savoy, " - - - - " 8th.
North Adams, Sunday, - - - " 10th.
Cheshire, Mass., - - - - " 11th.

Business.

To Correspondents.

M. Greenough, money received.

J. Frost, Vernon, all right.

Mrs. M Smith, money received—pays to 170.

E. Bellows—Your money, $12.00, was credited in paper of July 28th.

Cash Receipts.

G W Wetherell 156, $2.28; R Wakefield (15 copies) 182, $12.50; N Fogg 132, 60 cts; N K Thurston 156, $3.08; Mrs. J. Rogers 160, 67 cts; C W Baker 172, 50 cts; H Burridy 182, $3.00.

C W Smith 172, Mrs. H Moon 182, Mrs. C Lester 182, Mrs. T Jenner 182, G N Pitts 182, N Lazell 182, Mrs. F Eaton 177, H F Helton 182, L Storrs 182, I Chapman 182, I Fancher 204, C Deming 175, Capt. M Brooks 159, W Colbath, Jr., 184, A Coons 182, I Moody 186, S Winship 170, T Wilkins 182, M A Orrock 182, G N West 182, D Newton 169, W Stark 162, D D Thayer 159, W Morrel 130, E D Searles 126, H Pratt 182, Ali Smith 182,—$1.00 each.

H T White 175, E Wakeman 192, W Cheney 169, J Brown 182, B F Rice 182, B F Brown 208, Mrs. L Osborne, 234, R R Perry 178, W Chamberlin 156, Mrs L Hill,—$2 each.

For Books—E Bellows $2.00.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz. or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that we end sinners to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 75 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally [illegible]. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price [illegible], $[illegible] per hundred, [illegible] cents single; postage [illegible] cents; 40 cents [illegible] postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of all [illegible] [illegible].

Review of [illegible] of [illegible]. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single, postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them [illegible] lower than they can be bought in any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very interesting work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to bring light upon the Scriptures, and upon the [illegible] of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children; compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 25 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Loufeat. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 8 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity; or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 34, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 48 12mo. 15 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours. 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred; postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality; 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them. Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by [illegible], Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six, Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by [illegible].

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. [illegible] Little Children, Love one Another; [illegible] One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by [illegible]. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

MAN'S DESTINY. Immortality: The Argument from Reason and Scripture, by [illegible], Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 25 cents. [illegible] [illegible].

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison and Geo. Storrs. Question—"Does the Bible teach that the [illegible] [illegible] formed of the dust of the ground, has a [illegible] [illegible] called the soul?" [illegible] [illegible] covers; bound, 38 cts. Postage [illegible].

☞ The following books [illegible] had of J. B. Waite, [illegible] [illegible] Harp," by [illegible] [illegible] Children; Satanic [illegible] Great Controversy.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

Lines.

On the Death of Anne [illegible]

Farewell, Anne; thou art sleeping in the lonely churchyard now;
And the stamp of death is graven on thy cold and pallid brow;
Hushed [illegible] thy gentle accents, closed thine eyes in slumber blest,
And thy busy hands are folded in a calm and peaceful rest.

Farewell, Anne; thou art resting,—all thy tears and trials o'er,
Resting where Earth's many sorrows shall disturb thee never more;
And I'd gladly sleep beside thee, sheltered from the storms of life,
Gladly share thy rest untroubled, freed from worldly care and strife.

Farewell, Anne; oft we miss thee, miss thee in the house of prayer;
And our hearts are filled with sadness, while thy voice no more we hear:
But our sorrow is not hopeless, for thou dost in Jesus sleep,
And the white-robed angel watchers round thy tomb their vigils keep.

Now we wait the promised morning, when our King shall come to reign;
When the strong man's chains are sundered, and the captives live again:
Then with joyful hearts we'll greet thee, where no grief shall ever come,
Where the ransomed all are gathered, in that fair eternal home.

There no weary midnight watcher bathes a dear one's fevered brow,—
There's no sound of bitter weeping o'er a cherished one laid low,—
No sad burial procession moves along that golden street;—
Savior, come, and banish sorrow—come, and make our joy complete!

S. M. H.

Greenland, N. H.

Original Articles.

Letter from Sr. S. Mix.

Never did I so fully comprehend the beauty and sublimity of those excellent lines of one of our "own poets," commencing,

"We are going home, we've had visions bright,"

as I did during our service before the Lord last Sunday afternoon. Oh! for language adequate for its description. But I must invite my brethren and sisters to come and take a rich view of it, in the spirit of inspiration and revelation. God's glorious design in the formation of this mundane system at first, was to prepare a place, or a kingdom, for a being whom he was about to make "a little lower than the angels," and in very deed to bear more of his own glorious impress; and notwithstanding the inferiority of this being to that of angelic existence, still to crown him with "glory and honor," and fit him every way for the most intimate communion with himself, even that of walking and talking with him in very person. This was man's high prerogative in his first creation. There was only one restriction binding upon his nature, and that was sufficient to prove his fidelity to his Maker in full. Ah! happy state of that first wedded pair. "No sickness, sorrow, pain or death" to be "felt or feared." But, alas! the hour of trial came; the tempter succeeded in the seduction of the weaker part of man, and man became exposed to dissolution, and cut himself off from his divine companionship with his Creator. We read his history in the "word of God," and we there find that he departed from God first, sin separated him, and when the Lord God came to walk in the garden in the "cool of the day," as he had been wont to do aforetime, he saw not his creature man. But oh, amazing goodness and long suffering mercy! instead of instantly executing the sentence pronounced "against an evil work," and cutting Adam off in one of man's days, "the evening and the morning" constituting that day, his love extended beyond, even to the amazing period of one of the Lord's days, which, as Peter says, is "as a thousand years;" and he called after man, with all his former familiarity of expression,—"Adam, where art thou?" not "you rebel, come here!" but, "where art thou? Adam?" Man's doom was fixed, and God could no longer walk and talk with him, as in the days of his obedience; his "crown of glory and honor" was lost, and he goes forth from the presence of the Lord, to labor and toil until he again re-turns to his own [illegible] What a [illegible] sight! what a [illegible] [illegible] turn away, and [illegible] glorious restitution, [illegible] cheering and [illegible] "second Adam." And [illegible]

Since we have not yet been blessed with this second representative of God's most noble work; we have had the babe of Bethlehem; we have had the man of sorrows; we have had one to represent our case as we stand in the first Adam our federal head, (sin excepted) in the full likeness of sinful flesh; in a word, as Paul says, "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." Says Peter, "We were eye witnesses of his majesty." It is no "cunningly devised fables" which we declare unto you. Jesus Christ "received from God the Father honor and glory," "when we were with him in the holy mount," but immortality he did not then obtain. This "crown of glory and honor" which he received from the Father, enabled him patiently to endure the sufferings incident to man in his fallen state, and finally to take a quaff from the cup of death in the stead, or "for every man," so that in his own person he has fully abolished the sentence of death for every man; and having brought life and immortality with him from the grave, he has obtained it also for every one. God can now be just in the execution of the sentence passed upon all men, and yet the justifier of them that believe. This is "the record which God has given to us, eternal life, and this life is in his Son," and to all those "who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life" will be given, as the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

But when, and where, is this great gift, this "power of an endless life," to be received and enjoyed? When "the second Adam," who was made a "quickening" or life-giving spirit, shall come, as "the Lord from heaven"—come with a shout of triumph, with a mighty voice that shall reverberate through the deepest caverns of earth's darkest domain. Then such as have gotten their life ensured in him, will put on their own immortal robes, and feel the last drop of corruption passing away from them forever. John says, he "saw a new heaven and a new earth." Yes, he had a view of the glorious restitution—earth restored, man restored to favor with God. The "second Adam" taking possession of the lost dominion, God's "tabernacle" again "with men," and he dwelling with them as at the first.

Now let us see if we can find the true church, and understand her position in this blessed era. John was permitted to behold her, and we may look at the picture if we will. "And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither; I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." "And he carried me away in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God," &c. John 21: 7–10. Here we see that God's church has a particular place; and we read that he is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city, for all that have died in the faith, and for all who sleep in Jesus, yea, and for all those who are his at his coming." Then, in very deed, will the word of Jesus be verified,—"Ye are the light of the world"—"a city set upon a hill cannot be hid."

The church, even now, occupies the most elevated position of glory and honor that can be attained unto here in her militant state—that of suffering with her Lord; but in that city, her glory will be in connection with his own glorious body, to suffer and die no more. That city will be the light of the renewed world; for we read, that "the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." Then indeed will those be blessed which do his commandments; for they shall have right to the tree of life, (which right Adam forfeited by disobedience,) and "may enter in through the gates into the city." Have we seen the "holy land?" Have we seen "that world of light?" Have we had a view of the saints' home? Have we caught a glimpse of the immortal crowned brows, of the triumphant hosts of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, and saints of all ages, blended together in one celestial band? Have we had sight of the glorious "Sun of Righteousness," rolling down a torrent of light, life and glory, and with refulgent beams of bliss, shining forth upon "a world that is fair and good?" And do we expect to be one in that "ransomed throng," to behold the gorgeous magnificence of that "holy city;" to see the "verdant glades" of Eden and Paradise restored; to see "countless flowers of fadeless hue" which are forever blooming "in that sun-bright clime;" and best of all, to "prove" without any termination the length, breadth, depth and height of "a Savior's matchless love?"

God grant us all this rich inheritance in Christ Jesus, is my earnest, longing desire.

SARAH MIX.

Prospect, Ct., July 26, '58.

Letter from Bro. W. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—As our friends East complain of us for not writing more for the press, I have concluded to keep them advised of events that I judge will be of interest and profit to them. They may be anxious to know whether our faith is strong, and our interest unabated in the glorious truths we hold dear. Well, all of our faith centres in the speedy coming Kingdom of God, that is to be established under the whole heavens. Our interest and home is there. If we lose it, we lose all. We have sacrificed friends and friendship very dear to us, to spread the knowledge of the approaching end. We have passed through many trials for the Kingdom of heaven's sake. Yes, at times we have thought our trials severe, and our lot a hard one, our way a rugged one; but our thought of Him who suffered and endured so much for us, hushed our murmurings, and taught us the great lesson of patient continuance in well doing.

However, trials nor deprivations will not save us. We may be cast away after all, unless we abide and continue in his (the Lord's) love. By the grace of God we hope to endure to the end. One great consolation we have—our heavenly Father does not change. He cares for all, and as he has delivered and preserved through all the dark, dreary and trying scenes, we can put perfect confidence in him with a joyful expectation.

We are sorry to inform you that we have done but little, comparatively, since we have been West. Poor health has been the cause; yet we have done (I think I can say in truth,) what we could, and our labor has not been altogether lost. God's blessing has attended the word in our feeble efforts, and I hope to meet some in the kingdom that have been enlightened by my feeble instrumentality.

Bro. Davenport, a Christian preacher, embraced our views while I was holding a series of meetings in Warsaw Prairie last winter. I was in hopes then to have another servant to help press on the good work; but he had finished his work it appears. He fell asleep in Jesus the middle of last June, and instead of having him with me in the field as I anticipated, I was called to preach his funeral sermon. He was a Bible man and one that walked uprightly. O death! how often thou hast caused my heart to bleed. Thy reign is almost over.

Again I was called to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Sweaney in the same place two weeks after. Sr. S. was a professor and a christian before she ever heard the glad tidings of the coming Kingdom. In the series of meetings above alluded to, she was convinced we had the truth and embraced it—took a decided stand and rejoiced in the blessed prospect. She fell on sleep soon after, in good faith that the trump of God will wake her up, "when the heavens be no more." Her husband is left, with a lovely little child, to mourn and realize a loss that earth cannot replace. He, with other friends, is led to inquire,

"How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

Bro. Sweaney embraced the faith about the same time, hence, "mourns not like those that have no hope." Others in that place that were bitter opposers, now rejoice in the blessed hope. Hope soon to see others inquiring after the old paths. Bro. Scott prepared the way in this field. More anon.

W. PRATT.

Rough and Ready, Ill.

☞ A young minister, who had made himself conspicuous for a severe and denunciatory style of preaching, came to old Rev. Dr. Bellamy one day to inquire why he did not have more success. "Why, man," said the doctor, "can't you take a lesson of the fisherman? How do you go to work if you want to catch a trout? You get a little hook, and a fine line, you bait it carefully, and throw it in gently as possible, and then you sit and wait and humor your fish until you can get him ashore. Now you get a great cod hook and rope line, and thrash it into the water, and bawl out, Bite or be damned!"

☞ No man's religion ever survives his morals.

For the Crisis.

Familiar Letters.—No. 12.

DEAR UNCLE [illegible]:—You will see that a resurrection is brought to view in connection with this reign. The martyrs, and all those who worship not the beast, nor his image, neither receive his mark, live, but the rest of the dead do not live again until the thousand years are finished. Those who do live are the blessed and holy, who constitute the first resurrection. We see, therefore, by this, that the millennium is subsequent to the advent of Jesus Christ. Paul teaches us this doctrine of a first resurrection, in Cor. 15: "Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's, at his coming." If we were to be raised at his coming, he would not have specified a certain class. Paul does not describe but one resurrection—the first; John introduces both, and specifies the time that shall intervene between them. Here, and no where else, does the Bible place the millennium.

In the next verse the blessing is pronounced upon all who have part in the first resurrection, and it is said, that upon such the second death will have no power. Does not this plainly intimate that over all such as are not then resurrected, the second death will have power? Those who are Christ's, and are raised at his coming, will be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. Not that their reign terminates at the expiration of that period, but then satan is loosed out of his prison, and deceives the wicked nations denominated Gog and Magog, and gathers them to battle against the saints and the beloved city. It does not state positively that these are resurrected, but it is very evident from previous statements. The blessed and holy live at the commencement of the thousand years; the rest of the dead do not live until the thousand years are finished. What is the inference? Why, that then they do live again. When, therefore, at the expiration of the thousand years, satan goes forth to deceive the nations, God and Magog, it is evident that they are raised up on the earth. In what manner he deceives them, is left to conjecture. My own opinion is this: that when they are raised up an exceeding great army, innumerable as the sands upon the sea shore, and satan, loosed from his prison, stands forth at their head, that he deceives them by telling them that they are able to subdue the saints, and take possession of their fair inheritance. He recalls the time when he alone, by subtlety, tempted the first possessors of Eden to sin, and by that means obtained possession of their kingdom; and now, as he beholds it restored again in all its pristine beauty, and looks upon his vast army, he flatters them, with the hope of again conquering, and possessing the glorious paradise. But as he gathers them around the camp, and the city, behold fire from heaven descends upon them, and they are consumed; while their leader is consigned to the lake of fire, where he finds his companions, even the beast, and the false prophet, who were cast therein a thousand years previous.

I am aware that many object to the view I here take respecting the resurrection of the wicked on the earth, or the new earth renewed, and restored to its Paradisaical condition. But I do not see anything objectionable in this, and it harmonizes with other portions of the word; and, besides, it looks consistent to me that the wicked should be permitted to behold the glorious inheritance which they have lost by rebellion. The Savior told the wicked Jews that they would see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom, and they themselves should be thrust out. As the kingdom is "under the whole heavens," and the saints "reign on the earth," how can they behold them in their bliss, unless they too are on the earth? how be "thrust out," unless they are in the kingdom? How compass the camp and city about, unless where the camp and city are?

The arguments I have presented in the former letter, prove that the "regeneration" of the earth, and the "restitution of all things" is immediately connected with the coming of Christ. And here we find the long-looked for and anxiously expected millennium—the reign of Christ and of his saints—the universal dominion from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth, when the knowledge and the glory of the Lord fills the earth—when there is nothing to hurt or destroy in all of God's holy mountain. May you and I be there to behold its glories, and dwell forever with the King.

Yours, as ever,

KATE.

Choice Selections.

Reformation in the Catholic Church.

The Roman Catholic Church in Europe seems to be on the eve of a New Reformation, not less remarkable than that which Luther inaugurated in the sixteenth century. Since that period no such step has been taken by the clergy as that which we announce. A Memorial signed by five hundred and seven Austrian priests of the Romish Church, has been addressed to the Cardinal Prince, Archbishop of Vienna. He is the author of the Concordat, against which the working clergy direct their remonstrances, though it is evident that that document is only rested upon as a platform upon which to make demands for the subversion of several of the most ancient regulations of the Church. The old Lutheran spirit manifests itself in the extent and power of the demands, as conveyed in the language of the remonstrants. The liberty of justice evidently fires their determination.

In the memorial, the five hundred and seven toiling priests declare that the Concordat confers on the bishops new privileges and more power, while upon the real clergy, the toiling and self-sacrificing priests, falls all the odium and literal detestation of the people. They pronounce that the religion which they are to uphold has become "the object of universal derision"—for the most moderate members of society are wrathful against the ordinances established in the Middle Ages, and now handed down with all their blackness to the light of our present civilization. The complaint proceeds then, by showing that the poor, unpaid priests, who are kept like slaves by their spiritual and luxurious masters, have to bear up against all the censures and curses of society—that they are made the instruments of wrong and oppression, and have to stand the brunt of all dissatisfaction, while the inventors of the evil revel in privileges and luxuries.

Among the details which the remonstrants cite, is the payment granted to the executors of the ordinances of the Church, which is so pitifully small, that they are forced to levy, in the shape of fees and taxes, upon the small means of the people, who naturally groan over and quarrel with such disgraceful exactions. Thus, it is declared, that religion is made, instead of a comfort, an uneasy burthen, which the people feel the more, as the poor priests are overlooked in the discussions on the subject, while they are classed for censure with those bishops who indulge in abundance and luxury. The old monkish priests, too, are declared to be degrading and injurious to religion. Such eleemosynaries are deemed reprehensible in every respect. Their idleness is censured as conflicting with the rights of the toiling priests, who are entitled to the revenues of such useless branches of the Church.

Such is the general character of the complaints. In other points they take a bold stand, but in no one of them are they firmer than in the demand for the abrogation of the ordinance by which celibacy is enjoined upon the clergy. They declare that the denial of the marriage rite to them brings upon them the odium of suspicion, subjects them to sneering and contempt, and destroys the moral character of the priest, making them abettors in the dissolution of society, particularly among the lower classes. They urge that the law should be abolished that creates such evil, and that they should be "restored to the common ties of family and humanity." If this be not done, they contend that their sway will be ended, that the Catholic religion will be despised, the power of the Church subverted, and even the State will be on an insecure foundation.

All this must be regarded as the "shadow before the event," and should these priests persist in their demand, the consequence will be an action in every part of the world, among the poor priests of the Catholic Church, to unyoke from the burthens which heathenish times placed upon their order, and the conservative spirit of the dominant powers of the Church singularly enough, have perpetuated. The probabilities are, that this movement will lead to very decided results, and that the Church must yield, or the priests unite with the revolutionary elements around them. It is certain that a more important step on the part of the lower clergy of the Roman Church, has not been taken since the time when Luther confronted his enemies and, with his converted adversary, translated and published the Bible in the German and the Low Saxon languages—defying the Church, and urging her to come out of her spiritual darkness. He lighted a great flame throughout Christendom, but if we mistake not the influence of the human mind, in a combination of circumstances such as surrounds these Austrian remonstrants, they have commenced a conflagration which will burn up all the tyrannical and unjust ordinances which have been established for enslaving priests and people.

☞ I feel sensitive about theologies. Theology is good in its place; but when it puts its hoof upon a living, palpitating, human heart, my heart cries out against it.

A man in the right with God on his side, is in the majority, though he be alone.

It is not well for a man to pray cream and live skim-milk.

Doctrine is nothing but the skin of Truth stuffed and set up.

The most dangerous infidelity of the day is the infidelity of rich and orthodox churches.—Beecher's Life Thoughts.

Extract.

Or it may be that we have stored our life, and gathered our heart, in some companion. One of beautiful soul came into a harmony, which made our daily life like a procession of music. Hours flew away, and days and years it may be, in a companionship which left nothing to be desired, and filled all the deep places of our nature, and wrought wondrous growth in all our inward life. For a true and right loving is to the disposition what summer is to the patient earth. The heart overhangs one's life as the sun overhangs the soil, and ten million flowers cover the surface. And when, by long loving, one comes to have no separate life, but lives double, twining tastes with tastes, thoughts with thoughts, affections with affections, until there is no longer a separate and undivided life, then, at length, in the hour of great trial, in the hour of amazement and confounding, one awakes and is alone! Alone! The world is what it was, yet is all changed! Life is struck at its root. All is paralysis. The sun comes up—the same sun—but where is his light? The morning is as fresh, as dewy, as full of bird-warbles—but what ails the ear, that none of these sounds enter—and what ails the senses, that none of these influences, that used to rejoice it, have any power? Bright days and dark ones are all alike: day and night are both night. Joy is dead. The soul is dead.

Nay, not so. While we stand looking up into heaven, as the disciples did when their Master was caught up, we, like them, see angels in white, who say, Why stand ye gazing up into heaven? For as they have departed, so shall they appear again, in renewed and radiant life! Christ shall give them back to thee! Thou shalt have victory through him!—Beecher.

None Stand Alone.

It is in the providence of God that none stand alone; we touch each other; man acts on man; heart on heart; we are bound up with each other; hand is joined to hand; wheel sets wheel in motion; we are spiritually linked together, arm within arm; we cannot live alone, nor die alone; we cannot say, I will only run risks with my own soul; if I am prepared to disobey the Lord such a pleasure or such a gain, but I do not want to implicate others; I only want to be answerable for myself. This cannot be. Each living soul has its influence on others in some way and to some extent, consciously or unconsciously; each has some power, more or less, direct or indirect; one mind colors another; a child acts on children; servants on their fellow-servants; masters on those they employ; parents on their children; friends on friends. Even when we do not design to influence others, when we are not thinking, in the least degree, of the effect of what we do, when we are unconscious that we have influence at all, when we do not wish our conduct or way of life to affect any but ourselves, our manner of life, our conversation, our deeds, are all the while having weight somewhere or somehow; our feet leave their impression, though we may not look behind us to see the mark.

☞ I compared notes with one of my friends who expects everything of the universe, and is disappointed when any thing is less than the best; and I found that I began at the other extreme, expecting nothing, and am always full of thanks for moderate goods.—Emerson.

☞ That is not wit which consists not with wisdom.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty three numbers, or $2.26 a year. [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

Lines,

On the Death of Anne [illegible], of Portsmouth, N. H.

Farewell, Anne; thou art sleeping in the lonely churchyard now;
And the stamp of death is graven on thy cold and pallid brow;
Hushed are now thy gentle accents, closed thine eyes in slumber blest,
And thy busy hands are folded in a calm and peaceful rest.

Farewell, Anne; thou art resting,—all thy tears and trials o'er,
Resting where Earth's many sorrows shall disturb thee never more;
And I'd gladly sleep beside thee, sheltered from the woes of life,
Gladly share thy rest untroubled, freed from worldly care and strife.

Farewell, Anne; oft we miss thee, miss thee in the house of prayer;
And our hearts are filled with sadness, while thy voice no more we hear:
But our sorrow is not hopeless, for thou dost in Jesus sleep,
And the white-robed angel watchers round thy tomb their vigils keep.

Now we wait the promised morning, when our King shall come to reign;
When the strong man's chains are sundered, and the captives live again:
Then with joyful hearts we'll greet thee, where no grief shall ever come,
Where the ransomed all are gathered, in that fair eternal home.

There no weary midnight watcher bathes a dear one's fevered brow,—
There's no sound of bitter weeping o'er a cherished one laid low,—
No sad burial procession moves along that golden street;—
Savior, come, and banish sorrow—come, and make our joy complete!

S. M. H.

Greenland, N. H.

Original Articles.

Letter from Sr. S. Mix.

Never did I so fully comprehend the beauty and sublimity of those excellent lines of one of our "own poets," commencing,

"We are going home, we've had visions bright,"

as I did during our service before the Lord last Sunday afternoon. Oh! for language adequate for its description. But I must invite my brethren and sisters to come and take a rich view of it, in the spirit of inspiration and revelation. God's glorious design in the formation of this mundane system at first, was to prepare a place, or a kingdom, for a being whom he was about to make "a little lower than the angels," and in very deed to bear more of his own glorious impress; and notwithstanding the inferiority of this being to that of angelic existence, still to crown him with "glory and honor," and fit him every way for the most intimate communion with himself, even that of walking and talking with him in very person. This was man's high prerogative in his first creation. There was only one restriction binding upon his nature, and that was sufficient to prove his fidelity to his Maker in full. Ah! happy state of that first wedded pair. "No sickness, sorrow, pain or death" to be "felt or feared." But, alas! the hour of trial came; the tempter succeeded in the seduction of the weaker part of man, and man became exposed to dissolution, and cut himself off from his divine companionship with his Creator. We read his history in the "word of God," and we there find that he departed from God first, sin separated him, and when the Lord God came to walk in the garden in the "cool of the day," as he had been wont to do aforetime, he saw not his creature man. But oh, amazing goodness and long suffering mercy! instead of instantly executing the sentence pronounced "against an evil work," and cutting Adam off in one of man's days, "the evening and the morning" constituting that day, his love extended beyond, even to the amazing period of one of the Lord's days, which, as Peter says, is "as a thousand years;" and he called after man, with all his former familiarity of expression,—"Adam, where art thou?" not "you rebel, come here!" but, "where art thou" Adam? Man's doom was fixed, and God could no longer walk and talk with him, as in the days of his obedience; his "crown of glory and honor" was lost, and he goes forth from the presence of the Lord, to labor and toil until he again re-turns to his own native dust. What a sad sight! what a doleful picture! Let us turn away, and see if we cannot, in the glorious restitution, find something more cheering and heart-reviving. Thank God for a second Adam! And who is he? "The Lord from heaven."

Then we have not yet been blessed with this second representative of God's most noble work; we have had the babe of Bethlehem; we have had the man of sorrows; we have had one to represent our case as we stand in the first Adam our federal head, (sin excepted) in the full likeness of sinful flesh; in a word, as Paul says, "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." Says Peter, "We were eye witnesses of his majesty." It is no "cunningly devised fables" which we declare unto you. Jesus Christ "received from God the Father honor and glory," "when we were with him in the holy mount," but immortality he did not then obtain. This "crown of glory and honor" which he received from the Father, enabled him patiently to endure the sufferings incident to man in his fallen state, and finally to take a quaff from the cup of death in the stead, or "for every man," so that in his own person he has fully abolished the sentence of death for every man; and having brought life and immortality with him from the grave, he has obtained it also for every one. God can now be just in the execution of the sentence passed upon all men, and yet the justifier of them that believe. This is "the record which God has given to us, eternal life, and this life is in his Son," and to all those "who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life" will be given, as the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

But when, and where, is this great gift, this "power of an endless life," to be received and enjoyed? When "the second Adam," who was made a "quickening" or life-giving spirit, shall come, as "the Lord from heaven"—come with a shout of triumph, with a mighty voice that shall reverberate through the deepest caverns of earth's darkest domain. Then such as have gotten their life ensured in him, will put on their own immortal robes, and feel the last drop of corruption passing away from them forever. John says, he "saw a new heaven and a new earth." Yes, he had a view of the glorious restitution—earth restored, man restored to favor with God. The "second Adam" taking possession of the lost dominion, God's "tabernacle" again "with men," and he dwelling with them as at the first.

Now let us see if we can find the true church, and understand her position in this blessed era. John was permitted to behold her, and we may look at the picture if we will. "And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither; I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." "And he carried me away in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God," &c. John 21: 7–10. Here we see that God's church has a particular place; and we read that he is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city, for all that have died in the faith, and for all who sleep in Jesus, yea, and for all those who are his at his coming." Then, in very deed, will the word of Jesus be verified,—"Ye are the light of the world"—"a city set upon a hill cannot be hid."

The church, even now, occupies the most elevated position of glory and honor that can be attained unto here in her militant state—that of suffering with her Lord; but in that city, her glory will be in connection with his own glorious body, to suffer and die no more. That city will be the light of the renewed world; for we read, that "the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." Then indeed will those be blessed which do his commandments; for they shall have right to the tree of life, (which right Adam forfeited by disobedience,) and "may enter in through the gates into the city." Have we seen the "holy land?" Have we seen "that world of light?" Have we had a view of the saints' home? Have we caught a glimpse of the immortal crowned brows, of the triumphant hosts of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, and saints of all ages, blended together in one celestial band? Have we had sight of the glorious "Sun of Righteousness," rolling down a torrent of light, life and glory, and with refulgent beams of bliss, shining forth upon "a world that is fair and good?" And do we expect to be one in that "ransomed throng," to behold the gorgeous magnificence of that "holy city;" to see the "verdant plains" of Eden and Paradise restored; to see "countless flowers of fadeless hue" which are forever blooming "in that sun-bright clime," and best of all, to "prove" without any termination the length, breadth, depth and height of "a Savior's matchless love?"

God grant us all this rich inheritance in Christ Jesus, is my earnest, longing desire.

SARAH MIX.

Prospect, Ct., July 26, '58.

Letter from Bro. W. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—As our friends East complain of us for not writing more for the press, I have concluded to keep them advised of events that I judge will be of interest and profit to them. They may be anxious to know whether our faith is strong, and our interest unabated in the glorious truths we hold dear. Well, all of our faith centres in the speedy coming Kingdom of God, that is to be established under the whole heavens. Our interest and home is there. If we lose it, we lose all. We have sacrificed friends and friendship very dear to us, to spread the knowledge of the approaching end. We have passed through many trials for the Kingdom of heaven's sake. Yes, at times we have thought our trials severe, and our lot a hard one, our way a rugged one; but our thought of Him who suffered and endured so much for us, hushed our murmurings, and taught us the great lesson of patient continuance in well doing.

However, trials nor deprivations will not save us. We may be cast away after all, unless we abide and continue in his (the Lord's) love. By the grace of God we hope to endure to the end. One great consolation we have—our heavenly Father does not change. He cares for all, and as he has delivered and preserved through all the dark, dreary and trying scenes, we can put perfect confidence in him with a joyful expectation.

We are sorry to inform you that we have done but little, comparatively, since we have been West. Poor health has been the cause; yet we have done (I think I can say in truth,) what we could, and our labor has not been altogether lost. God's blessing has attended the word in our feeble efforts, and I hope to meet some in the kingdom that have been enlightened by my feeble instrumentality.

Bro. Davenport, a Christian preacher, embraced our views while I was holding a series of meetings in Warsaw Prairie last winter. I was in hopes then to have another servant to help press on the good work; but he had finished his work it appears. He fell asleep in Jesus the middle of last June, and instead of having him with me in the field as I anticipated, I was called to preach his funeral sermon. He was a Bible man and one that walked uprightly. O death! how often thou hast caused my heart to bleed. Thy reign is almost over.

Again I was called to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Sweaney in the same place two weeks after. Sr. S. was a professor and a christian before she ever heard the glad tidings of the coming Kingdom. In the series of meetings above alluded to, she was convinced we had the truth and embraced it—took a decided stand and rejoiced in the blessed prospect. She fell on sleep soon after, in good faith that the trump of God will wake her up, "when the heavens be no more." Her husband is left, with a lovely little child, to mourn and realize a loss that earth cannot replace. He, with other friends, is led to inquire,

"How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

Bro. Sweaney embraced the faith about the same time, hence, "mourns not like those that have no hope." Others in that place that were bitter opposers, now rejoice in the blessed hope. Hope soon to see others inquiring after the old paths. Bro. Scott prepared the way in this field. More anon.

W. PRATT.

Rough and Ready, Ill.

☞ A young minister, who had made himself conspicuous for a severe and denunciatory style of preaching, came to old Rev. Dr. Bellamy one day to inquire why he did not have more success. "Why, man," said the doctor, "can't you take a lesson of the fisherman? How do you go to work if you want to catch a trout? You get a little hook and a fine line, you bate it carefully, and throw it in gently as possible, and then you sit and wait and humor your fish until you can get him ashore. Now you get a great cod hook and rope line, and thrash it into the water, and bawl out, Bite or be damned?"

☞ No man's religion ever survives his morals.

For the Crisis.

Familiar Letters.—No. 12.

DEAR UNCLE FRED:—You will see that a resurrection is brought to view in connection with this reign. The martyrs, and all those who worship not the beast, nor his image, neither receive his mark, live, but the rest of the dead do not live again until the thousand years are finished. Those who do live are the blessed and holy, who constitute the first resurrection. We see, therefore, by this, that the millennium is subsequent to the advent of Jesus Christ. Paul teaches us this doctrine of a first resurrection, in Cor. 15: "Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's, at his coming." If we were to be raised at his coming, he would not have specified a certain class. Paul does not describe but one resurrection—the first; John introduces both, and specifies the time that shall intervene between them. Here, and no where else, does the Bible place the millennium.

In the next verse the blessing is pronounced upon all who have part in the first resurrection, and it is said that upon such the second death will have no power. Does not this plainly intimate that over all such as are not then resurrected, the second death will have power? Those who are Christ's, and are raised at his coming, will be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. Not that their reign terminates at the expiration of that period, but then satan is loosed out of his prison, and deceives the wicked nations denominated Gog and Magog, and gathers them to battle against the saints and the beloved city. It does not state positively that these are resurrected, but it is very evident from previous statements. The blessed and holy live at the commencement of the thousand years; the rest of the dead do not live until the thousand years are finished. What is the inference? Why, that then they do live again. When, therefore, at the expiration of the thousand years, satan goes forth to deceive the nations, God and Magog, it is evident that they are raised up on the earth. In what manner he deceives them, is left to conjecture. My own opinion is this: that when they are raised up an exceeding great army, innumerable as the sands upon the sea shore, and satan, loosed from his prison, stands forth at their head, that he deceives them by telling them that they are able to subdue the saints, and take possession of their fair inheritance. He recalls the time when he alone, by subtlety, tempted the first possessors of Eden to sin, and by that means obtained possession of their kingdom; and now, as he beholds it restored again in all its pristine beauty, and looks upon his vast army, he flatters them with the hope of again conquering, and possessing the glorious paradise. But as he gathers them around the camp, and the city, behold fire from heaven descends upon them, and they are consumed; while their leader is consigned to the lake of fire, where he finds his companions, even the beast, and the false prophet, who were cast therein a thousand years previous.

I am aware that many object to the view I here take respecting the resurrection of the wicked on the earth, or the new earth renewed, and restored to its Paradisaical condition. But I do not see anything objectionable in this, and it harmonizes with other portions of the word; and, besides, it looks consistent to me that the wicked should be permitted to behold the glorious inheritance which they have lost by rebellion. The Savior told the wicked Jews that they would see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom, and they themselves should be thrust out. As the kingdom is "under the whole heavens," and the saints "reign on the earth," how can they behold them in their bliss, unless they too are on the earth? how be "thrust out," unless they are in the kingdom? How compass the camp and city about, unless where the camp and city are?

The arguments I have presented in the former letter, prove that the "regeneration" of the earth, and the "restitution of all things" is immediately connected with the coming of Christ. And here we find the long-looked for and anxiously expected millennium—the reign of Christ and of his saints—the universal dominion from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth, when the knowledge and the glory of the Lord fills the earth—when there is nothing to hurt or destroy in all of God's holy mountain. May you and I be there to behold its glories, and dwell forever with the King.

Yours, as ever,

KATE.

Choice Selections.

Reformation in the Catholic Church.

The Roman Catholic Church in Europe seems to be on the eve of a New Reformation, not less remarkable than that which Luther inaugurated in the sixteenth century. Since that period no such step has been taken by the clergy as that which we announce. A Memorial, signed by five hundred and seven Austrian priests of the Romish Church, has been addressed to the Cardinal Prince, Archbishop of Vienna. He is the author of the Concordat, against which the working clergy direct their remonstrances, though it is evident that that document is only rested upon as a platform upon which to make demands for the subversion of several of the most ancient regulations of the Church. The old Lutheran spirit manifests itself in the extent and power of the demands, as conveyed in the language of the remonstrants. The liberty of justice evidently fires their determination.

In the memorial, the five hundred and seven toiling priests declare that the Concordat confers on the bishops new privileges and more power, while upon the real clergy, the toiling and self-sacrificing priests, falls all the odium and moral detestation of the people. They pronounce that the religion which they are to uphold has become "the object of universal derision"—for the most moderate members of society are wrathful against the ordinances established in the Middle Ages, and now handed down with all their blackness to the light of our present civilization. The complaint proceeds then, by showing that the poor, unpaid priests, who are kept like slaves by their spiritual and luxurious masters, have to bear up against all the censures and curses of society—that they are made the instruments of wrong and oppression, and have to stand the brunt of all dissatisfaction, while the inventors of the evil revel in privileges and luxuries.

Among the details which the remonstrants cite, is the payment granted to the executors of the ordinances of the Church, which is so pitifully small that they are forced to levy, in the shape of fees and taxes, upon the small means of the people, who naturally groan over and quarrel with such disgraceful exactions. Thus, it is declared, that religion is made, instead of a comfort, an uneasy burthen, which the people feel the more, as the poor priests are overlooked in the discussions on the subject, while they are classed for censure with those bishops who indulge in abundance and luxury. The old monkish priests, too, are declared to be degrading and injurious to religion. Such eleemosynaries are deemed reprehensible in every respect. Their idleness is censured as conflicting with the rights of the toiling priests, who are entitled to the revenues of such useless branches of the Church.

Such is the general character of the complaints. In other points they take a bold stand, but in no one of them are they firmer than in the demand for the abrogation of the ordinance by which celibacy is enjoined upon the clergy. They declare that the denial of the marriage rite to them brings upon them the odium of suspicion, subjects them to sneering and contempt, and destroys the moral character of the priest, making them abettors in the dissolution of society, particularly among the lower classes. They urge that the law should be abolished that creates such evil, and that they should be "restored to the common ties of family and humanity." If this be not done, they contend that their sway will be ended, that the Catholic religion will be despised, the power of the Church subverted, and even the State will be on an insecure foundation.

All this must be regarded as the "shadow before the "event," and should these priests persist in their demand, the consequence will be an action in every part of the world, among the poor priests of the Catholic Church, to unyoke from the burthens which heathenish times placed upon their order, and the conservative spirit of the dominant powers of the Church singularly enough, have perpetuated. The probabilities are, that this movement will lead to very decided results, and that the Church must yield, or the priests unite with the revolutionary elements around them. It is certain that a more important step on the part of the lower clergy of the Roman Church, has not been taken since the time when Luther confronted his enemies and, with his converted adversary, translated and published the Bible in the German and the Low Saxon languages—defying the Church, and urging her to come out of her spiritual darkness. He lighted a great flame throughout Christendom, but if we mistake not the influence of the human mind, in a combination of circumstances such as surrounds these Austrian remonstrants, they have commenced a conflagration which will burn up all the tyrannical and unjust ordinances which have been established for enslaving priests and people.

☞ I feel sensitive about theologies. Theology is good in its place; but when it puts its hoof upon a living, palpitating, human heart, my heart cries out against it.

A man in the right with God on his side, is in the majority, though he be alone.

It is not well for a man to pray cream and live skim-milk.

Doctrine is nothing but the skin of Truth stuffed and set up.

The most dangerous infidelity of the day is the infidelity of rich and orthodox churches.—Beecher's Life Thoughts.

Extract.

Or it may be that we have stored our life, and gathered our heart, in some companion. Out of loveliness we came into a harmony, which made our daily life like a procession of music. Hours flew away, and days and years it may be, in a companionship which left nothing to be desired, and filled all the deep places of our nature, and wrought wondrous growth in all our inward life. For a true and right loving is to the disposition what summer is to the patient earth. The heart overhangs one's life as the sun overhangs the soil, and ten million flowers cover the surface. And when, by long loving, one comes to have no separate life, but lives double, twining tastes with tastes, thoughts with thoughts, affections with affections, until there is no longer a separate and undivided life, then, at length, in the hour of great trial, in the hour of amazement and confounding, one awakes and is alone! Alone! The world is what it was, yet is all changed! Life is struck at its root. All is paralysis. The sun comes up—the same sun—but where is his light? The morning is as fresh, as dewy, as full of bird-warbles—but what ails the ear, that none of these sounds enter—and what ails the senses, that none of these influences, that used to rejoice it, have any power? Bright days and dark ones are all alike—day and night are both night. Joy is dead. The soul is dead.

Nay, not so. While we stand looking up into heaven, as the disciples did when their Master was caught up, we, like them, see angels in white, who say, Why stand ye gazing up into heaven? For as they have departed, so shall they appear again, in renewed and radiant life! Christ shall give them back to thee! Thou shalt have victory through him!—Beecher.

None Stand Alone.

It is in the providence of God that none stand alone; we touch each other; man acts on man; heart on heart; we are bound up with each other; hand is joined in hand; wheel sets wheel in motion; we are spiritually linked together, arm within arm; we cannot live alone, nor die alone; we cannot say, I will only run risks with my own soul; I am prepared to disobey the Lord such a pleasure or such a gain, but I do not want to implicate others; I only want to be answerable for myself. This cannot be. Each living soul has its influence on others in some way and to some extent, consciously or unconsciously; each has some power, more or less, direct or indirect; one mind colors another; a child acts on children; servants on their fellow-servants; masters on those they employ; parents on their children; friends on friends. Even when we do not design to influence others, when we are not thinking, in the least degree, of the effect of what we do, when we are unconscious that we have influence at all, when we do not wish our conduct or way of life to affect any but ourselves, our manner of life, our conversation, our deeds, are all the while having weight somewhere or somehow; our feet leave their impression, though we may not look behind us to see the mark.

☞ I compared notes with one of my friends who expects everything of the universe, and is disappointed when any thing is less than the best; and I found that I began at the other extreme, expecting nothing, and am always full of thanks for moderate goods.—Emerson.

☞ That is not wit which consists not with wisdom.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same in all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 162. BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 13, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 16

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"THE GREAT CONTROVERSY."

"HASTINGS."

It is a noble work indeed,
A feast to intellect and creed;
A graphic view of Israel's God,
To show us how he used the rod.

O, how it does exalt his name!
That he in mercy used the same;
That every means before was tried,
To win the foolish suicide.

Then, not till justice to the whole
Required the stroke, it did not fall;
O'erwhelming those and those alone,
Who called aloud for such a doom.

In order this to fully see,
Think for one moment how 't would be,
If no corrective arm arose
To stop the deadly stream of woes,—

A fearful chaos would ensue,
Engulphing all that's good and true;
The earth itself would be a blank,
O'erspread with every poison rank;

Would seethe and fester in its crime,
With vice and oaths its only chime;
Reflecting shame upon the God
Who did at first make all things good.

The Bible's God let man adore!
As well in judgments as in power;
Without them hope might take its flight,
For earth would be a perfect blight.

His dignity I do adore,
Nor of him I would ask the more
Than what he's offered in his word;
O, let me serve for that reward!

On all who live, and breathe, and move,
I would now call this God to love;
For he is worthy of all praise—
To him let hallelujahs rise.

E. S. W.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Conversion of Constantine:
ITS RELIGIOUS RESULTS.

The conversion of Constantine, and the legal establishment of Christianity by his authority, may be considered as one of the most important events in ecclesiastical history. With him began the absolute power of the spiritual order, and the consequent enthralment of the human mind. The religious institutions which he established have outlived his civil and military policy in their effects upon the spiritual and social condition of modern society. These effects have been fruitful in many dire calamities to the human race, traceable in their origin to his injudicious and short-sighted policy.

In respect to the time, and the reality of the conversion of Constantine, many different opinions have been entertained. Some have lauded him to the skies for the services which he rendered to the Christian cause, while others have denounced and blamed him for his selfish and inconsistent conduct. It is true that his acts present a striking contrast to his profession of Christian faith. This should not lead us to condemn him as a hypocrite, or to obscure his good intentions and fidelity to the Christian cause. If he erred, it was because of his superstitious notions and mistaken views of Christian truth and principles. These views no doubt were strengthened by the flattery and indulgence of those Christians who dared not to reprove him, for fear of losing his favor and the influence of his authority. So that in time, he came to consider his own opinions of divine truth paramount to all others, and himself as arbiter in all ecclesiastical differences.

The true explanation of his Christian course seems to be, that he received from his father a bias in favor of Christianity; that he courted the favor of the Christians, at first, from motives of interest and ambition; and that finally he came to respect and admire their religion, and adopt it as his own, in the same manner as a prince at the present day would adopt the Protestant religion in preference to the Roman Catholic; and thus from habit and example he became a devout worshiper. To use his own assertion, he had been an indignant spectator of the savage cruelties which had been inflicted by the Roman soldiers, on those citizens whose religion was their only crime. He used the sign of the Cross as his military ensign, and by it raised the enthusiasm of his hireling soldiery, in his wars against his rivals, Licinius and Maxentius.

He seems for some time to have vacillated in his choice between the two religions; and he treated the Pagans with as much favor as the Christians. This may have been from prudence and policy, to preserve peace within his dominions. He afterwards became convinced of the folly and impiety of Pagan superstition, and persuaded all who would to embrace the Christian religion; and restrained by the force of his authority the worship of idols. He, however, did not receive baptism, which was then considered essential to salvation, until near his death. His religion seems to have been that of the understanding, rather than that of the heart. As to his being converted by a miracle, as stated by Eusebius, it is quite improbable, for there is no proof of the fact; and the vision of Constantine must have been a dream of a superstitious and overwrought imagination, or the invention of later times. He seems rather to have been flattered into the belief, that he was chosen of Heaven to reign upon earth, by the praises and marked attention of his Christian subjects.

Whatever opinions may be entertained, in respect to the reality of Constantine's conversion, his espousal of the Christian cause has been fruitful in great and important results.

First, it was the means of spreading Christianity, which before this time had to depend upon its own intrinsic merits and the faithfulness of its followers, to recommend it to the minds and hearts of the people. Its progress had been retarded, by the stubbornness of the Jews, the raillery of Pagan philosophers, the superstitions of the people, and the caprice of the Emperors. It now began to spread throughout the empire, and soon became the established religion. The example set by Rome was the means of spreading it into those eastern countries which had before excluded it.

The accession to their ranks of one so high in authority, naturally raised the hopes of the Christians, who now preached the gospel openly. And well it might, for they had been subjected to every form of cruelty and persecution which an inventive hatred could devise. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, numbers joined the Christians who were willing to share with them their trials. And the profession was kept much purer than when under the favorable auspices which afterward awaited it.

Second. It was the means of overthrowing the Pagan superstitions which had had full sway in the empire, and which embraced within it both idol worship and polytheism. The edict of Constantine granting toleration to the new faith, placed it in a position to be a powerful rival to the old faith. Paganism lost the influence of the Monarch, and with it a means of self-preservation. The wealth and splendor which had enriched the temples of the gods, was now expended upon houses of Christian worship. The people had been accustomed to look to their sovereign to take the lead in performing the heathen rites. They had come to reverence him and even to make him an object of worship. Of this they were deprived in the conversion of Constantine. It is in his reign that this system received its mortal wound from which it never fully recovered, and which proved fatal soon after Julian's reign.

Third. It established Christianity by laws which was the occasion of many of the evils which have afflicted society and the church down to the present time. While the Christian cause was making its way by overcoming the malice and rage of its enemies by its own divine energy, it retained its purity, for none would join except those who were convinced of its heavenly origin and immense importance. In times of exemption from persecution, many faithless ones found their way into its embrace, to introduce luxury and ease, to defile the purity of its doctrine, to incorporate within them the philosophy of the ancients, to bring reproach upon the cause, and then to leave and renounce it at the first appearance of a gathering storm.

Here we see the first appearance of Antichrist in any considerable degree, which became more apparent after the accession of Constantine. The splendor in which he arrayed the churches, and the worldly honor and dignity which he bestowed upon the teachers of christianity, allured many into the christian profession for the sake of its gifts; and thus began a system of pride, domination, and hypocrisy. Constantine and the christian leaders may have thought that they were doing God's service, in winning the heathen by such means, when they were in reality polluting the church of Christ, and making it a means of gratifying the vilest lusts and passions of the human heart. This was not all the work of a day but it was gradually tending towards this result.

Again. With the establishment of Christianity began the hierarchy of the bishops —Constantine changed the whole church government, remodeling it after the plan of the empire. The Emperor assumed to be the head of the Catholic Church, as he called it, by calling himself bishop, and claimed the power of regulating its external affairs. The other bishops corresponded to the various minor offices in the regulation of the Empire. This was an entire departure from the primitive order of things, as established by Christ and his apostles. This exaltation of the bishops to wealth, power, and authority, over the remaining members of the church, was the prolific source of every species of corruption.

Thus began the union of Church and State, in which the clergy wielded the arm of secular power, to accomplish its system of tyranny, superstition, and hypocrisy, which was now soon developed. Then began that increased importance of the clergy, and their domination over the human mind which afterward developed itself in absolute power. This assumed right was asserted in the decrees of the councils respecting the Arian controversy, to which was added another as dangerous, that of settling points of doctrine and determining what is heresy. It was here that Constantine made a great mistake, in substituting his authority for that of the Scriptures; and another still greater, in persecuting those who differed from him in opinion. The result of which was, in subsequent times, an ecclesiastical hierarchy with a mighty train of evils; a system sustaining every species of crime—a restraint upon liberty of conscience. Evils not yet eradicated, nor will be till Jesus comes to reign.

CHAS. H. PERKINS.

Little Things.

Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship; a bridle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the large parts of large buildings together; a word, a look, a frown —all are little things, but powerful for good or evil. Think of this, and mind the little things. Pay that little debt—it's promised, redeem it—if it's a shilling, hand it over—you know not what important event hangs upon it. Keep your word sacredly—keep it to the children, they will mark it sooner than any one else, and the effect will probably be as lasting as life. Mind the little things.

Things Lost Forever.

The following words from the pen of Lydia H. Sigourney are full of instructive meaning:

"Lost wealth may be restored by industry; the wreck of health regained by temperance; forgotten knowledge restored by study; alienated friendship smoothed into forgetfulness; even forfeited reputation won by patience and virtue; but who ever looked upon his vanished hours, recalled his slighted years, stamped them with wisdom, or effaced from heaven's record the fearful blot of wasted time. The foot-print on the sand is washed out by the ocean wave; and easier might we when years are fled, find that foot-print than recall lost hours.

For the Crisis.

Gleanings.

BY M. D. W.

To-day I gleaned a gem, said to have been found originally in an old almanac. Here it is:

"IMMATERIALITY

Is but another name for nonentity. It is the negative of all things and beings—of all existence. There is not one particle of proof to be advanced to establish its existence. It has no way to manifest itself to any intelligence in heaven or on earth.— Neither God, angels, nor men, could possibly conceive of such a substance, being or thing. It possesses no property or power by which to make itself manifest to any intelligent being in the universe. Reason and revelation never reveal it, nor do any of our senses witness its existence. It cannot be seen, felt, heard, tasted or smelled, even by the strongest organs, or the most acute sensibilities. It is neither liquid, nor solid, soft nor hard—it can neither extend nor contract. In short, it can exert no influence whatever—it can neither act, nor be acted upon. And even if it does exist, it can be of no possible use. It possesses no one desirable property, faculty nor use, yet, strange to say, Immateriality is the modern christian's God, his anticipated heaven, his immortal self—his all.

O sectarianism! O Atheism!! O annihilation!!! who can perceive the nice shades of difference between the one or the other? They seem alike all but in name. The atheist has no God. The sectarian has a God without body or parts. Who can define the difference? For our part we do not perceive the difference of a single hair; they both claim to be the negative of all things that exist—and both are equally powerless and unknown.

The atheist has no after life, or conscious existence beyond the grave. The sectarian has one, but it is immaterial, like his God; and without body or parts. Here again both are negative, and both arrive at the same point. Their faith and hope amount to the same; only it is expressed by different terms.

Again, the atheist has no heaven in eternity. The sectarian has one, but it is 'immaterial' in all its properties, and is therefore the negative of all riches and substances. Here again they are equal, and arrive at the same point. As we do not envy them the possession of all they claim, we will now leave them in the undisturbed enjoyment of the same, and proceed to examine the portion still left for the despised 'materialist' to enjoy.

What is God? He is a material, organized intelligence, possessing both body and parts. He is in the form of man. What is Jesus Christ? He is the Son of God, and is like his father, being the "brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person." He is a material intelligence, with body, parts, and passions; possessing immortal flesh and immortal bones.

What are men? They are the offspring of Adam. They are capable of receiving intelligence and exaltation to such a degree as to be raised from the dead with a body like that of Jesus Christ, and to possess immortal flesh and bones. Thus perfected, they will possess the material universe, that is, the earth, as their "everlasting inheritance." With these hopes and prospects before us, we say to the Christian world, who hold to immortality, that they are welcome to their God—their life—their heaven—and their all. They claim nothing but that which we throw away; and we claim nothing but that which they throw away. Therefore, there is no ground for quarrel or contention between us.

We choose all substance—what remains,
The mystical sectarian gains;
All that each claims each shall possess,
Nor grudge each others happiness.

An immaterial God they choose,
An immaterial heaven and hell;
For such a God we have no use,
In such a heaven we cannot dwell.

We claim the earth, the air, and sky,
And all the starry worlds on high;
Gold, silver, ore, and precious stones,
And bodies made of flesh and bones.

Such is our hope, our heaven, our all,
When once redeemed from Adam's fall;
All things are ours, and we shall be
The Lord's to all eternity."

For the Crisis.

Angels.

A DISCOURSE, BY WM. SHEPHERD.

"For he (God) shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Ps. 91: 11.

"His angels that excel in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word." Ps. 103: 20.

"Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1: 14.

It is written, "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed, belong unto us, and to our children forever." We infer from this, though it be "the glory of God to conceal a thing; but the honor of Kings is to search out a matter," that every thing which is a subject of divine revelation belongs unto us; and hence it is proper for us to examine, investigate, and discuss those things which are revealed on all appropriate occasions, if our object be for his glory, in the advancement of his truth and the good of those who may surround us. It is useless for men of narrow and contracted minds—the stereotyped sectarian, the denominational zealot, and self-conceited and insignificant bigot, to raise the cry that we are stepping out upon forbidden ground, meddling with matters and things which do not concern us,—presuming to penetrate into mysteries with which we have no business,—things which remain locked up in the bosom of God only to be unfolded in "the world to come;" thus endeavoring to deter us from acting upon the liberal principle and advice of the Apostle, wherein he exhorts us to "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good;" telling us, that "Whatsoever things are true . . . honest . . . just . . . pure . . . lovely . . . (and) of good report, (to) think of these things." And did we heed these sophisticated arguments, we should make but little progress in our growth "in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Now the subject which we propose to discuss at this time bears, as you may observe, no other but those excellent qualities which the Apostle here enumerates and calls upon us to contemplate, namely, such things which are "true . . . honest . . . just . . . pure . . . lovely (and of) good report;" for if the holy angels of God do not possess those amiable traits, and if those attributes do not characterize these beings, to what class of God's creatures shall we look who may inherit them? But that "the host of heaven" do, is very evident; hence, how worthy of our attention as a matter of lawful, edifying and beneficial discussion.

We will now proceed to examine the subject proposed, which we design doing in three separate sections; thus,—

1. Their existence, nature, mode of being.

2. Their offices and work in the Patriarchal, Prophetic and Jewish ages.

3. The relation they sustain to God and man in the sublime scheme of redemption; the position they occupy now, and the nature of their work in this dispensation.

These points, then, in their respective order, will claim our attention for a little while. And may the Supreme Goodness render their consideration blessed to us through the divinely appointed means, and especially through the sensible ministrations of those angelic beings which form the subject of our discourse as we pass along; that both the reader and writer may be benefited thereby and God glorified. Amen.

Angel then, or messenger, is the common name given to those spiritual and intelligent beings, by whom God in a great measure executeth his providential and gracious work, and who are most ready and active in his service, ever obedient to do or perform his will. The light of nature gives strong reason to suppose the existence of such a class of beings, but Scripture renders it alone indubitable. The existence of supernatural beings, otherwise called angels, has been accredited from time immemorial; and such a belief is found in the formulas and creeds of most of the heathen nations. The idea of them, however vague, dim and imperfect their conception, is quite universal. That there is a future state, and that there are existences of a higher order than man, which mediate in some degree for him between this state and the future, has always been prevalent among mankind in every age; but those ideas, chiefly, are very erroneous and extravagant. The followers of Mohammed, you are aware, are very strong in their opinion of the existence of good and bad angels. Others believe in what they term good and evil spirits.

This subject affords a wide field for metaphysical speculation; but we dare not venture out upon it beyond the sacred precincts of the word, or divine testimony, lest we (as many others have) become lost in the mist of "vain imaginations" "puffed up" by a "fleshy mind" and declare beyond and "above that which is written." We shall endeavor to adhere closely to "the form of sound words," i. e., the words of the Lord, and assert nothing more in relation to the matter than what we find recorded in the precious Volume.

As to the existence of angels, that is a clearly revealed doctrine of the Bible, and a very consoling one too, unto all believers. There is something very congenial in the thought, particularly when coupled with the consideration of that peculiar relation which they sustain toward the saints. And it is here from the sacred pages of this book that we learn something of their nature and essence, which we find is somewhat superior to that of man's, as the Psalmist declares, speaking of man in connection with God's providential care over him: "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels." Ps. 8: 4–6. And in another Psalm, speaking of the angels, he says, "Who excel in strength, &c." Ps. 103: 20; and as the Apostle affirms, speaking of their energies as compared with those of man's—"Which are greater in power and might." 2 Pet. 2: 11. It is very evident that they are endowed with a far superior degree of wisdom than man, and equally so with power, which will be more fully portrayed presently. How long prior to the creation of the globe as a habitable tenement they existed, we are not able to say, as we have no authentic data in regard to the matter. Some conjecture that they were created at the time and in conjunction with our world; but this idea is barely possible, for it cannot be that the mighty universe was void and empty of rational and intelligent beings capable of enjoyment, and of honoring and appreciating the Divine Being, his munificent works and ways, so many ages which must have rolled around anterior to earth's formation. It does not seem likely; it is not in keeping with the divine procedure. And then again, the Scriptures emphatically declare that they were present at the creation and "sang together . . . and shouted for joy." Job 38: 7.

The manner in which they were created, and from what substance, we are not informed; neither if they are all the immediate production of the Almighty, or whether their creation was analagous to that of man's. It is probable the latter may have been the case. These beings number myriads upon myriads, and it does not look like the work of immediate production from the hand of Deity; but rather their formation and their peopleing the illimitable dominions of the Most High has its counterpart or modus operandi in the human family. As to the substance of which they are composed we have no certain knowledge; we say substance, because we do not believe them to be purely immaterial beings in conformity with the orthodox sentiment; but on the contrary, we conceive them to be material, tangible, and bodily beings.

The substance of angels is highly refined, and of a very delicate and subtle nature; so much so, that all which we recognize as material, and which affects us, such as the elements which compose the world and the atmosphere which surrounds it, cannot effect them in the least. They may be said to be spirits, compared with the grossness of our nature; but, notwithstanding, tangible bodies, more perfectly organized than man, while their shape or form doubt-

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 162. BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 13, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"THE GREAT CONTROVERSY."

"HASTINGS."

It is a noble work indeed,
A feast to intellect and creed;
A graphic view of Israel's God,
To show us how he used the rod.

O, how it does exalt his name!
That he in mercy used the same;
That every means before was tried,
To win the foolish suicide.

Then, not till justice to the whole
Required the stroke, it did not fall;
O'erwhelming those and those alone,
Who called aloud for such a doom.

In order this to fully see,
Think for one moment how 't would be,
If no corrective arm arose
To stop the deadly stream of woes,—

A fearful chaos would ensue,
Engulphing all that's good and true;
The earth itself would be a blank,
O'erspread with every poison rank;

Would seethe and fester in its crime,
With vice and oaths its only chime;
Reflecting shame upon the God
Who did at first make all things good.

The Bible's God let man adore!
As well in judgments as in power;
Without them hope might take its flight,
For earth would be a perfect blight.

His dignity I do adore,
Nor of him I would ask the more
Than what he's offered in his word;
O, let me serve for that reward!

On all who live, and breathe, and move,
I would now call this God to love;
For he is worthy of all praise—
To him let hallelujahs rise.

E. S. W.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Conversion of Constantine: ITS RELIGIOUS RESULTS.

The conversion of Constantine, and the legal establishment of Christianity by his authority, may be considered as one of the most important events in ecclesiastical history. With him began the absolute power of the spiritual order, and the consequent enthralment of the human mind. The religious institutions which he established have outlived his civil and military policy in their effects upon the spiritual and social condition of modern society. These effects have been fruitful in many dire calamities to the human race, traceable in their origin to his injudicious and short-sighted policy.

In respect to the time, and the reality of the conversion of Constantine, many different opinions have been entertained. Some have lauded him to the skies for the services which he rendered to the Christian cause, while others have denounced and blamed him for his selfish and inconsistent conduct. It is true that his acts present a striking contrast to his profession of Christian faith. This should not lead us to condemn him as a hypocrite, or to obscure his good intentions and fidelity to the Christian cause. If he erred, it was because of his superstitious notions and mistaken views of Christian truth and principles. These views no doubt were strengthened by the flattery and indulgence of those Christians who dared not to reprove him, for fear of losing his favor and the influence of his authority. So that in time, he came to consider his own opinions of divine truth paramount to all others, and himself as arbiter in all ecclesiastical differences.

The true explanation of his Christian course seems to be, that he received from his father a bias in favor of Christianity; that he courted the favor of the Christians, at first, from motives of interest and ambition; and that finally he came to respect and admire their religion, and adopt it as his own, in the same manner as a prince at the present day would adopt the Protestant religion in preference to the Roman Catholic; and thus from habit and example he became a devout worshiper. To use his own assertion, he had been an indignant spectator of the savage cruelties which had been inflicted by the Roman soldiers, on those citizens whose religion was their only crime. He used the sign of the Cross as his military ensign, and by it raised the enthusiasm of his hireling soldiery, in his wars against his rivals, Licinius and Maxentius.

He seems for some time to have vacillated in his choice between the two religions; and he treated the Pagans with as much favor as the Christians. This may have been from prudence and policy, to preserve peace within his dominions. He afterwards became convinced of the folly and impiety of Pagan superstition, and persuaded all who would to embrace the Christian religion; and restrained by the force of his authority the worship of idols. He, however, did not receive baptism, which was then considered essential to salvation, until near his death. His religion seems to have been that of the understanding, rather than that of the heart. As to his being converted by a miracle, as stated by Eusebius, it is quite improbable, for there is no proof of the fact; and the vision of Constantine must have been a dream of a superstitious and overwrought imagination, or the invention of later times. He seems rather to have been flattered into the belief, that he was chosen of Heaven to reign upon earth, by the praises and marked attention of his Christian subjects.

Whatever opinions may be entertained, in respect to the reality of Constantine's conversion, his espousal of the Christian cause has been fruitful in great and important results.

First, it was the means of spreading Christianity, which before this time had to depend upon its own intrinsic merits and the faithfulness of its followers, to recommend it to the minds and hearts of the people. Its progress had been retarded, by the stubbornness of the Jews, the raillery of Pagan philosophers, the superstitions of the people, and the caprice of the Emperors. It now began to spread throughout the empire, and soon became the established religion. The example set by Rome was the means of spreading it into those eastern countries which had before excluded it.

The accession to their ranks of one so high in authority, naturally raised the hopes of the Christians, who now preached the gospel openly. And well it might, for they had been subjected to every form of cruelty and persecution which an inventive hatred could devise. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, numbers joined the Christians who were willing to share with them their trials. And the profession was kept much purer than when under the favorable auspices which afterward awaited it.

Second. It was the means of overthrowing the Pagan superstitions which had had full sway in the empire, and which embraced within it both idol worship and polytheism. The edict of Constantine granting toleration to the new faith, placed it in a position to be a powerful rival to the old faith. Paganism lost the influence of the Monarch, and with it a means of self-preservation. The wealth and splendor which had enriched the temples of the gods, was now expended upon houses of Christian worship. The people had been accustomed to look to their sovereign to take the lead in performing the heathen rites. They had come to reverence him and even to make him an object of worship. Of this they were deprived in the conversion of Constantine. It is in his reign that this system received its mortal wound from which it never fully recovered, and which proved fatal soon after Julian's reign.

Third. It established Christianity by laws which was the occasion of many of the evils which have afflicted society and the church down to the present time. While the Christian cause was making its way by overcoming the malice and rage of its enemies by its own divine energy, it retained its purity, for none would join except those who were convinced of its heavenly origin and immense importance. In times of exemption from persecution, many faithless ones found their way into its embrace, to introduce luxury and ease, to defile the purity of its doctrine, to incorporate within them the philosophy of the ancients, to bring reproach upon the cause, and then to leave and renounce it at the first appearance of a gathering storm.

Here we see the first appearance of Antichrist in any considerable degree, which became more apparent after the accession of Constantine. The splendor in which he arrayed the churches, and the worldly honor and dignity which he bestowed upon the teachers of christianity, allured many into the christian profession for the sake of its gifts; and thus began a system of pride, domination, and hypocrisy. Constantine and the christian leaders may have thought that they were doing God's service, in winning the heathen by such means, when they were in reality polluting the church of Christ, and making it a means of gratifying the vilest lusts and passions of the human heart. This was not all the work of a day but it was gradually tending towards this result.

Again. With the establishment of Christianity began the hierarchy of the bishops —Constantine changed the whole church government, remodeling it after the plan of the empire. The Emperor assumed to be the head of the Catholic Church, as he called it, by calling himself bishop, and claimed the power of regulating its external affairs. The other bishops corresponded to the various minor offices in the regulation of the Empire. This was an entire departure from the primitive order of things, as established by Christ and his apostles. This exaltation of the bishops to wealth, power, and authority, over the remaining members of the church, was the prolific source of every species of corruption.

Thus began the union of Church and State, in which the clergy wielded the arm of secular power, to accomplish its system of tyranny, superstition, and hypocrisy, which was now soon developed. Then began that increased importance of the clergy, and their domination over the human mind which afterward developed itself in absolute power. This assumed right was asserted in the decrees of the councils respecting the Arian controversy, to which was added another as dangerous, that of settling points of doctrine and determining what is heresy. It was here that Constantine made a great mistake, in substituting his authority for that of the Scriptures; and another still greater, in persecuting those who differed from him in opinion. The result of which was, in subsequent times, an ecclesiastical hierarchy with a mighty train of evils; a system sustaining every species of crime—a restraint upon liberty of conscience. Evils not yet eradicated, nor will be till Jesus comes to reign.

CHAS. H. PERKINS.

Little Things.

Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship; a bridle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the large parts of large buildings together; a word, a look, a frown —all are little things, but powerful for good or evil. Think of this, and mind the little things. Pay that little debt—it's promised, redeem it—if it's a shilling, hand it over—you know not what important event hangs upon it. Keep your word sacredly—keep it to the children, they will mark it sooner than any one else, and the effect will probably be as lasting as life. Mind the little things.

Things Lost Forever.

The following words from the pen of Lydia H. Sigourney are full of instructive meaning:

"Lost wealth may be restored by industry; the wreck of health regained by temperance; forgotten knowledge restored by study; alienated friendship smoothed into forgetfulness; even forfeited reputation won by patience and virtue; but who ever looked upon his vanished hours, recalled his slighted years, stamped them with wisdom, or effaced from heaven's record the fearful blot of wasted time. The foot-print on the sand is washed out by the ocean wave; and easier might we when years are fled, find that foot-print than recall lost hours.

For the Crisis.

Gleanings.

BY M. D. W.

To-day I gleaned a gem, said to have been found originally in an old almanac. Here it is:

"IMMATERIALITY

Is but another name for nonentity. It is the negative of all things and beings—of all existence. There is not one particle of proof to be advanced to establish its existence. It has no way to manifest itself to any intelligence in heaven or on earth.— Neither God, angels, nor men, could possibly conceive of such a substance, being or thing. It possesses no property or power by which to make itself manifest to any intelligent being in the universe. Reason and revelation never reveal it, nor do any of our senses witness its existence. It cannot be seen, felt, heard, tasted or smelled, even by the strongest organs, or the most acute sensibilities. It is neither liquid, nor solid, soft nor hard—it can neither extend nor contract. In short, it can exert no influence whatever—it can neither act, nor be acted upon. And even if it does exist, it can be of no possible use. It possesses no one desirable property, faculty nor use, yet, strange to say, Immateriality is the modern christian's God, his anticipated heaven, his immortal self—his all.

O sectarianism! O Atheism!! O annihilation!!! who can perceive the nice shades of difference between the one or the other? They seem alike all but in name. The atheist has no God. The sectarian has a God without body or parts. Who can define the difference? For our part we do not perceive the difference of a single hair; they both claim to be the negative of all things that exist—and both are equally powerless and unknown.

The atheist has no after life, or conscious existence beyond the grave. The sectarian has one, but it is immaterial, like his God; and without body or parts. Here again both are negative, and both arrive at the same point. Their faith and hope amount to the same; only it is expressed by different terms.

Again, the atheist has no heaven in eternity. The sectarian has one, but it is 'immaterial' in all its properties, and is therefore the negative of all riches and substances. Here again they are equal, and arrive at the same point. As we do not envy them the possession of all they claim, we will now leave them in the undisturbed enjoyment of the same, and proceed to examine the portion still left for the despised 'materialist' to enjoy.

What is God? He is a material, organized intelligence, possessing both body and parts. He is in the form of man. What is Jesus Christ? He is the Son of God, and is like his father, being the "brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person." He is a material intelligence, with body, parts, and passions; possessing immortal flesh and immortal bones.

What are men? They are the offspring of Adam. They are capable of receiving intelligence and exaltation to such a degree as to be raised from the dead with a body like that of Jesus Christ, and to possess immortal flesh and bones. Thus perfected, they will possess the material universe, that is, the earth, as their "everlasting inheritance." With these hopes and prospects before us, we say to the Christian world, who hold to immortality, that they are welcome to their God—their life—their heaven—and their all. They claim nothing but that which we throw away; and we claim nothing but that which they throw away. Therefore, there is no ground for quarrel or contention between us.

We choose all substance—what remains,
The mystical sectarian gains;
All that each claims each shall possess,
Nor grudge each others happiness.

An immaterial God they choose,
An immaterial heaven and hell;
For such a God we have no use,
In such a heaven we cannot dwell.

We claim the earth, the air, and sky,
And all the starry worlds on high;
Gold, silver, ore, and precious stones,
And bodies made of flesh and bones.

Such is our hope, our heaven, our all,
When once redeemed from Adam's fall;
All things are ours, and we shall be
The Lord's to all eternity."

For the Crisis.

Angels.

A DISCOURSE, BY WM. SHEPHERD.

"For he (God) shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Ps. 91: 11.

"His angels that excel in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word." Ps. 103: 20.

"Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1: 14.

It is written, "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed, belong unto us, and to our children forever." We infer from this, though it be "the glory of God to conceal a thing; but the honor of Kings is to search out a matter," that every thing which is a subject of divine revelation belongs unto us; and hence it is proper for us to examine, investigate, and discuss those things which are revealed on all appropriate occasions, if our object be for his glory, in the advancement of his truth and the good of those who may surround us. It is useless for men of narrow and contracted minds—the stereotyped sectarian, the denominational zealot, and self-conceited and insignificant bigot, to raise the cry that we are stepping out upon forbidden ground, meddling with matters and things which do not concern us,—presuming to penetrate into mysteries with which we have no business,—things which remain locked up in the bosom of God only to be unfolded in "the world to come;" thus endeavoring to deter us from acting upon the liberal principle and advice of the Apostle, wherein he exhorts us to "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good;" telling us, that "Whatsoever things are true . . . honest . . . just . . . pure . . . lovely . . . (and) of good report, (to) think of these things." And did we heed these sophisticated arguments, we should make but little progress in our growth "in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Now the subject which we propose to discuss at this time bears, as you may observe, no other but those excellent qualities which the Apostle here enumerates and calls upon us to contemplate, namely, such things which are "true . . . honest . . . just . . . pure . . . lovely (and of) good report;" for if the holy angels of God do not possess those amiable traits, and if those attributes do not characterize these beings, to what class of God's creatures shall we look who may inherit them? But that "the host of heaven" do, is very evident; hence, how worthy of our attention as a matter of lawful, edifying and beneficial discussion.

We will now proceed to examine the subject proposed, which we design doing in three separate sections; thus,—

1. Their existence, nature, mode of being.

2. Their offices and work in the Patriarchal, Prophetic and Jewish ages.

3. The relation they sustain to God and man in the sublime scheme of redemption; the position they occupy now, and the nature of their work in this dispensation.

These points, then, in their respective order, will claim our attention for a little while. And may the Supreme Goodness render their consideration blessed to us through the divinely appointed means, and especially through the sensible ministrations of those angelic beings which form the subject of our discourse as we pass along; that both the reader and writer may be benefited thereby and God glorified. Amen.

Angel then, or messenger, is the common name given to those spiritual and intelligent beings, by whom God in a great measure executeth his providential and gracious work, and who are most ready and active in his service, ever obedient to do or perform his will. The light of nature gives strong reason to suppose the existence of such a class of beings, but Scripture renders it alone indubitable. The existence of supernatural beings, otherwise called angels, has been accredited from time immemorial; and such a belief is found in the formulas and creeds of most of the heathen nations. The idea of them, however vague, dim and imperfect their conception, is quite universal. That there is a future state, and that there are existences of a higher order than man, which mediate in some degree for him between this state and the future, has always been prevalent among mankind in every age; but those ideas, chiefly, are very erroneous and extravagant. The followers of Mohammed, you are aware, are very strong in their opinion of the existence of good and bad angels. Others believe in what they term good and evil spirits.

This subject affords a wide field for metaphysical speculation; but we dare not venture out upon it beyond the sacred precincts of the word, or divine testimony, lest we (as many others have) become lost in the mist of "vain imaginations" "puffed up" by a "fleshy mind" and declare beyond and "above that which is written." We shall endeavor to adhere closely to "the form of sound words," i. e., the words of the Lord, and assert nothing more in relation to the matter than what we find recorded in the precious Volume.

As to the existence of angels, that is a clearly revealed doctrine of the Bible, and a very consoling one too, unto all believers. There is something very congenial in the thought, particularly when coupled with the consideration of that peculiar relation which they sustain toward the saints. And it is here from the sacred pages of this book that we learn something of their nature and essence, which we find is somewhat superior to that of man's, as the Psalmist declares, speaking of man in connection with God's providential care over him: "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels." Ps. 8: 4-6. And in another Psalm, speaking of the angels, he says, "Who excel in strength, &c." Ps. 103: 20; and as the Apostle affirms, speaking of their energies as compared with those of man's—"Which are greater in power and might." 2 Pet. 2: 11. It is very evident that they are endowed with a far superior degree of wisdom than man, and equally so with power, which will be more fully portrayed presently. How long prior to the creation of the globe as a habitable tenement they existed, we are not able to say, as we have no authentic data in regard to the matter. Some conjecture that they were created at the time and in conjunction with our world; but this idea is barely possible, for it cannot be that the mighty universe was void and empty of rational and intelligent beings capable of enjoyment, and of honoring and appreciating the Divine Being, his munificent works and ways, so many ages which must have rolled around anterior to earth's formation. It does not seem likely; it is not in keeping with the divine procedure. And then again, the Scriptures emphatically declare that they were present at the creation and "sang together . . . and shouted for joy." Job 38: 7.

The manner in which they were created, and from what substance, we are not informed; neither if they are all the immediate production of the Almighty, or whether their creation was analagous to that of man's. It is probable the latter may have been the case. These beings number myriads upon myriads, and it does not look like the work of immediate production from the hand of Deity; but rather their formation and their peopling the illimitable dominions of the Most High has its counterpart or modus operandi in the human family. As to the substance of which they are composed we have no certain knowledge; we say substance, because we do not believe them to be purely immaterial beings in conformity with the orthodox sentiment; but on the contrary, we conceive them to be material, tangible, and bodily beings.

The substance of angels is highly refined, and of a very delicate and subtle nature; so much so, that all which we recognize as material, and which affects us, such as the elements which compose the world and the atmosphere which surrounds it, cannot effect them in the least. They may be said to be spirits, compared with the grossness of our nature; but, [illegible] tangible bodies, more [illegible] than man, while their shape or form doubtless bears a resemblance to him; for we find that they frequently appeared with messages from heaven to the patriarchs and prophets, in the likeness of men, and conversed with them as men. Upon what they subsist we are not informed; but we know they have eaten and drunken, and are subject to fatigue, as was the case with those who visited Abraham; and that they have slept, as those who were sent to convey Lot out of Sodom.—Gen. 18: 1–8; 19: 1–4, 16. David says "man did eat angel's food," (Ps. 78 : 25,) clearly intimating that the angels have a food peculiarly adapted to their constitutions, of which they partake, not perhaps absolutely necessary for the sustenance of their existence, but as a matter of refreshment. Now you are aware that the saints have the promise that they shall become like unto the angels.—Luke 20: 36. And it is said of them, among other things, that they shall eat bread and drink wine in the future state or kingdom of God.—Matt. 26: 29; Luke 14: 15. Their motive power, no doubt, is of extraordinary fleetness; space being little or no object to them, it is likely that they travel swifter than the rapidity of the magnetic fluid, or like the glance of a thought itself. David says: "He maketh his angels spirits."—Ps. 104 : 4, i. e. like the swift coursers flying to "do his commandments" with marvelous expedition unto the remotest parts of his boundless empire. They are not subject to the law of gravitation as we are, owing chiefly to the subtle nature of which they are constituted; hence their perfect ease in the air, moving through the atmosphere with far more comfort and greater facilities than we can upon the earth. The idea which is generally entertained in respect to their mode of travel, they often being represented by the artist with the superfluous appendage of an enormous pair of wings, in order to their transportation from place, is not so accurate a picture as it might be, for we have reason to believe that they can change their place of residence or move from planet to planet without the aid of wings; not but what some may possess them more as a matter of ornament, however, than necessary to their power of locomotion. There are a few passages in Scripture, it is true, where they are portrayed with wings. The seraphim and cherubim, for instance, come under the head of angels or holy messengers of God. See Isa. 6 : 23; Ezek. 1 : 5–11. But we shall say nothing further under this section more than to add that their nature and essence is divine, that they are material beings, possessing real, tangible bodies, though extremely volatile, with superior wisdom, holiness and purity, and placed in a most happy and honorable estate, but capable of change. Their knowledge is great, but not infinite. 1 Pet. 1: 12; Matt. 24: 36. They have the faculty of impressing and influencing corporeal bodies, and a method of communication among themselves. Their manner of acquiring knowledge doubtless is intuitive. They subsist on food adapted to their natures, which may be that which the Psalmist styles "the corn of heaven." Ps. 78 : 24. Their shape is nearer the human than any other; their speech most musical and harmonious, and that they are beautiful and fair, both in deportment, form and face, beyond all the powers of our most fertile imagination to conceive, is evident.

2. Their various offices, the character of their work in the Patriarchal, Prophetic and Jewish ages.

The divine government is beautiful and perfect in all its various departments. Its laws are all based upon the great principles of love, justice, mercy and truth, and they are administered by those holy intelligences—God's "angels who excel in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto his voice . . . ministers of his that do his pleasure." Ps. 103: 20, 21. And their names of Eloihim, Archangel, Seraphim, Cherubim, thrones, dominions, principalities, and powers, suggest an order among them, though of what kind we know not; (Col 1; 16,) but that it is perfect order and harmony directed by infinite wisdom we feel assured. Some no doubt exceed others in wisdom and in understanding and power; such as Gabriel, who instructed Daniel in regard to future events, and the revealing angel who was sent to John on the island of Patmos. Hence these are placed in more conspicuous and responsible stations in the divine hierarchy, where there are degrees and a variety of offices differing materially in several functions, as well as there will be in the coming Kingdom of God, which will doubtless be a form of government copied from that, for our Lord, speaking in reference to this, says, that some peculiar ones, i. e., the Apostles, shall be enthroned therein and set as judges or rulers, ministering the government over "the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. 19; 28. And discoursing of John the Baptist to a certain one, he says, "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven, is greater than he." Matt. 11 : 11. The same is taught in his sermon on the mount, (Matt. 5 : 19 ;) while the Prophet long ere this, taught the same, (Dan. 12 : 3,) intimating without a doubt the doctrine of degrees. But let us return, and see what their business chiefly was to this earth in the earlier ages.

We find that they were sent by the Almighty from time to time on errands of mercy, and to deliver important messages to the human family—to forewarn people against coming calamities—to shield them from dangers, and to execute condign punishment upon the wicked, destroying whole armies, cities and nations at a blow. It is not unlikely that some of the most potent angels assisted, materially, in the work of creation; for we are not necessarily to understand because we read "God created the heavens and the earth," that it was the immediate production of his handi-work any more than it may be affirmed of a master mason or carpenter, that he erected or builded such and such a house or edifice, when perhaps he never touched one particle of the material of which it was composed, but the same being accomplished through the instrumentality of others employed for the purpose. We read of some men building cities; such as Cain building the city of Enoch, when perhaps he himself never laid a stone by his own hand, it being done by others in and through his orders and under his direction. It is said by the Apostle, that, "he that built all things is God," (Heb. 3: 4;) but we obviously see how it was done through the medium of angels and men. David in speaking of this saith, "The Lord doth build up Jerusalem, and gathereth together the outcasts of Israel." How? Through this same means. "God said, let there be light." Here is a command; and may not the work have been accomplished through those ministers of his that do his pleasure? It is recorded in one place "that he (God) rode upon a cherub and did fly, yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind." God's riding on cherubims (which may be a superior order of angels,) may import his majestic use of them in the dispensation of his providence. Ps. 18 : 10. In the preface to the record of the law it reads,—"And God spake all these words, saying," &c. Yet we are not to understand from this, when Moses was in the Mount and received the tables of stone containing the law, that the statutes and ordinances came directly from the sacred hand of Deity, as this notion would conflict and produce an apparent discrepancy with the Apostle's argument, as he expressly affirms, alluding to the Israelites and their era,—"Who have received the law by the disposition of angels and have not kept it." And "it was ordained by angels;" and in another place he says, that it, "the word (or law was) spoken (i. e. given) by angels." Acts 7 : 53; Gal. 3 : 19; Heb. 2 : 2. This idea is substantiated by what the Psalmist declares—"The chariots of God are twenty thousand (or many) even thousands of angels: the Lord is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place." Then "the Lord gave the word, (i. e., his law and commandments,) and great was the company thereof that published it;" these heavenly messengers of which David speaks, right in this connection, and to which the Apostle alludes. See Ps. 68.

Again, we must bear in mind that these celestial beings sometimes in Scripture are designated by the reverential name of God, and act on certain occasions in his stead, bearing the divine insignia, as in the case of Gideon, Manoah, Hagar and others. See Judges 6 : 11–24; 13 : 22; Gen. 21 : 17–20. The following passage, however, will make this apparent. Jehovah declares to Moses, "Behold, I send an angel before thee, to keep thee in thy way, and to bring thee to the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him." Ex. 23 : 20, 21. According to this, then, their claims upon "the church in the wilderness" were of no trifling character, and the position they occupied, and the relation they evidently sustained toward God's people, were as responsible as high. Taking this view of the subject, that those heavenly beings are all engaged in and made subservient to the Creator in the sublime operations of his providence, and the dispensations of his grace, we are better able to apprehend the import of certain expressions; such as,—"And the hand of the Lord was with me;" "And he laid his hand upon me;" "And the Lord appeared unto him in a dream;" "I will go down now and see;" "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro the earth, beholding the evil and the good;" together with the fact of Abram addressing the angel as the Lord.

(To be continued.)

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT - - - - - EDITOR.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 13, 1858.

Office. . . . 167 Hanover street.

Bills.

Those who received bills will notice that we did not include, as usual, the advance pay for the present volume. One dollar should be added to pay for the present volume, which closes the 16th Feb., 1859.

We have a large free list, and we hope that those who can possibly pay will not oblige us to cut off the poor, by withholding the means to sustain our paper.

Strange Things.

The Spiritualists have recently published a work of six hundred and eighty octavo pages called the Educator, which purports to have come "from organized associations in the spirit-life, through John Murray Spear," and edited by A. E. Newton, editor of Spiritual Age, published in Boston.

The object of those connected with this work, as expressed on the title page, is the "establishment of a divine social state on earth." This work embraces a great variety of topics, giving directions in relation to the new government which it is proposed to establish, after the present is overturned. It is to remodel all our institutions, social, political, moral and religious, forming an entire new system of laws regulating trade and commerce, marriage relations, schools and colleges, in short, every department of government and society is to be completely revolutionized. It is the most stupendous plan ever concocted by men and demons in the history of our race, and is evidently fast approaching its consummation. But our readers will best understand the programme of demons and Spiritualists by reading some extracts from this work. The spirits, or demons, affirm that they have formed an association, called "The Association of Beneficents," for the purpose of instructing the people on the earth. This association is professedly composed of the spirits of the following men:—Benjamin Rush, Benjamin Franklin, John Howard, Roger Sherman, Oliver Dennett, Tho. Clarkson, Joseph Hallett, John Murray, John Pounds, Thos. Jefferson, John Spear, I. T. Hopper,

On page seventy-three of the Educator it is said,—

"The hour has come when the spiritual movement is to test PERSONS. Test after test has been demanded of the spirit-world, and has been given. Now we turn the tables; now we ask for tests of fidelity to principles. It must be seen and felt that this is an earnest movement."

We shall take occasion to look at some of their principles. And first, we will notice their method employed to "test persons," who are to occupy a prominent place in "The Movement," as it is denominated. We quote from pages 412 and 413.

"What, then, are the essential qualifications requisite to fit men for the work now proposed? These qualifications will be indicated in their natural orders:

First. The person whom it is proposed to engage in this labor should clearly comprehend the fundamental principles on which the new government is to be based. He may be catechised in the following way:

Question 1st. Do you understand that it requires two persons, male and female, to constitute a whole man?

2d. Do you understand that each man, and each woman, if you please, has a perfect right, under all circumstances, in all conditions, and in whatever locations, to do as he or she pleases?

3d. Do you allow that government is but a temporary arrangement, to be outgrown with greatest possible speed?

If the person thus addressed is able, without the least equivocation, without the slightest qualification, to answer each and all these questions affirmatively, that will constitute one essential qualification.

The second point is, is the person ready NOW to aid in constructing a government based on these fundamental principles? He need not be asked whether he may be ready at a distant time, but the question to be propounded is, are you ready to commence this work now? Are you willing to risk your reputation, your property, your life, if need be, in the new enterprise? Searching though this question may be, yet, unless the individual questioned can answer it fully, frankly, and without hesitation, he is not the man for the time,—whatever he may have been, whatever he may become. If that searching question can be answered affirmatively, so far so good.

A Third and final question is, Do you love these fundamental principles, as they have been presented to your mind, more than all things else? Are you perfectly willing to promote and promulgate these principles publicly, privately, in church, in state, at home, abroad, wherever you are? Are you willing to announce your allegiance to these fundamental principles, even though it may separate you from church, from state, from home, from land, from children, from the companion of your bosom? If the person questioned hesitates, then he is unfit for this new struggle; he ought not to be engaged; for when the storm comes, at the very time when his services will be most needed, when the winds blow and the waves dash high against the newly-launched ship, when every person on board should be at his post, then this man will be missing."

On page 434 and 435, we read:—"When a sufficient number of persons can be found, having the qualifications mentioned, . . . and when it is felt that the people are ripe for action, let the decisive blow be struck. It is for woman to start the next political revolution,—which will be the grandest the world has ever witnessed."

"The foregoing is from one department of "The Association of Beneficents," called "The Association of Governmentizers." They profess to be the spirits of Robert Rantoul, Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, Martin Luther, Roger Williams and Socrates.

We would now ask the candid reader what he thinks of such things? Did the leaders of the French Revolution have tests more searching than the ones just read? Did any band of robbers or pirates ever require more of those admitted into their fiendish associations? Spiritualism may now look "like a lamb," but it talks like "a dragon."

In speaking of Mormonism, this "Association of Governmentizers" remark, "Their (the Mormon) labors, their system of government, their legislative and judicial code, will, in the future, challenge the admiration of the civilized world."

In speaking of the judicial system under the proposed new government, they remark on pages 454 and 456,—

"When one is charged with an offence, the astrologer should be called into requisition."—"The state, then, should have, on fixed salary, a sufficient number of astrologers to aid it in coming to a decision in respect to the character and future prospects of each accused person."—"Together with the astrologer there should be associated the magician, and also the necromancer."—"All that vast branch of judicial labor bearing relation to deeds, to wills, to boundaries of estates, etc., can be settled with little or no difficulty, by calling the framers themselves from the spirit-world, and placing the GHOSTS on the stand."

The spirits say, "We come to lay the foundation of a new and unheard of enterprise," and "the corner-stone of this new enterprise rests on the following eternal principles: First, Man is IMMORTAL. More anon.

Perplexity.

"Distress of nations with perplexity" still continues, without any prospect of abatement. Business men have vainly hoped for better times, but their bright visions all fade away, and perish like the hope of the hypocrite. They know not whether it is best to go forward or retreat; turn to the right or left. All is uncertainty to them, but to the student of prophecy all is plain. He knows what to expect. The child of God can lift up his head and rejoice, knowing that his redemption draweth near. Though passing through tribulation deep, he is strengthened by the fact, because the last part of his pilgrimage is to be surrounded by perils, and these now indicate that home is not far distant. Cheer up, pilgrim, the Lord knows where you are, and will not forsake you when help is most needed. Be firm, and "stand up for JESUS."

The following shows the state of trade in France, where we should expect bright prospects if in any part of the world. A commercial letter received at the arrival of the last steamer, the Hammonia, says:—

"Considerable distress prevails among the tradesmen of Paris—a fact proved by the number of sales by execution which take place every day. Sales by auction have become so numerous here that the public salesroom is being for the second time enlarged."

☞ A minister had need look to it, that he profit by all his preaching himself.—Rogers.

For the Crisis.

The Conclusion of the Whole Matter.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to tell my friends, and enemies too, if I have any, a long story. My story will be somewhat about myself, and somewhat about the cause of Christ. Almost or quite twenty years ago I was a Christian minister, at Kennebunkport, Me. I was trying then to live and preach for Christ, according to the light I then had. I saw the salvation of God attend my labors to some extent, and enjoyed, from time to time, many refreshing seasons from the Lord: but I was not contented. I wished to understand more of the Bible; and particularly I wished to understand the prophecies. I read and prayed, and prayed and read. I sought knowledge in books. I thought, and tried to think still more deeply. I was fully persuaded that there was a connection of truth which we had not got hold of. I wanted that. I entreated God to give me the key! I desired, most intensely, to open this treasury. About that time I heard of a book that was published, concerning the "Second Advent of Jesus Christ about 1843." This note of information awoke my soul. I wanted that book. At length I was permitted to read it. It did not satisfy me. I did not like it. I still thirsted for something more. At length I was placed in a situation where I could read, converse, and hear lectures on the prophecies to my heart's content. This filled me with joy and thanksgiving. I became at length fully settled in the following elements of truth.

1. Jesus Christ will come again, the second time, to this earth literally, really, substantially, identically, bodily, and personally—the Son of Mary, and the Son of God.

2. There will be a literal, real, identical, and personal resurrection of the dead, both good and bad.

3. Our mundane system, and all of its concomitants, which God originally made in beauty and blessedness, will be delivered from the curse of sin and all evil, and be restored to its original condition and finally made all new, stamped with the manifestable glory of God eternally.

4. That sin and sinners will eternally cease out of the universe of God.

5. That the great day of Restitution and Judgment are near at hand to take place.

6. That holy men and women are not rewarded until Christ comes again the second time; and sinners are not finally punished until the second resurrection, which will be after the resurrection of the good.

7. That all the prophecies of the Bible are to be understood and applied in the most simple and literal manner, and when thus understood and applied it appears certain that the kingdom and reign of our Lord will be on the earth, with his saints, "over the house of Jacob and Israel forever." On these points I am settled forever. I cannot, I will not, I must not, I dare not change. I shall surely see the end of this matter. This doctrine I sometimes call "The Advent Doctrine," by way of distinction. I sometimes call it "Millenarianism"—not "Millerism!" Mr. Miller did not so teach. It is not "New England Adventism!" It is Bibleism. I think "Millerism" has failed utterly. I think "New England Adventism" is fitful; but I think the above elements of truth are from heaven. I know some seem to love to glory in "Millerism," but I choose to learn wisdom by the past, and glory only in the Lord. "Let no man glory in men!" Shall we not obey this command? "Cease ye from man!"

I love to preach the above elements, together with all other great questions of Bible doctrine, in such a form and manner as the wisdom of righteousness seems to demand. I shall so preach, let me go where I may. I am solicited to preach among various denominations, and I shall comply just as long as they do not put any trammels on me. When I cannot preach the "Advent Doctrine" with them freely I shall not preach at all among them. Have you heard that I have joined the Baptists? Well, I have not. I have not seen it duty to do so. I do not know as I ever shall see it duty to join the Baptists or any body else; but if I shall, at any time, think God requires me to join them, and think I can do more good by so doing I shall surely do so.

I am at present free from all sects to love all christians and preach where a door opens. Let me go where I will, and do what I may, you may rest in perfect confidence that I shall fully and freely proclaim the above named principles of the Bible. But when I join any body of people, in a denominational sense, I will tell you of it, and be open about it. I do not say I never shall join any, but I say I never shall join any sect until God makes it appear to me that it is my duty to. Do you ask me if I do not compromise the truth in preaching among the sects? No. Ask them who hear me. But I will not go and tell them I am a "Millerite," for that would be a foolish lie—I am not one. I claim to read the Bible on my "own hook" and think for only one man, and let others do the same. I do not choose to go and tell them that God has been in all the childish mistakes we have made, and palm off our ignorance and foolishness on the Eternal One. O human rashness! I choose to confess and forsake all wrong, whether it be criminal wrong or mistaken wrong.

I do not feel condemned for some wrongs of mistake, and yet those wrongs are none the more rights! How foolish for people to get nervous and excited, and try to prove that 2 and 2 make 5, or that a mistake is a truth; or that 15 mistakes on the time of the Advent is in the order of God! Do let us be men. How childish to talk about one's "going back," because when he makes a mistake he happens to have christian honesty enough to say so! "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Dogmatism is not meekness. Calling hard names is not meekness. Do not let us doubt that God has been in the "Roman Advent movement," in all of it except the wrongs and mistakes, from the days of Cunningham of Scotland to the present hour. God sustains the movement too! The light is spreading! The "Word" is running! More will yet be done, while the "Bridegroom" tarries. We will tell the tale of glory. We will sound the alarm. We will bombard the camp and city of popular error. We will not compromise. We will not spare.

It is literal truth or nothing. We are not after denominationalism. We are after truth, souls, and God! The name is not the great question, but the thing itself we want. Let us strip off the human husks of our own corn. Let us not choke the people with the bees and bread, but give them Bible honey. Stop, stop! not too much at a time, but a little, and a little more, as they can receive it. Too much milk, even, is not good at one time. Cut the meat up small—it may find but a small passage. "I have many things to say unto you, but you cannot bear them now;" so said the wisest Teacher. We all had to come along little by little. God had patience with us, let us have patience with others.

Come, come now, let us be christians. Let us turn over a new leaf. Let us not hobby on one point. If a man should try to live on loaf sugar solely, he would starve to death. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." We want the WHOLE gospel. When the mouse, in the fable, looked out of the box in which he had always been, he saw a great many more things that he had no knowledge of before, and exclaimed: "What a big world is this!" Let us not suppose that we are all in all. God is a great being, and he knoweth them that are his. We read of some "who trusted in themselves, that they were righteous and despised others." Let us look out. Human nature is strong material. What a mean object is a bigot. I hate self-righteousness.

There, Brother Grant, I have written all my heart's present sentiments. I wish to report myself frankly. Some, who need another dip in the pool of meekness, will, I conclude, be offended. Well, they may rail; I will pray. They may look and feel thunder; I will look and feel sunshine. I am a feeble one, but, O blessed be the God of my salvation, I am full of all comfort and peace in the Holy Spirit. Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest, is in my heart and on my tongue. I am the Lord's. His work is my work forever. God bless you all, dear children. COME, LORD JESUS, COME QUICKLY. Amen.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Newburyport, Mass.

P. S. I think wherever there are brethren enough, in a given place, who look for the coming of our Lord, they should get up protracted meetings as often as possible, and pour this great truth on the ears of the people. Go forward, brethren. I will do all I can to help. If you want me to come and help you, write a little beforehand.

E. B.

☞ With most men, experience is like the stern lights of a ship, which only illumine the path it has traversed.

Boston.

Our prospects for doing good in this city have not been so good as now, since I became acquainted with this people. Bro. E. Burnham is supplying the desk for the present. Last Lord's day, our large hall was crowded to its utmost capacity; many stood up, and others were obliged to go away for want of room. Our prayer meetings are excellent, for the peace of God prevails in our midst. The truth is spreading, praise the Lord.

From Sr. M. L. Pratt.

Dear Christian Friends:—Lonely and weary I once more take my pen to give vent to my full heart in writing. Nothing on earth can afford me true pleasure; nothing satisfy the deep desires of my heart, only the charms and beauties of that dear Friend who died for me. The charms of this vain world fade away before the dazzling charms presented to us in the rich gospel of the Savior. O, the beauty of the gospel of Christ; what glory gilds the sacred page; here the aching, burdened spirit finds repose; here the heavy laden find rest, for his yoke is easy and his burden light.

"Oh, who could bear life's stormy doom,
Did not thy wing of love
Come brightly wafting through the gloom,
Our peace-branch from above?"

Yes, were it not for the promises of God to lean upon, our hearts must often sink beneath its weight of sorrow, care and woe; did not some sweet ray of hope brighten up our gloomy pathway, we soon should sink into dark and deep despair. While the burning tears flow in floods from our eyes, and it seems as if we could not be comforted, ere we are aware a soft and cheering ray of hope banishes our tears, and dispels our gloom and sorrow. And O, how rich that soul that has in possession a hope beyond this vale of tears, a hope big with immortality! How secure are we if our hope is firmly anchored within the vail. Here, in this dark vale of woe, our hearts are often made sad; anxiety, care, sorrow and anguish mark our pathway through this vale of tears. But how sweet the thought, that soon we shall be free from all these trials and troubles. O! when will sin and sorrow end?

"When shall I see the day
That ends my woes?
When shall I victory gain
O'er all my foes?"

O for more of the Holy Spirit to eradicate from my heart the least and last remains of sin! O that the blood of Christ would wash away every stain of sin and guilt! O thou blessed Comforter, cheer my desponding heart, banish these gloomy, distracting feelings, and fill me with thy love. I want to be at rest where the inhabitants shall not say I am sick, but health will bloom in every countenance. When will these burning tears of anguish be wiped away by the hand of that gentle Friend whose compassionate heart is touched with the feelings of our infirmities? O lovely Jesus! why dwell I not with thee? Why am I still here in this wilderness of woe, where I must needs weep in solitude and silence? Would that I could reign with thee now! Would that I never more might have occasion to shed the bitter tear! Would that I might forever repose in thy lovely embrace! Soon we shall see him; soon the last tear will be shed. O hail, happy day!

Your sister in tribulation,
Mary L. Pratt.

Vineland, Wis., Sept.

The Pentateuch Confirmed.—A work has recently been published in London by an accomplished Egyptian scholar, who, in examining Egyptian records, has found traces of a history parallel to that written by Moses. He finds James mentioned five times, Moses twice, and Balak son of Zippor, at a place called Huzoth; that a people of whom Moses was leader marched towards Palestine by the way of Migdol and Zoar; that they were connected with the names Midia and Aram; that there was a contest at a place of a great water-flood; that a royal or noble youth meets a sudden and mysterious death, and that a royal order is immediately issued for the hasty departure of a people for their feast of "passing the dead;" and that miracles are named as being performed by their leader in Lower Egypt.—Adv. and Jour.

☞ A work by Martin Luther, never before translated into English, has just appeared in London. It is called "The Creation; A Commentary on the First Five Chapters of the Book of Genesis.

☞ Eight thousand conversions among children were reported by the Methodist Sabbath Schools of Philadelphia Conference for the past year—equaling about one-half the number in the entire Methodist Church the year preceding.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, Oct. 29.

The Hammonia left Southampton on the 21st ult.

The news by this arrival is generally unimportant.

One Day Later.—Quebec, Oct. 5.—The Canadian Screw Steamship Nova Scotian, from Liverpool 22d ult., arrived at this port this morning.

The London papers publish a report of Mr. Varley, electrician of the Atlantic telegraph, on the present state of the cable. His experiments show that the cable has not parted, faint signals still being received from Newfoundland, and speaks of another and more distant fault, the locality of which he cannot estimate without going to Newfoundland.

The Spanish government has ordered a new reinforcement of 3000 troops, and all large vessels of war unemployed, to proceed to Cuba immediately.

STILL LATER.—ARRIVAL OF STEAMER CANADA.

Great Britain.—The conflict between the officials of the Atlantic Telegraph Company continues. Mr. Brett had issued a second pamphlet in answer to Waterhouse's statements. He charges the latter with ignorance of the facts of the case, and disputes the correctness of his deductions. Mr. Brett says that simple rope or gutta percha-covered cables have been proved to be useless, and hopes the company will lay a cable of three electric conductors next year.

A new telegraph cable between England and Holland has been successfully laid. It was the heaviest yet submerged, weighing 1260 tons, although the distance was only 140 miles.

Orders have been issued for 2000 reinforcements to India during October.

FRANCE.

Fleets are being constructed for troops and sailors who are to form an establishment on the shores of the Bay of Tourance, Cochin China.

The Paris correspondent of the Independent Belge says that the French forces at Rome are to be augmented.

RUSSIA.

The Russians are reported to have gained another great victory over the Circassians.

At Moscow the Metropolitan Archbishop addressed a solemn allocution to the Emperor, charging him to carry the Orthodox christian faith by all means and appliances into the heart of China.

LATE EUROPEAN NEWS.—RELIGIOUS FANATICISM IN TURKEY.

By our telegraphic despatches received last night, we have later European news. In its political intelligence, there is no item of more interest than that which narrates the progress of fanaticism in Turkey, as it prepares the mind for a series of events of no ordinary character, and may be the forerunner of the extinction of the Turkish empire.

When Abdul Mejid, in the strength and vigor of his youth, but a few years ago ascended the throne of Turkey, and directed his incessant attention to the temporal condition of his people, the civilized world regarded him with admiration; and, even now, he is placed in a dilemma more through the interference of friendly powers than by any weakness in his own. For more than thirty years, the Russians have been attempting to gain a passage to the Mediterranean, and have made encroachments upon Northern Turkey, subduing Circassia, and fomenting religious jealousies in the minds of the people. Woronsoff, an able soldier and a skillful statesman, aided by all the best talent that Russia, through policy, exiled into the Circassian region and employed there, has prepared the way to take advantage of Turkish weakness, and to defeat Austria that has been collecting troops upon the frontier to be ready for the emergency so long anticipated. France is an anxious spectator; and Great Britain not behind-hand in earnestness, as has been proved in the bombardment of Jeddah.

When the Turk fights, it is with the Koran in one hand and the scimetar in the other, as did the founder of their religion, and the present religious fanaticism is a sure indication that the Turkish people are preparing themselves for action in the battle field, regardless of all consequences, and unaware that their country will be swallowed up in the crisis which would ensue from a conflict. Egypt is under the rule of the Sultan, for the Pasha is but its spiritual head, and the drama in which she may take a part with Turkey is likely to be one of profound interest to the world.

On many accounts, Americans may regard the extinguishment of Turkey as a great evil, and our only hope is, that the religious fanaticism of the Moslem may not precipitate the downfall of that empire. Yet it cannot be concealed that civil strife and religious fury are doing great mischief. From Morocco to Persia, where a Mahommedan is at the head of the government, not only does political vitality dwindle in contact with the progress of civilization, but a ferocity based upon religion, is sweeping over the entire territory. Seven or eight years ago, a similar outbreak of fanaticism marked Northern Turkey, but the present mania is wider spread, and exists under circumstances more favorable to the development of evil to the Turkish nation. It may be diminished in time to save Turkey a little longer from the same fate that has made mere provinces of Servia, Bosnia, and Wallachia. We apprehend, however, that the absorption of Turkey is inevitable. It had been wiser, perhaps, to have left her to the mercy of Russia than to the friendly protection of the Western Powers, under whose kindness she seems destined to be doomed to a speedy extinction.—Philad. Inq., Sept. 22.

New York Crystal Palace and its Contents destroyed by Fire.

New York, Oct. 5.—The Crystal Palace, with all its contents, was entirely destroyed by fire this afternoon. The Fair of the American Institute was being held there at the time. A large amount of property was destroyed, consisting of mechanical and agricultural implements, melodeons, pianos, steam engines, and other kind of goods that were on exhibition. The fire originated in the lumber room, and was, no doubt, the work of an incendiary. There were in the building at the time some 2000 persons, chiefly women and children. The consternation among these was fearful; many were knocked down and trampled under foot, but none were seriously injured, with the exception of one man, who was killed. The loss is variously estimated at from one million to a million and a half dollars. The Palace originally cost $800,000. One estimate makes the worth of the articles on exhibition about half a million.

Obituary Notices.

Died in Natick, R. I., July 30th, Elder Nathaniel Warner, aged 53 years.

Our brother professed faith in Christ when fourteen years of age, and ever lived so near to Christ as never to have the mark of a back slider set against him. He has been a faithful and acceptable preacher in the old Baptist denomination for some twenty years, holding his connection with them until his death. But within a year past, he has been led to examine the doctrine in regard to man's immortality, and the destruction of the wicked. He acknowledged and proclaimed the truths so far as he was able, his health being quite feeble for a number of years. The widow and two sons are left to mourn the absence of a kind husband and an affectionate father; and the community a faithful and much respected minister of the gospel. By his request the writer preached his funeral sermon, to a large and attentive audience, in the Baptist church, from Job 14: 14. E. Bellows.

Died in this city, Oct. 2d, 1858, Lizzie F. Sanderson, aged 27 years and 9 months.

The subject of this notice was not only known to the friends of Salem, but she had a large circle of acquaintance elsewhere, who are left to mourn her loss. It seldom falls to our lot to record the death of one whose virtues shone more brilliantly than the deceased. She was not simply a believer in the great doctrine of the Advent, but she was a christian. She was distinguished not so much for her great pretensions to religion, as for her uniform action, meekness of mind, and sweetness of disposition. The christianity in which she believed, was of that kind which, while it has to do with the outer, invariably manifests itself in the inner life. Indeed, it was the latter that regulated and gave character to the former.

Her death was not altogether unexpected. Although she was sick for some time, yet the most sanguine hopes were entertained of her recovery, until about two weeks before her decease. From this time it became apparent that disease was fast doing its work.

The morning before she died, she requested her friends to sing the 23d Psalm:

"The Lord is my shepherd," &c.

How applicable the language: "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I shall fear no evil: for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me"

She lingered till Saturday morning, when she fell

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

May heaven's choicest blessings rest upon and comfort the stricken hearts of the bereaved. F. H. B.

Salem, Mass.

Fell asleep, Sept. 2d, in Big Neck, Adams Co., Illinois, Minerva Jane, daughter of Bro. Nathan and Elizabeth Riley, aged 9 years.

Minerva Jane was a lovely child, beloved by all who knew her—the idol of the family. Her lovely disposition and winning way enlisted the affections of all. No one could spare her. She was sick a long time—partially recovered once. She suffered much; yet never murmured. Death—the enemy—ended her youthful days. The parents feel deeply their loss. But the blessed hope sustains them. The writer was called to administer consolation from the words, chosen by the parents, recorded in Jeremiah 30: 15–18. The occasion was a solemn and profitable one.

"We miss her while the flowers bloom,
In the garden where she played;
We shall miss her more by the fireside
When the flowers are all decayed.

We see her toys, her empty chair,
Her doll, kept near her side;
And they all speak, in silent speech,
Our lovely Jane has died."

I am the resurrection and life, says the Lord. Be of good comfort, ye weeping Rachels. Your children will come again from the enemy's land, and come to their own borders. So says the sympathizing prophet, Jeremiah. Walter Pratt.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in So. Sangerville, Me., July 19th, at 9 1-2 P. M., after an illness of twenty-one weeks, Sister Clara, wife of Samuel W. Ames.

Life was dear to Sister A. Her sufferings were great, yet amid all she could say: "Praise the Lord, praise the Lord."

Doubtless many who read this know, and can sympathize with Brother Ames in his afflictions; but he mourns not as those who have no hope, for he believes that in a little while the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth. Abby Trundy.

Died in South Killingly, Conn., Sept. 22d, Wm. H. Young, only son of Jonah S. Young.

During his sickness, which was about six months, he gave his heart to God, and delighted to have persons converse upon the Scriptures. A few days before his death, he said to me that he felt as though the Lord had forgiven his sins; and he was reconciled to his will. The funeral was at the meeting-house, and attended by a large circle of relatives and friends. I endeavored to comfort the afflicted, from the words of Paul, 1 Thess. 4: 13. Another jewel of the Lord rests in the dust, waiting for the sounding of the last trump, to come forth to shine in the kingdom of God. J. Hemenway.

NOTICES.

Notice.

I would say that if it please God, I shall be in New York in the early part of October for a few days, and shall be glad to receive orders for Books, Tracts, &c., of which I hope then to have a full supply of all kinds. I will try to fill all orders promptly—especially those that are accompanied by the cash. The poor that wish for tracts are invited to send in their orders and they shall receive all they want without price. Don't be afraid to send; let them be circulated. Persons owing for books will of course remit as fast as able. If any persons wish for Greek Testaments, Hebrew Bibles, Septuagints, Lexicons, Hebrew or Greek, Concordances, Cruden's, unabridged, "condensed" or "pocket;" The Englishman's Greek Concordance, Ecclesiastical Histories, Eusebius, Mosheim, &c. &c.; Commentaries, Murdock's Syriac Testament, or any other good books, for Sunday School libraries or private use, published in America or England, I will be very glad to get them for them as cheap or cheaper than they could themselves, and send them by express as directed. All such orders should be accompanied by the cash, with directions where to send—town, county and State; also by what railroad or express line. Orders may be sent till October 10th, directed plainly, to

H. L. HASTINGS, care of J. J. Reed, Printer, 43 Centre Street, New York.

North Western Pennsylvania Conference.

By the request of a number of brethren in this region, we appoint a Conference, to be held in the School House, near Bro. M. Whitaker's, two miles north of Edenboro, Erie Co, Pa., commencing Friday evening, Oct. 22d, and continuing over the Lord's day.

The design of the meeting is to strengthen and encourage each other, and to see what can be done for the promulgation of the gospel among us. We wish to have some concert of action in the matter, and devise some means for sending the good news into new places.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us rally in the name of the Lord, and come up to his help against the mighty. The enemy is rallying his forces on every hand. Let us be up and doing, have our house set in order, and be like unto men that wait for their Lord.

For the Brethren, JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Notice.

Whereas, Bro. Champlain has resigned the pastorship of the River Point Advent Church, R. I., we have chosen Bro. E. Bellows as pastor. Bro. Bellows will preach one Sunday in a month—the first. The other three Sundays are left open to the preaching brethren whom we may invite. We hope those we have invited will come soon and see us.

For the Brethren. JOHN P. BABCOCK,

Book Notice.

I would say to the Brn., that I have just got printed, in Boston, an improved edition of Death not Life, in paper covers, and bound,—also Glad Tidings and my two tracts on the word Hell, and Foster's noted letter. They can be had of Bro. Grant at the prices now noticed in the Crisis, and by writing me at Buffalo. Brethren in the ministry can have them to sell on commission, and I hope they will send soon and get a supply for the winter. I expect to remain in the East till Jan., and will visit brethren by their sending a request to the Crisis. Jacob Blain.

Boston, Oct. 2, 1858.

☞ NOTICE.—If the Lord permit, a Conference will be held in Brunswick, Me., in the Yellow School-house, about 2 1-2 miles from the village, on the Bath road, commencing Thurday evening, Oct. 14th, at 7 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath. We hope to see a good gathering of the firiends in that region. Come, beloved, in the name of the Lord, and let us make one more effort to save sinners, and cheer each other on in our pilgrimage to the better land.

Those coming from abroad will call on Bro. Thomas M. Storer.

R. R. YORK,
I. C. WELLCOME.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.

Bro Ira Morgan, Oct. 10th and 17th.
Bro. S. S. Brower, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.
Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.
Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, } Secretaries.
A. PEARCE, }

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

This Conference is to be holden in Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Wednesday (20th) before the fourth Sabbath in October, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the next Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present, and some others, to preach the word of life to us.

Brethren scattered abroad in this western land, we hope to see you all here in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. I need not tell you that we need such a yearly feast. If you have been West long enough, you want to form new acquaintances with those of like precious faith. Come one, come all; we have straw and provender enough. We hope the preaching brethren will come prepared to unite with the conference. Let each church send two or more delegates, and those that can not come pray for us and the cause in this place.

Those coming down the river had better leave the river at Mcgregor and come to Hardin in time to ride with the brethren from that town, as there is no direct stage route from the river here, unless you go to Dubuque. Inquire at Hardin for Bro. Caddy or Eld. L. Lyons.

Those that come up the river can stop at Guttenburg and come to Elkport, and then come with the brethren. Inquire for John Garber.

On your arrival here, inquire for the subscriber. P. S. W. Daro,
Conference Clerk.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. W. M. Ingham appoints to preach as follows:—

Yarmouth, Me., - - - -	Oct. 17
Kennebunkport, Me., - - - -	" 18
Portsmouth, N. H., - - - -	" 19
Rye, " - - - - -	" 20
Exeter, " - - - - -	" 24
Lawrence, Mass., - - - -	" 27
Lynn, (Dye-House) A. M.	" 31
Lynn, (city) P. M. - - - -	" 31
Worcester, Mass., (Warren Hall,)	Nov. 7

If the Lord will, I will preach at

East Lee, Mass., - -	Oct. 14th.
New Lebanon, N. Y., Sunday,	Oct. 17th.
Cheshire, Mass., - - -	Oct. 18th.
Savoy, " - - -	Oct. 20th and 21st.
North Adams, - -	Sunday, Oct. 24th.
Northfield Farms, - - -	Oct. 31st.
West Brattleboro, Vt., - -	Nov. 3d

and continue over the Sabbath.

Goshen, Mass., - - Sunday, Nov. 14th.

C. Goodrich.

I will preach, the Lord willing, at—

Bristol, Ct., evenings of Oct. 21st, 22d, 23d, and Sunday, the 24th.

Collinsville, Ct., Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 31.

Bro. Sutherland is expected to be present and labor with me. H. F. CARPENTER.

My P. O. address is Worcester, Mass.

Bro. A. M. Higgins appoints to preach in

Springfield, - - - -	Oct. 17.
Ware, School House, near Bro. L. F. Newcomb's, - - - -	Oct. 24.
Scitico, Advent Chapel, - -	Oct. 31.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings at the following places:

Portsmouth, Thursday eve., - -	Oct. 14.
Portland, Friday, - - - -	Oct. 15.
Brunswick Conference, - -	Oct. 16.

From there back as the way opens to do good. Hiram Munger.

I will preach as follows:

Rawsonville, Vt., - - -	Oct. 10th.
Cornish, N. H., Sunday, - -	Oct. 17th.
Dover, N. H., (where Bro. Colbath may appoint,) - -	Sunday, Oct. 24th.

S. W. Bishop.

Providence permitting, I will preach at—

Northfield Farms, Mass., Thursday evening, October 14.

Hinsdale, N. H., Friday evening, October 15.

West Brattleboro', Vt., Sunday, Oct. 17.

WM. SUTHERLAND.

☞ R. E. Ladd appoints to meet the Church of God at the new Chapel in Scitico, on Sabbath, Oct. 17th.

☞ The Lord willing, I will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., on the third Lord's day in October, the 17th. JACOB BLAIN.

Providence permitting, Bro. S. G. Mathewson will preach in New Britain, Ct., October 19th, 20th, and 21st, (evenings.)

Business.

To Correspondents.

Bro. D. R. Mansfield, we have done as desired.

C. Haskins, Campbellsville—all right.

T. Smith, money received.

Mrs. Maria Roberts, Verona—Please send us your full address, as we cannot discover your name on our books.

Letters to H. L. Hastings should be directed to 43 Centre Street, New York, till Oct. 20th. Care of J. J. Reed.

Eld. N. T. Nason's P. O. address is North Searsport, Me.

Cruden's Concordance—$1.50, postage included.

Cash Receipts.

J Clifford 156, $1.33; T Hardy, Jr., 75 cts.; T R Searle 150, 75 cts; R Thompson 157, O Budington 176, 50 cts. each.

T Smith 169, J E Lloyd 186, J Gray 130, J M Marston 143, C Stark 156, J P Blaisdell 156, E Corey 156, T C Green 186, E S Mudgett 181, A Martin 130, E E Richardson 182, Mrs. M. Roberts, G. W. Chesman 195, C Sylvester 162, L Reed 156, M Glines 187, W S Olmsted 189, A B Gillet 156, G Barrows 129, N W Riley 187, Abm. Brown 187, W Dudley 187, E Merrill 177, S Winship 179,—$1.00 each.

I Webster 166, C B Walker 182, I Hodkins 208, P S Taylor 167, J L Fordice 182, A F Bliss 222, W B Perrott 208,—$2.00 each.

For Books—P Feil $1.10; W S Olmsted 50 cts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, some where.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 80 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. [illegible]

Review of Beecher's Conflict of Ages. $4 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price [illegible] —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; pos. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them; Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that feel poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings,
Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. Branch Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 109 Nassau street N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six No. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three neat four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend; by Hastings. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Man's Destiny. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 20 cents; bound, [illegible] cts. Postage, 3 cts.

The Discussion: Between Prof. [illegible] and Geo. Storrs. Question:—"Does the Bible teach that the creature Man, which the Lord God formed of the dust of the ground, has a Separate Entity called the soul?" Price 20 cents in paper covers: bound, 35 cts. Postage, 5 cts.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. H. Waite, [illegible] Harp, by Elder Himes; [illegible] Children; Satanic Delusion; [illegible] Great Controversy

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"FATHER, FORGIVE THEM."

Around the holy heights of Calvary
Is gathered now a wild, commingled host,
Who've come to gaze upon the last dread act
In Jesus' life. A varied throng is there,
Stern Roman soldiers, priests in rich attire,
Proud doctors of the law, and they who late
In Pilate's hall accused the Son of God,
And in mock triumph crowned his brow with thorns.
They all are there rejoicing in the death
Of their rejected Prince. Yea, even now
They mock the dying agony of Christ!
And proudly scorn the lowly Nazarine,
As on the cross he dies a thousand deaths.

A few, a holy few, are there, alone,
Who mourn the death of Jesus. 'Mong the throng
Is she who calls him son; a mother's heart
Hath brought her there, to cast one ling'ring look
On him she's loved with more than earthly love.
A few who've shared his gifts divine are there,
And sadly do they mourn their Master's fate.
Ah! how those tears of human sympathy
Awake within the crushed and bleeding heart
Of Christ a fearful sense of Judah's woe.
For through the vista of the coming years
He gazes on proud Zion's hill profaned;
The holy temple's ruin; Salem's walls
Laid low before the march of Roman arms;
The horrid massacre of Judah's sons
And daughters fair; the famine's wasting hand;
The stealthy march of pestilence, that fills
The streets of Salem fast with forms of death,
Whose very sight would strike the soul aghast
With trembling fear.
Forgotten now his pain,
He turns with longing eyes to those who shed
Such holy tears of love, and speaks with tones
Of warning,—"Daughters of Jerusalem,
Weep not for me, but for yourselves and for
Your children weep!" Alas! e'en they who mourn
And they who mock know not these fearful words,
Deep hid from them in mystery profound.

* * * * * * * * *

In life's last moment, racked with agony,
Beset with geering crowds and mocking foes,
Shines forth the love of earth's Redeemer now.
With eye upturned to the eternal throne,
He murmurs softly, as the zephyr steals
Through orange groves and twining boughs of balm;—
"Father, forgive them!" Oh, those thrilling tones,
Those calm, beseeching words of dying Christ!
How full of tenderness and holy love!
Oh! who can fathom, who can search the depth
Of love divine, that bade him utter now
Such gentle prayer, breathing forth in death
Such words of sweet forgiveness to his foes?
Why melted not those stern, cold hearts, that heard
Such deep, impassioned words? Why wept they not
For him, the Crucified, whose tender heart
No fate could harden? Ah! they had no ear
To hear that voice; they long had learned to hate,
And still recked not from whence it came.

* * * * * * * * *

Like incense rose those dying tones on high!
Awe-struck the angels listened, and methinks
Th' eternal Father from that great hour
Vouchsafed to grant the every wish his Son
Should offer up for fallen, sinful man.
"Father, forgive them!" Oh, how sweetly steal
Those notes of seraph sweetness down the slopes
Of Calvary! Yet die they not away
In hollow echoes 'gainst the distant hills,
But still they flow with sounds of melody,
Thrilling the universe with matchless love,
Inspiring man to lift his thoughts to Him,
Who dying, breathed but love and promised bliss
To every one who should his favor seek!

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

Hackensack, N. J.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Things that must Shortly come to Pass.

Soon the Lord will come in the clouds of heaven, and those who now scoff at "the blessed Hope," shall wail and mourn that the day of favor has closed, and the night of "blackness and darkness" is their only portion forever.

Soon those asleep in Jesus will leave the deep mysterious unconsciousness of the death-sleep, and join the deathless angels to die no more.

Soon "the Kingdoms of this world will become the Kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ," and this "sin-cursed" earth become the "Inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and unfading."

Soon the grand crisis will come that chains the old serpent in the bottomless pit, and fills the whole earth with the glory of the Lord.

Heaven's warnings sound in every blast,
That Gentile times are nearly past;
"Run to and fro the many" fast;
The signal fig-tree leaves at last.
Lift up your heads, ye weeping saints,
God hears your prayers, weighs your complaints;
When night's chill shadows thickest fall,
You'll hear the Bridegroom's midnight call.

S. A. CHAPLIN.

Pierceton, Ind., August, 1858.

☞ In the height of your prosperity, expect adversity, but fear it not; if it come not you are the more sweetly possessed of the happiness you have, and the more strongly confirmed; if it come, you are the more gently disposed, and the more firmly prepared.

☞ Precept is instruction written on the sand—the tide rolls over it and it is gone. Example is engraven on the rock, and [illegible] the ravages of time.

For the Crisis.

My Letter.

THE CAUSE: ITS PROGRESS, JOY AND LABOR.

I have been operating, but perhaps not so extensively as some. Taking it by small and large, the cause is manifestly rising. We have reason to be encouraged; and for one, I feel encouraged. There is inquiry upon points that are essential. Various persons consult me upon order in the church. I find an increasing tendency to adopt a covenant, and conform to gospel discipline. In some of the older meetings, certainly there is an increase of strength, if not addition.

In Hartford, the old and tried brethren are firm, doing well, and still looking—with a few additions of the right material—strong men.

In Southington, a few remain to keep the name alive; and there are some in New Britain who yet wait in hope for the fulfillment of the promise.

At Enfield the interest has been increasing and deepening for some time.

I had the pleasure of attending the annual "feast of tabernacles" at Wilbraham, till Saturday. I thought the preachers generally seemed to have the harness on. Hope it proved "a Jerusalem" to them all. The ordination of four men to the gospel work, indicates that the Lord is sending forth more laborers; then the fields are white and the church is praying. It was an awfully solemn time. The brethren seemed not only to be engaged in religion, even the good work of the Lord, but to have a proper appreciation of the old landmarks of truth. They are determined, in this "dark place," to keep the "light which shineth" in full view. It is the shore-light; they have made it out, and will not run wide of it. Any intimation that we have not a well defined identity as a people, is received with positive disfavor by them. I guess the campmeeting will prove a means of rallying the friends of the truths we hold. Ah! the fact is, we heard anew the rally cry—the old sound—the chime of days, years, events, influences, prophetic preaching, experience, illustration, faith, sympathy and hope of the past. There is need of more preaching on the prophecies; more upon immortality. The discourses from that stand ought to show the identity of the speakers and the meeting.

The ground, all will testify, is beautiful. The stand is a model building of its kind and purpose. Our old Napoleon of the campground was in his element. But the Lord was there, and the battle went for Israel. It was, I doubt not, a means of some union between the two wings. We were happy to welcome Elders Himes and Fassett.

Regretfully I left the "field of the wood," where we found the Lord saying, "how goodly are thy tents, O Jacob," to meet my engagement at Providence. Here I preached to the meeting on Pearl street, three times on Sunday, besides attending a funeral. These are some of the best and most faithful and devoted brethren and sisters in the wide world; but it must be confessed they diminish.

I have four sermons announced for this week in the hither part of Rhode Island, three of which I have now delivered; and the last is to come off at Natic Village to-night. In this part of the State the cause has gained much. River Point is the center. I preach there on Sunday next. From old Warwick Plains to Coventry, this whole region has been shaken. God has blessed the labors of Brn. Bellows and Champlin. Bro. Bellows is making an onset in the south part of the State, and the walls of another old fort are cracking and giving way.

Last night we preached a sermon on "the importance and necessity of the sure Prophetic Word, which we have," at Fiskville, having present infidels of the old stamp, modern Spiritualists, mushroom philosophers, with the exploded ethnicism of former centuries of darkness; cavilers, skeptics, and a goodly number of the "old guard." All we have to say is, it looked like "bearding the lion in his den;" but though we waited for any one to answer, there was "never a dog to wag his tongue." Let us give God all the glory. Amen.

Fraternally, W. S. C.

TRUE ENOUGH.—"Many a man," says Mr. Spurgeon, "would lose thousands of pounds, and be able to say, 'The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord;' but if a button were wanting on his shirt, he would get into a rage."

☞ Don't stand hesitating upon that good resolution of yours—put it through.

Choice Selections.

[From the Advocate and Guardian.]

Female Adorning.

"Thus talents, gifts, and graces prove
Of present good or ill,
As given by God, in wrath or love,
To work His gracious will."

"If ye love me, keep my commandments."

"Dear me, what is the matter, brother? You look so sad. When Miss Gray came in, it was as if a cloud suddenly came over your whole countenance, which before was so cheerful, while you were asking Lizzie and Alice their Bible questions?"

"Why, did I show my feelings like that? well, I was honest—my heart sunk within me, as I cast my eye on her elegant, superb dress; her appearance, and the sweet, sober truths we had been studying, were so opposite, that I involuntarily shrunk from the sight. The self-denial of Jesus! why it is mockery for her to profess that dear name. I thought, are the lambs now brought into the fold of Christ thus to make shipwreck of their first love, and sink back into fashion and folly? Is all our labor to be lost, and the church to be robbed of time, talents and money, to gratify female vanity? It is true, my heart sickens at the thought, and at times I feel like Elijah, let me die and my ministry cease. You little know the thoughts and feelings which arise, while I stand in that pulpit, and look upon the decoration of woman, and see how she perverts all her endowments, with few exceptions, to the idol—fashion."

"What can be done?"

"Something must be done. Now the Holy Spirit teaches what is right, when it begins to work in the heart; for our consistent friend, Mrs. Haswell, told me the other evening, that a young girl of her Bible class, who has been converted lately, consulted her about her dress; and of her own accord took what she deemed superfluous from her bonnet—yet others of the same class, who profess to be converted also, have not yielded that obedience to the word of God and the Holy Spirit. No doubt they compromise with conscience, and will be perhaps like that poor woman, who lived and died doubtfully. When she was converted, she had a most splendid ribbon profusely on her bonnet, and she showed the working of conscience from week to week, by altering, and twisting and taking off portions of it; she just showed how dear that bit of silk was to her. I tell you, sister, you may say as you please about people being accustomed to those things, and their hearts not being on them; the truth is, their hearts, and very affections, are fixed upon them, or they would be readily relinquished. I have no question, but a feather, a ribbon, a flounce, or a bit of tinsel for the ears, &c., grieves away the Holy Spirit—these gew-gaws are dearer than the commands of the Bible and good example. 'In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair or gold, or pearls or costly array; but, which becometh women professing godliness, with good works.' Now tell me a church, where this passage, and similar ones of Holy Writ, can be read and not sound like mere burlesque?"

Thoughtfully his sister replied, "too true."

"Are those young disciples now coming into the church to follow in this same pernicious way; must we look upon them with the same sorrow of heart—must their precious time, and talents, be spent in vanity and extravagance—must their principles be perverted, their enjoyments blighted, and the church robbed of holy influence, by this continued round of self-seeking, in outward adorning?

"We cannot indeed tell what shipwreck may be avoided, or made, by these new-comers into the church; but one thing is plainly apparent, if they follow the example of those already there, it is to be feared that in a little while their first love will be lost. For it is a fact, which no words can deny, that we show outwardly in our appearance and manners, what is the reigning principle within. A fastidious gentility, in all the little minutiæ of contrast, may please the taste; but how much thought, time, and money, has it cost—has not the loss been, the precious for the vile—the worthy for the worthless? How it has curtailed the time for the closet and the Bible—how it has absorbed all the conversation. Should we not give attention and care to objects according to their true value? that is being wise; but instead of that, do not the passing things of raiment, absorb all the interest—the first and last in morning and evening thoughts? If this were confined to the professed worldlings, we would not be troubled, knowing that when the grace of God entered the heart, all these vanities would drop off. But the church in its present state, is not as it should be—a sanctuary, in which to hide from the pomps and vanities of the world. Is there not perjury here? when we have vowed in the presence of God, angels and men, that we renounced the pomps and vanities of the world?

"It is the light of the Holy Spirit and word of God, which reproves all wrong ways, and shows us the right—as one said in regard to female dress, 'the Holy Spirit teaches all who are led by it to lay aside these excesses.'

"I fondly anticipate the day, in the future of the church, when it will be a living truth to see holy women, who will love their Lord and Master supremely, and be co-laborers with his ministers, fulfilling, as only woman can, her mission in the service of Christ and his people.

"I long for the day, and put the cause into the hands of all godly women, who feel on this subject, that by their EXAMPLE, teaching, and prayers, they may bring about this renovation, which must be in every sect, and every grade of society which is attached to the general Zion—that is, if Zion is to arise and put on her beautiful garments. The women are the mothers, wives, and teachers in the church, and a back-sliding, pleasure-loving womanhood, drag down the whole community."

Oh, woman, woman, live for your high and holy destiny, the companionship of angels. Y.

Sprinkling.

The following is from the Herald of Gospel Liberty, published by Elias Smith, in 1810.

A FRIEND'S REQUEST.

A friend to the truth has requested of the Editor (by letter) that he would give what he understands to be the meaning of the following places of Scripture, which many suppose are a proof of the propriety of sprinkling children, and calling it baptism. The places of Scripture are these:

ISAIAH 52: 15.—So shall he sprinkle many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him: for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider.

EZEK. 36: 25.—Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you.

HEB. 12: 24.—And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

1 PET. 1: 2.—And sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ.

There is one thing which I wish my readers would always remember, viz., that there is no place in Scripture which ever was, or ever will be a proof of the truth of that which is not mentioned in the Scriptures. Infant baptism, or sprinkling, is not once mentioned in the Bible. Of course, these places have no reference to such a practice.

Another thing ought to be noticed; that is, that for many hundred years after the Apostles, burying or dipping was the only mode of baptizing; and that sprinkling was never introduced into England as a mode of baptism till about the year 1654. This being true, these places have no reference to baptism of any kind. We will now begin with the first:

Isaiah 52: 15. So shall he sprinkle many nations. In verse 13, it is said of Christ, God's servant, "Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high."—"So shall he sprinkle many nations." This means that which he should do after being seated on the right hand of the throne of God. This same sprinkling is mentioned by Peter, in the text mentioned before: "And sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." This sprinkling means the pardon which is received through faith in the blood of Jesus, which cleanses from all sin, when men confess and forsake. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us; and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." This sprinkling many nations, means that people of every nation who fear God and work righteousness, find a pardon through the blood of the Lamb. The history of the spread of the gospel in former days, and the increase of the number who are pardoned at this day, proves that this is the meaning of these places; and the one in Hebrews, concerning the blood of sprinkling, has reference to the same thing. The sprinkling is with blood, and not with water. The person who supposes that these three places have reference to sprinkling children, must surely think of nothing in each text but the word sprinkle. For if he observes that it is the blood of sprinkling, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ, he must, as a rational being, know that these places have no kind of reference to baptism, of any kind whatever.

The other, "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean," has a particular reference to the Jews, and not to any other nation; and is a description of what shall be done to them when they are gathered out of all countries where they are now scattered, and brought into their own land. It is said, ver. 21, "Therefore say unto the house of Israel," &c. "For I will take you from among the heathen, and take you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them."

If this place referred to sprinkling children, then all who are sprinkled have a new heart; but this is not true. This place means that when the Jews return to their own land, God will cleanse them, by the washing of regeneration, and being in heart converted to God, they will never again turn from God, but will remain devoted to him forever.

SO THEY SAY.—"They" will say any thing and every thing. "They" have said every thing mean and despicable. "They" say things that break up families, crush hearts, blight hopes, and smother worthy aspirations. Whenever a man circulates a slander and gives "they" as his authority, turn your back upon him. He means no good.

☞ Plenty of warmth, plenty of substantial food and ripe fruits, plenty of joyous out-door exercise, would save millions of children annually.

THE BIBLE.

This little book I'd rather own
Than all the gold and gems
That e'er in monarch's coffers shone—
Than all their diadems.
Nay, were the sea one chrysolite,
The earth a golden ball,
And diamonds all the stars of night,
This book were worth them all.

No, no! the soul ne'er found relief
In glittering hordes of wealth;
Gems dazzle not the eyes of grief,
Gold cannot purchase health—
But here a blessed balm appears,
To heal the deepest woe;
And he that seeks this book in tears,
His tears shall cease to flow.

Here he who died on Calvary's tree,
Hath made that promise blest;
"Ye heavy laden come to me,
And I will give you rest.
A bruised reed I will not break—
A contrite heart despise;
My burden's light, and all who take
My yoke, shall win the skies!"

Yes, yes! this little book is worth
All else to mortals given;
For what are all the joys of earth,
Compared to joys in Heaven?
This is the guide our Father gave
To lead to realms of day—
A star, whose lustre gilds the grave—
The Truth, the Life, the Way."

For the Children.

A Pleasant Surprise.

A young man of eighteen or twenty, a student in a university, took a walk one day with a professor, who was commonly called the student's friend, such was his kindness to the young men whom it was his office to instruct. While they were now walking together, and the professor was seeking to lead the conversation to grave subjects, they saw a pair of old shoes lying in the path, which they supposed belonged to a poor man who was at work in the field close by, and who had nearly finished his day's work. The young student turned to the professor, saying,

"Let us play the man a trick; we will hide his shoes and conceal ourselves behind those bushes, and watch to see his perplexity when he cannot find them."

"My dear friend," answered the professor, "we must never amuse ourselves at the expense of the poor. But you are rich, and you may give yourself a much greater pleasure by means of this poor man. Put a dollar in each shoe, and then we will hide ourselves."

The student did so, and then placed himself with the professor behind the bushes hard by, through which they could easily watch the laborer, and see whatever wonder or joy he might express. The poor man soon finished his work, and came across the field to the path, where he had left his coat and shoes. While he put on the coat, he slipped one foot into one of his shoes; but feeling something hard, he stooped down and found the dollar. Astonishment and wonder were seen upon his countenance; he gazed upon the dollar, turned it around and looked again; then he looked around on all sides, but could see no one. Now he put the money in his pocket and proceeded to put on the other shoe; but how great was his astonishment when he found the other dollar! His feelings overcame him; he fell upon his knees, looked up to heaven, and uttered aloud a fervent thanksgiving, in which he spoke of his wife, sick and helpless, and his children without bread, whom this timely bounty from some unknown hand would save from perishing. The young man stood there deeply affected, and tears filled his eyes.

"Now," said the professor, "are you not much better pleased than if you had played your intended trick?"

"O dearest sir," answered the youth, "you have taught me a lesson that I will never forget. I feel now the truth of the words which I never before understood: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

We should never approach the poor but with the wish to do them good.

THE GIRL THAT NEVER TOLD A LIE.—A little girl once came into the house and told her mother something which was very improbable. Those who were sitting in the room with her mother did not believe her, for they did not know the character of the little girl. But the mother replied at once, "I have no doubt that it is true, for I never knew my daughter to tell a lie." Is there not something noble in having such a character as this? Must not that little girl have felt happy in the consciousness of thus possessing her mother's entire confidence? Oh, how different must have been her feelings from those of the child whose word cannot be believed, and who is regarded by every one with suspicion! Shame, shame on the child who has not magnanimity enough to tell the truth.—Stories for Children.

REMEMBER THIS.—Children, when any little boy or girl is always talking to you about the faults of others, you may be sure that they are in the habit of talking to others of your faults. Reprove such, and if you cannot reform them, shun them.—Ib.

☞ The most essential point of our intercourse with children is to be truthful ourselves. When we in any way deceive a child, we lose our influence over him forever.

Health Department.

APOPLEXY.—Persons below the middle height, robust, with large hands and short thick necks, are generally recognized as apoplectic subjects; but a foreign medical author asserts that it is confined to no particular conformation of the body, all persons being alike liable to be attacked by it. The predisposing causes are the habitual indulgence of the appetite in rich and gross food, or stimulating drinks, coupled with luxurious and indolent habits; sedentary employments carried to an undue length; the habit of sleeping, especially in a recumbent posture, after a full meal; and lying too long in bed. Persons, however, who are predisposed to this disease, should not fail to profit by the warnings of its approach, such as giddiness, drowsiness, loss of memory, twitching of the muscles, faltering of the speech, &c. Their diet should be light and nutritious; all luxurious habits should be abandoned, and moderate exercise should be taken. Above all, they should avoid giving way to their passions, as it is well known that many persons have been struck with death in the midst of a fit of anger.—Scientific American.

HEMORRHAGE.—The sap of the pine tree is said to have been proved to be of extraordinary curative effect in pulmonary disease, and an instance is cited of a young lady who, after stopping hemorrhage by the use of one gramme of powdered rue per day, for five days, was finally cured by the pine sap, the analytical proportions of which are—1 of resinous matter, 2 of extractive substances, (one soluble both in water and alcohol, and the other only in water,) 8 of albumen, 4 a kind of gum, and 6 soda, lime, magnesia, iron, alumina, phosphates, sulphates, carbonates, and chlorides, all in very small proportions. She continued the use of the sap four months and a half, and was well and hearty.

A SIMPLE REMEDY.—A writer in the Baltimore Sun, who has been afflicted severely in his family by that appalling disease, bronchitis, has found relief in the following remedy: "Take honey in the comb, squeeze it out and dilute with a little water, and wet the lips and mouth occasionally with it." It had never been known to fail, in cases where children had throats so swollen as to be unable to swallow. It is certainly a very simple remedy and may be a very efficacious one.

TOBACCO.—The last North Indiana Conference of the Methodist Church agreed to the following resolution:

Resolved, That no person be admitted as a member of this Conference, who is in the habit of using tobacco in the common way, without an agreement to discontinue the practice.

SALERATUS.—Use as little of this pernicious article as possible about your household; every particle taken into the stomach is injurious to the natural functions. This has been proved beyond doubt by careful tests among chemists.

CURE FOR TOOTHACHE.—A friend informs us that a roasted onion bound upon the wrist, on the pulse, will stop the most inveterate toothache in a very few minutes. Worth trying.—Zion's Herald.

☞ The most healthful position to sleep is with the head on a line with the body, allowing the throat and lungs the fullest play.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write for the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 163. | BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 20, 1858. | VOL. VIII. NO. 7.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE COMET.

Watchman, what of the night?—Is. 21: 12.

Tell me, wanderer, what thou art,
With thy brightly burning train?
Marking on the starry chart
Wonders for the eye of man.
Tell, O tell where thou hast been,
Since thy last visit to the earth!
Write the myst'ries thou hast seen
On the circle of the north.

Didst thou, centuries ago,
Lead an Emperor from his throne?
To resign all power below
And seek a heavenly crown?
Could the Rulers of this hour
Thus behold thee, and be wise,
Freedom's friends would bless the Power
That conducts thee through the skies!

Stranger, wilt thou deign to tell
The object of thy present call?
Dost foreshadow good or ill
To the nations of this ball?
Thy nightly and thy morning flame
Reminds me of the Prophet's lay,
In which he sung a thrilling theme,—
The dawning of the Latter Day!

"The night draws nigh," the watchman cries,
When every foe of Truth shall fall;
Never upon our globe to rise,
But lie beneath an endless pall!
"The morning comes,"—the jubilee—
Soon Paradise shall be restored,
When all the pure in heart shall see
The form of their majestic Lord!

The wilderness shall bloom again,
The angels soon shall shout with joy,—
"Peace on the earth, good will to men,
And glory be to God on high!"
Ah comet, sure I understand
Thy morning and thy evening sign!
Thou art a voice to every land,
A harbinger of love divine!

Farewell, I'll heed thy mystic voice—
"The morning cometh, and the night"—
Let all the morning stars rejoice,
Let error flee—God speed the night!
Farewell, now hasten back again,
Far, far beyond a mortal's gaze:
Amid thy myst'ries live and reign,
Lone monarch of the realms of space!

JOHN LYLE.

Newark, Sept. 29th.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Kingdom.

Is the kingdom of Jesus established? If so, when, how, and where? In answer to these questions we are told—

1. That it was set up when Jesus was upon earth; but the exact time of his being crowned (save with a crown of thorns) no one can tell anything about.

2. That it was not a literal kingdom, but a spiritual one, and

3d. That it was established in our hearts.

Those that hold to this view ground their faith on one passage of scripture. If this position is true, it will stand the test. If it is built upon the sure foundation, it will stand, and nothing can disturb it. If not, it can easily be swept away, and such a faith is not what a person must have in order "to please God." Those that hold the position have but one text to sustain them, and if this block or underpinning can be knocked from beneath them, the whole thing must fall. Truth is what we want, for by it we are made free. It will do us no good to build false theories, for what God has spoken he will perform, and not one "jot or tittle shall pass" "till all be fulfilled." Let us sincerely inquire after truth.

This one text is found in Luke 17: 20, 21." "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say Lo here, or lo there! for behold the kingdom of God is within you." This is the passage which multitudes have built their faith upon. Let us see how substantial the foundation. What were the circumstances which caused these words to fall from the lips of the Son of God? We cast our eye back upon our Lord for some time previous to his uttering them. We behold him with his disciples journeying towards Jerusalem, teaching them many important things, preaching repentance to the wicked, uttering parables, pronouncing woes upon the Scribes and Pharisees, working miracles, healing the sick, casting out demons, and cleansing lepers. We behold him enter into a village in Galilee and cleanse ten lepers. After this is done, behold him surrounded by the multitude of anxious listeners to catch his words as they fall from his lips by way of instruction and reproof. All classes are surrounding him. Look at his disciples by his side listening to his instructions and ready to do his bidding. See those Scribes and Pharisees, his enemies, that seek to confound him. It was then that, when "he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, the kingdom of God cometh not with observation, (or outward show—margin;) neither shall they say, Lo here! or lo there! for behold the kingdom of God is within you," or, as the margin reads, "among you." Now the question is, what does Jesus mean by this expression. "He means that the kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom within their hearts." Do you think so? "Yes." What! the kingdom of God in the hearts of those Pharisees that were "full of rottenness and dead men's bones?" A pretty place for a kingdom, much more the "kingdom of God."

What is a kingdom? Of what does it consist?

1. Territory.
2. Subjects.
3. A king.

How much territory is there in a person's heart? Is there enough for the subjects to dwell in, and after they are stowed away is there room for the king to reign over them? What an absurdity!

Again, I read in 1 Cor. 15: 50. "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." Again, I read in Rev. 3: 20. "Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." This is usually applied to the sinner, and the kingdom is just as much in their hearts now as it was in the hearts of those sinful Pharisees, and the king has to knock to get into his own kingdom. Another absurdity. If the kingdom was set up then, Daniel did not give the right interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, for he said that the stone, that was cut out of the mount without hands was to smite the "image upon the feet, which were of iron and clay," which he did not do if he took the kingdom then. If he smote the image then, he smote it upon the legs, for the feet and toes did not exist for more than four hundred years after that time. Even if the feet and toes did exist then, the iron, (undivided) the brass, the silver, and the gold, did not, and they are to be broken to pieces together. Tell me if they can ever be together without a resurrection. So you see the many absurdities which such a belief leads to. I have, I think, shown that it is not built upon the sure foundation, but upon the sand. It does not stand the test.

Now if it is not true that Jesus said the kingdom was in their hearts, what did he mean by the expression "the kingdom of God is within you." Read it as it is in the margin, and I think it will be plain enough: "Behold the kingdom of God is among you." He saw Jesus surrounded by the multitude, with his disciples by his side. Then those wicked, sinful, hypocritical, self-righteous, know-everything Pharisees, demanded of him "when the kingdom of God should come," and he said it "cometh not with outward show. . . Behold the kingdom of God is among you." There it was "among" them, and they so blind and so stupid that they could not perceive it. They could not tell of what the kingdom of God consisted. There was the despised Nazarene, who before Pilate confessed that he was born to be a king, and there were his subjects, those humble fishermen, and there was the territory; and did not this constitute the kingdom prospective? Imagine this is what he meant when he said, "the kingdom of God is among you." Though it was among them, it was not established. It had not come with power. He had not taken to himself his great power to reign. They were looking for his coming with power and majesty to reign, and could not see him in humility as he was. This is where they stumbled.

Now "the kingdom of God," or "the kingdom of Christ," (which are synonymous terms) is not a spiritual kingdom, for Paul said of David "that God had sworn with an oath, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Acts 2: 30. He will be a literal king, and must have a literal kingdom. Can we tell where this kingdom is? Daniel gives a good description of it: "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days. . . And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. 7: 13, 14. After speaking of the fourth beast and the little horn reigning, he says: "But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion. . . And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him." 7: 26, 27. This is not a spiritual kingdom. It is literal. The same kingdom that the beast had, which was a universal one. It comprised the whole world. So Christ's kingdom will be all "under the whole heaven." David says his "dominion" shall be "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." Ps. 72: 8.

Much scripture might be quoted to prove that the kingdom is a literal kingdom, and not established yet. Instead of Jesus now reigning as king, he is seated at the right hand of God, there making "intercession" for us." Rom. 8: 30. He is pleading with the Father that we may become reconciled to God and become fit subjects of His kingdom, instead of remaining his enemies, and at last be cast into "outer darkness." He is pleading to-day, but he will not always remain there pleading. He was born to be a king. Before the rising of another sun he may finish his pleading, and leave the seat in his Father's throne, the mediatorial seat, and come to earth again. He will then come as king. When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, with all the holy angels he shall sit on the throne of his glory. Matt. 25: 31. Again he shall "judge the quick and dead at his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1.

Much more might be written, but it appears as though I have written enough to convince any unprejudiced mind that instead of the kingdom of God "being in the heart," it is a literal kingdom, yet to be established. But think not that this earth as it now is, groaning under the curse of Almighty God, with the thorn and the thistle, will remain as the abode of Christ and his saints; for, were he to come in his glory, with all the holy angels attending him, and glorify his saints, the earth as it is at present, and as it has been for most six thousand years, could not contain them. The All-wise God has made provision for that, and has promised to remove the "curse;" (Rev. 22: 3,) "make all things new," (Rev. 21: 5) "new heavens and earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Pet. 3: 13. When this is done, Christ with his saints will reign forever and ever, and all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Num. 14: 21. The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11: 9. This looks to me more like the lofty and holy place for the "kingdom of God," than the hearts of those wicked Pharisees, or even the hearts of the best of christians; and when the prayer—"Thy kingdom come"—shall be answered, may God grant that we may be found living in perfect obedience to all His commands, that we may be everlastingly saved in His kingdom, where there will be no more sorrow nor crying. Amen.

A. P. MOORE.

For the Crisis.

Angels.

A DISCOURSE, BY WM. SHEPHERD.

(Continued.)

We shall now notice some of the duties which they performed—the messages they delivered—the important assistance they rendered to the patriarchs and prophets. The first we learn of them in Scripture is, that they were placed in the east of the garden of Eden," as faithful sentinels, armed with a "flaming sword, which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life," lest the man might presume to put forth his hand and partake in his lost estate, "and live forever" in misery. Here is a merciful interposition, an introductory work in the great scheme of human redemption. Gen. 3: 22–24.

An angel appears to Hagar in the wilderness, persuading her to return to her mistress from whom she fled, promising her that he would multiply her "seed exceedingly, that it should not be numbered for multitude." Gen. 16: 7–11. Here you see is some ground for the belief which we entertain,—that those superior angels had something to do with the creation of man. Two of them appeared to, and did eat and drink with Abraham in his tent. These same being courteously invited by Lot, lodged with him; smote the lewd Sodomites, who threatened to abuse them, with blindness; warned Lot of the approaching overthrow and fiery ruin of that wicked city; excited and assisted him in his happy escape therefrom.

An angel interposed and rescued Isaac from the stroke of the uplifted knife, which was about to take his life on Mount Moriah, where his father had conveyed him, and purposed to offer him as a sacrifice to God, —a vivid and thrilling exemplification of his devout attachment to, and reverential fear of, his Creator. And here you will find this angel styles himself the Lord. Gen. 22: 16. And when the patriarch commanded his servant to go into his country and among his own kindred to select a wife for his son Isaac, he assures him of his confidence in an overruling and special providence, and adds, "He shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence." Gen. 24: 1–7. Subsequently we find this servant addressing the guiding angel thus:—"O Lord God of my master Abraham, I pray thee, send me good speed this day, and show kindness unto my master Abraham." 12 ver. Jacob had a glorious vision of them while tarrying in the plains of Haran. He sees many as it were ascending and descending a ladder connecting heaven and earth; typifying that blessed state of things which will obtain in the new age or world to come; to which our Lord also alludes in his conversation with the guileless Nathaniel. Gen. 28: 10–16; John 1: 51. Two companies of them attend Jacob on his return from Mesopotamia to protect him from the fury of Laban and his brother Esau. Gen. 32: 1, 2, 12. He wrestles with one, or has an interview—succeeds in his object, or "prevails," in consequence of which he is surnamed Israel, and a prince as having "power with God;" and observes, alluding to this angel,—"I have seen God face to face, while my life is preserved." ver. 30. Finally, the aged Patriarch, in imploring the heavenly benediction upon his grandchildren, Ephraim and Manasseh, also invokes a blessing upon them from his guardian angel, thus,—"The angel which redeemed me from evil bless the lads." Gen. 48: 15, 16. An angel appears unto Moses in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed," which angel declares himself to be "the God of thy fathers, &c.," (Ex. 3: 2, 6,) who gives important instructions to Moses, how to proceed with Pharaoh, in order to deliver the children of Israel from their oppressive bondage.

A powerful angel smote the first-born of Egypt, and assisted the Hebrews in their exode from that country, and in their march through the wilderness. Ex. 12: 23; 23: 20; Num. 20: 16.

One is sent to Gideon, who deputizes him to deliver Israel from the hand of the Midianites, assuring him, "I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man;" satisfying him that such would be the case by certain miracles which he condescended to perform in his presence, agreeable to the request of this "mighty man of valor." Ju. 6: 11–16; 36–40.

An angel appears to Manoah's wife, who was barren—promises her a son—she proposes to prepare a repast for him—he declines to partake—Manoah is inquisitive—wishes to know his name—he refuses to reveal it, saying, "Why asketh thou thus after my name, seeing it is secret?" The rejected repast is then offered as a burnt sacrifice unto the Lord, and in the meantime, "the angel did wondrously; . . . for it came to pass when the flame went up toward heaven from the altar, that the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame of the altar." Ju. 13. This proves that their natures are proof against the fiery element, as does the case also with the one in the flaming bush.

The angel of the Lord is directed to seek out "Elijah the Tishbite" in his secluded abode "into the wilderness," where he had taken refuge "under a juniper-tree," who feasts him and encourages him against the attacks of the wicked Moabites; (1 Kings 19: 6–7,) and by these celestial messengers he is finally carried up into heaven in a chariot of fire. 2 Kings 2: 11. Troops of them protect Elisha at Dothan. 2 Kings 6: 16, 17. To punish David for numbering the people, an angel slew 70,000 of them in one day. 1 Chron. 21: 14, 15.

An angel in one night cut off 185,000 of Sennacherib's army and delivered Jerusalem from his terrible fury. 2 Kings 19: 35. While Balaam mounted on an ass is pursuing his journey contrary to the good pleasure of the Lord, one of these flaming messengers stands in the way, with a "sword drawn in his hand," who rebukes him, and impedes the further progress of his journey. Num. 22: 22–31. It was the burning Seraphim

> That touched Isaiah's lips with holy fire;
> And with prophetic strains his heart t' inspire;
> Bidding him sing the happy coming age,
> As found portrayed upon the sacred page.
>
> Isa 6: 2–7.

They are manifested to the prophet Ezekiel in various and majestic forms. He styles them "living creatures," and describes them as being in "the likeness of a man," as having wings, "four faces," and hands resembling a man's, feet "sparkling like the color of burnished brass;" and "they ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning." This confirms what we previously asserted in regard to the extraordinary fleetness of their travel, as also in Daniel where it is said, alluding to the angel, "being caused to fly swiftly." Dan. 9: 21. "And the likeness of the firmament upon their heads . . . was as the color of the terrible crystal. And when they went their wings (was) like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, the noise of an host," &c. Ezek. 1. Again, another appears unto him "whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed," giving him certain instructions which he is to impart to "the house of Israel," taking certain surveys and measurements of the Holy Land, making accurate divisions of the land for the several tribes, and committing unto him a beautiful pattern of heavenly architecture of the temple to be rebuilt at Jerusalem. Ezek. 40.

The three Hebrew children are preserved from the fearful flames of Nebuchadnezzar's fiery furnace, by one who is seen among them "walking in the midst," "like unto the Son of God." Daniel remains a whole night in the lions' den unharmed, for the reason, as he says—"My God hath sent his angel, and shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me." He has a vision of them—"thousand thousands . . . and ten thousand times ten thousand." Dan. 3: 25–27; 6: 16–22; 7: 10. Subsequently, when in the act of supplication and prayer in behalf of his people and the land, about the time, as he terms it, of the "evening oblation," one gently touched him, "the man Gabriel," disclosing unto him the purpose of Jehovah, giving him important information in regard to time, &c.—"the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem,"—the crucifixion of the Messiah,—destruction of the city and sanctuary, and the desolations which were determined even unto the end. Dan. 9: 20–27. Again, he has an interview with another, supposed to be the same, who appears unto him in resplendent and majestic attire, clothed in linen, his loins girded with fine gold of Uphaz. His body was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. So glorious was his person, that the holy prophet trembled at his presence. He proceeds to give Daniel further information touching what should befall God's people in "the latter days," making known to him how the prince of the Kingdom of Persia withstood him in his discharge of eminent duties of a national character, and how "Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help" him. Dan. 10: 4–21. This seems to teach that they superintend over whole nations and territories to bring about the great purposes of Omnipotence, making all things to subserve that end—his glory; and should serve to inspire us to more implicitly confide in Him, appreciating the Apostle's doctrine of the divine Providence (Rom. 8: 28,) fully believing that all the great events which occur from time to time in the world; the terrible revolutions and mighty upheavings which are yet to transpire preceding the glorious triumph of the Christ and his Church, are but to hasten that grand and sublime consummation, and but subservient to the pleasure of Him who "doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth." Him whose mighty hand "none can stay," "or say unto him, What doest thou?" This angel, Michael, is pledged to "stand up" and protect the saints in the great "time of trouble," and deliver all from the hand of the enemy who shall be "found written in the book"—an event contemporaneous with the resuscitation of the dead in Israel. Some suppose that this is the Lord Jesus himself, but we join issue with them here, believing this personage to be just what he is designated, i. e., "Michael, one of the chief princes." Michael is a very superior being, no doubt, but may not surpass Gabriel in intelligence, wisdom and power, occupying equally as elevated position in the celestial hierarchy as him. In vain corresponding texts (as supposed) are adduced to prove this idea from the Epistles and Apocalypse. Now in regard to the nature of our Lord, it is affirmed of him in the most indubitable terms "that he took not on himself the nature of angels;" "being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they." "For unto which of the angels, said he (God) at any time, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?" Who, when being introduced to the world, the decree was given, "Let all the angels of God worship him;" and "to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?" But rather, "Are they not all ministering spirits (or spirits of ministration) who are sent forth to administer to them who shall be heirs of life everlasting?" Heb. 1: 2, 13. And further, "God hath given him a name, which is above every name." Phil. 2: 9.

But we return to our subject. They are described in Joel as engaged in the last grand battle as bearing the appearance of an immense army of horses and horsemen, that, "As a strong people set in battle array. . . Before their face the people shall be much pained . . . they shall run like mighty men, they shall march every one in his ways, and they shall not break their ranks. Neither shall one thrust another . . . and when they fall upon the sword [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST

WHOLE NO. 163. BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 20, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 1.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE COMET.

Watchman, what of the night?—Is. 21: 12.

Tell me, wanderer, what thou art,
With thy brightly burning train?
Marking on the starry chart
Wonders for the eye of man.
Tell, O tell where thou hast been,
Since thy last visit to the earth!
Write the myst'ries thou hast seen
On the circle of the north.

Didst thou, centuries ago,
Lead an Emperor from his throne?
To resign all power below
And seek a heavenly crown?
Could the Rulers of this hour
Thus behold thee, and be wise,
Freedom's friends would bless the Power
That conducts thee through the skies!

Stranger, wilt thou deign to tell
The object of thy present call?
Dost foreshadow good or ill
To the nations of this ball?
Thy nightly and thy morning flame
Reminds me of the Prophet's lay,
In which he sung a thrilling theme,—
The dawning of the Latter Day!

"The night draws nigh," the watchman cries,
When every foe of Truth shall fall;
Never upon our globe to rise,
But lie beneath an endless pall!
"The morning comes,"—the jubilee—
Soon Paradise shall be restored,
When all the pure in heart shall see
The form of their majestic Lord!

The wilderness shall bloom again,
The angels soon shall shout with joy,—
"Peace on the earth, good will to men,
And glory be to God on high!"
Ah comet, sure I understand
Thy morning and thy evening sign!
Thou art a voice to every land,
A harbinger of love divine!

Farewell, I'll heed thy mystic voice—
"The morning cometh, and the night"—
Let all the morning stars rejoice,
Let error flee—God speed the night!
Farewell, now hasten back again,
Far, far beyond a mortal's gaze:
Amid thy myst'ries live and reign,
Lone monarch of the realms of space!

JOHN LYLE.

Newark, Sept. 29th.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Kingdom.

Is the kingdom of Jesus established? If so, when, how, and where? In answer to these questions we are told—

1. That it was set up when Jesus was upon earth; but the exact time of his being crowned (save with a crown of thorns) no one can tell anything about.

2. That it was not a literal kingdom, but a spiritual one, and

3d. That it was established in our hearts.

Those that hold to this view ground their faith on one passage of scripture. If this position is true, it will stand the test. If it is built upon the sure foundation, it will stand, and nothing can disturb it. If not, it can easily be swept away, and such a faith is not what a person must have in order "to please God." Those that hold the position have but one text to sustain them, and if this block or underpinning can be knocked from beneath them, the whole thing must fall. Truth is what we want, for by it we are made free. It will do us no good to build false theories, for what God has spoken he will perform, and not one "jot or tittle shall pass" "till all be fulfilled." Let us sincerely inquire after truth.

This one text is found in Luke 17: 20, 21." "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say Lo here, or lo there! for behold the kingdom of God is within you." This is the passage which multitudes have built their faith upon. Let us see how substantial the foundation. What were the circumstances which caused these words to fall from the lips of the Son of God? We cast our eye back upon our Lord for some time previous to his uttering them. We behold him with his disciples journeying towards Jerusalem, teaching them many important things, preaching repentance to the wicked, uttering parables, pronouncing woes upon the Scribes and Pharisees, working miracles, healing the sick, casting out demons, and cleansing lepers. We behold him enter into a village in Galilee and cleanse ten lepers. After this is done, behold him surrounded by the multitude of anxious listeners to catch his words as they fall from his lips by way of instruction and reproof. All classes are surrounding him. Look at his disciples by his side listening to his instructions and ready to do his bidding. See those Scribes and Pharisees, his enemies, that seek to confound him. It was then that, when "he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, the kingdom of God cometh not with observation, (or outward show—margin;) neither shall they say, Lo here! or lo there! for behold the kingdom of God is within you," or, as the margin reads, "among you." Now the question is, what does Jesus mean by this expression. "He means that the kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom within their hearts." Do you think so? "Yes." What! the kingdom of God in the hearts of those Pharisees that were "full of rottenness and dead men's bones?" A pretty place for a kingdom, much more the "kingdom of God."

What is a kingdom? Of what does it consist?

1. Territory.
2. Subjects.
3. A king.

How much territory is there in a person's heart? Is there enough for the subjects to dwell in, and after they are stowed away is there room for the king to reign over them? What an absurdity!

Again, I read in 1 Cor. 15: 50. "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." Again, I read in Rev. 3: 20. "Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." This is usually applied to the sinner, and the kingdom is just as much in their hearts now as it was in the hearts of those sinful Pharisees, and the king has to knock to get into his own kingdom. Another absurdity. If the kingdom was set up then, Daniel did not give the right interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, for he said that the stone that was cut out of the mount without hands was to smite the "image upon the feet, which were of iron and clay," which he did not do if he took the kingdom then. If he smote the image then, he smote it upon the legs, for the feet and toes did not exist for more than four hundred years after that time. Even if the feet and toes did exist then, the iron, (undivided) the brass, the silver, and the gold, did not, and they are to be broken to pieces together. Tell me if they can ever be together without a resurrection. So you see the many absurdities which such a belief leads to. I have, I think, shown that it is not built upon the sure foundation, but upon the sand. It does not stand the test.

Now if it is not true that Jesus said the kingdom was in their hearts, what did he mean by the expression "the kingdom of God is within you." Read it as it is in the margin, and I think it will be plain enough: "Behold the kingdom of God is among you." He saw Jesus surrounded by the multitude, with his disciples by his side. Then those wicked, sinful, hypocritical, self-righteous, know-everything Pharisees, demanded of him "when the kingdom of God should come," and he said it "cometh not with outward show... Behold the kingdom of God is among you." There it was "among" them, and they so blind and so stupid that they could not perceive it. They could not tell of what the kingdom of God consisted. There was the despised Nazarene, who before Pilate confessed that he was born to be a king, and there were his subjects, those humble fishermen, and there was the territory; and did not this constitute the kingdom prospective? Imagine this is what he meant when he said, "the kingdom of God is among you." Though it was among them, it was not established. It had not come with power. He had not taken to himself his great power to reign. They were looking for his coming with power and majesty to reign, and could not see him in humility as he was. This is where they stumbled.

Now "the kingdom of God," or "the kingdom of Christ," (which are synonymous terms) is not a spiritual kingdom, for Paul said of David "that God had sworn with an oath, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." Acts 2: 30. He will be a literal king, and must have a literal kingdom. Can we tell where this kingdom is? Daniel gives a good description of it: "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days... And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. 7: 13, 14. After speaking of the fourth beast and the little horn reigning, he says: "But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion... And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him." 7: 26, 27. This is not a spiritual kingdom. It is literal. The same kingdom that the beast had, which was a universal one. It comprised the whole world. So Christ's kingdom will be all "under the whole heaven." David says his "dominion" shall be "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." Ps. 72: 8.

Much scripture might be quoted to prove that the kingdom is a literal kingdom, and not established yet. Instead of Jesus now reigning as king, he is seated at the right hand of God, there making "intercession" for us." Rom. 8: 30. He is pleading with the Father that we may become reconciled to God and become fit subjects of His kingdom, instead of remaining his enemies, and at last be cast into "outer darkness." He is pleading to-day, but he will not always remain there pleading. He was born to be a king. Before the rising of another sun he may finish his pleading, and leave the seat in his Father's throne, the mediatorial seat, and come to earth again. He will then come as king. When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, with all the holy angels he shall sit on the throne of his glory. Matt. 25: 31. Again he shall "judge the quick and dead at his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1.

Much more might be written, but it appears as though I have written enough to convince any unprejudiced mind that instead of the kingdom of God "being in the heart," it is a literal kingdom, yet to be established. But think not that this earth as it now is, groaning under the curse of Almighty God, with the thorn and the thistle, will remain as the abode of Christ and his saints; for, were he to come in his glory, with all the holy angels attending him, and glorify his saints, the earth as it is at present, and as it has been for most six thousand years, could not contain them. The All-wise God has made provision for that, and has promised to remove the "curse;" (Rev. 22: 3,) "make all things new," (Rev. 21: 5) "new heavens and earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Pet. 3: 13. When this is done, Christ with his saints will reign forever and ever, and all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Num. 14: 21. The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11: 9. This looks to me more like the lofty and holy place for the "kingdom of God," than the hearts of those wicked Pharisees, or even the hearts of the best of christians; and when the prayer—"Thy kingdom come"—shall be answered, may God grant that we may be found living in perfect obedience to all His commands, that we may be everlastingly saved in His kingdom, where there will be no more sorrow nor crying. Amen.

A. P. MOORE.

For the Crisis.

Angels.

A DISCOURSE, BY WM. SHEPHERD.

(Continued.)

We shall now notice some of the duties which they performed—the messages they delivered—the important assistance they rendered to the patriarchs and prophets. The first we learn of them in Scripture is, that they were placed in the east of the garden of Eden," as faithful sentinels, armed with a "flaming sword, which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life," lest the man might presume to put forth his hand and partake in his lost estate, "and live forever" in misery. Here is a merciful interposition, an introductory work in the great scheme of human redemption. Gen. 3: 22–24.

An angel appears to Hagar in the wilderness, persuading her to return to her mistress from whom she fled, promising her that he would multiply her "seed exceedingly, that it should not be numbered for multitude." Gen. 16: 7–11. Here you see is some ground for the belief which we entertain,—that those superior angels had something to do with the creation of man. Two of them appeared to, and did eat and drink with Abraham in his tent. These same being courteously invited by Lot, lodged with him; smote the lewd Sodomites, who threatened to abuse them, with blindness; warned Lot of the approaching overthrow and fiery ruin of that wicked city; excited and assisted him in his happy escape therefrom.

An angel interposed and rescued Isaac from the stroke of the uplifted knife, which was about to take his life on Mount Moriah, where his father had conveyed him, and purposed to offer him as a sacrifice to God,—a vivid and thrilling exemplification of his devout attachment to, and reverential fear of, his Creator. And here you will find this angel styles himself the Lord. Gen. 22: 16. And when the patriarch commanded his servant to go into his country and among his own kindred to select a wife for his son Isaac, he assures him of his confidence in an overruling and special providence, and adds, "He shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence." Gen. 24: 1–7. Subsequently we find this servant addressing the guiding angel thus:—"O Lord God of my master Abraham, I pray thee, send me good speed this day, and show kindness unto my master Abraham." 12 ver. Jacob had a glorious vision of them while tarrying in the plains of Haran. He sees many as it were ascending and descending a ladder connecting heaven and earth; typifying that blessed state of things which will obtain in the new age or world to come; to which our Lord also alludes in his conversation with the guileless Nathaniel. Gen. 28: 10–16; John 1: 51. Two companies of them attend Jacob on his return from Mesopotamia to protect him from the fury of Laban and his brother Esau. Gen. 32: 1, 2, 12. He wrestles with one, or has an interview—succeeds in his object, or "prevails," in consequence of which he is surnamed Israel, and a prince as having "power with God;" and observes, alluding to this angel,—"I have seen God face to face, while my life is preserved." ver. 30. Finally, the aged Patriarch, in imploring the heavenly benediction upon his grandchildren, Ephraim and Manasseh, also invokes a blessing upon them from his guardian angel, thus,—"The angel which redeemed me from evil bless the lads." Gen. 48: 15, 16. An angel appears unto Moses in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed," which angel declares himself to be "the God of thy fathers, &c.," (Ex. 3: 2, 6,) who gives important instructions to Moses, how to proceed with Pharaoh, in order to deliver the children of Israel from their oppressive bondage.

A powerful angel smote the first-born of Egypt, and assisted the Hebrews in their exode from that country, and in their march through the wilderness. Ex. 12: 23; 23: 20; Num. 20: 16.

One is sent to Gideon, who deputizes him to deliver Israel from the hand of the Midianites, assuring him, "I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man;" satisfying him that such would be the case by certain miracles which he condescended to perform in his presence, agreeable to the request of this "mighty man of valor." Ju. 6: 11–16; 36–40.

An angel appears to Manoah's wife, who was barren—promises her a son—she proposes to prepare a repast for him—he declines to partake—Manoah is inquisitive—wishes to know his name—he refuses to reveal it, saying, "Why asketh thou thus after my name, seeing it is secret?" The rejected repast is then offered as a burnt sacrifice unto the Lord, and in the meantime, "the angel did wondrously; ... for it came to pass when the flame went up toward heaven from the altar, that the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame of the altar." Ju. 13. This proves that their natures are proof against the fiery element, as does the case also with the one in the flaming bush.

The angel of the Lord is directed to seek out "Elijah the Tishbite" in his secluded abode "into the wilderness," where he had taken refuge "under a juniper-tree," who feasts him and encourages him against the attacks of the wicked Moabites; (1 Kings 19: 6–7,) and by these celestial messengers he is finally carried up into heaven in a chariot of fire. 2 Kings 2: 11. Troops of them protect Elisha at Dothan. 2 Kings 6: 16, 17. To punish David for numbering the people, an angel slew 70,000 of them in one day. 1 Chron. 21: 14, 15.

An angel in one night cut off 185,000 of Sennacherib's army and delivered Jerusalem from his terrible fury. 2 Kings 19: 35. While Balaam mounted on an ass is pursuing his journey contrary to the good pleasure of the Lord, one of these flaming messengers stands in the way, with a "sword drawn in his hand," who rebukes him, and impedes the further progress of his journey. Num. 22: 22–31. It was the burning Seraphim

> That touched Isaiah's lips with holy fire;
> And with prophetic strains his heart t' inspire;
> Bidding him sing the happy coming age,
> As found portrayed upon the sacred page.
>
> Isa 6: 2–7.

They are manifested to the prophet Ezekiel in various and majestic forms. He styles them "living creatures," and describes them as being in "the likeness of a man," as having wings, "four faces," and hands resembling a man's, feet "sparkling like the color of burnished brass;" and "they ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning." This confirms what we previously asserted in regard to the extraordinary fleetness of their travel, as also in Daniel where it is said, alluding to the angel, "being caused to fly swiftly." Dan. 9: 21. "And the likeness of the firmament upon their heads... was as the color of the terrible crystal. And when they went their wings (was) like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, the noise of an host," &c. Ezek. 1. Again, another appears unto him "whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed," giving him certain instructions which he is to impart to "the house of Israel," taking certain surveys and measurements of the Holy Land, making accurate divisions of the land for the several tribes, and committing unto him a beautiful pattern of heavenly architecture of the temple to be rebuilt at Jerusalem. Ezek. 40.

The three Hebrew children are preserved from the fearful flames of Nebuchadnezzar's fiery furnace, by one who is seen among them "walking in the midst," "like unto the Son of God." Daniel remains a whole night in the lions' den unharmed, for the reason, as he says—"My God hath sent his angel, and shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me." He has a vision of them—"thousands and thousands... and ten thousand times ten thousand." Dan. 3: 25–27; 6: 16–22; 7: 10. Subsequently, when in the act of supplication and prayer in behalf of his people and the land, about the time, as he terms it, of the "evening oblation," one gently touched him, "the man Gabriel," disclosing unto him the purposes of Jehovah, giving him important information in regard to time, &c.,—"the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem,"—the crucifixion of the Messiah,—destruction of the city and sanctuary, and the desolations which were determined even unto the end. Dan. 9: 20–27. Again, he has an interview with another, supposed to be the same, who appears unto him in resplendent and majestic attire, clothed in linen, his loins girded with fine gold of Uphaz. His body was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. So glorious was his person, that the holy prophet trembled at his presence. He proceeds to give Daniel further information touching what should befall God's people in "the latter days," making known to him how the prince of the Kingdom of Persia withstood him in his discharge of eminent duties of a national character, and how "Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help" him. Dan. 10: 4–21. This seems to teach that they superintend over whole nations and territories to bring about the great purposes of Omnipotence, making all things to subserve that end—his glory; and should serve to inspire us to more implicitly confide in Him, appreciating the Apostle's doctrine of the divine Providence (Rom. 8: 28,) fully believing that all the great events which occur from time to time in the world; the terrible revolutions and mighty upheavings which are yet to transpire preceding the glorious triumph of the Christ and his Church, are but to hasten that grand and sublime consummation, and but subservient to the pleasure of Him who "doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth." Him whose mighty hand "none can stay," "or say unto him, What doest thou?" This angel, Michael, is pledged to "stand up" and protect the saints in the great "time of trouble," and deliver all from the hand of the enemy who shall be "found written in the book"—an event contemporaneous with the resuscitation of the dead in Israel. Some suppose that this is the Lord Jesus himself, but we join issue with them here, believing this personage to be just what he is designated, i. e., "Michael, one of the chief princes." Michael is a very superior being, no doubt, but may not surpass Gabriel in intelligence, wisdom and power, occupying equally as elevated position in the celestial hierarchy as him. In vain corresponding texts (as supposed) are adduced to prove this idea from the Epistles and Apocalypse. Now in regard to the nature of our Lord, it is affirmed of him in the most indubitable terms "that he took not on himself the nature of angels;" "being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they." "For unto which of the angels, said he, (God) at any time, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?" Who, when being introduced to the world, the decree was given, "Let all the angels of God worship him;" and "to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?" But rather, "Are they not all ministering spirits (or spirits of ministration) who are sent forth to administer to them who shall be heirs of life everlasting?" Heb. 1: 4, 13. And further, "God hath given him a name, which is above every name." Phil. 2: 9.

But we return to our subject. They are described in Joel as engaged in the last grand battle as forming the appearance of an immense army of horses and horsemen, that, "as a strong people set in battle array... Before their face the people shall be much pained... [illegible] run like mighty men... every one in his ways... break their ranks... thrust another... [illegible] running to and fro in the city, climbing upon houses, entering into the windows, &c. "The earth shall quake before them, and the heavens shall tremble," &c. This is thought by some to have been accomplished in a former age, and that the prophet had reference to those swarms of locusts that desolated that land from time to time; but this interpretation of his language does not seem likely if you carefully examine the context, for we find agreeable to this that this work of theirs is in (or to be) the great and terrible day of the Lord." The attributes predicated of them also prove rather than their being locusts, that they are rational and intelligent creatures. Hence they must be those "mighty ones" which the prophet entreats of the Lord to "send down," as is recorded in the succeeding chapter. Joel 2 : 1–10 ; 3 : 11.

Lastly. From the Old Testament we call attention to the angel who visited Zechariah. The prophet, we find, has some very interesting conversation with this angel, who explains many things to him, particularly in reference to Jehovah's purpose touching the restitution. He hears the angel inquire of Jehovah, "How long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah?" And Jehovah "answered the angel . . . with good words and comfortable words" respecting the same, on the which the angel bids the prophet to "cry . . . saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with great jealousy. . . . Therefore thus saith the Lord, I am returned (or will return) to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the Lord of hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem. Cry yet, saying thus saith the Lord of hosts, my cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad: and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem." Zech. 1 : 8–17. Again, he discovers this angel with "a measuring line in his hand," and inquires of him, "Whither goest thou?" who replies, "to measure Jerusalem," &c.; at the same time "another angel went out to meet him;" the prophet is then requested to "run and spe k to a certain young man, and inform him of the important fact—'that Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towers without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein,' assuring him that Jehovah from thence would be 'unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her.' And that he would inherit Judah his portion, in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again." Zech. 2d chapter.

We might here observe, that in the apocryphal books of the Old Testament, angels are of very frequent mention, perhaps more so comparatively speaking than in the canonical Scriptures. See the book of Ezra and Tobiah for example.

Thus we discover in running through those Scriptures as we have, the important link which the angels of God form between the Almighty and this world in the earlier ages; and without taking up any time to recapitulate, which seems here uncalled for, we at once proceed to glance through the New Testament, and gather what information we can in regard to this truly interesting subject; perhaps this may be more pleasing and agreeable to us than the foregoing, from the consideration that it more intimately concerns us, being about to contemplate them in their relations to this, our dispensation. This, then, will claim our notice for a few moments.

(To be continued.)

Sayings of Martin Luther. — Luther, taking up a caterpillar, said: "'Tis an emblem of the devil in its crawling walk, and bears his colors in its shining hues." Luther was one day being shaved, and having his hair cut in the presence of Jonas, when he said to the latter: "Original sin is in us like beard. We are shaved to-day, and look clean, and have a smooth chin; to-morrow our beard is grown again, nor does it cease growing whilst we remain on earth. In like manner, original sin cannot be extirpated from us; it springs up in us as long as we exist. Nevertheless, we are bound to resist it to the utmost of our strength, and to cut it down unceasingly. When I am assailed with heavy tribulations, I rush out among my pigs, rather than remain alone by myself. The human heart is like a mill-stone in a mill; when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat to flour. If you put no wheat in, it still grinds on; but then, 'tis itself it grinds and wears away."

[illegible] is as loud a beggar as want, and a great deal more saucy. When you have bought one fine thing, you must buy ten more, that your appearance may be all of a piece; but it is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it.

[illegible] is the brightest ornament and [illegible] of youth.

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT . . . . EDITOR.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 20, 1858.

Office. . . 167 Hanover street.

The Soul.—No. I.

Volumes have been written on the soul, and still many seem to be in great darkness on the subject. We think much of the difficulty has arisen on account of not adhering strictly to the Scriptures for light, instead of the speculations of philosophy. True philosophy and the Bible are ever in harmony; but the fables of men, now so common, have nearly eclipsed the truth of the Lord, and left the mass to grope their way in the labyrinths of error, like blind men wandering alone in search for diamonds. They seem to scorn the Bible, the true source of light and truth, and hasten in the opposite direction, hoping for relief. As well might a man in the dark caverns of earth urge his way further down amid its blackness of darkness hoping to find light, as for one to look for light and truth among the musty tomes of old philosophers. Says Paul, "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy." How many might have been saved from ruin, had they observed the instruction of the apostle. People wish to be wise "above that which is written." Let us go to the word of the Lord for truth and abide by that, if it spoils all our creeds.

Before commencing the examination of the subject, we wish to say that soul and spirit are not one and the same thing, as used in the Bible. The word ruakh, rendered spirit in Eccl. 12 : 7,—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it,"—is found three hundred and eighty-five times in the Hebrew text, but is not once rendered soul. Pneuma, the corresponding Greek word, is also found three hundred and eighty-five times in the New Testament, and is not once rendered soul. Hence our readers will understand that when we are speaking of the soul, we do not mean spirit.*

"What is the soul? This question is often asked, but answers vary, thus showing that we do not think alike. Popular writers tell us the soul is "an independent thing," "the real entity," "and exists as such, whether the mechanism" (the body) "through which and upon which it acts, be disarranged or not; and even the destruction of the latter" (the body) "does not affect the former," (the soul.) "It is this spiritual organism which sees and hears and feels, which suffers and enjoys, which thinks and wills and executes; which is, in short, the real man. As perfect a picture may be formed upon the retina of the eye, after death as before; as complete a vibration produced upon the drum of the ear; but nothing is seen or heard, because the man has gone, and these instruments are of no further service." Discourse on the immortality of man by Thomas M. Clark, D. D., pp. 6–7.

Another modern writer on popular theology says,

"The soul ("the real man,") lives in the body just as a man lives in a house. When the house is carried away by a flood, or burned up, or it becomes old and falls to pieces, or any thing else happens so that the man cannot live in it any longer, he chooses a house somewhere else and goes to live in that. So your soul must move away at some time and leave the body."

We wish our readers to have the foregoing popular description of the soul in their minds, when we come to the examination of the Bible testimony, and remember that we never command or punish the house, but the tenant who dwells there; consequently, all the instruction, promises and threatenings are addressed to the soul—"the real man," and not to the body, or house, in which he lives. A man's house can have no moral character. Whatever, then, we find in the Bible addressed to man, can have no reference to his house, or body.

Before examining the Bible, let us compare the foregoing with the philosophy and doctrines of the heathen. The ancient Hindoos taught that

"The soul neither killeth, nor is killed. You cannot say of it, it hath been, is about to be, or is to be hereafter. It is a thing without birth. It is ancient, constant, and eternal. . . . As a man throweth away old garments and putteth on new, so the soul, having quitted its old frames, entereth into others which are new.† The weapon divideth it not; the water burneth it not; the water corrupteth it not; the wind drieth not away. . . It is indivisible, incorruptible; it is universal, permanent, immortal, immovable."

We see scarcely any difference between the Hindoo doctrine of the soul, and the popular view at the present day. Plato, the noted Grecian philosopher, held that,

"The immortal is definite in number, and it is impossible that there should be more than there actually are; so that whatever be the number of the souls, all must have existed from eternity."

We now come to consider the word nephesh, which is the only one rendered soul in the Old Testament, with two exceptions, which are found in Isa. 57 : 16 and Job 30 : 15. The first reads, "For I will not contend forever, neither will I be always wroth; for the spirit (ruakh) should fail before me, and the souls which I have made." The word here rendered souls, is n'shamah, which is never used in the Bible to represent a conscious existence separate from the human organism, but is generally rendered breath. The same word occurs in Isa. 2 : 22. "Cease ye from man, whose breath (n'shamah) is in his nostrils." No one supposes that a man's soul is in his nostrils, but we know that the breath of life is there; consequently, nothing can be drawn from Isa. 57 : 16 in favor of the existence of man separate from his physical organism.

Job 30 : 15 reads, "Terrors are turned upon me; they pursue my soul as the wind; and my welfare passeth away as a cloud." The word here rendered soul is n'deevah, which means, "liberality," "excellence," and would be more properly translated,—they pursue my liberality as the wind. Nothing here to favor the idea that the soul is "the real man" aside from the body.

In considering nephesh, the word rendered soul in all other places in the Old Testament, we should remark that Hebrew nouns are derived from Hebrew verbs, and nephesh is from a verb which signifies "to breathe," "to respire." Roy, in his lexicon, renders nephesh as follows:—"the soul," "life," "vital part," "a man," "a creature," "affection," "person," "substance." This word is found in the Hebrew text seven hundred and fifty-two times; and is rendered soul four hundred and seventy-five times.* Can it be possible that an important word is used so many times in the Scriptures, without a definite and plain signification? We think not.

Parkhurst, a distinguished Hebrew lexicographer, says,—

"As a noun, nephesh hath been supposed to signify the spiritual part of man, or what we commonly call his soul; I must for myself confess that I can find no passage where it hath undoubtedly this meaning."

In our next we purpose to commence the examination of the Bible upon this subject.

* [We purpose to write on the spirit in another series of articles.]

† [Observe the resemblance between the garment and the "house."]

* [In our articles on "What is man?" we counted the marginal readings also, which made the whole amount eight hundred and twenty-eight.]

Be Wise.

If we would persuade people to believe the truth, we must use some wisdom. Many good people seem to forget that the minds of men, like the farmer's field, need preparation before the seed is sown. He would not be considered a man of wisdom who should sow his seed upon the dry pasture land, or in a dense forest. If we would persuade men, we must first gain their confidence and remove their prejudice. This cannot be done at once. Hence we should first give them such as they can digest, and not crowd them with the strongest meat at the beginning. We have known some, who, when they went into a new place to labor, or chanced to be in meeting among some of the evangelical denominations, would begin at once on the life and death doctrine, and by this course only increase the prejudice already existing; whereas, if they had fed them "with milk" at first, or such as they could bear, they would have become interested, and called for more, till they could bear the whole truth. At one time the Savior said to his disciples, that he had many things to say which they could not then bear. It is important in teachto inquire, what can they bear? or, what is adapted to their present condition? When we teach children arithmetic we do not begin with division, but give them the first principles in mathematics; and if we would be successful moral teachers, we must adopt the same system, and not go faster than the people can follow.

We are to be fishers of men, and we think important lessons may be learnt from fishermen. The skillful fisherman employs the most pleasing and enticing inducements to persuade the fish to take the bait, at the same time keeping himself out of sight, endeavoring to let the fish see nothing but that which he desires for food. So, when we present the truth of the Lord, we should keep self out of sight, and show only Jesus and his word. Many of the most earnest efforts are spoiled by an exhibition of self, or some sectarian spirit.

If we are Methodists, then we are expected to help build them up; if Baptists, then throw all our influence on their side; if Congregationalists, lift only on that lever; if Adventists, assist nobody else; but if we have given up ourselves to serve the LORD, we can work in any place where there is opportunity, and can labor with any one else who has the same object in view, whatever be his denominational title, and not forbid him because he follows not us, or does not see as much light as we do.

If we would convince men of their errors, we must go to them in the spirit of kindness, and act the part of a friend, who has found something valuable which he wishes all his friends to enjoy. But tell men they are "blockheads," "stupid," "willful," "bigoted," "one-sided," "half-witted," "old fogies," "devil's children," &c., and we have the bitter satisfaction of knowing that they look upon us with contempt, and conclude that our spirit is the result of the doctrine we hold, and consequently wish to hear no more on the subject.

Let us "be wise," and profit from the teachings of the New Testament, which instructs us to "be kind," "forbearing," "long-suffering," "in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves." It is written that "Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil, . . . durst not bring against him a railing accusation," and shall we dare to rail at our fellow men, whom the Lord has taught us to love? Remember "A soft tongue breaketh the bone," "but grievous words stir up anger." When people reject the truth, we should feel like weeping over them, as did Jesus over Jerusalem, instead of reproaching them for their misdeeds. Unkindness never reforms the insane. "Be wise."

For the Crisis.

Report

OF THE MAINE EASTERN CENTRAL QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

This meeting convened at the hour appointed, 2 o'clock P. M., Thursday, Sept. 30th, in South Hope. The day and evening, and also Friday, were spent in preaching the word, and in prayer and exhortation. A sweet and heavenly spirit pervaded the meetings. God's blessing rested upon the people.

Saturday A. M., 9 o'clock, met and organized, by choice of Eld. S. K. Partridge, Chairman, Merrill W. Payson, Scribe. After which an interesting, animated and very profitable discussion took place, with feelings of Christian kindness, on gospel order in pursuing the work of the gospel, on church organization, &c., by Bros. Partridge, T. Smith, N. Smith, J. Dudley, H. Hemingway, I. C. Wellcome, Payson, Walker, Young, Lawrence, M. Hemingway and others, which lasted three hours.

Conference then adjourned until 4 o'clock P. M. Preaching at 2 o'clock, after which the Conference was called to order, when it was Voted, That the names of the preachers connected with this Conference be recorded in the Report; which were S. K. Partridge, James Dudley, John Somes, John R. Hall, Thomas Smith; it having been voted that Bro. T. Smith be for the present associated with this Conference.

Voted, That the next quarterly meeting be held on the third Thursday in January, 1859, at such place as Elder S. K. Partridge may appoint.

The meetings on Sunday were deeply interesting. The congregation was large, and the word preached fed and strengthened the saints, while it produced deep impressions on the unconverted.

In the afternoon, the Lord's Supper was administered to a good company of believers, who are expecting soon to meet again in the kingdom of God, to partake of the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Merrill W. Payson, Scribe.

Tears and Laughter.—What makes laughter determines whether laughter is good or bad. If it is the expression of levity or vanity, it is frivolous. If it be the expression of moral feeling, and it often is, it is as reverent as tears are. In a natural state, tears and laughter go hand in hand, for they are twin-born. Like two children sleeping in the same cradle, when one wakes and stirs, the other wakes also.—Selected.

Repentance.—Repentance is the key that unlocks the gate wherein sin keeps man a prisoner. It is the aqua vitae to fetch again to itself the fainting soul.

For the Crisis.

To Elder Edwin Burnham.

Dear Bro.:—As there is much written and more said, in these days, about "Gospel Order," "Church Organization," "Are we a People," &c.; and that we may not be "doing the attempted task of the Devil," in his league with Dr. Faustus, "nor hindering the work of God;" neither "ignoring New Testament order;" would it not be well for you to give us in the Crisis, what New Testament order is?

As we profess to be governed wholly by the Bible; let us have chapter and verse upon this important subject.

Yours for the truth,
R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me., Oct. 8, 1858.

REPLY.

Bro. York:—I am glad you wrote the above note, for it will give me an opportunity to tell you and many others what "God the Lord" teaches us, in His Word, about "Church Order.

I.

I will show, from the Bible, that there is such a thing as having order in the church. 1 Cor. 11: 34. "And if any man hunger let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come." Now Paul could not have set things in order if there was no order to set them in! He wrote as though they recognized order to whom he wrote, and certainly as though he recognized it himself. 1 Cor. 7: 17. "But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all churches." How could Paul "so ordain" in all churches if there was no order in those churches by which so to "ordain?" Titus 1 : 5. "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee." Certain things, it appears, were wanting, in the field of Titus' labor, and it became his business to set them "in order!" Cor. 14 : 40. "Let all things be done decently and in order." How can anything be done in order where there is no particular order? A great many more passages might be quoted to this point, but "in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established."

II.

I will speak of what is not Bible order.

1. Calling the "churches of God" bands is not Bible order. We read of the "Italian band," "bands of the Moabites," Judas' "band," "bands of the wicked," and some other bands, in the Bible, but nothing about "Christian bands," or "Advent bands." "Advent bands!!" What an idea! Why not use the name God has given us—"Church"—instead of making another?

2. Calling certain men who do certain things, in our midst, "Committees," is not Bible order. We read of "bishops," "elders," "deacons," and of some other officers of the church, in the Bible, but not one word about "Committees." Some who are wonderful in their outcry against having "deacons," or elders ordained in the church, are not afraid to swallow committees whole! O consistency!

3. Letting every thing go to wreck and ruin is not Bible order. Who hires the Hall? "I do not know." Who takes up the collection? "I do not know." Who invites the minister? "I do not know." Perhaps he is not invited at all, and so has to shift for himself! Perhaps so. Who gets the wood and oil? "I do not know." Who is responsible? "All hands"—that is, nobody! How shall we "tell it to the church?" "O, that meant away back then." All this is not Bible order.

4. "Iron bedsteads" are not Bible order. For one man, or two or three men, to rule the whole; for my notion to go, and all others be put down; for me to say, all shall think as I do, is not Bible order.

5. A fashionable, worldly, fine, nice, pretty, time-serving, human organization, to please a corrupt church and a wicked world, is not Bible order. "That which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God."

III.

What is Bible order?

The first edition of order, when Christ came on earth was, he was the Master, in person, and all must do as he bade them. You will not need that I stop to prove this. When the Master went away, he left the affairs of his church in the hands of inspired apostles, to oversee and regulate according to what the Holy Spirit should direct. You will not need that I stop to prove this. The apostles were directed by the Holy Spirit to set in order things in the church, as follows:

1. They had elders in the church. Acts 20 : 17. "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church." There was a plural number then. Not "speakers," brother, but "elders." Let it be so.

2. They had deacons. Phil. 1: 1. "Paul and Timotheus, the servant of Jesus Christ, which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons." Not "committees," brother, but "deacons." The word "bishops" in this passage is the same as "elders."

3. They had such other officers as their circumstances demanded; but it would require me to write too lengthy to refer to all the passages. I plead for Bible order. I plead only for Bible order. Shall we have it, or shall we set our wisdom up against God? I only want that which is simple, but I want that. Give us Bible, or else we die.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

A Letter in Verse.

Dear Bro. Damman:—You're still in New Hampshire, and I am out here Proclaiming his word which to us is so dear; I hope you'll be favored with light and with love, Be wise as a serpent and harmless as a dove. Our calling is high; it comes from above, From Him who is good, the author of love; We are commissioned to go, and also to preach, And naught but the Gospel will it do for to teach. This Gospel of good news, and glad tidings to all, Salvation to the poor, the great, and the small; A saver of life, to all who'll receive, But none CAN be saved unless they'll believe. This is a great work for poor feeble man, But then we must go, do the best that we can; Our master, you know, will give us his aid,—Then gird on the armor, and don't be afraid. By faith we'll move on and fight the good fight, By the grace of Christ Jesus we'll try to do right; The truth that's adapted to this present age, We must faithfully preach, although men may rage. O, who is sufficient? and then we do sigh, But the people must hear it, or else they will die. Our master has promised all the way to the end, In every emergency he'll be a near friend. The church who by faith have heard their Lord's voice, Their heads are uplifted, they can but rejoice; The signs are now speaking "and Zion is glad," And none of the good will feel at all sad. The Bible has marked all the way to the "Rest," And all that hold on, at the end will be blest; But if we let go, and with opposers do slide, In the day of his coming, O, where shall we hide! Deceptions right here—they are marked on the chart,—Our safety alone is with truth in the heart; If others wont declare it, surely we must, That man is but mortal, is bound to the dust; Their thoughts also perish in that very day, Not a thing do they know, not a word can they say; They may have been GREAT, and may have been BRAVE, But they with their wisdom are laid in the GRAVE. Our safety is here the truth for to know, Or else with deceivers we shall certainly go; The Spirit it speaketh, doth plainly declare They shall "depart from the faith"—O, let us beware! Revivals are common, with those that won't hear The coming of Jesus and the truth they can't bear; The few will be saved, if the truth they love best, The spiritual delusion will take all the rest. And now, Bro. Preacher, be true to thy trust, Gird on the old sword and don't let it rust; If you are left by your friends, and the brethren, too, With Christ and his word, you'll safely go through. The world, they hate Jesus, 't is certainly so, And most of professors with them freely go; We'll take up the cross, and we will rejoice, That with one meek as Moses we've taken our choice. And that is not all, reproach we will bear, With the Hebrews we'll go, and with them we'll share In the making of brick; this work must be done, With straw and without, till the Kingdom shall come.

Thy Bro. striving for the crown,
L. Boutell.

Danielsonville, Ct., June 27th.

True Benevolence.—The day laborer who earns with horny hands and the sweat of his brow, coarse food for a wife and children, whom he loves, is raised by his generous motive to true dignity; and though wanting the refinements of life, is a nobler being than those who think themselves absolved by wealth from serving others. It is worthy of note that the men and women who think most kindly of themselves, and most meanly of others, are those who render back to society, for the good things they enjoy, the smallest return of personal comfort.

Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears, while the used key [illegible] bright.

running to and fro in the city, climbing upon houses, entering into the windows, &c. "The earth shall quake before them, and the heavens shall tremble" &c. This is thought by some to have been accomplished [illegible] and that the prophet had reference to those swarms of locusts that desolated that land from time to time; but this interpretation of his language does not seem likely if you carefully examine the context, for we find agreeable to this that this work of theirs is in (or to be) the great and terrible day of the Lord. The attributes predicated of them also prove rather than their being locusts, that they are rational and intelligent creatures. Hence they must be those "mighty ones" which the prophet entreats of the Lord to "send down," as is recorded in the succeeding chapter. Joel 2 : 1–10; 3 : 11.

Lastly. From the Old Testament we call attention to the angel who visited Zechariah. The prophet, we find, has some very interesting conversation with this angel, who explains many things to him, particularly in reference to Jehovah's purpose touching the restitution. He hears the angel inquire of Jehovah, "How long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah?" And Jehovah "answered the angel . . . with good words and comfortable words" respecting the same, on the which the angel bids the prophet to "cry . . . saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with great jealousy. . . . Therefore thus saith the Lord, I am returned (or will return) to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the Lord of hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem. Cry yet, saying thus saith the Lord of hosts, my cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad: and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem." Zech. 1 : 8–17. Again, he discovers this angel with "a measuring line in his hand," and inquires of him, "Whither goest thou?" who replies, "to measure Jerusalem," &c.; at the same time "another angel went out to meet him;" the prophet is then requested to "run and spe k to a certain young man, and inform him of the important fact—'that Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towers without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein,' assuring him that Jehovah from thence would be 'unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her.' And that he would inherit Judah his portion, in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again." Zech. 2d chapter.

We might here observe, that in the apocryphal books of the Old Testament, angels are of very frequent mention, perhaps more so comparatively speaking than in the canonical Scriptures. See the book of Ezra and Tobiah for example.

Thus we discover in running through those Scriptures as we have, the important link which the angels of God form between the Almighty and this world in the earlier ages; and without taking up any time to recapitulate, which seems here uncalled for, we at once proceed to glance through the New Testament, and gather what information we can in regard to this truly interesting subject; perhaps this may be more pleasing and agreeable to us than the foregoing, from the consideration that it more intimately concerns us, being about to contemplate them in their relations to this, our dispensation. This, then, will claim our notice for a few moments.

(To be continued.)

Sayings of Martin Luther.—Luther, taking up a caterpillar, said: "'Tis an emblem of the devil in its crawling walk, and bears his colors in its shining hues." Luther was one day being shaved, and having his hair cut in the presence of Jonas, when he said to the latter: "Original sin is in us like beard. We are shaved to-day, and look clean, and have a smooth chin; to-morrow our beard is grown again, nor does it cease growing whilst we remain on earth. In like manner, original sin cannot be extirpated from us; it springs up in us as long as we exist. Nevertheless, we are bound to resist it to the utmost of our strength, and to cut it down unceasingly. When I am assailed with heavy tribulations, I rush out among my pigs, rather than remain alone by myself. The human heart is like a mill-stone in a mill; when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat to flour. If you put no wheat in, it still grinds on; but then 'tis itself it grinds and wears away. . . . [illegible] a beggar as want, and a great deal more saucy. When you have bought one fine thing, you must buy ten more, that your appearance may be all of a piece [illegible] to suppress [illegible] all that follows it. [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

MILES GRANT . . . . EDITOR.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 20, 1858.

Office . . . 167 Hanover Street.

The Soul.—No. I.

Volumes have been written on the soul, and still many seem to be in great darkness on the subject. We think much of the difficulty has arisen on account of not adhering strictly to the Scriptures for light, instead of the speculations of philosophy. True philosophy and the Bible are ever in harmony; but the fables of men, now so common, have nearly eclipsed the truth of the Lord, and left the mass to grope their way in the labyrinths of error, like blind men wandering alone in search for diamonds. They seem to scorn the Bible, the true source of light and truth, and hasten in the opposite direction, hoping for relief. As well might a man in the dark caverns of earth urge his way further down amid its blackness of darkness hoping to find light, as for one to look for light and truth among the musty tomes of old philosophers. Says Paul, "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy." How many might have been saved from ruin, had they observed the instruction of the apostle. People wish to be wise "above that which is written." Let us go to the word of the Lord for truth and abide by that, if it spoils all our creeds.

Before commencing the examination of the subject, we wish to say that soul and spirit are not one and the same thing, as used in the Bible. The word ruakh, rendered spirit in Eccl. 12 : 7,—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it,"—is found three hundred and eighty-five times in the Hebrew text, but is not once rendered soul. Pneuma, the corresponding Greek word, is also found three hundred and eighty-five times in the New Testament, and is not once rendered soul. Hence our readers will understand that when we are speaking of the soul, we do not mean spirit.*

"What is the soul? This question is often asked, but answers vary, thus showing that we do not think alike. Popular writers tell us the soul is "an independent thing," "the real entity," "and exists as such, whether the mechanism" (the body) "through which and upon which it acts, be disarranged or not; and even the destruction of the latter" (the body) "does not affect the former," (the soul.) "It is this spiritual organism which sees and hears and feels, which suffers and enjoys, which thinks and wills and executes; which is, in short, the real man. As perfect a picture may be formed upon the retina of the eye, after death as before; as complete a vibration produced upon the drum of the ear; but nothing is seen or heard, because the man has gone, and these instruments are of no further service." Discourse on the immortality of man by Thomas M. Clark, D. D., pp. 6–7.

Another modern writer on popular theology says,

"The soul ("the real man,") lives in the body just as a man lives in a house. When the house is carried away by a flood, or burned up, or it becomes old and falls to pieces, or any thing else happens so that the man cannot live in it any longer, he chooses a house somewhere else and goes to live in that. So your soul must move away at some time and leave the body."

We wish our readers to have the foregoing popular description of the soul in their minds, when we come to the examination of the Bible testimony, and remember that we never command or punish the house, but the tenant who dwells there; consequently, all the instruction, promises and threatenings are addressed to the soul—"the real man," and not to the body, or house, in which he lives. A man's house can have no moral character. Whatever, then, we find in the Bible addressed to man, can have no reference to his house, or body.

Before examining the Bible, let us compare the foregoing with the philosophy and doctrines of the heathen. The ancient Hindoos taught that

"The soul neither killeth, nor is killed. You cannot say of it, it hath been, is about to be, or is to be hereafter. It is a thing without birth. It is ancient, constant, and eternal. . . . As a man throweth away old garments and putteth on new, so the soul, having quitted its old frames, entereth into others which are new.† The weapon divideth it not; the water burneth it not; the water corrupteth it not; the wind drieth not away. . . It is indivisible, incorruptible; it is universal, permanent, immortal, immovable."

We see scarcely any difference between the Hindoo doctrine of the soul, and the popular view at the present day. Plato, the noted Grecian philosopher, held that,

"The immortal is definite in number, and it is impossible that there should be more than there actually are; so that whatever be the number of the souls, all must have existed from eternity."

We now come to consider the word nephesh, which is the only one rendered soul in the Old Testament, with two exceptions, which are found in Isa. 57 : 16 and Job 30 : 15. The first reads, "For I will not contend forever, neither will I be always wroth; for the spirit (ruakh) should fail before me, and the souls which I have made." The word here rendered souls, is n'shamah, which is never used in the Bible to represent a conscious existence separate from the human organism, but is generally rendered breath. The same word occurs in Isa. 2 : 22. "Cease ye from man, whose breath (n'shamah) is in his nostrils." No one supposes that a man's soul is in his nostrils, but we know that the breath of life is there; consequently, nothing can be drawn from Isa. 57 : 16 in favor of the existence of man separate from his physical organism.

Job 30 : 15 reads, "Terrors are turned upon me; they pursue my soul as the wind; and my welfare passeth away as a cloud." The word here rendered soul is n'deevah, which means, "liberality," "excellence," and would be more properly translated,—they pursue my liberality as the wind. Nothing here to favor the idea that the soul is "the real man" aside from the body.

In considering nephesh, the word rendered soul in all other places in the Old Testament, we should remark that Hebrew nouns are derived from Hebrew verbs, and nephesh is from a verb which signifies "to breathe," "to respire." Roy, in his lexicon, renders nephesh as follows:—"the soul," "life," "vital part," "a man," "a creature," "affection," "person," "substance." This word is found in the Hebrew text seven hundred and fifty-two times; and is rendered soul four hundred and seventy-five times.* Can it be possible that an important word is used so many times in the Scriptures, without a definite and plain signification? We think not.

Parkhurst, a distinguished Hebrew lexicographer, says,—

"As a noun, nephesh hath been supposed to signify the spiritual part of man, or what we commonly call his soul; I must for myself confess that I can find no passage where it hath undoubtedly this meaning."

In our next we purpose to commence the examination of the Bible upon this subject.

* [We purpose to write on the spirit in another series of articles.]

† [Observe the resemblance between the garment and the "house."]

* [In our articles on "What is man?" we counted the marginal readings also, which made the whole amount eight hundred and twenty-eight.]

Be Wise.

If we would persuade people to believe the truth, we must use some wisdom. Many good people seem to forget that the minds of men, like the farmer's field, need preparation before the seed is sown. He would not be considered a man of wisdom who should sow his seed upon the dry pasture land, or in a dense forest. If we would persuade men, we must first gain their confidence and remove their prejudice. This cannot be done at once. Hence we should first give them such as they can digest, and not crowd them with the strongest meat at the beginning. We have known some, who, when they went into a new place to labor, or chanced to be in meeting among some of the evangelical denominations, would begin at once on the life and death doctrine, and by this course only increase the prejudice already existing; whereas, if they had fed them "with milk" at first, or such as they could bear, they would have become interested, and called for more, till they could bear the whole truth. At one time the Savior said to his disciples, that he had many things to say which they could not then bear. It is important in teachto inquire, what can they bear? or, what is adapted to their present condition? When we teach children arithmetic we do not begin with division, but give them the first principles in mathematics; and if we would be successful moral teachers, we must adopt the same system, and not go faster than the people can follow.

We are to be fishers of men, and we think important lessons may be learnt from fishermen. The skillful fisherman employs the most pleasing and enticing inducements to persuade the fish to take the bait, at the same time keeping himself out of sight, endeavoring to let the fish see nothing but that which he desires for food. So, when we present the truth of the Lord, we should keep self out of sight, and show only Jesus and his word. Many of the most earnest efforts are spoiled by an exhibition of self, or some sectarian spirit.

If we are Methodists, then we are expected to help build them up; if Baptists, then throw all our influence on their side; if Congregationalists, lift only on that lever; if Adventists, assist nobody else; but if we have given up ourselves to serve the LORD, we can work in any place where there is opportunity, and can labor with any one else who has the same object in view, whatever be his denominational title, and not forbid him because he follows not us, or does not see as much light as we do.

If we would convince men of their errors, we must go to them in the spirit of kindness, and act the part of a friend, who has found something valuable which he wishes all his friends to enjoy. But tell men they are "blockheads," "stupid," "willful," "bigoted," "one-sided," "half-witted," "old fogies," "devil's children," &c., and we have the bitter satisfaction of knowing that they look upon us with contempt, and conclude that our spirit is the result of the doctrine we hold, and consequently wish to hear no more on the subject.

Let us "be wise," and profit from the teachings of the New Testament, which instructs us to "be kind," "forbearing," "long-suffering," "in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves." It is written that "Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil, . . . durst not bring against him a railing accusation," and shall we dare to rail at our fellow men, whom the Lord has taught us to love? Remember "A soft tongue breaketh the bone," "but grievous words stir up anger." When people reject the truth, we should feel like weeping over them, as did Jesus over Jerusalem, instead of reproaching them for their misdeeds. Unkindness never reforms the insane. "Be wise."

For the Crisis.

Report

OF THE MAINE EASTERN CENTRAL QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

This meeting convened at the hour appointed, 2 o'clock P. M., Thursday, Sept. 30th, in South Hope. The day and evening, and also Friday, were spent in preaching the word, and in prayer and exhortation. A sweet and heavenly spirit pervaded the meetings. God's blessing rested upon the people.

Saturday A. M., 9 o'clock, met and organized, by choice of Eld. S. K. Partridge, Chairman, Merrill W. Payson, Scribe. After which an interesting, animated and very profitable discussion took place, with feelings of Christian kindness, on gospel order in pursuing the work of the gospel, on church organization, &c., by Bros. Partridge, T. Smith, N. Smith, J. Dudley, H. Hemingway, I. C. Wellcome, Payson, Walker, Young, Lawrence, M. Hemingway and others, which lasted three hours.

Conference then adjourned until 4 o'clock P. M. Preaching at 2 o'clock, after which the Conference was called to order, when it was Voted, That the names of the preachers connected with this Conference be recorded in the Report; which were S. K. Partridge, James Dudley, John Somes, John R. Hall, Thomas Smith; it having been voted that Bro. T. Smith be for the present associated with this Conference.

Voted, That the next quarterly meeting be held on the third Thursday in January, 1859, at such place as Elder S. K. Partridge may appoint.

The meetings on Sunday were deeply interesting. The congregation was large, and the word preached fed and strengthened the saints, while it produced deep impressions on the unconverted.

In the afternoon, the Lord's Supper was administered to a good company of believers, who are expecting soon to meet again in the kingdom of God, to partake of the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Merrill W. Payson, Scribe.

Tears and Laughter.—What makes laughter determines whether laughter is good or bad. If it is the expression of levity or vanity, it is frivolous. If it be the expression of moral feeling, and it often is, it is as reverent as tears are. In a natural state, tears and laughter go hand in hand, for they are twin-born. Like two children sleeping in the same cradle, when one wakes and stirs, the other wakes also.—Selected.

Repentance.—Repentance is the key that unlocks the gate wherein sin keeps man a prisoner. It is the aqua vitae to fetch again to itself the fainting soul.

For the Crisis.

To Elder Edwin Burnham.

Dear Bro.:—As there is much written and more said, in these days, about "Gospel Order," "Church Organization," "Are we a People," &c.; and that we may not be "doing the attempted task of the Devil," in his league with Dr. Faustus, "nor hindering the work of God;" neither "ignoring New Testament order;" would it not be well for you to give us in the Crisis, what New Testament order is?

As we profess to be governed wholly by the Bible; let us have chapter and verse upon this important subject.

Yours for the truth,

R. R. York.

Yarmouth, Me., Oct. 8, 1858.

REPLY.

Bro. York:—I am glad you wrote the above note, for it will give me an opportunity to tell you and many others what "God the Lord" teaches us, in His Word, about "Church Order.

I.

I will show, from the Bible, that there is such a thing as having order in the church. 1 Cor. 11 : 34. "And if any man hunger let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come." Now Paul could not have set things in order if there was no order to set them in! He wrote as though they recognised order to whom he wrote, and certainly as though he recognized it himself. 1 Cor. 7 : 17. "But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all churches." How could Paul "so ordain" in all churches if there was no order in those churches by which so to "ordain?" Titus 1 : 5. "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee." Certain things, it appears, were wanting, in the field of Titus' labor, and it became his business to set them "in order!" Cor. 14 : 40. "Let all things be done decently and in order." How can anything be done in order where there is no particular order? A great many more passages might be quoted to this point, but "in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established."

II.

I will speak of what is not Bible order.

1. Calling the "churches of God" bands is not Bible order. We read of the "Italian band," "bands of the Moabites," Judas' "band," "bands of the wicked," and some other bands, in the Bible, but nothing about "Christian bands," or "Advent bands." "Advent bands!!" What an idea! Why not use the name God has given us—"Church"—instead of making another?

2. Calling certain men who do certain things, in our midst, "Committees," is not Bible order. We read of "bishops," "elders," "deacons," and of some other officers of the church, in the Bible, but not one word about "Committees." Some who are wonderful in their outcry against having "deacons," or elders ordained in the church, are not afraid to swallow committees whole! O consistency!

3. Letting every thing go to wreck and ruin is not Bible order. Who hires the Hall? "I do not know." Who takes up the collection? "I do not know." Who invites the minister? "I do not know." Perhaps he is not invited at all, and so has to shift for himself! Perhaps so. Who gets the wood and oil? "I do not know." Who is responsible? "All hands"—that is, nobody! How shall we "tell it to the church?" "O, that meant away back then." All this is not Bible order.

4. "Iron bedsteads" are not Bible order. For one man, or two or three men, to rule the whole; for my notion to go, and all others be put down; for me to say, all shall think as I do, is not Bible order.

5. A fashionable, worldly, fine, nice, pretty, time-serving, human organization, to please a corrupt church and a wicked world, is not Bible order. "That which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God."

III.

What is Bible order?

The first edition of order, when Christ came on earth was, he was the Master, in person, and all must do as he bade them. You will not need that I stop to prove this. When the Master went away, he left the affairs of his church in the hands of inspired apostles, to oversee and regulate according to what the Holy Spirit should direct. You will not need that I stop to prove this. The apostles were directed by the Holy Spirit to set in order things in the church, as follows:

1. They had elders in the church. Acts 20 : 17. "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church." There was a plural number then. Not "speakers," brother, but "elders." Let it be so.

2. They had deacons. Phil. 1 : 1. "Paul and Timotheus, the servant of Jesus Christ, which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons." Not "committees," brother, but "deacons." The word "bishops" in this passage is the same as "elders."

3. They had such other officers as their circumstances demanded; but it would require me to write too lengthy to refer to all the passages. I plead for Bible order. I plead only for Bible order. Shall we have it, or shall we set our wisdom up against God? I only want that which is simple, but I want that. Give us Bible, or else we die.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

A Letter in Verse.

Dear Bro. Damman:—You're still in New Hampshire, and I am out here Proclaiming his word which to us is so dear; I hope you'll be favored with light and with love, Be wise as a serpent and harmless as a dove. Our calling is high; it comes from above, From Him who is good, the author of love; We are commissioned to go, and also to preach, And naught but the Gospel will it do for to teach. This Gospel of good news, and glad tidings to all, Salvation to the poor, the great, and the small; A saver of life, to all who'll receive, But none can be saved unless they'll believe. This is a great work for poor feeble man, But then we must go, do the best that we can; Our master, you know, will give us his aid,—Then gird on the armor, and do n't be afraid. By faith we'll move on and fight the good fight, By the grace of Christ Jesus we'll try to do right; The truth that's adapted to this present age, We must faithfully preach, although men may rage. O, who is sufficient? and then we do sigh, But the people must hear it, or else they will die. Our master has promised all the way to the end, In every emergency he'll be a near friend. The church who by faith have heard their Lord's voice, Their heads are uplifted, they can but rejoice; The signs are now speaking "and Zion is glad," And none of the good will feel at all sad. The Bible has marked all the way to the "Rest," And all that hold on, at the end will be blest; But if we let go, and with opposers do slide, In the day of his coming, O, where shall we hide! Deceptions right here—they are marked on the chart,—Our safety alone is with truth in the heart; If others wont declare it, surely we must, That man is but mortal, is bound to the dust;' Their thoughts also perish in that very day, Not a thing do they know, not a word can they say; They may have been great, and may have been brave, But they with their wisdom are laid in the grave. Our safety is here the truth for to know, Or else with deceivers we shall certainly go; The Spirit it speaketh, doth plainly declare They shall "depart from the faith"—O, let us beware! Revivals are common, with those that won't hear The coming of Jesus and the truth they can't bear; The few will be saved, if the truth they love best, The spiritual delusion will take all the rest. And now, Bro. Preacher, be true to thy trust, Gird on the old sword and don't let it rust; If you are left by your friends, and the brethren, too, With Christ and his word, you'll safely go through. The world, they hate Jesus, 't is certainly so, And most of professors with them freely go; We'll take up the cross, and we will rejoice, That with one meek as Moses we've taken our choice. And that is not all, reproach we will bear, With the Hebrews we'll go, and with them we'll share In the making of brick; this work must be done, With straw and without, till the Kingdom shall come.

Thy Bro. striving for the crown,

L. Boutell.

Danielsonville, Ct., June 27th.

True Benevolence.—The day laborer who earns with horny hands and the sweat of his brow, coarse food for a wife and children, whom he loves, is raised by his generous motive to true dignity; and though wanting the refinements of life, is a nobler being than those who think themselves absolved by wealth from serving others. It is worthy of note that the men and women who think most kindly of themselves, and most meanly of others, are those who render back to society, for the good things they enjoy, the smallest return of personal comfort.

Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears, while the used key is always bright.

For the Crisis.

Forbidding to Marry.

It will be recollected of some, who have read of Tatian, in the "Doctrine of a Future Life," that he became the leader of a sect of Encratites, or ascetics, who thought it better not to marry; and it is queried whether the reason of this was not that he, Tatian, believed in immortality for the sake of punishment. If I mistake not, he was the first one who was fully committed to this view. His master, Justin Martyr, did indeed seem to believe that the wicked would suffer for ever; but this faith was evidently very distressing to him, and in his later writings we find some reason for thinking that he supposed the wicked might perish. In Tatian, however, we find no such relentings. He was of a harsh temper, and it was quite natural that he should be censured for blasphemously asserting that Adam was not admitted to repentance, but is finally lost. I have queried whether Tatian did not discourage marriage for fear that a child, dear as one's own life, might die impenitent and suffer for ever. Or he may have thought that man had no right to run the risk of adding to the number of the lost; no right to offer a candidate for the endless joy, who might suffer endless woe instead.

Thinking this might be the sentiment of Tatian, I have been watching to see if others, holding the orthodox faith, might not cherish the same sentiment. I do not know whether the touching passages in Young's "Night Thoughts" prove the same misgivings or not. I have not the volume at hand, but the passages are quoted by T. Starr King, in his reply to Dr. Adams. But, waiving all claim to Edward Young in this argument, I have recently met two cases of persons who have felt as I think Tatian did.

One was a minister whom I met three months ago, who bade me a hearty God speed when he learned what book I was traveling with, and what faith I was propagating. He said that when a boy he used to have a good many wicked feelings about parentage, in view of the common faith. "Why," he thought, "do people make a holiday when their friends marry, or go into general rejoicing when a child is born into the world? Why is not a wedding day a day of mourning and lamentation for the ceaseless woes that may follow?" These wicked feelings, as some might call them, my friend had sometimes expressed in questions to his father, a good and candid man, from whom he could get no reply. My friend had never changed his feelings on the subject, though he had suffered his perplexities. He had for some time, however, been persuaded that the wicked would perish, and said he would not for a hundred dollars lose the comfort which "Debt and Grace" had given him.

The second case was that of a minister I met five weeks ago, who told me that he had for many years delayed marriage, simply for the reason I have named. His celibacy had received some attention from his brethren in the ministry, who either as personal friends or as zealous for the honor of the Gospel, had proffered the usual and the Scriptural advice on the subject, but he remained unmoved. One minister, in particular, had pressed the matter in a somewhat troublesome way; charging him with being Romish in his views of things, "forbidding to marry," and threatening to bring his case before the ecclesiastical court, if he was not "provoked to love and good works." But my friend could not see what "love" had to do with a contingency of eternal woe; or what "good works" had to do with adding, perchance, to the immortal progeny of him whose works Christ came to destroy. But human nature will have its course; and my friend, he hardly knew why, had married. I need not say he was very ready to inquire whether the infinitely tremendous hazards he had feared were real, and whether those who thought they were not, must be denied the right of christian fellowship in his church. Thus it was that while his urgent friend bade him to marry, his doctrine, even the prevailing faith, had forbidden him. Is it not a Romish doctrine? C. F. H.

☞ As the Dead Sea drinks in the river Jordan, and is never the sweeter, and the ocean all other rivers, and is never the fresher; so we are apt to receive daily mercies from God, and still remain insensible of them, unthankful for them.—Bishop Reynolds.

☞ An infidel remarked, within the hearing of a little girl, that all things came by chance, and the world, like a mushroom, sprang up in the night. "I should like to know, sir," she asked, "where the seed came from?"

Foreign News.

New York, Oct. 15.

Steamship Africa, from Liverpool 2d inst., arrived at this port shortly before midnight.

Advices from Turkey and the East show continued excitement against the Christians.

Prince Napoleon met a distinguished reception from the Emperor Alexander at Warsaw.

A Mr. Rowett had offered to lay a rope covered with electric wire, between Valentia and Newfoundland, for the sum of £182,000 sterling.

A telegraphic despatch from Madrid states that the government had granted permission to import cotton seed into Cuba.

A letter from Berne contradicts in the strongest terms the report that the French government had addressed a fresh note to the Swiss Federal Council on the subject of the refugees residing at Geneva, and that M. Kern, the Swiss Minister at Paris, had received special instructions on the subject. It is asserted that the Emperor of the French is perfectly satisfied with the decree published by the Federal Council with respect to refugees, and has made no further demand on the subject.

Letters from Candia describe the island as still in a very disturbed state. The new Governor had not been able to carry out the instructions received from Constantinople. Armed Turks had traversed the capital of the island shouting "Death to the Christians." Some of them were arrested, but were immediately released, so great is Mussulman influence.

A dispatch from Alexandria says the Lucifero publishes a report of a revolt at Djidda, and a rising at Mecca, wherein several Turkish soldiers have been killed.

Advices from Tripoli state that the revolt of a battalion of soldiers had been suppressed.

The Chief Minister of Persia and his two sons had been arrested, and were under surveillance.

Advices from Suez state that the steamer Hymen had been met on the coast of Abyssinia with pilgrims on board, in a state of mutiny against the Christians. The latter would doubtless have all been murdered but for the timely interposition of the English steamer, which took the Hymen and all on board into Suez.

ITALY.

Letters in regard to the late conspiracy at Naples say it had assumed very formidable proportions, including many high persons in it, and having extensive foreign ramifications. It was discovered by finding some papers about the person of a man who had been accidentally drowned.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor has given the Order of St. Andrew the Highest to Prince Gortschakoff, as a mark of satisfaction that two such important treaties had been concluded with China.

PERSIA.

A conspiracy in Persia against the Prime Minister had failed, and the leaders were beheaded.

LATEST.

Estimates have been made for putting all the French ports on the Atlantic in a better state of defence; for Havre 150,000,000 francs have been assigned; Denmark, 17,000,000; Dieppe, 7,000,000; Fecapt, 2,000,000; Calais and Boulogne are also provided for, and a port of refuge is to be constructed between Brest and Cherbourg.

Lord Elgin and Admiral Seymour had gone to Japan. The French had gone to Cochin China. The British Consul and all foreigners had quitted Canton.

Chinese exchange on England 2 per cent.

There is nothing new in regard to the cable. Varley, the electrician, expresses confidence that his estimate of the distance from shore where the faults are will be found about correct.

Domestic News.

New York, Oct. 15.—Steamship Star of the West, from Aspinwall 5th, via Kingston, Ja., 8th, arrived this morning. She brings upwards of $1,400,000 in treasure.

Oregon.—Advices from Oregon are to Sept. 1. Various unreliable rumors of Indian fights are current. One of them is to the effect that a train of several hundred men, under Gen. Palmer, formerly Indian Agent in Oregon, had been attacked near Walla, and every one killed.

South America.—A locomotive on the Copiapo Railroad had attained the height of 4075 feet from the level of the sea—1000 feet higher than any other engine had ascended as yet.

It was reported at Valparaiso that Gen. Echegua had started on another revolutionary expedition to Peru. It was said his friends had purchased the cargo of ammunition on board the brig Townsend Jones, and that she was about to sail for Peru to land it.

The Comet.—The Comet is now rapidly approaching Venus. About the 16th inst., the time of its nearest approach, it will be, as seen from the planet, thirty-six times as great as it appeared to the earth at its maximum. The nearest apparent approach to Venus will be on the 19th inst., when it will be between two and three degrees distant. Owing to the great velocity with which it will be moving, (about thirty-three miles per second) it will be subjected to the disturbing force of the planet for such a short time, that its orbit will not be very much changed. If it had arrived three days earlier, it would have passed so near as to present to Venus an appearance of more than three thousand times as magnificent as it appeared to us on the 8th and 9th instants.

Mammoth Remains.—While some workmen were digging in the marsh on the land of Mr. John M. Ellhone, in Ellenville, Ulster county, they discovered some bones. One is a portion of a jaw bone, the others are evidently portions of a leg or thigh bones. They are all much decayed, having apparently been under the soft mud for ages. In the jaw is a mammoth tooth, in a state of almost perfect preservation. It is the tooth of a granivorous animal, and measures seven inches in length and three in width. These bones are evidently those of a mastodon of the largest size. They are said to be five or six times larger than the corresponding bones of any living animal.—N. Y. Commercial.

A letter from Senator Sumner, dated Aix-la-Chapelle, says he has much improved in health.

Obituary Notices.

Sister Jerusha Allen Bigelow, daughter of Bro. Levi Allen, of Chickopee Falls, "fell on sleep and was gathered to her fathers," Sept. 17th, aged 33 1-2 years.

She was converted to christianity in her childhood and has maintained a consistent christian character for many years. She embraced the soul cheering doctrine of the coming of the Lord at hand, in 1842 or '43, and never wavered in her faith in all the years of trial and disappointment since that period. She was a firm believer in the sleep of the saint from death until the resurrection, to the last hour of life. She possessed a remarkably mild and amiable disposition, and was beloved by all who knew her. She has been gradually consuming away for three or four months, and her life has been prolonged for weeks beyond her own expectation and that of her friends. Although death was her enemy, yet it had no terror for her; "for since Jesus had lain there" he had taken away its sting. Her faith in Christ sustained her to the last. It was painful to have her friends weep in her presence, but she wanted them to rejoice with her and sing praises. A week before her death she had a sinking turn, and bidding her friends farewell, she said, "I expect to sleep in Jesus to-night." But she rallied and continued a sufferer, but very happy in her mind until released from suffering—so quietly that her passage into the valley and shadow of death was scarcely observed.

It was the privilege of the writer to visit her during her sickness, and to sing and pray with the dear saint as she was sinking to rest. Not a word or look of impatience or restlessness was heard or seen during all her protracted sufferings. But she often gave utterance to the joys of her soul in words like these: "Oh, how precious is Jesus!" "How sweet the name of Jesus is!" She felt great solicitude for her friends, and warned and besought them to be reconciled to God, and said, "Oh, what a poor place this is to prepare for the Lord's coming or for death!" Ah! verily, as said Mr. Wesley on one occasion, "Our people die well." There are no people on earth that hate death with such perfect hatred as we do and cannot see the character of a friend in it at all. Yet we are not afraid to die, but would prefer, if the Lord will, to live until Jesus comes. So has passed away another of our number; her bright eye and cheerful countenance will be seen no more until it puts on the brilliancy of immortality.

Bro. E. Burnham improved the occasion before a large audience in the Methodist chapel, which was kindly offered to them for the occasion, from the text in 15th of 1 Cor. 35th verse. May God sanctify this affliction to the family and friends and may we soon behold the Savior in his glory.

Rand. E. Ladd.

Died, in Cheshire, Mass., Oct. 6th, after a distressing illness of five weeks and two days, Edgar Wood Cotton, only son of Norman and Marion A. Cotton, aged two years and one month.

My darling is gone, and my heart is broken!

"The evening breezes softly moan
Around my lonely cot;
But, O, they bring no more the tone
Which once they fondly brought!
They bring no more the ringing laugh
Of childish joy and glee;
They bring no more the silvery voice,
Dearer than life to me!

They bring no more the guileless breath
Of childhood's calm repose;
They lay no more within my arms
My sweet, my folded rose.
But when that morning's Sun shall rise,
Whose beams shall gild the tomb,
My boy will leave his icy couch,
In more than childhood's bloom!

Then, hail, thrice hail, thou happy day!
When will the night be gone?
When will the shadows flee away,
And that bright morning dawn?
Sure every mother's heart that holds
A tie so dear and strong
Within the grave, with me can cry—
'How long, O Lord, how long?'"

Marion A. Cotton.

Died, in Portsmouth, N. H., Sept 13th, 1858, Ann E. Shapley, only daughter of William and Sarah Shapley, aged 18 years and two months.

Sister S. possessed a very lovely and amiable nature, which made her an obedient and affectionate daughter, a kind and sympathetic sister, an object of love and merited praise to all who knew her. In her earthly associations, her life seemed almost spotless and pure; but when she looked into the Gospel glass, and saw her relation to her heavenly Father, she saw herself a great sinner; but in the winter of '56-7, in a most considerate, calm, yet determined and faithful manner, she gave her heart to God. From that time to the day of her death, she manifested the most exemplary faithfulness and fidelity to Christ and his cause. Her devotion at the family altar was untiring and spiritual. In the house of God she manifested great humility, which was apparent from her modest and retiring appearance, associated with firmness of purpose, perseverance in duty, and devotion to the cause and interests of Christ.

She was a firm believer in the speedy and glorious Advent of Christ; and that then the dead would be awakened from their dreamless sleep to receive their reward, by being made peers with angels in God's everlasting kingdom; or to receive the wages of sin which is death.

In this death, Bro. and Sr. Shapley have sustained a great loss. The church in P. has lost one of her brightest stars suddenly fallen. But they mourn not as those who have no hope; for the parents expect to see that daughter again, when the Abrahamic family is called together, blooming with immortality. The church is waiting to see their sister come again from the dead, as a rising star, to shine as the sun in the kingdom of God forever and ever. Amen.

The funeral was attended by an unusually large concourse of people, all of whom appeared as mourners. The writer endeavored to administer comfort to all present, in a gospel manner, from 1 Thess. 4; 18.

J. Couch.

Died in the faith, Jotham R. Tripp, of Westport, Mass., Sept. 21st, 1858, in the 61st year of his pilgrimage.

Our brother fell asleep strong in the faith of experiencing a better resurrection through Christ. This was his only hope of a future life. A few remarks were made by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 19.

J. W. Crabtree.

North Fairhaven, Mass., Oct. 2, '58.

Married.

In Rutland, Vt., Oct. 14th, by the Rev. Leland Howard, Mr. Charles E. Davis to Miss Harriet L. Phillips, both of Rutland.

Editorial Notice.

☞ The bills which we send this week are to those who have not paid in advance for the present volume. Many have desired to know how their account stood, that they might remit what is now due. We hope those who can, will pay soon as convenient. We all feel that these are hard times, but let us keep our paper alive. It is the only preaching that many of our readers have, and they would feel very sad without it.

NOTICES.

Notice.

Whereas, Bro. Champlain has resigned the pastorship of the River Point Advent Church, R. I., we have chosen Bro. E. Bellows as pastor. Bro. Bellows will preach one Sunday in a month—the first. The other three Sundays are left open to the preaching brethren whom we may invite. We hope those we have invited will come soon and see us.

For the Brethren. JOHN P. BABCOCK,

Book Notice.

I would say to the Brn., that I have just got printed, in Boston, an improved edition of Death not Life, in paper covers, and bound,—also Glad Tidings and my two tracts on the word Hell, and Foster's noted letter. They can be had of Bro. Grant at the prices now noticed in the Crisis, and by writing me at Buffalo. Brethren in the ministry can have them to sell on commission, and I hope they will send soon and get a supply for the winter. I expect to remain in the East till Jan., and will visit brethren by their sending a request to the Crisis. Jacob Blain.

Boston, Oct. 2, 1858.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.

Bro. S. S. Brewer, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.

Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER, A. PEARCE, } Secretaries.

Notice.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.

N. F. Nason.

☞ NOTICE.—We would earnestly request those who are indebted to this office for Hymn Books, to remit us the amount due, as we, in all cases, have to pay cash for the same, and cannot afford to be out of the money. Probably some of our brethren have overlooked the fact that they are so long indebted for books. We would, therefore, in all love and earnestness, call their attention to the matter, as the funds of the paper are too contracted to afford lengthened credit.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach at the Town Hall, in Rutland, Vt., Oct. 31st.

Miles Grant.

Providence permitting, Bro. Chas. H. Perkins will preach at—

Lynn Dye House, Sunday, - Oct. 24th.
Springfield, Tuesday evening, - Oct. 26th.
Warehouse Point, Thursday eve., Oct. 28th.
New Britain, Friday evening, - Oct. 29th.
Hartford, Sunday evening, - Oct. 31st.
Plymouth Hollow, Tuesday eve., Nov. 2d.
Winsted, Thursday evening, - Nov. 4th.
Newfield, Sunday, - - Nov. 7th.
Collinsville, or where Bro. Mathewson may appoint, Tuesday evening, Nov. 9th.
Where Providence opens a place, Sunday, Nov. 14th.

[This is the Bro. that was ordained at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting, and set apart for the work of God. The brethren will not be imposed upon. Hiram Munger.]

Providence permitting, I will preach in Salem, Oct. 24th. Miles Grant.

Bro. Munger appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., - Sunday, Oct. 24th.

B. P. Marnum appoints to preach in—
Warner, N. H., - - Oct. 24th.
Concord, " (Chapel) - Oct. 31st.
Auburn, " (Noble School-house) Nov. 7th.
London Ridge, N. H., - Nov. 14th.
East Alton, N. H., (Tues. eve.) Nov. 16th.
West Alton, N. H., - - Nov. 19th.
and continue over Sunday, if desired.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meeting at the Town Hall in Goshen, Mass., Oct. 28th, at 7 o'clock P. M., to continue over the following Sabbath.

N. B. I shall visit the Churches in Savoy and Hawley after I get through at Goshen, the Lord will. J. Hemenway.

Eld. W. M. Ingham appoints to preach as follows:—

Exeter, N. H., - - - Oct. 24
Lawrence, Mass., - - - " 27
Lynn, (Dye-House) A. M. - " 31
Lynn, (city) P. M. - - " 31
Worcester, Mass., (Warren Hall,) Nov. 7

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Savoy, Mass., - - Oct. 20th and 21st.
North Adams, - - Sunday, Oct. 24th.
Northfield Farms, - - - Oct. 31st.
West Brattleboro, Vt., - - Nov. 3d
and continue over the Sabbath.
Goshen, Mass., - - Sunday, Nov. 14th.
C. Goodrich.

I will preach, the Lord willing, at—

Bristol, Ct., evenings of Oct. 21st, 22d, 23d, and Sunday, the 24th.

Collinsville, Ct., Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 31.

Bro. Sutherland is expected to be present and labor with me. H. F. CARPENTER.

My P. O. address is Worcester, Mass.

Bro. A. M. Higgins appoints to preach in Ware, School House, near Bro. L. F. Newcomb's, - - - Oct. 24.
Scitico, Advent Chapel, - - Oct. 31.

I will preach as follows:
Dover, N. H., (where Bro. Colbath may appoint,) - - Sunday, Oct. 24th.
S. W. Bishop.

Providence permitting, Bro. S. G. Mathewson will preach in New Britain, Ct., October 19th, 20th, and 21st, (evenings.)

Business.

To Correspondents.

Bro. A. M. Higgins' P. O. address is Palmer Depot, Mass. Any who wish to obtain his valuable family medicines, can get them by addressing him at that place; or Bro. B. Hitchcock, Bristol, his state agent for Ct.

Eld. N. F. Nason's P. O. address is North Searsport, Me.

E. D. Searle—Please send us the address of the subscriber's name.

H. Thayer, Galesburgh, Mich.,—You have paid in all $5.00 to No. 130.

Sr. C. E. Robinson,—We sent the books Saturday 16th.

Bro. D. R. Mansfield, we have done as desired.

C. Haskins, Campbellsville—all right.

T. Smith, money received.

Mrs. Maria Roberts, Verona—Please send us your full address, as we cannot discover your name on our books.

Eld. N. T. Nason's P. O. address is North Searsport, Me.

Cruden's Concordance—$1.50, postage included.

Cash Receipts.

Mr. Nuds 156, $1.50; E D Root 164, $2.33; D D Young, Jr., 162, 50 cts.; S Blake 156, $1.32; P I Pilcher 156, $1.32; P Axe 186, $3.00; Rose Campbell 236, $2.50.

M F Champlin 175, R Williams 170, Le Roy Andrews 187, C E Robinson 182, L A Lang 185, M Carpenter 188, B B Hoyt 186, E Merrill 203, A Crabtree 189, J W Piper 152, R Woodward 182, E E Travis 143, H Briggs 179, M Reynolds 156, H Thayer 130, P I Pilcher 182, W P Moulton 182, S M Daniel 178, L Wilcox 159, S H Creesy 169, S Smith 182, C H Barret 156, R Neal 182, J Drake 182,—$1.00 each.

Mrs. L Canfield 213, S J Eaton 182, P Bunne 176, G P Persons 212, D Austin 182, I Gates, Sr., 214, Eld. O G Smith, M Whiting 208, A Emmons 167, D Shaw 182, W Allen 169, E Burrows 142,—$2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts.—S Winship $1.10; C B Walker $1.00; E E Travis 90 cts; G Whipple $10.00; C E Robinson $1.20; P Axe $1.18.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

Hymns.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found out best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 8 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] and sin are to end in the universe by a final destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms; or, the kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, [illegible] 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: [illegible]

Christ's [illegible], by Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A [illegible] present day. [illegible]

Review of [illegible] 24 per hundred, [illegible]

English [illegible] city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many [illegible] connected with camp-meetings [illegible] ten by himself. [illegible] and will be read with [illegible] —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By [illegible] Seymour. An excellent tract to [illegible] the Scriptures, and upon the [illegible] day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance, or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. and xxv. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 38 cts.; post. 6 cts.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Saints' Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $2.00 per hundred, 3 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

The following Works are published and for sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.—The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.—The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.—Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.—The Fate of Infidelity: or the Dealings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.—Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.—Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.—Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.—The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth; by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State; by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and orders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them; Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free, by sending stamps to pay the postage, and those that [illegible] free, poor also.

Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by [illegible] Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 166 [illegible] street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in sets of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by [illegible]; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by [illegible].

† The Olive Leaves are three four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend, [illegible] Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

Man's Dignity: [illegible] Immortality. The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. H. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, [illegible] by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, [illegible] cts. Postage, 3 cts.

The [illegible]

☞ The following [illegible] had of J. R. [illegible] Harp, by [illegible] Children [illegible] Cruden's Concordance [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Forbidding to Marry.

It will be recollected of some who have read of Tatian, in the "Doctrine of a Future Life," that he became the leader of a sect of Encratites, or ascetics, who thought it better not to marry; and it is queried whether the reason of this was not that he, Tatian, believed in immortality for the sake of punishment. If I mistake not, he was the first one who was fully committed to this view. His master, Justin Martyr, did indeed seem to believe that the wicked would suffer for ever; but this faith was evidently very distressing to him, and in his later writings we find some reason for thinking that he supposed the wicked might perish. In Tatian, however, we find no such relentings. He was of a harsh temper, and it was quite natural that he should be censured for blasphemously asserting that Adam was not admitted to repentance, but is finally lost. I have queried whether Tatian did not discourage marriage for fear that a child, dear as one's own life, might die impenitent and suffer for ever. Or he may have thought that man had no right to run the risk of adding to the number of the lost; no right to offer a candidate for the endless joy, who might suffer endless woe instead.

Thinking this might be the sentiment of Tatian, I have been watching to see if others, holding the orthodox faith, might not cherish the same sentiment. I do not know whether the touching passages in Young's "Night Thoughts" prove the same misgivings or not. I have not the volume at hand, but the passages are quoted by T. Starr King, in his reply to Dr. Adams. But, waiving all claim to Edward Young in this argument, I have recently met two cases of persons who have felt as I think Tatian did.

One was a minister whom I met three months ago, who bade me a hearty God speed when he learned what book I was traveling with, and what faith I was propagating. He said that when a boy he used to have a good many wicked feelings about parentage, in view of the common faith. "Why," he thought, "do people make a holiday when their friends marry, or go into general rejoicing when a child is born into the world? Why is not a wedding day a day of mourning and lamentation for the ceaseless woes that may follow?" These wicked feelings, as some might call them, my friend had sometimes expressed in questions to his father, a good and candid man, from whom he could get no reply. My friend had never changed his feelings on the subject, though he had suffered his perplexities. He had for some time, however, been persuaded that the wicked would perish, and said he would not for a hundred dollars lose the comfort which "Debt and Grace" had given him.

The second case was that of a minister I met five weeks ago, who told me that he had for many years delayed marriage, simply for the reason I have named. His celibacy had received some attention from his brethren in the ministry, who either as personal friends or as zealous for the honor of the Gospel, had proffered the usual and the Scriptural advice on the subject, but he remained unmoved. One minister, in particular, had pressed the matter in a somewhat troublesome way; charging him with being Romish in his views of things, "forbidding to marry," and threatening to bring his case before the ecclesiastical court, if he was not "provoked to love and good works." But my friend could not see what "love" had to do with a contingency of eternal woe; or what "good works" had to do with adding, perchance, to the immortal progeny of him whose works Christ came to destroy. But human nature will have its course; and my friend, he hardly knew why, had married. I need not say he was very ready to inquire whether the infinitely tremendous hazards he had feared were real, and whether those who thought they were not, must be denied the right of christian fellowship in his church. Thus it was that while his urgent friend bade him to marry, his doctrine, even the prevailing faith, had forbidden him. Is it not a Romish doctrine?

C. F. H.

☞ As the Dead Sea drinks in the river Jordan, and is never the sweeter, and the ocean all other rivers, and is never the fresher; so we are apt to receive daily mercies from God, and still remain insensible of them, unthankful for them.—Bishop Reynolds.

☞ An infidel remarked, within the hearing of a little girl, that all things came by chance, and the world, like a mushroom, sprang up in the night. "I should like to know, sir," she asked, "where the seed came from?"

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.

Steamship Africa, from Liverpool 2d inst., arrived at this port shortly before midnight.

Advices from Turkey and the East show continued excitement against the Christians.

Prince Napoleon met a distinguished reception from the Emperor Alexander at Warsaw.

A Mr. Rowett had offered to lay a rope covered with electric wire, between Valentia and Newfoundland, for the sum of £182,000 sterling.

A telegraphic despatch from Madrid states that the government had granted permission to import cotton seed into Cuba.

A letter from Berne contradicts in the strongest terms the report that the French government had addressed a fresh note to the Swiss Federal Council on the subject of the refugees residing at Geneva, and that M. Kern, the Swiss Minister at Paris, had received special instructions on the subject. It is asserted that the Emperor of the French is perfectly satisfied with the decree published by the Federal Council with respect to refugees, and has made no further demand on the subject.

Letters from Candia describe the island as still in a very disturbed state. The new Governor had not been able to carry out the instructions received from Constantinople. Armed Turks had traversed the capital of the island shouting "Death to the Christians." Some of them were arrested, but were immediately released, so great is Mussulman influence.

A dispatch from Alexandria says the Lucifero publishes a report of a revolt at Djidda, and a rising at Mecca, wherein several Turkish soldiers have been killed.

Advices from Tripoli state that the revolt of a battalion of soldiers had been suppressed.

The Chief Minister of Persia and his two sons had been arrested, and were under surveillance.

Advices from Suez state that the steamer Hymen had been met on the coast of Abyssinia with pilgrims on board, in a state of mutiny against the Christians. The latter would doubtless have all been murdered but for the timely interposition of the English steamer, which took the Hymen and all on board into Suez.

ITALY.

Letters in regard to the late conspiracy at Naples say it had assumed very formidable proportions, including many high persons in it, and having extensive foreign ramifications. It was discovered by finding some papers about the person of a man who had been accidentally drowned.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor has given the Order of St Andrew the Highest to Prince Gortschakoff, as a mark of satisfaction that two such important treaties had been concluded with China.

PERSIA.

A conspiracy in Persia against the Prime Minister had failed, and the leaders were beheaded.

LATEST.

Estimates have been made for putting all the French ports on the Atlantic in a better state of defence; for Havre 150,000,000 francs have been assigned; Denmark, 17,000,000; Dieppe, 7,000,000; Fecapt, 2,000,000; Calais and Boulogne are also provided for, and a port of refuge is to be constructed between Brest and Cherbourg.

Lord Elgin and Admiral Seymour had gone to Japan. The French had gone to Cochin China. The British Consul and all foreigners had quitted Canton.

Chinese exchange on England 2 per cent.

There is nothing new in regard to the cable. Varley, the electrician, expresses confidence that his estimate of the distance from shore where the faults are will be found about correct.

Domestic News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Steamship Star of the West, from Aspinwall 5th, via Kingston, Ja., 8th, arrived this morning. She brings upwards of $1,400,000 in treasure.

OREGON.—Advices from Oregon are to Sept. 1. Various unreliable rumors of Indian fights are current. One of them is to the effect that a train of several hundred men, under Gen. Palmer, formerly Indian Agent in Oregon, had been attacked near Walla, and every one killed.

SOUTH AMERICA.—A locomotive on the Copiapo Railroad had attained the height of 4075 feet from the level of the sea—1000 feet higher than any other engine had ascended as yet.

It was reported at Valparaiso that Gen. Echegua had started on another revolutionary expedition to Peru. It was said his friends had purchased the cargo of ammunition on board the brig Townsend Jones, and that she was about to sail for Peru to land it.

THE COMET.—The Comet is now rapidly approaching Venus. About the 16th inst., the time of its nearest approach, it will be, as seen from the planet, thirty-six times as great as it appeared to the earth at its maximum. The nearest apparent approach to Venus will be on the 19th inst., when it will be between two and three degrees distant. Owing to the great velocity with which it will be moving, (about thirty-three miles per second) it will be subjected to the disturbing force of the planet for such a short time, that its orbit will not be very much changed. If it had arrived three days earlier, it would have passed so near as to present to Venus an appearance of more than three thousand times as magnificent as it appeared to us on the 8th and 9th instants.

MAMMOTH REMAINS.—While some workmen were digging in the marsh on the land of Mr. John M. Ellhone, in Ellenville, Ulster county, they discovered some bones. One is a portion of a jaw bone, the others are evidently portions of a leg or thigh bones. They are all much decayed, having apparently been under the soft mud for ages. In the jaw is a mammoth tooth, in a state of almost perfect preservation. It is the tooth of a granivorous animal, and measures seven inches in length and three in width. These bones are evidently those of a mastodon of the largest size. They are said to be five or six times larger than the corresponding bones of any living animal.—N. Y. Commercial.

A letter from Senator Sumner, dated Aix-la-Chapelle, says he has much improved in health.

Obituary Notices.

Sister JENNETT ALLEN BIGELOW, daughter of Bro. Levi Allen, of Chickopee Falls, "fell on sleep and was gathered to her fathers," Sept. 17th, aged 32 1-2 years.

She was converted to christianity in her childhood and has maintained a consistent christian character for many years. She embraced the soul cheering doctrine of the coming of the Lord at hand, in 1842 or '43, and never wavered in her faith in all the years of trial and disappointment since that period. She was a firm believer in the sleep of the saint from death until the resurrection, to the last hour of life. She possessed a remarkably mild and amiable disposition, and was beloved by all who knew her. She has been gradually consuming away for three or four months, and her life has been prolonged for weeks beyond her own expectation and that of her friends. Although death was her enemy, yet it had no terror for her; "for since Jesus had lain there" he had taken away its sting. Her faith in Christ sustained her to the last. It was painful to have her friends weep in her presence, but she wanted them to rejoice with her and sing praises. A week before her death she had a sinking turn, and bidding her friends farewell, she said, "I expect to sleep in Jesus to-night." But she rallied and continued a sufferer, but very happy in her mind until released from suffering—so quietly that her passage into the valley and shadow of death was scarcely observed.

It was the privilege of the writer to visit her during her sickness, and to sing and pray with the dear saint as she was sinking to rest. Not a word or look of impatience or restlessness was heard or seen during all her protracted sufferings. But she often gave utterance to the joys of her soul in words like these: "Oh, how precious is Jesus!" "How sweet the name of Jesus is!" She felt great solicitude for her friends, and warned and besought them to be reconciled to God, and said, "Oh, what a poor place this is to prepare for the Lord's coming or for death!" Ah! verily, as said Mr. Wesley on one occasion, "Our people die well." There are no people on earth that hate death with such perfect hatred as we do and cannot see the character of a friend in it at all. Yet we are not afraid to die, but would prefer, if the Lord will, to live until Jesus comes. So has passed away another of our number; her bright eye and cheerful countenance will be seen no more until it puts on the brilliancy of immortality.

Bro. E. Burnham improved the occasion before a large audience in the Methodist chapel, which was kindly offered to them for the occasion, from the text in 15th of 1 Cor. 35th verse. May God sanctify this affliction to the family and friends and may we soon behold the Savior in his glory.

RAND. E. LADD.

Died, in Cheshire, Mass., Oct. 6th, after a distressing illness of five weeks and two days, EDGAR WOOD COTTON, only son of Norman and Marion A. Cotton, aged two years and one month.

My darling is gone, and my heart is broken!

"The evening breezes softly moan
Around my lonely cot;
But, O, they bring no more the tone
Which once they fondly brought!
They bring no more the ringing laugh
Of childish joy and glee;
They bring no more the silvery voice,
Dearer than life to me!

They bring no more the guileless breath
Of childhood's calm repose;
They lay no more within my arms
My sweet, my folded rose.
But when that morning's Sun shall rise,
Whose beams shall gild the tomb,
My boy will leave his icy couch,
In more than childhood's bloom!

Then, hail, thrice hail, thou happy day!
When will the night be gone?
When will the shadows flee away,
And that bright morning dawn?
Sure every mother's heart that holds
A tie so dear and strong
Within the grave, with me can cry—
'How long, O Lord, how long?'"

MARION A. COTTON.

Died, in Portsmouth, N. H., Sept 13th, 1858, ANN E. SHAPLEY, only daughter of William and Sarah Shapley, aged 18 years and two months.

Sister S. possessed a very lovely and amiable nature, which made her an obedient and affectionate daughter, a kind and sympathetic sister, an object of love and merited praise to all who knew her. In her earthly associations, her life seemed almost spotless and pure; but when she looked into the Gospel glass, and saw her relation to her heavenly Father, she saw herself a great sinner; but in the winter of '56–7, in a most considerate, calm, yet determined and faithful manner, she gave her heart to God. From that time to the day of her death, she manifested the most exemplary faithfulness and fidelity to Christ and his cause. Her devotion at the family altar was untiring and spiritual. In the house of God she manifested great humility, which was apparent from her modest and retiring appearance, associated with firmness of purpose, perseverance in duty, and devotion to the cause and interests of Christ.

She was a firm believer in the speedy and glorious Advent of Christ; and that then the dead would be awakened from their dreamless sleep to receive their reward, by being made peers with angels in God's everlasting Kingdom; or to receive the wages of sin which is death.

In this death, Bro. and Sr. Shapley have sustained a great loss. The church in P. has seen one of her brightest stars suddenly fall. But they mourn not as those who have no hope; for the parents expect to see their daughter again, when the Abrahamic family is called together, blooming with immortality. The church is waiting to see their sister come again from the dead; as a rising star, to shine as the sun in the kingdom of God forever and ever. Amen.

The funeral was attended by an unusually large concourse of people, all of whom appeared as mourners. The writer endeavored to administer comfort to all present, in a gospel manner, from 1. Thess. 4: 18.

J. COUCH.

Died in the faith, JOTHAM R. TRIPP, of Westport, Mass., Sept. 21st, 1858, in the 61st year of his pilgrimage.

Our brother fell asleep strong in the faith of experiencing a better resurrection through Christ. This was his only hope of a future life. A few remarks were made by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 19.

J. W. CRABTREE.

North Fairhaven, Mass., Oct. 2, '58.

Married.

In Rutland, Vt., Oct. 14th, by the Rev. Leland Howard, Mr. CHARLES E. DAVIS to Miss HARRIET L. PHILLIPS, both of Rutland.

Editorial Notice.

☞ The bills which we send this week are to those who have not paid in advance for the present volume. Many have desired to know how their account stood, that they might remit what is now due. We hope those who can, will pay soon as convenient. We all feel that these are hard times, but let us keep our paper alive. It is the only preaching that many of our readers have, and they would feel very sad without it.

NOTICES.

Notice.

Whereas, Bro. Champlain has resigned the pastorship of the River Point Advent Church, R. I., we have chosen Bro. E. Bellows as pastor. Bro. Bellows will preach one Sunday in a month—the first. The other three Sundays are left open to the preaching brethren whom we may invite. We hope those we have invited will come soon and see us.

For the Brethren. JOHN P. BABCOCK,

Book Notice.

I would say to the Brn., that I have just got printed, in Boston, an improved edition of DEATH NOT LIFE, in paper covers, and bound,—also GLAD TIDINGS and my two tracts on the word HELL, and Foster's noted letter. They can be had of Bro. Grant at the prices now noticed in the Crisis, and by writing me at Buffalo. Brethren in the ministry can have them to sell on commission, and I hope they will send soon and get a supply for the winter. I expect to remain in the East till Jan., and will visit brethren by their sending a request to the Crisis. JACOB BLAIN.

Boston, Oct. 2, 1858.

Appointments for Danielsonville, Ct.

Bro. S. S. Brewer, Oct. 24th, 31st, and Nov. 7th.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Nov. 14th and 21st.

Bro. A. Fox, Nov. 28th and Dec. 5th.

Notice.

Adjourned Meeting at Worcester of the 19th Annual Conference of Adventists.

In pursuance of a vote of the Conference, at its late meeting in Boston, May 25th, 26th, and 27th, and in compliance with an invitation of the church in Worcester, the Conference will meet, according to its adjournment, on the first Tuesday in November, at Worcester, Mass., at 10 A. M.

Per order of the President,
F. GUNNER,
A. PEARCE, } Secretaries.

NOTICE.—The brethren and sisters in Carmel, Me., have established a regular conference at Robinson school-house, near Bro. Geo. L. Robinson's, the third Saturday in each month, and will, if they can, have preaching. Give them a call.

In behalf of the church.

N. F. NASON.

☞ NOTICE.—We would earnestly request those who are indebted to this office for Hymn Books, to remit us the amount due, as we, in all cases, have to pay cash for the same, and cannot afford to be out of the money. Probably some of our brethren have overlooked the fact that they are so long indebted for books. We would, therefore, in all love and earnestness, call their attention to the matter, as the funds of the paper are too contracted to afford lengthened credit.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach at the Town Hall, in Rutland, Vt., Oct. 31st.

MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, Bro. Chas. H. Perkins will preach at—

Lynn Dye House, Sunday, -	Oct. 24th.
Springfield, Tuesday evening, -	Oct. 26th.
Warehouse Point, Thursday eve.,	Oct. 28th.
New Britain, Friday evening,	Oct. 29th.
Hartford, Sunday evening, -	Oct. 31st.
Plymouth Hollow, Tuesday eve.,	Nov. 2d.
Winsted, Thursday evening, -	Nov. 4th.
Newfield, Sunday, - -	Nov. 7th.
Collinsville, or where Bro. Mathewson may appoint, Tuesday evening,	Nov. 9th.
Where Providence opens a place, Sunday,	Nov. 14th.

[This is the Bro. that was ordained at the Wilbraham Camp Meeting, and set apart for the work of God. The brethren will not be imposed upon. HIRAM MUNGER.]

Providence permitting, I will preach in Salem, Oct. 24th. MILES GRANT.

Bro. Munger appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., - - Sunday, Oct. 24th.

B. P. MATHEWS appoints to preach in—

Warner, N. H.,	Oct. 24th.
Concord, " (Chapel) - -	Oct. 31st.
Auburn, " (Rollo school-house)	Nov. 7th.
London Ridge, N. H.,	Nov. 14th.
East Alton, N. H., (Tues. eve.)	Nov. 16th.
West Alton, N. H.,	Nov. 18th.

and continue over Sunday, if desired.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meeting at the TOWN HALL in Goshen, Mass., Oct. 28th, at 7 o'clock P. M., to continue over the following Sabbath.

N. B. I shall visit the Churches in Savoy and Hawley after I get through at Goshen, the Lord will. J. HEMENWAY.

Eld. W. M. INGHAM appoints to preach as follows:—

Exeter, N. H., - - -	Oct. 24
Lawrence, Mass., - - -	" 27
Lynn, (Dye-House) A. M. -	" 31
Lynn, (city) P. M. - -	" 31
Worcester, Mass., (Warren Hall,)	Nov. 7

If the Lord will, I will preach at

Savoy, Mass., -	Oct. 20th and 21st.
North Adams, - -	Sunday, Oct. 24th.
Northfield Farms, - - -	Oct. 31st.
West Brattleboro, Vt., - -	Nov. 3d

and continue over the Sabbath.

Goshen, Mass., - - Sunday, Nov. 14th.

C. GOODRICH.

I will preach, the Lord willing, at—

Bristol, Ct., evenings of Oct. 21st, 22d, 23d, and Sunday, the 24th.

Collinsville, Ct., Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 31.

Bro. Sutherland is expected to be present and labor with me. H. F. CARPENTER.

My P. O. address is Worcester, Mass.

Bro. A. M. Higgins appoints to preach in Ware, School House, near Bro. L. F. Newcomb's, - - - Oct. 24.

Scitico, Advent Chapel, - - Oct. 31.

I will preach as follows:

Dover, N. H., (where Bro. Colbath may appoint,) - - Sunday, Oct. 24th.

S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, Bro. S. G. MATHEWSON will preach in New Britain, Ct., October 19th, 20th, and 21st, (evenings.)

Business.

To Correspondents.

Bro. A. M. Higgins' P. O. address is Palmer Depot, Mass. Any who wish to obtain his valuable family medicines, can get them by addressing him at that place; or Bro. B. Hitchcock, Bristol, his state agent for Ct.

Eld. N. F. Nason's P. O. address is North Searsport, Me.

E. D. Searle—Please send us the address of the subscriber's name.

H. Thayer, Galesburgh, Mich.,—You have paid in all $5.00 to No. 130.

Sr. C. E. Robinson,—We sent the books Saturday 16th.

Bro. D. R. Mansfield, we have done as desired.

C. Haskins, Campbellsville—all right.

T. Smith, money received.

Mrs. Maria Roberts, Verona—Please send us your full address, as we cannot discover your name on our books.

Eld. N. T. Nason's P. O. address is North Searsport, Me.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE—$1.50, postage included.

Cash Receipts.

Mr. Nuda 156, $1.50; E D Root 164, $2.33; D D Young, Jr., 162, 50 cts.; S Blake 156, $1.32; P I Pilcher 156, $1.32; P Axe 186, $3.00; Rose Campbell 236, $2.50.

M F Champlin 175, R Williams 170, Le Roy Andrews 187, C E Robinson 182, L A Lang 185, M Carpenter 188, B B Hoyt 186, E Merrill 203, A Crabtree 189, J W Piper 152, R Woodward 182, E E Travis 143, H Briggs 179, M Reynolds 156, H Thayer 130, P I Pilcher 182, W P Moulton 182, S M Daniel 178, L Wilcox 159, S H Creesy 169, S Smith 182, C H Barret 156, R Neal 182, J Drake 182,—$1.00 each.

Mrs. L Canfield 213, S J Eaton 182, P Bunne 176, G P Persons 212, D Austin 182, I Gates, Sr., 214, Eld. O G Smith, M Whiting 208, A Emmons 167, D Shaw 182, W Allen 189, E Burrows 143,—$2.00 each.

For Books and Tracts.—S Winship $1.10; C B Walker $1.00; E E Travis 90 cts; G Whipple $10.00; C E Robinson $1.20; P Axe $1.18.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Books and Tracts.

LAW requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street Boston Mass.

HYMNS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing 742 pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Morocco 75 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—[illegible]

The Three Kingdoms; or, the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, [illegible] per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked [illegible]. By J. [illegible], Baptist minister. [illegible] $12.00 per hundred [illegible] 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the [illegible] of the present day. Price [illegible]

Review of [illegible] 34 per hundred; 8 [illegible]

English Bibles.—[illegible] ments so that we can furnish them to [illegible] than they can be bought at any other [illegible] city.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger. Including many [illegible] connected with camp-meetings [illegible] ten by himself. This is a very [illegible] and will be read with interest by all. [illegible] —postage 10 cents.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $6.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. AND XXV. By I. C. Wellcome. An excellent work. 33 cts.; post. 6 cts.

AN APPEAL TO PIOUS TRINITARIANS. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE, by Wm. Shepherd.—A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 per hundred, 8 cts. single. Postage 1 ct.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

THE FOLLOWING WORKS ARE PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE BY H. L. HASTINGS, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y.

1.–The Voice of the Church on the Coming and kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the Reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor, edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 420, price $1, postage 18 cents.

2.–The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress and termination, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. pp. 167, neatly bound in cloth, price 60 cents—postage 10c.

3.–Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. Edited with a preface, by H. L. Hastings. 1 vol. 12mo. pp. 122. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

4.–The Fate of Infidelity: or the Deal-ings of Providence with Modern Infidels; together with an appendix, containing a brief account of the special judgments visited upon the early opposers of Christianity, by a converted Infidel. 1 vol. 18 mo. pp. 175, cloth gilt, 25 cents—post-paid.

5.–Future Punishment: an Argument in two parts, from Reason and Scripture, by H. H. Dobney, Baptist minister of England; with an appendix on the State of the Dead, by John Milton. This work is one of patient thought and calm and christian argument. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 312, price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

6.–Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

7.–Pauline Theology: or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. A convincing argument, deduced from a careful examination of every passage on the subject of Future Punishment in Paul's fourteen epistles. 12mo. pp. 84, 15 cts. single, $10 per hund.—post. 1c.

8.–The Old Paths: or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks, by H. L. Hastings. pp. 87 12mo. 18 cts. single, $12 per hundred—post. 1c.

Tracts of 24 pages. Price, 5 cts. single copy; $3 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half a cent per ounce if ordered to the amount of eight ounces or upwards.

1—Church not in Darkness; 2—The Three Worlds; 3—The Last Days; 4—Plain Truths; by Hastings. 5—Noah, his Age and Ours; 6—Desire of all Nations; 7—It is Done; by John Cumming. 8—A Voice of Warning; 9—New Heavens and Earth, by D. T. Taylor. 10—*Ancient Landmarks; 11—State of the Dead; by Milton. 12—Intermediate State, by Grew.

Tracts at 3 cents single copy; $1.50 per hundred: postage 1 ct. each, or half cent an ounce for packages of eight or more ounces.

1—Future Punishment; by Grew. 2—Scripture tract number one, Destiny of the Wicked. 3—Outline of the coast of Man; by Lenfest. 4—Key of Truth; 5—Man's Future State; by Sheldon. 6—†Olive Leaves, by the sett.

Tracts at 2 cents single copy; $1 per hundred.

1—The Night Cometh; by J. Adey. 2—The Day of Judgment; by St. Cyril.

Tracts at 1 cent single copy; 50 cents per hundred.

1—Olive Leaves, separate; 2—Ancient Landmarks separate; 3—Forty Questions on Immortality. 4—Scripture Searchers, one, two, and three.

The above Tracts are on hand, and or-ders can be filled at once. Let us scatter them; Orders with the CASH are solicited. Persons ordering tracts should order as much or more than fifty cents worth, as packages of tracts containing eight ounces or more go cheaper than smaller quantities. Those who buy books to sell will receive them at a liberal discount. The poor can have them free by sending stamps to pay the postage,—and those that FEEL poor also.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale also at this office,—and by N. [illegible] Moline, Ill.; G. W. Young, 108 Nassau street, N. Y.

* The Landmarks are issued in setts of six Nos. which can be separated for distribution. The sett contains, The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, by 20,000 Baptists; the Duration of the Earth, by A. Clarke; Hope and Duty of the Church, by M. Henry; Restitution, by Cyril; Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather; Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter.

† The Olive Leaves are three small four page tracts, that can be separated for distribution. No. one Little Children, Love one Another; two, The One Resting Place; three, My Friend, by [illegible]. Just the thing to distribute among all classes of saints and sinners.

MAN'S DESTINY. Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., reviewed by George Storrs. Price, in pamphlet, 20 cents; [illegible] cts. Postage, 3 cts.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison and [illegible] [illegible] teach that the [illegible] the Lord God formed of the dust [illegible] Entity called the [illegible] covers: bound, 50 cts. [illegible]

☞ The following [illegible] had of J. B. [illegible] Harp, by Elder Himes [illegible] Children; [illegible] Great Controversy [illegible]

Poetry.

Selected for the Crisis.

THE OCEAN CABLE.

BY P. T. TAYLOR.

O, the marvellous gift of human thought!
O, the God-like power of mind!
With no measure, or weight, or substance fraught,
Yet outstripping the viewless wind.
The lightning's flash may not leap beyond
The space of the earth and air,
But thought will flash to the farthest bound,
And its limit is, when? and where?

Not content to pierce through the sky's blue depth
With the telescope's mighty glance—
Not content to look in where the unseen world
Of life lies in myriad dance,—
Man has stormed the home of the vast abyss,
The realms where the sea-gods grow:
With the steam-king has conquered its billows above—
With the lightning its base below.

Earth's deep-hidden forces obey his voice—
He has tamed the electric fire:
That spirit-like, mystic, subtile power,
Fit type of its awful Sire.
And strange and terrible, dark and grand—
Unseen in its vast domain:
It is hastening to crouch at the feet of man,
And lie bound in his cunning chain.

Key-stone of hemispheres—Ring of the sea!
Lie still in thy deep water-bed:
We welcome the bridal that waits upon thee,
For earth's kingdoms have come to be wed.
Time's hours roll backward,—even space is no more,
Old sea-sundered realms are but one:
'Tis no dream—for the lion and eagle have spoke,
And the world's festal-shout is begun.

See the Old World pressing its lips to the New!
Each answers with words of fire;
While the nations are whispering their thoughts across,
On the track of that wonderful wire.
What tidings shall flash o'er the floor of the sea,
Like voices that waken the dead!
What echoes of millions shall cluster and throng
That seven-fold science-born thread!

Age of the ages! most wondrous of all—
Outstripping the elder time!
Era of marvels, that burden belief!
Age of the grand and sublime!
What shall come when thy years are numbered and gone,
And thy shores by the angels are trod?
Shall He come—the majestic Elohim of Heaven;
Shall It come—the great Kingdom of God?

—Rouses Pt., (N. Y.) Advertiser.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Righteousness---The Entrance to Heaven.

"For I say unto you that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of Heaven."

The above quoted passage of Scripture, which are the words of Christ upon the Mount, is one that first met my eye after I had asked in prayer to be guided to a text best practically suited to myself, and others, who "believe the whole counsel of God;" upon which I might pen a few thoughts for the Crisis.

Our righteousness must be greater than the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees; and we read in the Holy Word, that they were hypocritical, having self-righteousness. They loved to stand in high places, to be seen of men, and while standing would make long prayers, for a semblance of righteousness. They possessed not the spirit of Christ, therefore did not show forth "the fruits of the Spirit," which the Apostle Paul has numbered up and enjoined upon the Galatians as, first:

"Love," which seems to be the first element in the Christian character, as well as the first fruit evinced. Love for God and his worship. Love for his blessed Son, and the plan for salvation. Love for the dear children of God, and love for the warfare. A precious gift from the throne of our God, is love; and stands there, like the spire upon our earthly temples, the master-builder's pride. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die, that whoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." What boundless, what inimitable love! How need we to comfort one another with thoughts, words and deeds of love, in the day of trial, when "we are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed."

Second: "Joy." Joy in doing good and loving God. Joy in triumphing over sin, and in being accounted worthy to bear reproach for Christ's sake.

Third: "Peace." Peace with God and all mankind. Peace that, like a river, glides quietly onward, refreshing and invigorating all. A "peace that passeth all understanding."

Fourth: "Long suffering" toward those that despitefully use and ill treat us, never rendering evil for evil, but bearing all things with patience; knowing "it shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Fifth: "Gentleness," which never utters harsh and high words; never gives vent to angry feelings, and, indeed, never has any. Acts charitably towards all men; counting trials all gain, if we may but obtain the great reward.

Sixth: "Goodness." Unfeigned, enduring goodness, which delighteth in all things pure and lovely in the sight of the Lord. "As we have, therefore, opportunity, let us do good unto all men; especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Seventh: "Faith;" the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith looks far above these fading scenes of beauty, pointing to the real, the truly beautiful, giving us even here a foretaste of heaven.

Eighth: "Meekness" seeks not the honor of the world, but "condescends to men of low estate." Meekness is much akin to Gentleness: the one is of the Spirit inwardly, the other of the Spirit outwardly.

Ninth and last: "Temperance." "Against such there is no law."

Unlike the Pharisees, may we bear "the fruit of the Spirit." May we be clothed in righteousness like a vesture of fine linen, white and clean. May our only glory be in the cross of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. May we "do all things without murmurings or disputings;" being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God. It is written, "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Righteousness will satisfy hunger, and quench thirst, of the spiritual nature, the same as food the physical, but not the same is it consumed away. After we have once obtained righteousness, we may always have it; therefore never need hunger again, unless we fall again into sin. May we obtain the righteousness that shall secure us an entrance to heaven. We have but to stem the tide of sin and opposition a little while longer, and then great will be our reward. We shall not feel that we have made any sacrifice of happiness, when we see the glories of the New Jerusalem; when we come to realize fully the infinitude of our King; when we see him as he is. Let us be faithful. Let us be righteous; "so shall we ever be with the Lord."

"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord."

MINNIE V. CADY.

Sutherland Falls, Vt.

For the Crisis.

What the Campmeeting has done for Us.

We feel truly that the Lord has blessed us abundantly. Many who had grown cold, have been reclaimed. Our prayer meetings are better attended. The work of the Lord is greatly revived; and we feel encouraged to go on in the admonition of the Lord; and we pray that our numbers may be increased.

We had a prayer meeting last Sabbath, which was largely attended; thank God for it; and we pray that the Lord will permit us again, if he does not come and redeem his ransomed ones, to meet again next year and join in the worship we so much love. It was the first meeting that the writer ever attended, to take an active part, and I was greatly blessed. It has made me firmer in the promises of God. Oh! how I long to see the dear children in the paradise of God, where we can sing praises forever. Seven were buried with Christ in baptism. The last Sunday of the meeting was attended by a very large assembly; probably three thousand were on the ground. A vast amount of prejudice was removed. The meeting was spoken very highly of by all; and we hope the good seed sown will bring forth fruit an hundred fold.

Your Brother in Christ waiting for redemption, C. B. GILBERT.

Collinsville, Ct., Sept. 20.

☞ It is strange that the experience of so many ages should not make us judge more solidly of the present and of the future, so as to take proper measures in the one for the other. We dost upon this world as if it were never to have an end, and we neglect the next, as if it were never to have a beginning.—Fenelon.

☞ You will find, in the Holy Scriptures that God has given the grace of repentance to persecutors, idolaters, murderers, adulterers, &c., but I am mistaken if the whole Bible affords you any one instance of a converted hypocrite.—Sir Robert L'Estrange.

For the Crisis.

Jesus.

When the mind is wearied with surrounding earthly scenes, vanity, folly and the pride of life, with what joy do we turn from them all to Him in whom is centered all that is lovely, all that is excellent. We love to contemplate his brief existence on earth—so filled with acts of love and benevolence. We are never weary of meditating upon his humility, his tenderness and infinite compassion. Is it strange that sorrow filled the hearts of his chosen ones—those who had witnessed the manifestations of his sympathizing love, and his yearnings over the erring—when from his lips they learned that he must go away? They knew that earth would seem dreary and desolate without his presence. But he—the Man of Sorrows—who had himself endured grief—well knew how to pour balm into their hearts. "I will come again." These were the words he spake, and hope revived.

Christians, can you not sympathize in the sorrow and the consolation of those bereaved but comforted ones? You have heard the proclamation "Behold he cometh!" Does it still sound sweetly? Has it lost its power? Long ago you heard it, long ago it stirred your whole being. You felt that it was time to be awake and in earnest. You knew that precious ones were around you, unprepared for eternal life, and the love of Jesus constrained you to pray and labor for them. Does your zeal still continue, as days, months and years roll on?

A scoffing world has many times told you that your hopes and expectations were vain, and with a triumphant sneer whispered, "All things continue as from the beginning."

Perhaps you have laid a loved one away to sleep. You wept when the heavy clods fell upon the coffin. But Faith bade you stay your tears, for Death should soon be destroyed and the worm should not long feed sweetly on its victim. A little in the distance you saw the Conqueror coming, the graves bursting, and heard the redeemed shouting with immortal voices, "O, grave, where is thy victory!" But the time seems long; the grave still holds its prisoner fast; the Life-Giver has not come. Earth still groans beneath the curse. Sin and sorrow and mourning still surround us. But wait with patience, Christian. Let not faith waver. The promise is sure; the glorious vision will not tarry long. Labor on, pray on. Let us strive to make some of the perishing rejoice with us in hope of the great salvation.

"We look with hope to that great day
When Jesus will with clouds appear;
A sight of him will well repay
Our labors and our sorrows here."

JULIE E. LLOYD.

Westfield, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Deliverance from Oppression.

Right and Justice must and will prevail. This world, that has been in the hand of the enemy so long, will, according to the prophetic word, revert to the rightful owner, who will establish a government of righteousness and peace. Then there will be none deceived by fair speeches, and false misrepresentations of the divine word. No one will be wanting in truth and rectitude under such a government, for then will be realized the gospel in its purity and power. What a happy company! where saints and angels join in harmonious songs and praise to their Redeemer! What a blessed state! no more anger nor strife, malice nor envying, and evil speaking, or anything that will mar our happiness, or give us pain; for all things opposed to righteousness and truth and justice must yield, for God will be obeyed.

When the light of that glorious morning shall blaze forth in all its splendor, all darkness will be driven away; then there will be deliverance from bondage and oppression. No "tyrant's hand to pluck the jewel of liberty." Then will be heard the exulting exclamation, "The Lord is our strength and our song—he also is our salvation."

So, wanderers from light and truth, would you join the blood-washed throng, where sin and sorrow will never enter, flee to God, strive to learn his will, and obey it, that you may be in possession of the blessed hope of inheriting that peaceful kingdom, and having the glorious liberty of the children of God. MINERVA.

Plymouth, Ohio.

☞ Keep your temper in disputes. The cool hammer fashions the red hot iron to any shape needed.

Choice Selections.

(From the (N. Y.) Independent.)

A Voice from Assyria.

EDITORS OF THE INDEPENDENT:—Gentlemen,—The following facts were communicated to the Royal Society of Antiquarians under date of September 15th, 1858, and also, in brief, to the American Oriental Society, two days later.

But in this Telegraphic age, when at any moment the Divine telegram may flash from continent to continent,—"There is one YAHVEH, and his name one,"—these great historic facts ought not to be confined to the circle of the few and the dust of the schools.

They belong of right to the press, to be brought home by its power to the understanding and the hearts of the people.

In Layard's Second Expedition to Assyria and Babylonia, in a Table of the Thirteen Great Gods of Assyria, the one marked No. 6 is named YAV.

Sir Henry Rawlinson, in his Herodotus, just out in London, calls this name IVA, or EVA, which is the same thing. The sign in the Assyrian or wedge-shape mode of writing—called the arrow-headed, or cuneiform character—having the same phonetic power—that is, the same power or back-bone, as a consonant, in either case.

The difference in vocalizing the Assyrian, or cuneiform symbol, depends upon the nearness to or departure from the Hebrew, as a standard, in sounding more or less broadly the kindred Chaldean vowels.

Now YAV is one of the oldest gods of Assyria, appearing in the nineteenth century before Christ—as an element in the name of a son of Ismi-dagon, a King of UR of the CHALDEES.

YAV—GOD OF THE ATMOSPHERE, one of the very oldest and earliest names among the Assyrian deities yet found, and always regarded with the highest reverence, enters as an element into the name of the son of the King of the city where Abraham was born; is found upon the very earliest cylinders and inscribed bricks of that city; and was thus entirely familiar to the patriarch, both in its use, and its perversion through the elemental worship of the Chaldeans.

So much for Assyria. What do we find in Hebrew?

It is now ascertained and conceded, that the Assyrian arrow-headed, or middle-cuneiform writing, is merely a family language of the Hebrew—the Hebrew verb and the Assyrian verb interpreting each other.

We find YAHVEH, and its contract YAH, holding different and yet kindred relations.

Bunsen, in his "Bibel-Werk," (his great work on the Bible, just coming out in Germany) makes the unqualified statement as one from which no scholar can dissent, that Jehovah is "no word" at all. It is simply a manufacture. The true Hebrew name for the Supreme God of Abraham, the patriarchs, and the Pentateuch, is YAHVEH—in its contract-form YAH.

It is likewise conceded by all who understand the subject, that the Book of Genesis, especially throughout the first eleven chapters, is made up of various documents. These documents antedate as much the Egyptian "Book of the Dead," found about the persons of all respectable mummies of fashion, (which, in its present form at least, can hardly be placed earlier than Abram) as Abram and the "Book of the Dead" antedate Moses.

The documents are scientifically discriminated by Dr. Herman Hupfeld of Halle in his "Die Quellen der Genesis," (The Sources of Genesis) Berlin, 1853.

Those in the first eleven chapters of Genesis are well separated and set forth in Bunsen's "Bibel-Werk" above alluded to, Leipsic, 1858.

Of the explanation given to the documents in unfolding the archeology of Genesis, found in the volume "Yahveh Christ," it is unnecessary here to speak.

The documents with which Abraham was familiar may be designated in a brief and popular way, as the two accounts of Creation—the two accounts of the Flood—Records of the House of Noah, with records of the Abrahamidæ, or House of Abraham, etc. etc.

All these appear in the first eleven chapters of Genesis, and may be read as separated, in Bunsen.

We can thus determine at once, the first use of YAHVEH, among the Hebrews. It is the name of the Supreme Deity in the second account of Creation—in the second account of the Flood—in the mouth of Noah, and the invocations of Abraham.

So another, and a slightly older word. Elohim—implying the knowledge of the singular form El, likewise appears as the name of the Supreme Deity of the Hebrews—in the first account of Creation—the first account of the Flood—the Records of the House of Noah, and in the mouth of Abraham.

It is further well known to all acquainted with the subject, that both the Phenicians and the later Chaldeans (family relatives of the Hebrews, speaking branches of the same Semitic language) perverted the first and oldest name of the Supreme Deity, viz., Elohim, with its singular form, El, from its original monotheistic idea to a foreign and polytheistic use.

On the cylinders and inscribed bricks of Ur of the Chaldees, the birth-place of Abraham, and the land of his fathers, we find the earlier Chaldeans did the very same thing for YAHVEH, and its contract YAH.

The deep historic interest of this hitherto lost determination of YAHVEH speaks for itself. The facts are their own commentary. A. K. T.

Health Department.

Ventilation.

Much has been said on this subject within a few years past; and much remains to be said. Ventilation is a matter of immense importance. The proper ways and means for purifying, or as the books on physiology say, depurating the buildings we occupy, especially our dwellings, can hardly receive too large a measure of our attention.

The process of ventilation is simple, yet complicated. It is simple in its principle, yet complicated in its application. We have but to introduce fresh or pure air, and remove that which is old or impure. The new, fresh air is more dense; and by means of its greater specific gravity, tends to get below and crowd out or upwards that which is more highly rarefied.

When mankind lived almost exclusively in the open air, special efforts to ventilate were hardly needed. Boreas was the grand ventilator; and well did he fulfill his mission. And I have seen portions of our own country within the last half-century, in which no ventilating tubes or flues were required. The crevices between the logs of which the walls were made not only permitted the ingress and egress of air, but at times admitted, without entrance fee, the rain and snow.

Dr. Franklin, in some of his fugitive articles, relates a story concerning Methuselah. "It is recorded" of him, he says; but he nowhere tells us how we may find the record. He may have borrowed it; or it may have been one of the fancies of his own prolific and ingenious brain; nevertheless, it has a moral. The story is this: It is recorded of Methuselah, that when he had lived five hundred years, an angel appeared to him and said: Arise, Methuselah, and build thee an house, for thou art to live yet five hundred years longer. But Methuselah answered: If I am to live but five hundred years, it is not worth while to build me an house. I will sleep in the open air as I have been used to do."

But times are altered; and, if here and there an individual may be found who can sleep in the open air, it is equally true that the vast majority cannot sleep at all, at least with any good degree of soundness; and no wonder. For, if the bed on which they slept the preceding night has been opened and aired,—which is somewhat doubtful,—the sleeping-room has not, in all probability, received any other attention than that of re-arranging the furniture, and putting everything in a "new" condition. There may be a fireplace in it, with a passage for the bad air, but the far greater probability is that there is not. The window may have been left open an hour, or an hour and a half; but the fair presumption is that it has not been opened at all, except to open or shut the blinds. These last must be taken due care of, and all light fairly excluded, except while the process of re-arrangement itself is going on; lest it should affect injuriously the colors of the carpet, or excite the movements, in the summer season, of the flies and other insects. And when night comes on, and the danger from the sun and flies is over, the musquitoes must be excluded with all assiduity; and what is still more, alas! to be dreaded, the night air. Even if the room were air-tight, no door might be left open into a hall, nor any window admit, by the slightest elevation or depression, the pure atmospheric air, as God has given it, lest somebody, perchance, should take cold!

Now, suppose a sleeping room were occupied by only two persons, and was, withal, twice as large as that which I have mentioned at the beginning of this chapter; and suppose the air, on entering it, at ten o'clock in the evening, to be perfectly pure, how long time would elapse before suffering must ensue? Why, in less than a single hour, most certainly. Few rooms, however, are perfectly air-tight; and it is well that they are not. Half the bad air, we will suppose, escapes; and a quantity of good air, equal to the same, finds its way in. This will retard the process of suffocation somewhat. But, even at this rate, the bodies of persons, sleeping on the highest beds which Fashion herself ever makes up, would be entirely immersed in the deadly choke damp—alias carbonic acid gas—in less than three hours. Retiring to rest, then, I say, under such circumstances, at ten o'clock, what chemist or physiologist should be surprised, three hours afterward, viz., at one o'clock in the morning, to find in it, instead of two healthy individuals, two miserable and ghastly corpses? Is it not strange—I repeat the inquiry—that so little of obvious suffering from this fertile source, is apparent among us? How can it be that half our population sleep six, eight, or ten consecutive hours, in a condition but little better than that which I have depicted, and yet not one in ten thousand immediately perishes? Nay, more; how is it that hardly one in a million dies, in these circumstances alone, unaided by any concomitants?

I am not disposed to recommend to everybody, at once, to sleep with open windows; for I have lived too long, and observed too much, to have full confidence in the safety of such a direction. A man in Bloomfield, Ct., who had read my tract on Breathing Bad Air, being in feeble health, threw open his window by night, and persisted in it for many weeks. The result was his own complete restoration to health; and the improvement, unexpectedly, of the constitution of his wife. But a little child, that slept in the same bed, was so much affected by the damp current which occasionally drove into the room, that it took a severe cold, and came near perishing. The precaution should have been taken of hanging up something directly before the window, to break the force of the damp current. Many an individual, as I have already told you, has slept thus for scores of years, and a few for a whole lifetime, with perfect safety.

Something better than even this may be done. I refer not here to the plan of thrusting a crowbar through the wall, at the top of the room, as some have advised; but a much more architectural, as well as more efficient movement. It consists in such an arrangement as shall admit a steady current of pure air into the chamber, and a steady egress of the air which has become impure. It consists, in one word, in scientific, that is, simple ventilation.

Every school-room, and indeed every other room where there is no natural or intentional provision for ventilation, is a Grotto del Cane to its occupants. It is so, to some extent, in our very best schoolhouses. Too often they are something worse than this, and would almost rank with the Black Hole of Calcutta. A medical man in Hartford, Conn., begged and obtained permission of the committee, one day, to visit the public schools there, to learn, if possible, why the children who attended were so much troubled with scrofula and other glandular affections, and with diseases of the brain and lungs. He did not visit half a dozen of these schools before the mystery was revealed to him. The defective warming and ventilation was a sufficient cause, he said, without inquiring farther. The attempt has been made, for many years, to rouse public attention to this subject, whenever other arguments have failed, by means of ridicule. Children at school have been represented as sitting with their feet in the arctic zone and their heads in the torrid. Some have gone so far as to propound the inquiry, whether it would not be well to teach them to sit with their feet on the ceiling of the school-room, and their heads downwards.

If the time ever arrives when teachers and parents can be so trained as to know the nature and necessity of ventilation, it will, to the world we live in, be a great saving, not only physically, but morally. Few things retard more the wheels of human advancement than the constant use of bad air.

It is said that most of the animals in our menageries are tuberculous. Men, in their ignorance, are little better off than if they were engaged in bad air. Is it too much to say, that pure air is seldom inhaled, either at home or abroad? In our dwellings, our factories, our shops, our schools, and our churches, bad air is the order of the day,—science and common sense to the contrary notwithstanding.

Dr. John H. Griscom, of New York, in a discourse of his, delivered before the New York Academy of Medicine, has the following remarks: "To every school, especially every public school, in this city, State, and United States, there should be attached a medical man as one of its corps of tutors, who, by spending a few hours a week in instructing its classes in this interesting branch of science, would exert an influence for good, in the matter of public health, which would soon be felt over the length and breadth of the land, and with increasing power, from generation to generation.—Laws of Health.

☞ This is a world of compensations. The rich pay for their silverware by worrying about house-breakers; while the poor find an offset for hardships in glorious sleeps and a freedom from dyspepsia.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months,	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.[illegible] a year. [illegible]

Poetry.

Selected for the Crisis.

THE OCEAN CABLE.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

O, the marvellous gift of human thought!
O, the God-like power of mind!
With no pressure, or weight, or substance fraught,
Yet outstripping the viewless wind.
The lightning's flash may not leap beyond
The space of the earth and air,
But thought will flash to the farthest bound,
And its limit is, when? and where?

Not content to pierce through the sky's blue depth
With the telescope's mighty glance—
Not content to look in where the unseen world
Of life lies in myriad dance,—
Man has stormed the home of the vast abyss,
The realms where the sea-gods grow;
With the steam-king has conquered its billows above—
With the lightning its base below.

Earth's deep-hidden forces obey his voice—
He has tamed the electric fire:
That spirit-like, mystic, subtile power,
Fit type of its awful Sire.
And strange and terrible, dark and grand—
Unseen in its vast domain:
It is hastening to crouch at the feet of man,
And lie bound in his cunning chain.

Key-stone of hemispheres—Ring of the sea!
Lie still in thy deep water-bed:
We welcome the bridal that waits upon thee,
For earth's kingdoms have come to be wed.
Time's hours roll backward,—even space is no more,
Old sea-sundered realms are but one:
'Tis no dream—for the lion and eagle have spoke,
And the world's festal-shout is begun.

See the Old World pressing its lips to the New!
Each answers with words of fire;
While the nations are whispering their thoughts across,
On the track of that wonderful wire.
What tidings shall flash o'er the floor of the sea,
Like voices that waken the dead!
What echoes of millions shall cluster and throng
That seven-fold science-born thread!

Age of the ages! most wondrous of all—
Outstripping the elder time!
Era of marvels, that burden belief!
Age of the grand and sublime!
What shall come when thy years are numbered and gone,
And thy shores by the angels are trod?
Shall He come—the majestic Elohim of Heaven;
Shall it come—the great Kingdom of God?

—Rouses Pt., (N. Y.) Advertiser.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Righteousness—The Entrance to Heaven.

"For I say unto you that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of Heaven."

The above quoted passage of Scripture, which are the words of Christ upon the Mount, is one that first met my eye after I had asked in prayer to be guided to a text best practically suited to myself, and others, who "believe the whole counsel of God;" upon which I might pen a few thoughts for the Crisis.

Our righteousness must be greater than the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees; and we read in the Holy Word, that they were hypocritical, having self-righteousness. They loved to stand in high places, to be seen of men, and while standing would make long prayers, for a semblance of righteousness. They possessed not the spirit of Christ, therefore did not show forth "the fruits of the Spirit," which the Apostle Paul has numbered up and enjoined upon the Galatians as, first:

"Love," which seems to be the first element in the Christian character, as well as the first fruit evinced. Love for God and his worship. Love for his blessed Son, and the plan for salvation. Love for the dear children of God, and love for the warfare. A precious gift from the throne of our God, is love; and stands there, like the spire upon our earthly temples, the master-builder's pride. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die, that whoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." What boundless, what inimitable love! How need we to comfort one another with thoughts, words and deeds of love, in the day of trial, when "we are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed."

Second: "Joy." Joy in doing good and serving God. Joy in triumphing over sin, and in being accounted worthy to bear reproach for Christ's sake.

Third: "Peace." Peace with God and all mankind. Peace that, like a river, [illegible] onward, refreshing and in[illegible] all understanding."

Fourth: "Long-suffering" toward those [illegible] things with patience; knowing "it shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Fifth: "Gentleness," which never utters harsh and high words; never gives vent to angry feelings, and, indeed, never has any. Acts charitably towards all men; counting trials all gain, if we may but obtain the great reward.

Sixth: "Goodness." Unfeigned, enduring goodness, which delighteth in all things pure and lovely in the sight of the Lord. "As we have, therefore, opportunity, let us do good unto all men; especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Seventh: "Faith;" the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith looks far above these fading scenes of beauty, pointing to the real, the truly beautiful, giving us even here a foretaste of heaven.

Eighth: "Meekness" seeks not the honor of the world, but "condescends to men of low estate." Meekness is much akin to Gentleness: the one is of the Spirit inwardly, the other of the Spirit outwardly.

Ninth and last: "Temperance." "Against such there is no law."

Unlike the Pharisees, may we bear "the fruit of the Spirit." May we be clothed in righteousness like a vesture of fine linen, white and clean. May our only glory be in the cross of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. May we "do all things without murmurings or disputings;" being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God. It is written, "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Righteousness will satisfy hunger, and quench thirst, of the spiritual nature, the same as food the physical, but not the same is it consumed away. After we have once obtained righteousness, we may always have it; therefore never need hunger again, unless we fall again into sin. May we obtain the righteousness that shall secure us an entrance to heaven. We have but to stem the tide of sin and opposition a little while longer, and then great will be our reward. We shall not feel that we have made any sacrifice of happiness, when we see the glories of the New Jerusalem; when we come to realize fully the infinitude of our King; when we see him as he is. Let us be faithful. Let us be righteous; "so shall we ever be with the Lord."

"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord."

MINNIE V. CADY.

Sutherland Falls, Vt.

For the Crisis.

What the Campmeeting has done for Us.

We feel truly that the Lord has blessed us abundantly. Many who had grown cold, have been reclaimed. Our prayer meetings are better attended. The work of the Lord is greatly revived; and we feel encouraged to go on in the admonition of the Lord; and we pray that our numbers may be increased.

We had a prayer meeting last Sabbath, which was largely attended; thank God for it; and we pray that the Lord will permit us again, if he does not come and redeem his ransomed ones, to meet again next year and join in the worship we so much love. It was the first meeting that the writer ever attended, to take an active part, and I was greatly blessed. It has made me firmer in the promises of God. Oh! how I long to see the dear children in the paradise of God, where we can sing praises forever. Seven were buried with Christ in baptism. The last Sunday of the meeting was attended by a very large assembly; probably three thousand were on the ground. A vast amount of prejudice was removed. The meeting was spoken very highly of by all; and we hope the good seed sown will bring forth fruit an hundred fold.

Your Brother in Christ waiting for redemption,

C. B. GILBERT.

Collinsville, Ct., Sept. 20.

☞ It is strange that the experience of so many ages should not make us judge more solidly of the present and of the future, so as to take proper measures in the one for the other. We doat upon this world as if it were never to have an end, and we neglect the next, as if it were never to have a beginning.—Fenelon.

☞ You will find, in the Holy Scriptures that God has given the grace of repentance to persecutors, idolaters, murderers, adulterers, &c., but I am mistaken if the whole Bible affords you any one instance of a converted hypocrite.—Sir Robert L'Estrange.

For the Crisis.

Jesus.

When the mind is wearied with surrounding earthly scenes, vanity, folly and the pride of life, with what joy do we turn from them all to Him in whom is centered all that is lovely, all that is excellent. We love to contemplate his brief existence on earth—so filled with acts of love and benevolence. We are never weary of meditating upon his humility, his tenderness and infinite compassion. Is it strange that sorrow filled the hearts of his chosen ones—those who had witnessed the manifestations of his sympathizing love, and his yearnings over the erring—when from his lips they learned that he must go away? They knew that earth would seem dreary and desolate without his presence. But he—the Man of Sorrows—who had himself endured grief—well knew how to pour balm into their hearts. "I will come again." These were the words he spake, and hope revived.

Christians, can you not sympathize in the sorrow and the consolation of those bereaved but comforted ones? You have heard the proclamation "Behold he cometh!" Does it still sound sweetly? Has it lost its power? Long ago you heard it, long ago it stirred your whole being. You felt that it was time to be awake and in earnest. You knew that precious ones were around you, unprepared for eternal life, and the love of Jesus constrained you to pray and labor for them. Does your zeal still continue, as days, months and years roll on?

A scoffing world has many times told you that your hopes and expectations were vain, and with a triumphant sneer whispered, "All things continue as from the beginning."

Perhaps you have laid a loved one away to sleep. You wept when the heavy clods fell upon the coffin. But Faith bade you stay your tears, for Death should soon be destroyed and the worm should not long feed sweetly on its victim. A little in the distance you saw the Conqueror coming, the graves bursting, and heard the redeemed shouting with immortal voices, "O, grave, where is thy victory!" But the time seems long; the grave still holds its prisoner fast; the Life-Giver has not come. Earth still groans beneath the curse. Sin and sorrow and mourning still surround us. But wait with patience, Christian. Let not faith waver. The promise is sure; the glorious vision will not tarry long. Labor on, pray on. Let us strive to make some of the perishing rejoice with us in hope of the great salvation.

"We look with hope to that great day
When Jesus will with clouds appear;
A sight of him will well repay
Our labors and our sorrows here."

JULIE E. LLOYD.

Westfield, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Deliverance from Oppression.

Right and Justice must and will prevail. This world, that has been in the hand of the enemy so long, will, according to the prophetic word, revert to the rightful owner, who will establish a government of righteousness and peace. Then there will be none deceived by fair speeches, and false misrepresentations of the divine word. No one will be wanting in truth and rectitude under such a government, for then will be realized the gospel in its purity and power. What a happy company! where saints and angels join in harmonious songs and praise to their Redeemer! What a blessed state! no more anger nor strife, malice nor envying, and evil speaking, or anything that will mar our happiness, or give us pain; for all things opposed to righteousness and truth and justice must yield, for God will be obeyed.

When the light of that glorious morning shall blaze forth in all its splendor, all darkness will be driven away; then there will be deliverance from bondage and oppression. No "tyrant's hand to pluck the jewel of liberty." Then will be heard the exulting exclamation, "The Lord is our strength and our song—he also is our salvation."

So, wanderers from light and truth, would you join the blood-washed throng, where sin and sorrow will never enter, flee to God, strive to learn his will, and obey it, that you may be in possession of the blessed hope of inheriting that peaceful kingdom, and having the glorious liberty of the children of God.

MINERVA.

Plymouth, Ohio.

☞ Keep your temper in disputes. The cool hammer fashions the red hot iron to any shape needed.

Choice Selections.

[From the (N. Y.) Independent.]

A Voice from Assyria.

EDITORS OF THE INDEPENDENT:—Gentlemen,—The following facts were communicated to the Royal Society of Antiquarians under date of September 15th, 1858, and also, in brief, to the American Oriental Society, two days later.

But in this Telegraphic age, when at any moment the Divine telegram may flash from continent to continent,—"There is one YAHVEH, and his name one,"—these great historic facts ought not to be confined to the circle of the few and the dust of the schools.

They belong of right to the press, to be brought home by its power to the understanding and the hearts of the people.

In Layard's Second Expedition to Assyria and Babylonia, in a Table of the Thirteen Great Gods of Assyria, the one marked No. 6 is named YAV.

Sir Henry Rawlinson, in his Herodotus, just out in London, calls this name IVA, or EVA, which is the same thing. The sign in the Assyrian or wedge-shape mode of writing—called the arrow-headed, or cuneiform character—having the same phonetic power—that is, the same power or back-bone, as a consonant, in either case.

The difference in vocalizing the Assyrian, or cuneiform symbol, depends upon the nearness to or departure from the Hebrew, as a standard, in sounding more or less broadly the kindred Chaldean vowels.

Now YAV is one of the oldest gods of Assyria, appearing in the nineteenth century before Christ—as an element in the name of a son of Ismi-dagon, a King of Ur of the CHALDEES.

YAV—GOD OF THE ATMOSPHERE, one of the very oldest and earliest names among the Assyrian deities yet found, and always regarded with the highest reverence, enters as an element into the name of the son of the King of the city where Abraham was born; is found upon the very earliest cylinders and inscribed bricks of that city; and was thus entirely familiar to the patriarch, both in its use, and its perversion through the elemental worship of the Chaldeans.

So much for Assyria. What do we find in Hebrew?

It is now ascertained and conceded, that the Assyrian arrow-headed, or middle-cuneiform writing, is merely a family language of the Hebrew—the Hebrew verb and the Assyrian verb interpreting each other.

We find YAHVEH, and its contract YAH, holding different and yet kindred relations.

Bunsen, in his "Bibel-Werk," (his great work on the Bible, just coming out in Germany) makes the unqualified statement as one from which no scholar can dissent, that Jehovah is "no word" at all. It is simply a manufacture. The true Hebrew name for the Supreme God of Abraham, the patriarchs, and the Pentateuch, is YAHVEH—in its contract-form YAH.

It is likewise conceded by all who understand the subject, that the Book of Genesis, especially throughout the first eleven chapters, is made up of various documents. These documents antedate as much the Egyptian "Book of the Dead," found about the persons of all respectable mummies of fashion, (which, in its present form at least, can hardly be placed earlier than Abram) as Abram and the "Book of the Dead" antedate Moses.

The documents are scientifically discriminated by Dr. Herman Hupfeld of Halle in his "Die Quellen der Genesis," (The Sources of Genesis) Berlin, 1853.

Those in the first eleven chapters of Genesis are well separated and set forth in Bunsen's "Bibel-Werk" above alluded to, Leipsic, 1858.

Of the explanation given to the documents in unfolding the archeology of Genesis, found in the volume "Yahveh Christ," it is unnecessary here to speak.

The documents with which Abraham was familiar may be designated in a brief and popular way, as the two accounts of Creation—the two accounts of the Flood—Records of the House of Noah, with records of the Abrahamidæ, or House of Abraham, etc. etc.

All these appear in the first eleven chapters of Genesis, and may be read as separated, in Bunsen.

We can thus determine at once, the first use of YAHVEH, among the Hebrews. It is the name of the Supreme Deity in the second account of Creation—in the second account of the Flood—in the month of Noah, and the invocations of Abraham.

So another, and a slightly older word. Elohim—implying the knowledge of the singular form El, likewise appears as the name of the Supreme Deity of the Hebrews—in the first account of Creation—the first account of the Flood—the Records of the House of Noah, and in the mouth of Abraham.

It is further well known to all acquainted with the subject, that both the Phenicians and the later Chaldeans (family relatives of the Hebrews, speaking branches of the same Semitic language) perverted the first and oldest name of the Supreme Deity, viz., Elohim, with its singular form, El, from its original monotheistic idea to a foreign and polytheistic use.

On the cylinders and inscribed bricks of Ur of the Chaldees, the birth-place of Abraham, and the land of his fathers, we find the earlier Chaldeans did the very same thing for YAHVEH, and its contract YAH.

The deep historic interest of this hitherto lost determination of YAHVEH speaks for itself. The facts are their own commentary.

A. M. K.

Health Department.

Ventilation.

Much has been said on this subject within a few years past; and much remains to be said. Ventilation is a matter of immense importance. The proper ways and means for purifying, or as the books on physiology say, depurating the buildings we occupy, especially our dwellings, can hardly receive too large a measure of our attention.

The process of ventilation is simple, yet complicated. It is simple in its principle, yet complicated in its application. We have but to introduce fresh or pure air, and remove that which is old or impure. The new, fresh air is more dense; and by means of its greater specific gravity, tends to get below and crowd out or upwards that which is more highly rarefied.

When mankind lived almost exclusively in the open air, special efforts to ventilate were hardly needed. Boreas was the grand ventilator; and well did he fulfill his mission. And I have seen portions of our own country within the last half-century, in which no ventilating tubes or flues were required. The crevices between the logs of which the walls were made not only permitted the ingress and egress of air, but at times admitted, without entrance fee, the rain and snow.

Dr. Franklin, in some of his fugitive articles, relates a story concerning Methuselah. "It is recorded" of him, he says; but he nowhere tells us how we may find the record. He may have borrowed it; or it may have been one of the fancies of his own prolific and ingenious brain; nevertheless, it has a moral. The story is this: It is recorded of Methuselah, that when he had lived five hundred years, an angel appeared to him and said: Arise, Methuselah, and build thee an house, for thou art to live yet five hundred years longer. But Methuselah answered: If I am to live but five hundred years, it is not worth while to build me an house. I will sleep in the open air as I have been used to do."

But times are altered; and, if here and there an individual may be found who can sleep in the open air, it is equally true that the vast majority cannot sleep at all, at least with any good degree of soundness; and no wonder. For, if the bed on which they slept the preceding night has been opened and aired,—which is somewhat doubtful,—the sleeping-room has not, in all probability, received any other attention than that of re-arranging the furniture, and putting everything in a "new" condition. There may be a fireplace in it, with a passage for the bad air, but the far greater probability is that there is not. The window may have been left open an hour, or an hour and a half; but the fair presumption is that it has not been opened at all, except to open or shut the blinds. These last must be taken due care of, and all light fairly excluded, except while the process of re-arrangement itself is going on; lest it should affect injuriously the colors of the carpet, or excite the movements, in the summer season, of the flies and other insects. And when night comes on, and the danger from the sun and flies is over, the musquitoes must be excluded with all assiduity; and what is still more, alas! to be dreaded, the night air. Even if the room were air-tight, no door might be left open into a hall, nor any window admit, by the slightest elevation or depression, the pure atmospheric air, as God has given it, lest somebody, perchance, should take cold!

Now, suppose a sleeping room were occupied by only two persons, and was, withal, twice as large as that which I have mentioned at the beginning of this chapter; and suppose the air, on entering it, at ten o'clock in the evening, to be perfectly pure, how long time would elapse before suffering must ensue? Why, in less than a single hour, most certainly. Few rooms, however, are perfectly air-tight; and it is well that they are not. Half the bad air, we will suppose, escapes; and a quantity of good air, equal to the same, finds its way in. This will retard the process of suffocation somewhat. But, even at this rate, the bodies of persons, sleeping on the highest beds which Fashion herself ever makes up, would be entirely immersed in the deadly choke damp—alias carbonic acid gas—in less than three hours. Retiring to rest, then, I say, under such circumstances, at ten o'clock, what chemist or physiologist should be surprised, three hours afterward, viz., at one o'clock in the morning, to find in it, instead of two healthy individuals, two miserable and ghastly corpses? Is it not strange—I repeat the inquiry—that so little of obvious suffering from this fertile source, is apparent among us? How can it be that half our population sleep six, eight, or ten consecutive hours, in a condition but little better than that which I have depicted, and yet not one in ten thousand immediately perishes? Nay, more; how is it that hardly one in a million dies, in these circumstances alone, unaided by any concomitants?

I am not disposed to recommend to everybody, at once, to sleep with open windows; for I have lived too long, and observed too much, to have full confidence in the safety of such a direction. A man in Bloomfield, Ct., who had read my tract on Breathing Bad Air, being in feeble health, threw open his window by night, and persisted in it for many weeks. The result was his own complete restoration to health; and the improvement, unexpectedly, of the constitution of his wife. But a little child, that slept in the same bed, was so much affected by the damp current which occasionally drove into the room, that it took a severe cold, and came near perishing. The precaution should have been taken of hanging up something directly before the window, to break the force of the damp current. Many an individual, as I have already told you, has slept thus for scores of years, and a few for a whole lifetime, with perfect safety.

Something better than even this may be done. I refer not here to the plan of thrusting a crowbar through the wall, at the top of the room, as some have advised; but a much more architectural, as well as more efficient movement. It consists in such an arrangement as shall admit a steady current of pure air into the chamber, and a steady egress of the air which has become impure. It consists, in one word, in scientific, that is, simple ventilation.

Every school-room, and indeed every other room where there is no natural or intentional provision for ventilation, is a Grotto del Cane to its occupants. It is so, to some extent, in our very best school-houses. Too often they are something worse than this, and would almost rank with the Black Hole of Calcutta. A medical man in Hartford, Conn., begged and obtained permission of the committee, one day, to visit the public schools there, to learn, if possible, why the children who attended were so much troubled with scrofula and other glandular affections, and with diseases of the brain and lungs. He did not visit half a dozen of these schools before the mystery was revealed to him. The defective warming and ventilation was a sufficient cause, he said, without inquiring farther. The attempt has been made, for many years, to rouse public attention to this subject, whenever other arguments have failed, by means of ridicule. Children at school have been represented as sitting with their feet in the arctic zone and their heads in the torrid. Some have gone so far as to propound the inquiry, whether it would not be well to teach them to sit with their feet on the ceiling of the school-room, and their heads downwards.

If the time ever arrives when teachers and parents can be so trained as to know the nature and necessity of ventilation, it will, to the world we live in, be a great saving, not only physically, but morally. Few things retard more the wheels of human advancement than the constant use of bad air.

It is said that most of the animals in our menageries are tuberculous. Men, in their ignorance, are little better off than if they were engaged in bad air. Is it too much to say, that pure air is seldom inhaled, either at home or abroad? In our dwellings, our factories, our shops, our schools, and our churches, bad air is the order of the day,—science and common sense to the contrary notwithstanding.

Dr. John H. Griscom, of New York, in a discourse of his, delivered before the New York Academy of Medicine, has the following remarks: "To every school, especially every public school, in this city, State, and United States, there should be attached a medical man as one of its corps of tutors, who, by spending a few hours a week in instructing its classes in this interesting branch of science, would exert an influence for good, in the matter of public health, which would soon be felt over the length and breadth of the land, and with increasing power, from generation to generation."—Laws of Health.

☞ This is a world of compensations. The rich pay for their silverware by worrying about house-breakers; while the poor find an offset for hardships in glorious sleeps and a freedom from dyspepsia.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,........Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year........................$2.00
For a single copy 6 months.......................1.00
For a single copy 3 months.......................50
Five copies to one address for 6 months.........4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months..........8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months, 15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months, 22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write for the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS [illegible] the postage on their papers, [illegible] in addition to the above: [illegible] for twenty-one numbers, or [illegible].

Poetry.

Selected for the Crisis.

THE OCEAN CABLE.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

O, the marvellous gift of human thought!
O, the God-like power of mind!
With no measure, or weight, or substance fraught,
Yet outstripping the viewless wind.
The lightning's flash may not leap beyond
The space of the earth and air,
But thought will flash to the farthest bound,
And its limit is, when? and where?

Not content to pierce through the sky's blue depth
With the telescope's mighty glance—
Not content to look in where the unseen world
Of life lies in myriad dance,—
Man has stormed the home of the vast abyss,
The realms where the sea-gods grow:
With the steam-king has conquered its billows above—
With the lightning its base below.

Earth's deep-hidden forces obey his voice—
He has tamed the electric fire:
That spirit-like, mystic, subtile power,
Fit type of its awful Sire.
And strange and terrible, dark and grand—
Unseen in its vast domain:
It is hastening to crouch at the feet of man,
And lie bound in his cunning chain.

Key-stone of hemispheres—Ring of the sea!
Lie still in thy deep water-bed:
We welcome the bridal that waits upon thee,
For earth's kingdoms have come to be wed.
Time's hours roll backward,—even space is no more,
Old sea-sundered realms are but one:
'Tis no dream—for the lion and eagle have spoke,
And the world's festal-shout is begun.

See the Old World pressing its lips to the New!
Each answers with words of fire;
While the nations are whispering their thoughts across,
On the track of that wonderful wire.
What tidings shall flash o'er the floor of the sea,
Like voices that waken the dead!
What echoes of millions shall cluster and throng
That seven-fold science-born thread!

Age of the ages! most wondrous of all—
Outstripping the elder time!
Era of marvels, that burden belief!
Age of the grand and sublime!
What shall come when thy years are numbered and gone,
And thy shores by the angels are trod?
Shall He come—the majestic Elohim of Heaven;
Shall It come—the great Kingdom of God?

—Rouses Pt., (N. Y.) Advertiser.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Righteousness---The Entrance to Heaven.

"For I say unto you that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of Heaven?"

The above quoted passage of Scripture, which are the words of Christ upon the Mount, is one that first met my eye after I had asked in prayer to be guided to a text best practically suited to myself, and others, who "believe the whole counsel of God;" upon which I might pen a few thoughts for the Crisis.

Our righteousness must be greater than the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees; and we read in the Holy Word, that they were hypocritical, having self-righteousness. They loved to stand in high places, to be seen of men, and while standing would make long prayers, for a semblance of righteousness. They possessed not the spirit of Christ, therefore did not show forth "the fruits of the Spirit," which the Apostle Paul has numbered up and enjoined upon the Galatians as, first:

"Love," which seems to be the first element in the Christian character, as well as the first fruit evinced. Love for God and his worship. Love for his blessed Son, and the plan for salvation. Love for the dear children of God, and love for the warfare. A precious gift from the throne of our God, is love; and stands there, like the spire upon our earthly temples, the master-builder's pride. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die, that whoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." What boundless, what inimitable love! How need we to comfort one another with thoughts, words and deeds of love, in the day of trial, when "we are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed."

Second: "Joy." Joy in doing good and fearing God. Joy in triumphing over sin, and in being accounted worthy to bear reproach for Christ's sake.

Third: "Peace." Peace with God and all mankind. Peace that, like a river, glides quietly onward, refreshing and invigorating all. "A peace that passeth all understanding."

Fourth: "Long suffering" toward those who despitefully use and ill treat us, never rendering evil for evil, but bearing all things with patience; knowing "it shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Fifth: "Gentleness," which never utters harsh and high words; never gives vent to angry feelings, and, indeed, never has any. Acts charitably towards all men; counting trials all gain, if we may but obtain the great reward.

Sixth: "Goodness." Unfeigned, enduring goodness, which delighteth in all things pure and lovely in the sight of the Lord. "As we have, therefore, opportunity, let us do good unto all men; especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Seventh: "Faith;" the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith looks far above these fading scenes of beauty, pointing to the real, the truly beautiful, giving us even here a foretaste of heaven.

Eighth: "Meekness" seeks not the honor of the world, but "condescends to men of low estate." Meekness is much akin to Gentleness: the one is of the Spirit inwardly, the other of the Spirit outwardly.

Ninth and last: "Temperance." "Against such there is no law."

Unlike the Pharisees, may we bear "the fruit of the Spirit." May we be clothed in righteousness like a vesture of fine linen, white and clean. May our only glory be in the cross of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. May we "do all things without murmurings or disputings;" being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God. It is written, "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Righteousness will satisfy hunger, and quench thirst, of the spiritual nature, the same as food the physical, but not the same is it consumed away. After we have once obtained righteousness, we may always have it; therefore never need hunger again, unless we fall again into sin. May we obtain the righteousness that shall secure us an entrance to heaven. We have but to stem the tide of sin and opposition a little while longer, and then great will be our reward. We shall not feel that we have made any sacrifice of happiness, when we see the glories of the New Jerusalem; when we come to realize fully the infinitude of our King; when we see him as he is. Let us be faithful. Let us be righteous; "so shall we ever be with the Lord."

"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord."

MINNIE V. CADY.

Sutherland Falls, Vt.

For the Crisis.

What the Campmeeting has done for Us.

We feel truly that the Lord has blessed us abundantly. Many who had grown cold, have been reclaimed. Our prayer meetings are better attended. The work of the Lord is greatly revived; and we feel encouraged to go on in the admonition of the Lord; and we pray that our numbers may be increased.

We had a prayer meeting last Sabbath, which was largely attended; thank God for it; and we pray that the Lord will permit us again, if he does not come and redeem his ransomed ones, to meet again next year and join in the worship we so much love. It was the first meeting that the writer ever attended, to take an active part, and I was greatly blessed. It has made me firmer in the promises of God. Oh! how I long to see the dear children in the paradise of God, where we can sing praises forever. Seven were buried with Christ in baptism. The last Sunday of the meeting was attended by a very large assembly; probably three thousand were on the ground. A vast amount of prejudice was removed. The meeting was spoken very highly of by all; and we hope the good seed sown will bring forth fruit an hundred fold.

Your Brother in Christ waiting for redemption, C. B. GILBERT.

Collinsville, Ct., Sept. 20.

☞ It is strange that the experience of so many ages should not make us judge more solidly of the present and of the future, so as to take proper measures in the one for the other. We doat upon this world as if it were never to have an end, and we neglect the next, as if it were never to have a beginning.—Fenelon.

☞ You will find, in the Holy Scriptures that God has given the grace of repentance to persecutors, idolaters, murderers, adulterers, &c., but I am mistaken if the whole Bible affords you any one instance of a converted hypocrite.—Sir Robert L'Estrange.

For the Crisis.

Jesus.

When the mind is wearied with surrounding earthly scenes, vanity, folly and the pride of life, with what joy do we turn from them all to Him in whom is centered all that is lovely, all that is excellent. We love to contemplate his brief existence on earth—so filled with acts of love and benevolence. We are never weary of meditating upon his humility, his tenderness and infinite compassion. Is it strange that sorrow filled the hearts of his chosen ones—those who had witnessed the manifestations of his sympathizing love, and his yearnings over the erring—when from his lips they learned that he must go away? They knew that earth would seem dreary and desolate without his presence. But he—the Man of Sorrows—who had himself endured grief—well knew how to pour balm into their hearts. "I will come again." These were the words he spake, and hope revived.

Christians, can you not sympathize in the sorrow and the consolation of those bereaved but comforted ones? You have heard the proclamation "Behold he cometh!" Does it still sound sweetly? Has it lost its power? Long ago you heard it, long ago it stirred your whole being. You felt that it was time to be awake and in earnest. You knew that precious ones were around you, unprepared for eternal life, and the love of Jesus constrained you to pray and labor for them. Does your zeal still continue, as days, months and years roll on?

A scoffing world has many times told you that your hopes and expectations were vain, and with a triumphant sneer whispered, "All things continue as from the beginning."

Perhaps you have laid a loved one away to sleep. You wept when the heavy clods fell upon the coffin. But Faith bade you stay your tears, for Death should soon be destroyed and the worm should not long feed sweetly on its victim. A little in the distance you saw the Conqueror coming, the graves bursting, and heard the redeemed shouting with immortal voices, "O, grave, where is thy victory!" But the time seems long; the grave still holds its prisoner fast; the Life-Giver has not come. Earth still groans beneath the curse. Sin and sorrow and mourning still surround us. But wait with patience, Christian. Let not faith waver. The promise is sure; the glorious vision will not tarry long. Labor on, pray on. Let us strive to make some of the perishing rejoice with us in hope of the great salvation.

"We look with hope to that great day
When Jesus will with clouds appear;
A sight of him will well repay
Our labors and our sorrows here."

JULIE E. LLOYD.

Westfield, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Deliverance from Oppression.

Right and Justice must and will prevail. This world, that has been in the hand of the enemy so long, will, according to the prophetic word, revert to the rightful owner, who will establish a government of righteousness and peace. Then there will be none deceived by fair speeches, and false misrepresentations of the divine word. No one will be wanting in truth and rectitude under such a government, for then will be realized the gospel in its purity and power. What a happy company! where saints and angels join in harmonious songs and praise to their Redeemer! What a blessed state! no more anger nor strife, malice nor envying, and evil speaking, or anything that will mar our happiness, or give us pain; for all things opposed to righteousness and truth and justice must yield, for God will be obeyed.

When the light of that glorious morning shall blaze forth in all its splendor, all darkness will be driven away; then there will be deliverance from bondage and oppression. No "tyrant's hand to pluck the jewel of liberty." Then will be heard the exulting exclamation, "The Lord is our strength and our song—he also is our salvation."

So, wanderers from light and truth, would you join the blood-washed throng, where sin and sorrow will never enter, flee to God, strive to learn his will, and obey it, that you may be in possession of the blessed hope of inheriting that peaceful kingdom, and having the glorious liberty of the children of God. MINERVA.

Plymouth, Ohio.

☞ Keep your temper in disputes. The cool hammer fashions the red hot iron to any shape needed.

Choice Selections.

(From the (N. Y.) Independent.)

A Voice from Assyria.

EDITORS OF THE INDEPENDENT:—Gentlemen,—The following facts were communicated to the Royal Society of Antiquarians under date of September 15th, 1858, and also, in brief, to the American Oriental Society, two days later.

But in this Telegraphic age, when at any moment the Divine telegram may flash from continent to continent,—"There is one YAHVEH, and his name one,"—these great historic facts ought not to be confined to the circle of the few and the dust of the schools.

They belong of right to the press, to be brought home by its power to the understanding and the hearts of the people.

In Layard's Second Expedition to Assyria and Babylonia, in a Table of the Thirteen Great Gods of Assyria, the one marked No. 6 is named YAV.

Sir Henry Rawlinson, in his Herodotus, just out in London, calls this name IVA, or EVA, which is the same thing. The sign in the Assyrian or wedge-shape mode of writing—called the arrow-headed, or cuneiform character—having the same phonetic power—that is, the same power or back-bone, as a consonant, in either case.

The difference in vocalizing the Assyrian, or cuneiform symbol, depends upon the nearness to or departure from the Hebrew, as a standard, in sounding more or less broadly the kindred Chaldean vowels.

Now YAV is one of the oldest gods of Assyria, appearing in the nineteenth century before Christ—as an element in the name of a son of Ismi-dagon, a King of UR of the CHALDEES.

YAV—GOD OF THE ATMOSPHERE, one of the very oldest and earliest names among the Assyrian deities yet found, and always regarded with the highest reverence, enters as an element into the name of the son of the King of the city where Abraham was born; is found upon the very earliest cylinders and inscribed bricks of that city; and was thus entirely familiar to the patriarch, both in its use, and its perversion through the elemental worship of the Chaldeans.

So much for Assyria. What do we find in Hebrew?

It is now ascertained and conceded, that the Assyrian arrow-headed, or middle-cuneiform writing, is merely a family language of the Hebrew—the Hebrew verb and the Assyrian verb interpreting each other.

We find YAHVEH, and its contract YAH, holding different and yet kindred relations.

Bunsen, in his "Bibel-Werk," (his great work on the Bible, just coming out in Germany) makes the unqualified statement as one from which no scholar can dissent, that Jehovah is "no word" at all. It is simply a manufacture. The true Hebrew name for the Supreme God of Abraham, the patriarchs, and the Pentateuch, is YAHVEH—in its contract-form YAH.

It is likewise conceded by all who understand the subject, that the Book of Genesis, especially throughout the first eleven chapters, is made up of various documents. These documents antedate as much the Egyptian "Book of the Dead," found about the persons of all respectable mummies of fashion, (which, in its present form at least, can hardly be placed earlier than Abram) as Abram and the "Book of the Dead" antedate Moses.

The documents are scientifically discriminated by Dr. Herman Hupfeld of Halle in his "Die Quellen der Genesis," (The Sources of Genesis) Berlin, 1853.

Those in the first eleven chapters of Genesis are well separated and set forth in Bunsen's "Bibel-Werk" above alluded to, Leipsic, 1858.

Of the explanation given to the documents in unfolding the archeology of Genesis, found in the volume "Yahveh Christ," it is unnecessary here to speak.

The documents with which Abraham was familiar may be designated in a brief and popular way, as the two accounts of Creation—the two accounts of the Flood—Records of the House of Noah, with records of the Abrahamidæ, or House of Abraham, etc. etc.

All these appear in the first eleven chapters of Genesis, and may be read as separated, in Bunsen.

We can thus determine at once, the first use of YAHVEH, among the Hebrews. It is the name of the Supreme Deity in the second account of Creation—in the second account of the Flood—in the month of Noah, and the invocations of Abraham.

So another, and a slightly older word. Elohim—implying the knowledge of the singular form El, likewise appears as the name of the Supreme Deity of the Hebrews—in the first account of Creation—the first account of the Flood—the Records of the House of Noah, and in the mouth of Abraham.

It is further well known to all acquainted with the subject, that both the Phenicians and the later Chaldeans (family relatives of the Hebrews, speaking branches of the same Semitic language) perverted the first and oldest name of the Supreme Deity, viz., Elohim, with its singular form El, from its original monotheistic idea to a foreign and polytheistic use.

On the cylinders and inscribed bricks of Ur of the Chaldees, the birth-place of Abraham, and the land of his fathers, we find the earlier Chaldeans did the very same thing for YAHVEH, and its contract YAH.

The deep historic interest of this hitherto lost determination of YAHVEH speaks for itself. The facts are their own commentary. A. W. W.

Health Department.

Ventilation.

Much has been said on this subject within a few years past; and much remains to be said. Ventilation is a matter of immense importance. The proper ways and means for purifying, or as the books on physiology say, depurating the buildings we occupy, especially our dwellings, can hardly receive too large a measure of our attention.

The process of ventilation is simple, yet complicated. It is simple in its principle, yet complicated in its application. We have but to introduce fresh or pure air, and remove that which is old or impure. The new, fresh air is more dense; and by means of its greater specific gravity, tends to get below and crowd out or upwards that which is more highly rarefied.

When mankind lived almost exclusively in the open air, special efforts to ventilate were hardly needed. Boreas was the grand ventilator; and well did he fulfill his mission. And I have seen portions of our own country within the last half-century, in which no ventilating tubes or flues were required. The crevices between the logs of which the walls were made not only permitted the ingress and egress of air, but at times admitted, without entrance fee, the rain and snow.

Dr. Franklin, in some of his fugitive articles, relates a story concerning Methuselah. "It is recorded" of him, he says; but he nowhere tells us how we may find the record. He may have borrowed it; or it may have been one of the fancies of his own prolific and ingenious brain; nevertheless, it has a moral. The story is this: It is recorded of Methuselah, that when he had lived five hundred years, an angel appeared to him and said: Arise, Methuselah, and build thee an house, for thou art to live yet five hundred years longer. But Methuselah answered: If I am to live but five hundred years, it is not worth while to build me an house. I will sleep in the open air as I have been used to do."

But times are altered; and, if here and there an individual may be found who can sleep in the open air, it is equally true that the vast majority cannot sleep at all, at least with any good degree of soundness; and no wonder. For, if the bed on which they slept the preceding night has been opened and aired,—which is somewhat doubtful,—the sleeping-room has not, in all probability, received any other attention than that of re-arranging the furniture, and putting everything in a "new" condition. There may be a fireplace in it, with a passage for the bad air, but the far greater probability is that there is not. The window may have been left open an hour, or an hour and a half; but the fair presumption is that it has not been opened at all, except to open or shut the blinds. These last must be taken due care of, and all light fairly excluded, except while the process of re-arrangement itself is going on; lest it should affect injuriously the colors of the carpet, or excite the movements, in the summer season, of the flies and other insects. And when night comes on, and the danger from the sun and flies is over, the musquitoes must be excluded with all assiduity; and what is still more, alas! to be dreaded, the night air. Even if the room were air-tight, no door might be left open into a hall, nor any window admit, by the slightest elevation or depression, the pure atmospheric air, as God has given it, lest somebody, perchance, should take cold!

Now, suppose a sleeping room were occupied by only two persons, and was, withal, twice as large as that which I have mentioned at the beginning of this chapter; and suppose the air, on entering it, at ten o'clock in the evening, to be perfectly pure, how long time would elapse before suffering must ensue? Why, in less than a single hour, most certainly. Few rooms, however, are perfectly air-tight; and it is well that they are not. Half the bad air, we will suppose, escapes; and a quantity of good air, equal to the same, finds its way in. This will retard the process of suffocation somewhat. But, even at this rate, the bodies of persons, sleeping on the highest beds which Fashion herself ever makes up, would be entirely immersed in the deadly choke damp—alias carbonic acid gas—in less than three hours. Retiring to rest, then, I say, under such circumstances, at ten o'clock, what chemist or physiologist should be surprised, three hours afterward, viz., at one o'clock in the morning, to find in it, instead of two healthy individuals, two miserable and ghastly corpses? Is it not strange—I repeat the inquiry—that so little of obvious suffering from this fertile source, is apparent among us? How can it be that half our population sleep six, eight, or ten consecutive hours, in a condition but little better than that which I have depicted, and yet not one in ten thousand immediately perishes? Nay, more; how is it that hardly one in a million dies, in these circumstances alone, unaided by any concomitants?

I am not disposed to recommend to everybody, at once, to sleep with open windows; for I have lived too long, and observed too much, to have full confidence in the safety of such a direction. A man in Bloomfield, Ct., who had read my tract on Breathing Bad Air, being in feeble health, threw open his window by night, and persisted in it for many weeks. The result was his own complete restoration to health; and the improvement, unexpectedly, of the constitution of his wife. But a little child, that slept in the same bed, was so much affected by the damp current, which occasionally drove into the room, that it took a severe cold, and came near perishing. The precaution should have been taken of hanging up something directly before the window, to break the force of the damp current. Many an individual, as I have already told you, has slept thus for scores of years, and a few for a whole lifetime, with perfect safety.

Something better than even this may be done. I refer not here to the plan of thrusting a crowbar through the wall, at the top of the room, as some have advised; but a much more architectural, as well as more efficient movement. It consists in such an arrangement as shall admit a steady current of pure air into the chamber, and a steady egress of the air which has become impure. It consists, in one word, in scientific, that is, simple ventilation.

Every school-room, and indeed every other room where there is no natural or intentional provision for ventilation, is a Grotto del Cane to its occupants. It is so, to some extent, in our very best school-houses. Too often they are something worse than this, and would almost rank with the Black Hole of Calcutta. A medical man in Hartford, Conn., begged and obtained permission of the committee, one day, to visit the public schools there, to learn, if possible, why the children who attended were so much troubled with scrofula and other glandular affections, and with diseases of the brain and lungs. He did not visit half a dozen of these schools before the mystery was revealed to him. The defective warming and ventilation was a sufficient cause, he said, without inquiring farther. The attempt has been made, for many years, to rouse public attention to this subject, whenever other arguments have failed, by means of ridicule. Children at school have been represented as sitting with their feet in the arctic zone and their heads in the torrid. Some have gone so far as to propound the inquiry, whether it would not be well to teach them to sit with their feet on the ceiling of the school-room, and their heads downwards.

If the time ever arrives when teachers and parents can be so trained as to know the nature and necessity of ventilation, it will, to the world we live in, be a great saving, not only physically, but morally. Few things retard more the wheels of human advancement than the constant use of bad air.

It is said that most of the animals in our menageries are tuberculous. Men, in their ignorance, are little better off than if they were engaged in bad air. Is it too much to say, that pure air is seldom inhaled, either at home or abroad? In our dwellings, our factories, our shops, our schools, and our churches, bad air is the order of the day,—science and common sense to the contrary notwithstanding.

Dr. John H. Griscom, of New York, in a discourse of his, delivered before the New York Academy of Medicine, has the following remarks: "To every school, especially every public school, in this city, State, and United States, there should be attached a medical man as one of its corps of tutors, who, by spending a few hours a week in instructing its classes in this interesting branch of science, would exert an influence for good, in the matter of public health, which would soon be felt over the length and breadth of the land, and with increasing power, from generation to generation.—Laws of Health.

☞ This is a world of compensations. The rich pay for their silverware by worrying about house-breakers; while the poor find an offset for hardships in glorious sleeps and a freedom from dyspepsia.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING,

At 167 Hanover street,

Over Geo. T. Adams' store,.......Boston,

—BY—

Believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE,

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn. they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

CANADA SUBSCRIBERS have to prepay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above: i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

WHOLE NO. 164. BOSTON, MASS., OCTOBER 27, 1858. VOL. VIII. NO. 8.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

EVENING TOKENS.

BY ELDER S. S. BREWER.

The dark gloomy night of sorrow and sadness
Is rapidly fleeing and soon will be gone;
My heart is pulsating with joy and with gladness,
I long for the morn of fair Zion to dawn.
No longer in doubt hang thy harp on the willow,
Attune it anew to thy soon coming King;
My poor pilgrim brother, though toss'd on Time's billow,
The faithful to glory soon Jesus will bring.

Soon the heavens will open and with myriads descending,
Our King the Redeemer will come from above;
Then borne on bright pinions, with angels ascending,
We'll bathe in the ocean of eternal love.
O hail thou fair day of eternal redemption!
We pray and we watch for the morning to break;
We wait for our King who will bring us salvation,
And all the dead saints immortal awake.

The last lingering call of mercy's declining,
The signs are portentous, the Kingdom is nigh;
The last beams of light from God's word is shining,—
O friends, all awake, the Judgment draws nigh!
Ah, poor careless sinner, now Jesus is calling,
O come to the Savior and thou shalt be blest;
O come as the last sands of old time are falling;
O come, ere he swear thou shalt not enter his rest.

Fairhaven, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Angels.

A DISCOURSE, BY WM. SHEPHERD.

(Continued.)

3. The relations which the angels sustain toward God and man in the scheme of human redemption—the important position they at present occupy—the character of their work in this dispensation. The relations which those intelligences sustain—the high responsibilities devolving upon, and the multiplied duties they perform in the work of redemption, we presume to say, are but little known, and less appreciated; this even by those who are the happy recipients of the divine grace—the favored subjects of their blessed ministrations, guardian care and solicitude. But few are aware of the multiplicity, extent, majesty and power of the unnumbered host of these heavenly beings employed to rescue man from the ruins of the fall, and restore him and earth to its natal beauty,—a fallen and perishing race, in regard to which there is not a holy intelligence existing in the most remote dominions of Jehovah but what feels more or less interested in, and engaged in some way respecting their recovery from death and destruction. And this is the case more especially now, above all other periods, when we have approximated so near the grand crisis when all the powers, for and against, will be arrayed and brought into terrific action for the world's final deliverance from the power of sin and Satan, and "the Conflict of Ages" decided at once and forever.

The Apostle, in speaking of the Lord Jesus in connection with all created powers, over which he is the exalted Head, observes,—"Whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers;" all created things, "in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible; . . . he is before all things, and by him all things consist." He is the head of all principality and power; "and every name that is named, not only in this world, (or age,) but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the Church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." Col. 1: 16–19: Eph. 1: 20–23. The expression—"put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the Church"—imports that all these forces and powers are made entirely subservient to God's gracious will, and are all brought to bear in the formation, perfection and glorification of the Church.

Some men may enter an extensive factory, woolen, cotton or silk, for instance, where those raw materials are elaborated into the finest of wearing apparel; there is a vast amount of machinery in action, and the article manufactured passes rapidly through a number of hands and branches before it is completed by the artist. They only take a superficial survey, and do not examine, perhaps, only that part where the fabric is finished. They admire it, and the skill of the manufacturer as it emanates from this last process, not acquainted with the many it had previously gone through, and the variety of hands who contributed their part in order to its completion. So it is in the grand contrived scheme of human redemption. Few form any where near a proximate idea of the vast and multiform machinery which is in constant motion, and designed by the great Architect of the universe to save mankind from ruin and death, and a world from returning to its worse than chaotic state. Yes, few conceive the important position which the holy angels of God occupy in this grand and complicated machinery, which we shall make fully to appear as we proceed.

It was an angel that appeared unto Zachariah in the temple, as he was officiating in his priestly capacity,—burning incense upon the altar—who apprized him of the fact that his prayer was heard, that his wife Elizabeth should bear him a son, whose name should be called John, and that he should have joy and gladness; and that many should rejoice at his birth; that he should be filled with the Holy Ghost even from his mother's womb, and turn many of the children of Israel to the Lord their God. Luke 1: 5–16. The same was sent to Mary at Nazareth in Galilee, who saluted her thus:—"Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women." Then revealed he the fact to the joy of her heart, that she should conceive and bring forth a son, and call his name Jesus, who should be designated "the Son of the Highest," to whom the Lord God would ultimately give the throne of his father David, to reign or rule over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there should be no end. Luke 1: 26–33. The birth of this divine child is first announced by them to some obscure and humble "shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you, ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host,"—singing an appropriate anthem in honor of the event, making the air harmonious with their exquisite music—music which will never be surpassed until this divine babe shall come forth as the apocalyptic "Man Child, who shall rule all nations with a rod of iron;" (Luke 2: 8–15.) after which they departed "into heaven."

"Hark! the herald angels sing
Glory to the new born King,
Peace on earth and mercy mild;
God and sinners reconciled!
Joyful, all ye nations rise,
Join the triumph of the skies:
With the angelic host proclaim—
Christ is born in Bethlehem!"

Observe, "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called. But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise . . . the weak . . . and base things of the world, and things which are despised hath God chosen . . . to bring to nought things that are." And here we have a striking illustration of this. God commissions his angels to first announce the advent of the world's Redeemer, not to the rich, the mighty, or affluent and powerful of the earth, but to some obscure shepherds, while engaged in the humble duties of "feeding their flocks by night." But we return.

An angel warns Joseph and Mary to flee into Egypt with the "young child," from the face of the enraged Herod, who sought to slay it. Another, after Herod's death, directs their return, saying, "Arise and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Isael, for they are dead which sought the young child's life." Matt. 2: 13–20. One refreshes Christ in the wilderness after his severe conflict with Satan. "Then the devil leaveth him, and behold angels came and ministered unto him." Matt. 4: 11. And here it is worthy of remark, that with this trying interview of our Lord with the enemy, as you will find recorded in Matt. 4: 6, the devil himself acknowledges that God gives his children in charge of the angels, as quoted from the Psalms. In the mental agonies of Jesus in the garden, we learn that "There appeared an angel unto him, from heaven, strengthening him." Luke 22: 43. Again, he rebukes his disciples for using carnal weapons in his defence; showing if it were necessary to them to defeat the aggressors, and in harmony with the divine purpose to then triumph—"Thinkest thou that I could not (or would not) now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me (for aid) more than twelve legions of angels?" in order to accomplish the same; but no, for how could that purpose be carried out, and the scriptures fulfilled? Matt. 26: 53; Luke 24; 25, 26, 44–46. They doubtless were present at his crucifixion, and were in part instrumental in producing those wonderful phenomena in nature which occurred at that event, attesting the truth of his divine parentage as expressed at the time by the conscience-stricken Roman—"Surely this was the Son of God!" They are discovered at his tomb, after his resurrection, described as with a countenance "like lightning," and clothed in "raiment white as snow," speaking kindly and comforting those women who so affectionately clung to him and followed him through all his sufferings, and who like "Mary stood without the sepulchre," saying to them, "Fear not, ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay;" requesting them to go quickly "and tell his disciples" the important fact that Christ indeed had risen from the dead. Matt. 28: 1–7. They accompanied him, we may reasonably infer, in his triumphant ascension to his mediatorial seat at the right hand of God,—

Cherubic legions guard him home,
And shout him, "Welcome to the skies."

While two shining ones in white apparel are found in the midst of the sorrowing disciples, as they are anxiously "gazing up into heaven" immediately subsequent to their Lord's departure thence, who consoles the little group, with the important truth that, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 9–11. We cannot here refrain from the remark, that here the so much stigmatized, rejected, though glorious doctrine of Messiah's second advent, is preached for the first time after his ascension, by the holy angels of God.

It was a celestial one which imparted and gave those peculiar properties to the waters of the pool of Bethesda; he descended "at a certain time," directly after which whosoever then first "stepped in was made whole of whatsoever disease he had." John 5: 4. They are frequently described as being engaged in chanting holy anthems to the glorious Jehovah. Isa. 6: 3; Luke 2: 13, 14; Rev. 7: 11, 12. The Psalmist thus invites them: "Bless the Lord ye his angels that excel in strength;" "Praise ye him all his angels." Ps. 103: 40; 148: 2. Two of the Ambassadors of Christ are liberated from the common prison by one of these heavenly functionaries—"the angel of the Lord," who "commanded" (observe with what authority they are invested, as here indicated,) them to "Go; stand and speak in the temple to the people, all the words of this life." Acts 5: 19, 20. Peter's deliverance from prison by the answer of concerted prayer, is effected through the agency of an angel.—"And behold the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined on the prison; and he smote Peter on the side and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands. And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals; . . . cast thy garments about thee and follow me." And the apostle was fully conscious of this too, from what he observes,—"Now I know of a surety that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hast delivered me out of the hand of Herod." And when he had arrived "at the house of Mary the mother of John," where they were still engaged in prayer, he "knocked at the door of the gate," and a damsel came out in answer, and recognizing Peter's voice, "she opened not the gate for gladness," but ran to inform his friends. They at first could not credit it; she persisted that it was so. "Then said they it is his angel." Acts 12: 7–15.

Now this teaches us the fact in conjunction with other scriptures, to which we shall presently come, that every child of God has his guardian angels, in number more or less according as their circumstances and calling may need. This is Bible doctrine, and should be no less consoling than it is true to the humble followers of Jesus. St. Paul firmly believed in the ministration and presence of these heavenly ones: for in giving his solemn charge to Timothy concerning preaching, he not only mentions "God and the Lord Jesus Christ" as taking cognisance of the imposition of the laying on of his hands, but would also enforce the solemnity of the occasion, and impress the youthful Evangelist with the importance of the vows which he was now about to take upon him, by reminding him of other eye witnesses to the scene, even "the elect angels." 1 Tim. 5: 21; see Ecc. 5: 5, 6. And he seemed perfectly sensible of their constant presence, from what he writes to the church at Corinth;—"For God hath set forth us, the apostles, last, as it were appointed to death; for we are made a spectacle unto the world, to angels, and to men." 1 Cor. 4: 9. It was one of these holy messengers who dispelled his fears and bid his sorrows cease while on his perilous voyage to Rome, when wrecked near the island of Melita. There was not a man of the whole ship's crew, but what despaired of being saved. "All hope that we should be saved," says the sacred narrator, "was then taken away;" but Paul stood forth comforting and exhorting them to "be of good cheer," as not one should be lost. "For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, saying, Fear not, Paul; for thou must be brought before Cesar: and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee. Wherefore, Sirs, be of good cheer; for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me." Acts 28: 21–25. This shows the important duties which the angels perform in the providence of God, and how they most especially accompany his ministers and people through all their labors and wearied pilgrimage of this life. Often are they sent with hope's unpinioned wings, and love's smiling face, (though invisible to mortal eye,) inspiring the heart to more fully confide in the Divine goodness and protection—coming in their sweet manifestations, and with gentle whisperings of hope, peace and joy in the hour of despair.

They are invariably present at religious assemblies, from what the apostle says in regard to the order of those assemblies—speaking of women, he affirms that it is improper for them to worship or pray with uncovered heads, "because of the angels." We do not know what the apostle means here, save it be, that for females to have their heads uncovered on such occasions, makes it a mark of indignity towards those celestial visitants. 1 Cor. 11: 10.

One appears unto Cornelius the centurion, while engaged in his customary devotions, (for it is said he was a man who prayed to God alway,") who informed him, that his prayers and alms had "come up for a memorial before God;" instructing him what course to pursue in order to obtain the knowledge and blessings of salvation in harmony with God's plan,—important information it is too. See Acts 10. Philip the evangelist is directed by one to "Arise and go toward the South, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is deserted," for the purpose of intercepting a certain Ethiopian who was on his way "to Jerusalem to worship," in order to enlighten his understanding,—unfolding to him the subject of the great salvation, and the only means through which it could be obtained. Acts 8: 26–40. And why should it be to the contrary now? Are not "the servants of the Most High God," which are ordained to unfold "the way of life," often guided and directed by his angels to journey to certain places from time to time, particularly where there are known to abide those who are hungering and thirsting for the bread and waters of life; "who have ears to hear" and are desirous to be led into the experimental knowledge of the blessing of the gospel of Christ? Are they not all spirits of ministration sent forth to minister to those who are heirs of life? So the scriptures inform us. Angels are represented by Him "of whom the whole family in heaven and earth are named," as being deeply engaged and interested in the salvation of sinners, yea, very anxious and solicitous in their behalf. The following language renders this clear:—"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." "Likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth." Luke 15: 7, 10. Then it is not so visionary after all—the idea when exhorting sinners to repent while enforcing the truths of the gospel, to say in the language of the poet, that "Angels now are hovering round us,

Unperceived they mix the throng."

Waiting, as it were, to convey the glad tidings to heaven that another prodigal has returned to his Father's house—another lost one is found—another who was dead "is alive." It is true, the idea of their carrying the intelligence to heaven is based upon inferential evidence, but there is inferential testimony sometimes which is tantamount to positive and direct, which we think is in the case at point.

